That the claims of feeling are quite as high as those of function may be realized when we consider our efforts to either attain self-control, or some just form of social control, in restraint of powerful instincts of self-preservation and reproduction. A vast amount of training is required to make the immature human creature understand that individual liberty may not be successfully asserted against common happiness, to nicely blend the idea of personal freedom with delicate consideration for the rights of others. Even when a man has reached a high degree of enlightenment through native kindness of heart and fine cultivation, he still feels that he is "created half to rise and half to fall, Great Lord of all things, yet a prey to all. Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurled, the glory, jest and riddle of the world."

What sensitive human plant lives without consciousness of an invisible and fatal power that seems hostile to all we hold dear? The presence that haunts us with menace of danger may be tragic distrust of ourselves, secret dread of our own weaknesses, or merely the wayward ghost of public opinion. The latter can be dispelled by courage and sincerity, but not so with those intuitive apprehensions of the soul which were born in the darkness of primitive fear and have survived on the evidence of things not seen because we do not know ourselves. Only in the tragedies of love, for instance, do we seem to grasp love's full meaning. Its normal course very easily becomes a commonplace affair. The simple solution never fascinates like the stories of Romeo and Juliet, Cyrano and Camille. Tragedies of love have held audiences enthralled from time beyond reckoning.

How many women have survived great tragedies of love in silence, yet oppressed by suffering more intense than man can ever know? Tragedies of the heart that must deeply affect the gentler sex are those of motherhood. For the creator of a human being to see the flesh of her flesh, the heart of her heart, the very soul of her soul, slipping away into the fathomless unknown—what more poignant grief than hers? Even though time bring recompense, and her bruised heart be healed, her all-too-common story is ever that of tragedy. Woman, because of her tender affections, God-given to keep this world beautiful, becomes the central figure of tragedy that softens our hearts and sends our souls to our eyes. She is sweeter and dearer to us in sorrow than at any other supreme moment of her life.

There is a torment known to women as well as to men, which they strive to suppress from native purity of mind, which sometimes burns its way through inadequate restraint to the social destruction of the woman herself and of her finest ideals. When she is all heart, and especially when she lacks congenial occupation or other outlet for surplus energy, she is sometimes such a danger to herself that marriage seems to be her only safeguard. That depends on the man. He is as a rule just as Byron described him, more or less a martyr to ambition, responsible on occasions, while she is ever so to the tocsin of her soul, and she may live on desperate hope to the end, if her love be not to hatred turned. When that happens, she begins to weave a tragedy in which she is bound by force of character and circumstances to be involved.

There is tragedy ahead for the impassioned woman who enters, voluntarily or involuntarily, upon a marriage of convenience. Even if she does not weary of the many forms of self-indulgence for which wealth provides and which idleness suggests, she will come to take them as a matter of course and idealize the fervor of youth and love she has never known. When she breaks with her conscience, we have the key to love tragedies, the dominance of impulse over volitional control, with death as an atonement. The catastrophe need not always be complete, for it is possible to set up a fine character in opposition to the unfortunate central figure, one which shall suggest compensation, but interest is bound to focus upon the creature who enlists sympathy because she is so pitifully human in her weakness. Through tragic death we may receive our greatest emotional or spiritual impressions.

"Perhaps the early grave Men weep over may be meant to save."

*Copyright, Louis Reeves Harrison.

Genuine War Films

Captain F. E. Kleinschmidt, of Alaskan Fame, with the Austrian Army, in the Fight at the Carpathians, and the Surrender of Przemysl and Lemberg—How He Won the Favor and Friendship of the General Staff—Lively Pictures of His Work Up to Date.

By W. Stephen Bush.

NOBODY at this distance from the end of the great European conflict is able to estimate the part which the motion picture has played in recording the deeds and horrors enacted on a hundred battlefields. We hear vague rumors of official cameramen in the special employ of this or that belligerent nation, but nothing definite is known, though it is but natural to presume that in making pictorial records of the war such an instrument as the kinematograph cannot and will not be overlooked.

Taking Pictures of the Russian Trenches 200 Yards Opposite.

Kleinschmidt's Luck.

In the meantime we know of at least one man who will have valuable war films to give to the public when he returns to this country. Through a combination of propitious circumstances—good luck in plain English—our old friend of the frozen North, Captain F. E. Kleinschmidt, has been enabled to film a record of the important movements of the Austrian divisions which under the command of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand drove the Russians back into Galicia after dislodging them from the Carpathian passes.

There is no more exclusive set of militarists than the members of the Austrian General Staff. The idea of a plain American traveling with this staff, almost forming part of it and enjoying all the privileges of a staff officer, seems preposterous. Captain Kleinschmidt has accomplished what seemed impossible. He is today not only on terms of intimate equality with all these military moguls, but he has enjoyed unheard of facilities for filming the events in which the Austrian army took such a prominent part.

In the Trenches.

The editor of The Moving Picture World has received a letter from Captain Kleinschmidt, which not only has a very rare news value, but which gives the reader an insight into the victory of the captain over red tape and conventionalities. The letter is dated "Austrian Great General Staff" and bears the "imprimature" of the military authorities.

"Getting on the Inside."

The Captain writes: "Upon my arrival at the Great Headquarters of the Austrian Army I was invited by the Crown Prince to give a lecture on my last Arctic expedition and show my moving pictures to the officers of the general staff. The Archduke, Field Marshal Frederick, highest commanding officer; his wife, daughters and all generals and officers were present. This lecture gave me the magic key that unlocked all doors and gave me privileges and opportunities to accomplish things."

Hardly ever before in the history of filmdom has a cameraman traveled in the style de luxe enjoyed by the captain. He was provided with a high officer who acted as his guide, then he was fitted out with two military servants, who attended to all the personal comforts of the captain, and who soon learned to pack and set up the camera.

"Then I have an auto," Captain Kleinschmidt continues, "with a lieutenant and chauffeur, and when I need them horses and farmer's wagons are requisitioned, for I have to go places at times where an auto cannot go. In Russian Poland I often had an Uhlan or a troop for my guidance and protection. This makes quite a caravan to travel with, but to travel in style means comfort, and you get there quickly. I almost forgot our gendarm, who gets our quarters ready, looks after our wagons, drivers and servants."

Austrians Are Hospitable.

That the captain is in the best of spirits and making full use of his opportunities may be taken for granted. He speaks of "Austrian hospitality and the Austrian readiness to help and favor you," and compares them to the aid and the hospitality he found "on our own frontiers and by the prospectors in their cabins and on the trail in Alaska." They have not fought any battles for the special benefit of his camera, but they were willing to go to great lengths in order to oblige. "Last week," the captain writes, "while I was in the foremost trenches and took pictures of the Russian trenches only 300 yards away, a whole battery was ordered to cover the Russian trenches with shrapnel to enable me to take the pictures of the exploding bombs. Troops of calvary have been alarmed for me, flyers have taken me up to take pictures from above; in fact, everything has been done for me that could possibly be done, even the huge siege mortars that destroyed the forts of Antwerp, Liege and Namur were ordered to be set in action for me, although even one single shot costs a pretty sum of money. One might think that I have taken pictures of about everything that could possibly happen, but every day a new feature comes up and I believe I can stay with the work during the entire war and not duplicate very much."

Battle Hill 419.

Covering the Field Thoroughly.

With the ample facilities afforded to him Captain Kleinschmidt feels that he can put a good deal of order and system into his war films. He believes in showing every stage of movement in the three great arms: infantry, cavalry and artillery. "The great siege mortars," he says, "I have from the caves where the ammunition is stored to the loading, sighting and firing of the gun; then the ascension of the captive balloon and the observation of the hitting and exploding of the projectile from the basket or by pictures taken from above in flying machines. The cavalry I have taken from the saddling to the charge, and the infantry from where they emerge from their underground dwellings, jump to their arms and run to the trenches. Then follows the firing in the trenches and the attack on the enemies' trenches opposite. I have stood on an eminence and taken panoramic views of a battlefield and battle in progress, that will be highly interesting, especially to the American public. A modern battlefield really shows little or nothing, and the real scenes are diametrically opposed to the usual 'posed' battle scenes with which our public has been regaled so much. In real life a man who has been hit by a bullet does not throw up his hands and rifle and then fall in a theatrical fashion and roll a few times over. When he lies in the trenches and is hit he barely lurches a few inches forward or quietly turns over on his side. The real picture is not as dramatic as the fake picture, but I believe the realization of the grimness of the genuine will grip the beholder far more than the fake, just as you can see far better animal pictures that were taken in the Zoo or in animal parks than mine taken in the wilderness, but the public appreciated the difference. The greater part of a battle is fought behind the firing line, and I have taken many and various phases of it. First the batteries of the enemy must be put out of action and the storming ground prepared for the charge of the infantry. These batteries stand several miles behind the front, and here a mighty action develops that keeps a moving picture man busy cranking. The work of a heavy battery is an imposing sight, but no less exciting is the dashing up of the munition wagons, especially if it is done under the fire of the enemy. Today I took the blowing up of a bridge. Burning houses and the rush of fugitives away from the danger zone make as pathetic a picture as the carrying of wounded and dead to the ambulances and graves. I wish it were possible to take a night picture; as I am writing these lines the heavens are illuminated by burning houses, searchlights and rockets. The light from the batteries plays like lightning over half of the horizon, and the roaring of the heavy guns mingled with the rattle of machine guns and infantry fire is as terrible and as grand tonight as the first time I heard it."

Some of the Difficulties.

All of this, however, does not mean that the captain's path is always strewn with roses. There are difficulties. "Films," the letter says, "are a rare article here. The Eastman films for moving pictures and for cameras have been out of the market for four months, and I have had much trouble getting the German Afga material. The life of a camera is short; the strain is something terrible. The jolting over littered streets, on horseback or jumping ditches and kicking around in barbed-wire entanglements loosens every screw and breaks the bolts. When you ride with an Uhlan regiment, all young horses that shy at every shell and trench, and you succeed in getting out your cameras at the psychological moment only to find it in a pitiful ruin, you begin to realize the meaning of the phrase, 'Swearing like a trooper.' I have an aeroscope, worked with compressed air instead of a crank. It is a delicate and fine apparatus—whenever it works. I took some nice pictures from an aeroplane with it, but most of the time it has the habits and propensities of the automobile of twenty years ago. Last time I stuck it in a loophole to take the Russian trenches in front of me but it balked as usual and I had to expose myself with the big Ernemann. A Russian sharpshooter tried to find the range with explosive bullets, but I got the pictures before he scored a hit. It was a picture, especially as the shells threw up columns of dirt and the shrapnel burst in white and red clouds fifteen feet above the trenches."

Will Go to the Turkish Front Next.

The captain's love of adventure evidently grows by what it feeds upon, for he writes in conclusion that he will go to the Turkish front after staying another six weeks with the Austrians. The letter bears date June 27 and has this most interesting postscript:

"Have not been able to send this letter off until now. Have been in the great pursuit of the fleeing Russian army from the Dunejec to the San, thence to Przemysl and Lemberg. Just developed and printed a copy of 10,000 feet of war pictures as perhaps no one ever saw before. I am inclosing a number of pictures, but the censor will scarcely let the battle scenes go through."

Captain Kleinschmidt is keeping in touch with the readers of The Moving Picture World, and another interesting letter may soon be expected.

BLINKHORN PHOTOPLAYS CREDITORS TO MEET.

William H. Willis, referee in bankruptcy of the United States District Court, Southern District of New York, has given formal notice that John Wild, trustee in the matter of the Blinkhorn Photoplays Corporation, bankrupt, has petitioned that a meeting of creditors be called for the purpose of submitting offers received from various parties for the assets of the concern. Accordingly a hearing will be held at Mr. Willis' office, 82 Beaver street, at 10 o'clock on August 13.

Nell Craig

NELL CRAIG, one of Essanay's new leading women, has made a remarkable success in the role of Dominica, the leading character in a series of adventures written by Henry C. Rowland. As the beautiful and accomplished young woman who has turned thief for the love of adventure and excitement she has brought out all the winning points of this character with a nicety that is hard to equal. Her type of beauty fits the dashing style of the heroine of these photoplays, and she carries out the reckless and daring deeds of Dominica with a complete sang froid.

Nell Craig.

Miss Craig was a Quaker girl by adoption, having lived in Philadelphia most of her life, although she was born at Princeton, N. J. After being graduated at Pennington Seminary when seventeen, she had an inordinate ambition to become a surgeon. But she forgot her hopes when, because of her beauty and rare voice she was offered a part with the Orpheum stock company.

After a year on the stage she entered photoplay work. Although but twenty-two years of age she had had five years of experience in stage and photoplay work when Essanay brought her to its Chicago studio to take leading parts.

MinA Comedies Continue on General Program

Licensed Company Owning This Brand Makes Announcement That It Will Be Released as Usual on Thursdays.

OWING to a little uncertainty which has arisen in the minds of exhibitors because of several recent announcements in regard to one of the independent programs, the licensed manufacturer owning the MinA brand of comedies desires to announce that this brand of comedies will continue to be released as usual every Thursday on the program of the General Film Company.

The nature of these comedies has been and will continue to be such as will give the most that is possible in a one-reel production: clean, interesting comedies without a foot of padding.

The owners of this brand further desire to state that it was never their intention to discontinue this release on the General Film program.

Scene from "Col. Heeza Liar Fools the Enemy" (Pathe).

Mutual Program is Complete

President Freuler Announces the Plans of the Big Film Corporation.

DEFINITE announcement is made at the offices of the Mutual Film Corporation that its program revision and expansion is now complete and that the revised and increased schedule will be in the hands of the Mutual branch offices within the next few days. It had previously been announced by President John R. Freuler that the regular program was receiving his attention and that he would definitely settle on his releases before taking up anything else. As a result of extended conferences and contract making, President Freuler announces an all-feature program, with no advance in film rental price, together with increased variety and a wide range of exceptional subjects.

The following plans have been definitely completed: Two three-reel features with Broadway stars in the leading roles will be released each week. The Gaumont Company will release in the future on the Mutual Program, using such stage stars as Sir Forbes Robertson, Gertrude Elliott, Alice Brady and Florence Nash.

There will be five new comedy releases each week, the first being the new Cub comedies, with George Ovey as the star and David Horsley as the producer. To those will be added a new Beauty comedy release presented by a company personally recruited by President S. S. Hutchinson of the American Film Company; a new Falstaff comedy release made by a company of players especially chosen by Edwin Thanhouser, and two new comedies featuring English knockabout comedians and directed by one of the most celebrated comedy men in motion pictures. After January 1 this comedy man will appear personally in special features to be released by the Mutual. The English comedians have been brought over under contract, which gives the Mutual their exclusive services on long contracts.

The two-reel pictures on the program have been brought to feature quality, and will be known hereafter as Mutual Banner features. Among these there will be each week a new Western drama brand to be known as the "Mustang" dramas. The Bostock Animal Pictures, produced by David Horsley, will be two reels long, and as already announced, there will be one two-reel release each week on the regular program.

Contracts have been signed with the Gaumont Company for a new split-reel release each week, which will be half scenic, under the title "Seeing America First," and half cartoon.

In addition to the above many novelties have been arranged for the regular program, and Mutual Masterpictures, a series of feature releases which has met with tremendous artistic and financial success, will be continued in order to present subjects impossible to handle in shorter length pictures.

It is announced that a new series of masterpictures surpassing the present offerings are about ready for release. The general policy of the Mutual has been broadened to admit of more comedies, more feature pictures and more novelties in order to present a program that would satisfy the undoubted demand among exhibitors and the general public for a balanced program of entertainment. The Mutual has had a wide range of choice, as it is no secret that a good baker's dozen of responsible manufacturers have been endeavoring to negotiate for releases on the Mutual Program.

President Freuler when seen at the Mutual offices yesterday said: "Our program schedule is completed and I am gratified at its merit. I do not hesitate to say that it is the best balanced, the highest quality and the most profitable program every offered to exhibitors.

"The regular Mutual Program is, in fact, a feature program, because the quality of both the long and short subjects is equal to the best feature standard of the present market. I shall have more surprises to announce in a few days. In the Mutual readjustments of this rapidly progressing business we were enabled, because of our established position, to make unusually attractive arrangements, and with good pictures and long contracts we feel confident that the Mutual leadership will not only continue, but be strengthened and increased.

"I will not rest on my oars, but will continue to improve a program that never has been surpassed."

After all, there is only one moving picture paper that you really need, and this is IT. Conducted by the largest and most experienced staff of editors and correspondents.

V-L-S-E Comedies for August

Big Four Will Release Three, Featuring Marie Dressler, Raymond Hitchcock and June Keith and Johnny Slevin.

THAT big feature comedies are in demand is indicated by the attention being given to this class of subject by the Big Four. Three big comedies are scheduled on the V-L-S-E program for the month of August—Marie Dressler in "Tillie's Tomato Surprise," Raymond Hitchcock in "The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros," and June Keith and Johnny Slavin in "A Bunch of Keys."

Heretofore the impression prevailed among some exhibitors that only dramatic subjects could be successfully offered as the big feature attractions, but with the coming of the V-L-S-E releases this superstition seems to have been dispelled.

The Big Four report that the success that has attended the presentation of the comedy features they have already released has been such that they look for a big increase in the popularity of humorous subjects.

Up until the present time the real drawing power of comedy features had never been fully demonstrated, chiefly because there has been a dearth of good features of this class. The few worth while comedies in multiple reels that have been offered to the public encountered great success wherever they have been properly presented. The so-called "dramatic" subjects have come to be preferred mainly through the fact that worthy features of that type predominate the picture play offerings.

In preparing their comedies, the Big Four have given the same lavish care to the details of production that is devoted to the straight dramatic subjects, and to make them still more attractive, they headed the casts with stars with big, national reputations.

"The Slim Princess," adapted from George Ade's most humorous story with Ruth Stonehouse and Francis X. Bushman in the leading roles, "Crooky," with Frank Daniels, and "A Texas Steer" with Tyrone Power, have already gone into screen evidence and, according to reports, have established a new record for multiple reel comedies.

With these comedy features, and others to come, the Big Four state they will establish a precedent in motion picture exhibitions, and will awaken every exhibitor to the financial possibilities that heretofore have been overlooked through sheer force of habit.

The Irrepressible Reichenbach

Promoter of Metro Publicity Is Back at His Desk After an Energetic Campaign.

HAVING spent three weeks in Metroing the West, Harry Reichenbach is back at his office in the Heidelberg Building with a bagfull of newspaper clippings and the most precious knife that ever sharpened a press agent's pencil. The clippings were clipped from the front pages of newspapers pretty well covering the territory from the coast to Chicago. They relate the details of an attempted bomb outrage; of how a love-lorn woman sent a bomb to Francis X. Bushman and with it a note expressing a wish that they might be united in heaven. The knife came as a token of the esteem with which Bushman regards the adroit promoter of publicity bombs. Reichenbach says that he took an evening off to count the jewels in the handle and located no less than fourteen diamonds and twelve sapphires, almost enough gem value to finance a new company.

The piece de resistance of Reichenbach's cross-continental tour was the bomb presentation, worked out with anarchistic cunning. The explosion that just failed to connect placed the name of Bushman on the front pages of many newspapers and therefore served its purpose without casualties. When there was nothing more to be done at the Fair, the fertile apostle of press agentry started east, and every now and then jumped off the train to see what the exhibitors in the big cities were doing.

He concluded that times have changed considerably since he covered the same route five years ago with a company playing "The Third Degree." In the sixteen towns visited he missed the lurid sensationalism of the titles that once were counted upon to attract attention. Everywhere exhibitors were advertising features and the names were those of meritorious plays and established stars. He was impressed not only by the quality of the pictures used but by the dignified tone of the displays advertising them. Also he marked the prevalence of five-reel subjects with a single-reel comedy and a news film to fill out the program. Exhibitors assured him that they find features profitable and the only means of attracting audiences that once held aloof from pictures.

New Rule for Transporting Films

Committee of Local Exhibitors' Organization Waits Upon Commissioner Adamson and Secures Official Ruling.

A COMMITTEE of the local Exhibitors' Organization consisting of Messrs. Lee A. Ochs, Samuel Trigger, Isaac Hartstoll and Mr. Herring of Blumenthal & Herring waited upon Fire Commissioner Adamson on the morning of Tuesday, July 27, in reference to the new order regulating the transportation of moving picture films on public conveyances. The committee told the Commissioner that there had been various and rather harsh interpretations of the new order and they wanted some workable ruling from the head of the fire department. The Commissioner, who received the committee most courteously, after some discussion declared that the rule absolutely prohibiting the transportation of moving picture films on public conveyances would be applied only to the subway. Films, he explained, may still be carried on the surface cars and on the elevated roads.

Such films, however, he went on to say, must be inclosed in metal containers, which in turn must be inclosed in metal carrying cases. The Commissioner intimated that he would come to the aid of any exhibitor if he or his messenger are held up by any conductor or guard who might want to constitute himself an official interpreter of the new rule. It is likely that notice of the exact nature of the regulation as it stands now will be served upon the common carriers within the city limits.

High Class Paper for V-L-S-E Subject

"The Chalice of Courage" Posters Will Be from Paintings by Mr. Popini.

A LINE of posters that reflect credit on the industry will make its appearance with the release on August 9 of the V-L-S-E feature, "The Chalice of Courage." This paper consists of a one, a three, a six and a twenty-four-sheet stand from paintings by the celebrated artist Popini, who designed "The Island of Regeneration" posters.

All of this paper has a distinct note of refinement. The figures are all idealized impressions of the artist, gained by viewing the film, and are done in warm pastel shades, that are conspicuous, but soft.

The twenty-four-sheet poster is an exceptionally fine piece of artistic lithograph work. It portrays Mr. Popini's idea of how Miss Gonzales appeared when surprised by a bear while in bathing. This poster furnishes another excellent example of the manner in which this distinguished poster artist can introduce the nude figure into his drawings without giving offence.

The six-sheet is almost a two-tone creation. It illustrates a snow scene, and is executed entirely in wonderful shades of blue, contrasted with white. The master artistic touch is shown in this poster by a single brilliant red blood spot on the snow. This one touch illuminates the whole poster, and will make it stand out no matter in how inconspicuous a manner it may be posted.

Paper of this kind is expensive, but the dignity and strength of "The Chalice of Courage" is worthy of high-grade paper, and the money and care expended in its preparation should repay the V-L-S-E and Vitagraph Company.

LASKY CHIEF DEFENDS PHOTOPLAY.

The controversy in New York as to the relative value of stars of the legitimate stage before and subsequent to their appearance in photoplay productions is decidedly the most engrossing topic in theatrical circles. The New York Times last week solicited from Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky Feature Play Company, a statement of the position of the photoplay producers as opposed to the charge that the screen lessens the value of stars.

"The photoplay versions of great dramas are shown to millions of persons, whereas the original stage versions are reserved for theater-goers in a comparatively few cities that can support extravagant theaters," said Mr. Goldfish. "The fact of the matter is that, through the medium of the photoplay, the fame of stars has increased a thousand-fold; persons who never heard of them in great sections of the country—and world, as far as that goes—are now intimate with their art. Ten years ago the legitimate managers objected to their stars entering vaudeville, because, they said, it lessened their value. Now the vaudeville managers are joining the legitimate solons in the cry against the photoplay. In conclusion, I can only ask why managers should object to their players entering a field in which they themselves are making every effort to invade?"

On his stand in this discussion Mr. Goldfish was congratulated by many leaders in the photoplay industry.

A. F. Beck With Mutual

Veteran Show and Film Man Is Named General Manager of Mutual Film Exchange in New York.

A. F. Beck, veteran film man, with a large acquaintanceship among exhibitors throughout the country, was recently appointed general manager of the Mutual Film Exchange of New York, by John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation. Until joining the Mutual, Mr. Beck was general manager of the Universal exchanges in St. Louis, Kansas City and surrounding territory, a position he had held since the foundation of that organization.

Mr. Beck was first identified with motion pictures way back in the "dark tent" days when he was secretary and treasurer of the Greater Cosmopolitan Shows, at that time the biggest carnival company then on the road. He was also with the Bostock-Ferrari Carnival Company and several of the "big tops," receiving the training in the same rugged school and at the same time with many of the men who are today foremost in motion picture affairs.

Later, Mr. Beck became identified with George Kleine, when the Biograph was the leading independent. He organized and managed the Central Film Service Company in Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Louisville, handling the productions of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company, until the formation of the Mutual and Universal, and at different times owned and operated the Rex, Fountain and Riverside theaters, all motion picture houses, and also two small film exchanges doing a big business in commercial films in the Indianapolis territory.

Mr. Beck is thirty-one years old, a college graduate, and has had a thorough business training. He is a believer in the principle that "service" in business is not merely the delivery of goods, but a combination of courtesy, co-operation and the application of common-sense ideas in all dealings with customers. His connection with the Mutual is a guarantee that the increasingly high standard of Mutual service will be maintained.

NAT GOODWIN STARTS WORK FOR UNIVERSAL.

NAT C. GOODWIN is hard at work at Universal City in the film version of the old French tragedy, "Business Is Business," under the direction of Otis Turner. Mr. Goodwin plays the role of Isadore Lechat. Mr. Goodwin first saw "Business is Business" in Paris at the Comedie Francais, many years ago, and was greatly impressed with the role of Lechat, which he felt was ideally suited to his style of acting. When the Universal engaged his services Mr. Goodwin suggested that he be featured in "Business Is Business."

Mr. Goodwin is now 57 years old. He has been on the stage for forty years and, as one admirer recently stated, "has done more good, spread more of the gospel of cheerful genius through mournful humanity, and has graced the stage to which we all owe a dazzling debt of sane, serene pleasure, to a greater extent than any of his peers."

"It has been a great pleasure," said Mr. Goodwin at the completion of his first week's work with the Universal, "to be associated with Otis Turner in the making of 'Business Is Business.' Like myself, Mr. Turner is an old-timer as actor and manager, and his experience in the photoplay field ideally fits him for helping me along in the film version of 'Business Is Business.'"

Nat. C. Goodwin and Otis Turner at Universal City.

"Human Cargoes" Promises Thrills

Story of Modern Political Life Produced by Walter McNamara with R. T. Haines as Star.

A PUBLIC which has been educated to expect unusual motion picture drama from the mind and hand of the producer and author of "Traffic in Souls" and "Ireland a Nation," will look forward with extraordinary interest for Walter McNamara's next production, "Human Cargoes." This latest offering, which is now being made for the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation and to be released through the World Film Corporation, is being staged at the Equitable studio in Flushing. The cast is headed by Robert T. Haines, the distinguished actor, whose work in association with Walker Whiteside, Viola Allen, Blanche Bates, Grace George and Mrs. Fiske has won him national recognition. Mr. Haines is supported by Miss Bess Sankey, Miss Isabelle MacGregor, Mrs. Laura Macklan, Mrs. Blanche Davenport, Mrs. Vernon, Miss Hill, Thomas Morrisary, Willis Granger, C. E. Kimball, F. M. McQuirk and William Evans.

"Human Cargoes" will be more than thrilling picture drama. Its illustration of the ultimate triumph of right over evil will make it as worth while as the others of Mr. McNamara's productions.

Three well-known stage stars are engaged at present in the Equitable studios at Flushing, Long Island, in five-reel pictures which will be the first release of the Equitable motion pictures through the World Film. William Courtleigh, who recently returned from Chicago, where he played the role of the Russian tenor in "The Song Bird," is playing the lead in Marc Edmund Jones' photodrama, "Life's Crucible," which is being directed by Isadore Bernstein, the director-general of the Equitable. Thomas Wise, late star of "A Gentleman from Mississippi" and other successful stage offerings, has been engaged to play the lead in "Blue Grass," an adaptation for the screen of the play by Paul Armstrong. This Southern picture will be directed by Charles M. Seay.

Contracts have been signed with two other well-known players, who will appear in the immediate future in an Equitable photodrama. Florence Reed is to play the leading role in "The Cowardly Way," which is to be directed by John Ince. Kathryn Osterman is to star in a light comedy now being written especially for her.

It is to be the policy of the Equitable company to have a permanent stock company of experienced players who will support the various stars. Miss Clara Whipple, George Soule Spencer and Roy Applegate have already been chosen for this company.

WILLIAM COURTLEIGH, JR., MARRIES.

William Courtleigh, Jr., and Miss Ethel Fleming were united in marriage, at Long Beach, Cal., on July 21. Both are members of the acting force of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company. Mr. Courtleigh is a member of the well-known theatrical family and is at present appearing in the name part of "Neal of the Navy," the smashing patriotic serial which Balboa is filming for the Pathe Company. Miss Fleming is a protege of President H. M. Horkheimer, of the company, and has just been making her initial appearance in pictures. Both Mr. and Mrs. Courtleigh, Jr., came from New York recently; but did not know one another until meeting at the Long Beach studio. Their union came as a complete surprise to the entire Balboa family. They had intended keeping it secret; but it leaked out when they were delayed getting their license and thus late in reporting. They will have a belated honeymoon, for two hours after the ceremony Mr. Courtleigh had to leave for San Francisco, where some scenes in his piece are being made at the Mare Island Navy Yard. As Miss Fleming was playing in another production, she could not go along.

DOWERMAN TO TAKE PICTURES IN WEST.

C. L. Dowerman has been delegated by the American Art Films Company to photograph a number of special scenes during the course of a month's tour through the picturesque West. He expects to have many novel experiences in his journey. He will be compelled to take a film showing the ascent of Pike's Peak while seated at the front end of an automobile; he will also ride up Mount Tamalipas over the most crooked railway in the world on the pilot of an engine. The filming of big tree forests, ostrich farms and quaint old missions in the southern part of California will be but part of his task. Yellowstone Park will also be included in the trip. As there has been but one film previously taken within the portals of the great National Park a new and thorough series will be most welcome, as scenes of America's beauty spots have been somewhat neglected.

Tennyson's "Dora" in Three Reels

Biograph Announces for Early Release Charles Reade's Drama Founded Upon the Famous Poem.

Dora, the famous poem by Lord Alfred Tennyson, will be released as a three reel Biograph in the series including "Under Two Flags," "Jane Eyre," "East Lynne" and other well-known dramas. The version used is the play written by Charles Reade, the celebrated English novelist, who, himself the author of many dramatic masterpieces, was so struck by the beauty and power of Tennyson's poem that he undertook a dramatization which has since become a classic.

"Dora" is the first three-reel Biograph to be produced since the return of the Biograph players from Los Angeles. Work on the production is under way, and an early release is promised.

George Duane Baker

GEORGE DUANE BAKER, who has been bookkeeper, newspaper cartoonist, illustrator, actor, producer, author and is now one of the most prominent comedy directors enrolled on the Vitagraph staff, was born in Champaign, Ill., April 22, 1870. Mr. Baker finished his education in the high school at Beatrice. After working in a bank and then as a cartoonist, he determined to become an actor. He sought and secured a position to play juvenile business with Walker Whiteside, and "made good" at his first public appearance. Later he appeared in support of John Griffith in "Faust," McKee Rankin, Nance O'Neil, Effie Ellsler and Russ Whytal. He also played prominent parts under the management of Brady and Grismer and Litt and Dingwall, appeared successfully in vaudeville, and was a member of the theatrical producing firm of Baker and Castle, who produced Mr. Baker's adaptation of "Graustark," which was a big dramatic success. During the first few years of "Graustark" Mr. Baker, in addition to his other interests, played the character of Grenfall Lorry. Later he dramatized "The Goose Girl," which was also an artistic and financial success. He designed most of the posters used for both of these productions. Of the original plays that have come from Mr. Baker's pen "The Count and the Convict," "The Daredevil" and "As the Sun Went Down," are the most prominent and have been successfully produced on the road.

George Duane Baker.

With the rise of motion pictures, financial returns from dramatic productions dwindled and Mr. Baker, who had always been interested in the camera and had studied its possibilities determined to become a director of motion pictures. His knowledge of stagecraft, learned through experience, and his familiarity with the camera, won him his first battle as a director and his initial picture was such a pronounced success he was enrolled as a full-fledged Vitagraph director. Since joining the Vitagraph company about two years ago, Mr. Baker has been credited with such picture successes as "How Cissy Made Good," "Mr. Bingle's Melodrama," "War," "The Dust of Egypt," "A Price for Folly," May Robson in "A Night Out," and the majority of the pictures in which the late John Bunny won such signal success.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the one paper you need.

Hodkinson Loquitur

Father of Paramount Speaks Entertainingly of Past, Present and Future of the Film World in General, and the Paramount in Particular—Huge Advertising Campaign Is Planned—Does Not Believe in Two-Dollar Pictures.

By W. Stephen Bush.

NOT much more than a year ago William W. Hodkinson came to New York with strong definite ideas, a good deal of reasonable hope and a quiet but immovable persistence. He had done things on the coast. The coming changes in the film conditions and especially in the needs and the development of the exhibitor he had forecasted in his far-sighted way. He had made practical tests in California and thereabouts and he felt he had a mission which was calling him East. He took a comparatively small office up in the World's Tower, said little and worked like a beaver. Well, this is not going to be a resume of his doings here. The facts speak for themselves; everybody now admits that W. W. looms large on the film horizon.

"Judge Us on the Facts."

When I saw Hodkinson just after his return from the coast there was an unwonted buoyancy in his manner and more even than the usual directness in his speech.

"The features," said he, "we offer the exhibitor in the first quarter of our second year are the test. I want your readers to apply to the merits and to the vitality of the Paramount proposition. We were freely told that we were hopelessly wrong and that the rest of the industry was everlastingly right. I offer no argument. I even offer no inference. I only ask you to look at the program for the first quarter of our second year and compare it with the first quarter of the first year. If we were right last year our position is even stronger this year. Our proposition has been imitated. I could give you much interesting and some amusing evidence of this. No need of it after all. Imitators are not competitors. Because our policies and our pictures were eminently successful last year does not make a belated imitation of them at this time successful. However, I do not want to speak of competitors, because there are none. I have spent some precious years of my life trying to convince the exhibitor that it must pay him to raise his price of admission from five to ten cents and this last year I have bent my energies toward raising the price from ten to twenty cents.

"Two Dollar Picture a Gamble at Best."

"Now there is a sudden agitation for what is known as the two dollar motion picture. Well, it is strange to me to find myself on this new side of the fence; I mean it is new to me to dissent from high prices and favor comparatively low prices. The two dollar motion picture is at best a thousand to one chance. It seems to me, even if there were proof that one Broadway feature had made money with two dollar seats, it would not mean anything. It certainly would not be any particular message of cheer or profit to the vast majority of exhibitors. Taking into consideration the laws of supply and demand I should say that an average of 25 cents is about the most reasonable and natural price for seats in the better class of motion picture theaters. How many people can afford to pay two dollars for a seat either in a motion picture theater or in any other theater? I doubt whether more than one or two per cent. of the population can afford it. Now if I can show to a vastly larger number of people at an average of 25 cents what will be the result? Must I pursue a simple problem in arithmetic any further? Would you rather show at two dollars to the one per cent. or at 10 and 20 to thirty and forty per cent. and higher? The question answers itself. The two-dollar picture is not, to my way of thinking, a sound solid proposition.

Power of Paramount Contract Holders.

"Under our system of doing things the contract holders of the Paramount Pictures Corporation are made the judges of last resort as to the merits and the profit-yielding quality of all features on the Paramount program. Now this is something more than a little good material for the publicity department. It is a plain fact and a most important one. If after a fair test the contract holders of the Paramount record their decision that they want fewer pictures of a certain brand or even that they want the brand discontinued entirely they are in a position to make themselves heard and felt. Our producers are large enough, broad enough, enterprising and ambitious enough to not only submit to such a test but to welcome it. The independent quality of the world seeks our channels. We can do the selecting for the exhibitor much better than he could for himself.

New Advertising Campaign.

"We do not rest with providing good programs for the exhibitor. We propose to equip the exhibitor with aids in the getting of business such as he has never dreamed of before.

"Beginning the first Thursday in September in 11,944,105 copies of various publications, its advertisements will appear throughout the year 1915-1916. Assuming that five people read each paper, more than 55,000,000 persons will learn intimately each week of Paramount pictures, Paramount producers and the stars which those producers present on the Paramount Program in the biggest and best theaters everywhere. This gigantic campaign is for the benefit of the Paramount exhibitor.

"Recently a stranger to New York, staying at one of the Times Square Hotels, determined to go to a motion picture theater. He did not hasten to the nearest film theater, as he might have done a few years ago, without first ascertaining what was to be seen there; instead he inquired at the hotel desk where Paramount pictures could be seen and when the clerk suggested the Strand he immediately went there. This is the sort of thing that is happening all over the country, as film fans realize that consistent merit in the releases of a distributing organization means consistent merit in the offerings of the motion picture houses.

"It is generally conceded that service to the exhibitor is the most important item in the distribution of motion pictures, and it is service to the exhibitor that forms one of the strongest rocks on which the Paramount Pictures Corporation is laid. The national campaign will teach a huge reading public that Paramount pictures are the best and it will tell them why they are the best. They have then but to go to those theaters where Paramount pictures are shown to be convinced of the truth of this statement.

"It is to the exhibitor's advantage to identify his theater with the campaign, as then it will be unnecessary for a stranger in his town to ask the hotel clerk where Paramount pictures can be seen. It has always been the policy of the Paramount Pictures Corporation to lay its plans well and not to talk until it is sure that it has something worth talking about. Paramount co-operation and Paramount efficiency will be even more in evidence during the next year than it has been in the past."

The myriad lamps that burn around and about the Paramount eerie up in the World's Tower Building flicked dimly through the intermittent rain that sought to allay the fearful heat of the day. It was getting very late even as hours in the World's Tower are kept, and Hodkinson brought his homily to a close giving us all the very definite impression that he could have prolonged his tales of hopes fulfilled and plans to come indefinitely.

BLANCHE WALSH SIGNS WITH TRIUMPH.

Arthur H. Jacobs, president of the Triumph Film Corporation, has closed a contract with Blanche Walsh, the famous emotional actress, to appear in a new five-reel feature photoplay to be released on the Equitable program, the title of which will be announced later. The great success attending Miss Walsh's appearance in "Resurrection," under the direction of Joseph A. Golden, president of the Crystal Film Company, and the warm personal friendship existing between the star and the director as the result of their joint efforts in that production, have induced Miss Walsh to decline several offers from other film directors and confine her work before the camera to Mr. Golden's guidance. This leads to the production of the new drama in the Crystal studios and laboratories, insures its being placed before lovers of photoplays with all the wealth of artistic setting and absolutely perfect photography for which the Golden organization is famous, and provides a fitting background for the display of Miss Walsh's genius.

SEELYE LOOKING OVER V-L-S-E BRANCHES.

C. R. Seelye, assistant general manager of the V-L-S-E is on an extended tour of the Eastern branches of the V-L-S-E.

On this trip Mr. Seelye is brushing up the territories preparatory to the fall campaign, which will be even more active than that conducted during the spring and summer.

Before leaving Mr. Seelye said that while the business being done by the Eastern branches did not leave room for the slightest discontent, greater things were looked forward to in the fall. He said that the work accomplished by the Big Four branches up to date was really phenomenal, in view of the fact that business had increased every week throughout the summer season.

United's Affairs Aired in Court

Receivers of the Company Apply for Permission to Dispose of the Assets of the Concern—Court Orders Sale.

IN an effort to conserve the assets of the United Film Company, now in bankruptcy, Langdon P. Marvin and Leo C. Stern, as receivers for the bankrupt concern, sued out an order before Judge Augustus N. Hand, of the Federal District Court, for permission to sell or otherwise dispose of all the assets of the film company. The order was issued by Judge Hand Thursday, July 29, returnable Monday, August 2. Three days notice to all creditors and others having interest in the affairs of the bankrupt concern was declared to be sufficient. The order was resisted by a number of creditors and also by several of the subsidiary corporations created by the bankrupt late last year to carry on the business in the various branches or exchanges scattered throughout the United States and Canada.

The order gave notice to all creditors and others to come into court and show cause why the receivers should not be empowered to take immediate action to sell out everything owned by the bankrupt estate. The petition and subsequent proceedings reveal a tangle of unusual seriousness. As will be seen in an advertisement in this issue, the court has since ordered the sale of the twenty exchanges, 700 reels of film, etc.

The petition of the receivers sets forth that the United Film Company was organized some two years ago as "Warner's Features (Inc.)." Later, by order of the federal courts, the name was changed to the United Film Company. Its purpose was to buy and distribute moving picture films in the United States, Canada and Europe, although no exchange was established abroad. The better way to carry out the purposes of the company, exchanges were established in twenty cities in this country and Canada.

The petition informs the court that in such a venture the promoters do not expect to realize profits from the beginning, but that because of the heavy expenses of establishing and maintaining exchanges, the early months of such a company will nearly always represent a heavy loss.

In the ordinary course of business, the bankrupt company was accustomed to buy twenty films and send one to each of the exchanges that the latter might rent them out to moving picture theaters in their respective territories. The life of such a business depends upon a continuous supply of new films and the drain on the resources of any such concern is very heavy until a long line of rentals on each film has been established.

Some time later in 1914 or early in this year, the United Film Company decided it would be wise to interest exchange managers and other employes in the business. Accordingly subsidiary corporations were organized in each district under the laws of the states wherein they were situated. Then the parent company sold to the interested parties some of the capital stock in the smaller concerns. Part cash was received, with notes of the purchasers for the balance. In each case the title of the small company was "The Program Company of New York," etc.

A considerable amount in cash was realized by these sales and the company also disposed of some $88,000 in notes it held against the stock purchasers. In several cases in important centres, the United Film Company disposed of 50 or more per cent. of the new stock. In these instances a very serious complication has arisen. In the cases where the old company holds all or a majority fraction of the new stock, the petition asks that the physical assets be sold; that is the films, fixtures and other property appertaining to such exchange.

When the receivers took hold they report a return from rentals was made weekly by all the exchanges, the amount running into several figures; recently, they urge the returns dropped to a mere pittance and have practically ceased. They also declare that in the case on the Program companies in which they as receivers held but 50 or less per cent. of the stock the heads of such exchanges have refused to make any returns or to make any payments on notes issued in payment of stock. These heads argue that the United Film Company, in so far as they are concerned, is in the same position as any other stockholder. These people not only refuse to pay any rentals but threaten, in order to keep themselves going, to sue on the stock held by the bankrupt concern.

Immediate action was urged upon Judge Hand, for, so the receivers say, managers of the concerns which have declined to make any rental payments are now in New York, making contracts for new films for use in their districts without any regard to the bankrupt company or the receivers. The receivers assert that unless prompt action is taken, the rights of the creditors of the United Film Company will be seriously impaired and the assets dissipated.

Regarding the notes held by the receivers in bankruptcy, the petition declares they are for the most part uncollectible. The concerns or individuals who gave them are, so it is alleged, unable to meet the notes. In these cases an immediate realization on the physical assets is urged.

The representatives of the exchange interests put up a strong fight, asserting that they are virtually independent concerns and in no wise involved or should be involved in the affairs of the bankrupt. This situation is of such seriousness that the court decided to take sufficient time in which to consider it in all of its legal and equitable aspects.

Morosco Announces New Captures

Blanche Ring, Cyril Maude and Charlotte Greenwood to Be Starred in Elaborate Productions Shortly.

THE Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company announces the acquisition of several new stars of the stage to be screened by this concern in the near future, including such prominent celebrities as Blanche Ring, Cyril Maude and Charlotte Greenwood.

Blanche Ring is one of the big surprises offered by Mr. Morosco for patrons of the photoplay. Among the productions in which she has starred are such metropolitan successes as "The Yankee Girl," "When Claudia Smiles," "The Wall Street Girl," "The Great White Way," and many others of equal prominence. In London Miss Ring first appeared at the Palace Theater where her success was instantaneous. A prolonged engagement at the Savoy Theater in "The Love Birds" followed.

Cyril Maude's initial film subject for Mr. Morosco, "Peer Gynt," an adaptation of Ibsen's well known masterpiece, has already been completed and will be the first release of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company on the Paramount Program during the fifth quarter commencing September 1. Mr. Maude, one of the greatest character actors in the world, is also an international favorite, his success in this country in such productions as "Grumpy" and "Second in Command" having duplicated in America his popularity in England.

Charlotte Greenwood, known as "the girl who won fame over night, as a comedienne, is another capture of importance for the screen. In "Pretty Mrs. Smith," Miss Greenwood appeared with Fritzi Scheff at the Casino Theater, New York, where both press and public acclaimed her as one of Broadway's funniest laugh provokers.

SOME REMARKABLE PATHE WAR SCENES.

The Pathe cameraman, George Ercole was the only man who remained on deck during a sea fight and bombardment in the Black Sea between the Turkish fleet, including the Medjidi, Turkey's biggest ship, and the Czar's fleet. The scenes on the film he took will be attached to the regular Pathe News Weekly issued on August 4, 1915. One of our reviewers has seen the offering—it is only five or six hundred feet long—and says: "It is the most remarkable picture of a battle that I have yet seen. The photography is excellent, and we are shown the Russian ships sailing out of the harbor of Sebastopol just as the sun lifts over the hills. The fleet sails out into the sea and comes into shooting distance of the enemy. Then the big guns begin to pound away. At length we see the big Turkish cruiser, the Medjidi, half submerged and see the Russians draw down the Crescent and raise the crossed Russian flag above it."

NEW KALEM OFFICERS.

At an election of officers held by the Kalem Company, Frank J. Marion was elected president in place of Samuel Long, deceased, and William Wright was elected secretary and treasurer. Mr. Marion was elected to succeed the late Mr. Long as the Kalem representative on the Board of Directors of the General Film Company.

DARNABY TO EXPLOIT "CABIRIA."

After a lapse of ten years J. A. Darnaby again becomes associated with Harry R. Raver, head of the Itala interests in North America. Until 1905 Raver and Darnaby operated a twenty-two car carnival and festival enterprise, playing the principal big events in the Middle States and Northwest. They were the first to present musical comedy in a canvas auditorium.

Mr. Darnaby will be sent to Canada to represent the Itala Company in the exploitation of "Cabiria." An organization has already been completed for the Canadian tour and, with Darnaby's clever showmanship, should result in a splendid success.

J. Stuart Blackton Arming His Craft

Brooklyn Film Manufacturer and Yachtsman Plans to Create Auxiliary Coast Defense Fleet.

FOLLOWING the motorboat races which are to be held the second week in August, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, owner of a fleet of the fastest motorboats in the world, has arranged to have the craft placed in dry dock and work will immediately be started to armor them. It is the intention of Commodore Blackton to have his fleet act as auxiliary coast defense in connection with the peace through preparedness movement. The present war in Europe has shown that the only method of overcoming submarine warfare is by having armored motorboats which are so fast that they can outsail torpedoes and are able to outmanouver, attack and [illegible] and in other ways make it possible for peaceful shipping to operate. Commodore Blackton aided in designing his present craft, and the movement on his part is regarded as significant.

Commodore Blackton.

Acting with Commodore Blackton is Hudson Maxim, the inventor of high explosives, who is also on Thomas A. Edison's board in connection with an increased navy. It is possible to operate these with crews of from three to five men. Commodore Blackton has decided to submit his present plans to the United States Navy Board.

"I have discussed this matter with many of the foremost naval authorities," said Commodore Blackton, "and they are thoroughly agreed with me that this is the best move that possibly can be made."

MARIE DRESSLER WINS AGAINST KEYSTONE.

Justice Alfred R. Page in the Supreme Court of New York, on Wednesday handed down a decision directing an accounting of "Tilly's Punctured Romance" by the Keystone Film Company to Miss Marie Dressler within ten days. In the event Miss Dressler objects to the figures a referee is to be appointed, but should these prove satisfactory then the amount of the accounting furnished by the Keystone Company is to be accepted as the judgment of the court.

The complaint in the first action of Marie Dressler against the Keystone Film Company was dismissed without costs and so was the complaint in the second action as to the defendants. Alco Film Corporation and Adam Kessel, Jr. The opinion is of about 600 words and recites the case from the viewpoints of both sides, Justice Page stating: "There would appear to be no fraud or misconduct on the part of the defendant Keystone Film Company."

ELSIE JANIS IN "'TWAS EVER THUS."

Bosworth, Inc., announces as its first release during the fifth quarter of the Paramount Pictures Corporation commencing September 1st, Elsie Janis in her fourth photoplay, "'Twas Ever Thus," a novel comedy written by the little star herself presenting a cycle of four romances in four different periods commencing with the time of the cave dwellers. "Nearly a Lady" is the third Janis subject by Bosworth, Inc., and will be released Aug. 19 on the Paramount Program.

SNIFFEN SALES MANAGER OF PARAMOUNT.

Frank D. Sniffen, a well-known advertising man, has been appointed general sales manager of Paramount Pictures Corporation. In 1901 Mr. Sniffen was advertising manager of the New York Morning Telegraph. Later he was associated with Harper & Brothers and with magazines and newspapers of national scope. He is an experienced salesman and hopes to bring to the motion picture business methods which, though new to it, have been proved successful in other lines.

New Studio in Pennsylvania

United States Motion Picture Corporation Has Nearly Completed Its Fine Plant in Wilkes-Barre.

THE new plant of the United States Motion Picture Corporation, located at Wilkes-Barre, is nearing completion and will be ready to begin operations in a few days.

It is conceded by experts who have visited this plant that it is a most complete establishment. A radical departure was made in the structural work of the glass and steel, with the result that the builders claim 30 per cent. greater light efficiency inside than out. The plant is located within a stone's throw of the Susquehanna river on one side and a chain of the Blue Mountains on the other. The scenery throughout the Wyoming Valley is magnificent, and publicity writers have rightly named this section the Switzerland of America.

Studio of United States Motion Picture Corporation.

The plant was designed and built under the personal supervision of James O. Walsh. Fred W. Hermann, general manager of the Savoy Theater, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., is vice-president of the company. Mr. Hermann is a pioneer in the motion picture business, as his experience dates back to the beginning of exhibiting. Daniel L. Hart, the well-known playwright, author of "The Parish Priest," "Marching Through Georgia," "The Jucklins," and many other successes, will be the scenario editor for the company. Affiliations have been made with one of the biggest distributing organizations in the country to handle the United States product.

Knickerbocker Stays in General

Owners of This Brand of Three-Reelers Remove All Doubt on This Point.

The licensed manufacturing company owning the Knickerbocker Star Feature brand of three-reelers has made formal announcement to the effect that this brand will be continued on the General Film Company's regular program as usual, releasing every other Wednesday.

This statement is made to offset certain press matter which has been published by some papers to the effect that Knickerbocker Star Features would be included on an independent program.

The company owning the Knickerbocker brand further states that it never had any intention of releasing on any program other than the General Film Company's, and that any statement to the contrary may be regarded as entirely unauthorized and contrary to the facts.

EDDIE O'CONNOR IN PATHE SERIES.

Edward O'Connor, the comedian who is well known in farce, extravaganza, comic opera and vaudeville, has been engaged for the Pathe series, "The New Adventures of Wallingford," now being made by the Whartons at Ithaca, N. Y. Mr. O'Connor will play "Onion Jones," one of the leading characters in the story.

GENERAL MANAGER GASNIER TAKES VACATION.

General Manager Gasnier of Pathe has just returned from a short vacation, which he spent in company with twenty-five fellow members of the Pump Club, a social organization of well known Jersey City politicians.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

The Injunction on Eastland Moving Pictures in Chicago.

IN my last letter, in the opening article, I stated that moving pictures of the Eastland disaster had been prohibited in Chicago theaters until grief had become somewhat abated. At the time of writing I had supposed that Acting Mayor Moorehouse, who issued the order in the absence of Mayor Thompson, had acted from a sense of respect for the feelings of the relatives of the victims of the disaster, in the first hours of their agony over the loss of their dead. It was only fitting that this should have been done.

Later it developed that the order was mandatory in its nature, and that the exhibition of the pictures was to be altogether prohibited. On the return of Mayor Thompson, who had canceled all engagements at the San Francisco Exposition, whither he had gone with Governor Dunne and the First Regiment of the Illinois National Guard to celebrate Illinois Day, he appointed a committee of three, composed of civilians, to decide on the issuing of a permit for the exhibition of the pictures. The Chicago Tribune had taken 1,000 feet of these news pictures and offered to donate the entire proceeds, to which it was entitled, to the Eastland relief fund. The committee recommended the refusal of the permit, "out of regard and respect for the wishes and feelings of those who have suffered deep bereavement and are mourning for their tragic loss." The Mayor thus shifted responsibility to the shoulders of the committee.

The three upright citizens on that committee doubtless acted from a deep sympathy for the bereaved, and without bestowing any thought on the inequity of their decision against moving pictures; for that decision clearly discriminates against news in moving pictures in favor of news as expressed by the written word, supported by illustrations from still photographs of various scenes connected with the disaster.

The whole crux of the matter lies in this: the moving picture is comparatively new and the plaything of censorship; the press, having long since broken the shackles of a worse censorship, devotes its liberty to the securing of full rights and liberty for all. The morning of the day has already dawned when moving pictures will play their important part for good in the formation of public opinion and in the uplift of the race; and, at no distant period, those who come after us will be less amazed at the defeat of the opposition which the moving picture has met than at the glorious things it has wrought and accomplished in the lives and destinies of men.

But Acting Mayor Moorhouse, and the three gentlemen on the committee who declared against the exhibition of the Eastland pictures in Chicago, can console themselves with knowledge of the fact that they are not alone. The New York World stands with them editorially, thusly:

"Why was it necessary for the acting mayor of Chicago to forbid the use of moving pictures of the Eastland wreck and the drowning of her passengers? Would any sane manager have attempted such an outrage?"

Anent which the Milwaukee Sentinel, in the issue of July 28, answers editorially:

"Yes; we see the moral point of that. But, at the same time, we newspapers must clear our minds of cant.

"To be frank, is a 'moving picture' of that grewsome business any worse than the stationary photographic reproduction of the same horrors—such as, for instance, furnishes the ghastly, but appealing, front page 'window dressing' of the same issue of Mr. Pulitzer's lively newspaper?

"No, neighbor. We are all in it. The public likes to 'sup full of horrors' on such occasions, and will be served. When newspapers upbraid the 'movie' men for turning these tragedies to profitable pictorial account, it seems a bit like Satan rebuking sin.'"

It Pays to Be Honest.

In the editorial columns of the Los Angeles Times, in the issue of July 24, there appeared the following paragraph, under the heading, "Tip to the Movies":

"We strongly advise the motion-picture producers of this country to get busy with some of the great Russian plays before that country has any time to annoy us with small details like copyright laws. At present there is no such treaty. Tolstoy, Turgenev and Andreyev have some great picture material. The little play called 'The Life of Man,' by Andreyev would make a picture that would have few rivals. It would be unique in the annals of filmdom and is the sort of play that would be tremendous in pictures, while it would hardly be practicable to the stage."

Is it not a matter to be ashamed of that a newspaper with the reputation of the "Times" should give its sanction to such abominable doctrine? The law that sanctions the taking away from a man that which is rightfully his, because he is not protected and cannot protect himself, harks back to the Stone Age period. To advocate that the works of Tolstoy should be plundered by American film manufacturers, without restitution to his heirs, just because at present there is no copyright law between Russia and this country, smacks of the rankest piracy.

I am fearless in announcing that there is not a reputable American manufacturer who would stoop to such a crime. If there be a manufacturer who will entertain such a proposition, I would beg to remind him that, if the works of Tolstoy, Turgenev and Andreyev are not copyrighted in the United States, they are copyrighted in Great Britain, France, Germany and in other European countries, where the reputable American manufacturer finds a generous market.

In such matter it pays to be honest; if the governing principle be not of a higher nature.

A New Weekly.

The Chicago Evening Post has announced that, beginning Monday, August 9, in conjunction with the National News Weekly, it will release 1,000 feet of news pictures weekly, 500 feet of which will be devoted to Chicago news happenings and 500 feet to the happenings in other cities and towns of the United States.

Twenty-five branches of the National News Weekly Company have been established in that number of leading cities, with an expert camera man always on the spot in each of them.

The Weekly will be distributed by the World Film Corporation, of New York.

Among the newspapers associated with the Post and the National News Weekly service in the production of this weekly are the Atlanta Constitution, Milwaukee Journal, Cincinnati Enquirer, Philadelphia Public Ledger, Washington Times, New Orleans Times-Picayune, Cleveland Leader, Buffalo Enquirer, Minneapolis Journal, Omaha Bee, Detroit Times, St. Louis Times, Dallas News, Pittsburg Dispatch and nine other papers in leading cities in the United States.

Chicago News Brevities.

William H. Swanson stopped over for a few hours in the city one day last week, on the trip from Denver to New York City, where he will remain for some time.

* * *

Harry G. Musgrove, secretary of the Australian Films, Ltd., Sydney, Australia, was in the city Thursday, July 29, and left that evening for Los Angeles and San Francisco. He will leave San Francisco for home August 3. Since I last saw Mr. Musgrove in Chicago, he made a prolonged stay in New York City, and then made a trip to England, from which country he returned to New York about the close of last May. He spent the interim in that city.

* * *

Will C. Bettis, owner of the Alhambra theater, Toledo, Ohio, was in the city last week, and was seen at George Kleine's offices. Mr. Bettis informed me that he uses all of George Kleine's product, and also Paramount programs, with Pathe travelogues. Six reels are offered at the Alhambra for ten cents admission. The presentations are accompanied by high-class organ music. Mr. Bettis reported fair business generally in his home city. While in Chicago he purchased outright the Chicago Tribune's pictures (comprising 1,000 feet) of the Eastland disaster. The Ohio State censor board passed these pictures without hesitation. One cannot understand why these and other pictures of the disaster were prohibited by the censor boards of several states.

* * *

The seven-reel Selig Red Seal Photoplay, "The Rosary," has been selected as an example of the great good a moving picture can accomplish by Commissioner Shannon, of Dallas, Tex., in the fight of the city officials and the exhibitors against the state law providing for the closing of moving picture theaters on Sunday, in that city. Commissioner Shannon and his supporters proclaim that photoplays like "The Rosary" furnish not only clean entertainment, but also teach a fine moral lesson.

* * *

Suit for $1,000,000 was filed in the Superior Court, this city, on Thursday, July 22, against the Vanoscope Company, by Joseph E. Morhardt, the inventor of the Vanoscope projecting machine, who alleges that he has been damaged to that extent by a breach of contract. Morhardt declares in his petition that he deposited $1,510,000 of $1,600,000 stock in the company—which was paid him for his patents—in a voting pool, with the understanding that the company was to give William J. Robinson, the promoter of the company, an option. Failure to give this option caused Robinson to bring suit. As will be remembered from a former article in the Moving Picture World, Mr. Robinson obtained judgment in the Federal Court, in New York City, for $190,000, approximately. Morhardt claims that the common stock of the company had a par market value in 1913, and that, owing to the failure of the company to carry out its promises to him and its contract with Robinson, the value has depreciated so that the total amount of stock deposited in the pool could not now be sold for more than $5,000.

* * *

The Ascher Brothers have leased a site of 150 by 180 feet at 3947-57 Drexel Boulevard for a period of 99 years. On this site an apartment building and a new fireproof moving picture theater will be built. The plans of the theater have been designed by Architect H. L. Newhouse. The house will have 1,500 seats on the ground floor, which will give the new theater the largest auditorium of any theater in Chicago built specially for pictures. The seating plans have been designed to afford patrons the very best protection for easy exit in case of panic. There will be no wall seats, and the opera chairs will be of extra width. An exceptionally large organ will be installed by the W. W. Kimball Company. The new house will be known as the Oakland Square theater. It is the first house that will be built for pictures with a seating capacity of over 1,000 feet, making a new type of building not at present covered by the Chicago building code. A special class was created by the Chicago building department to cover its construction.

* * *

Harry Weis, manager of the Chicago branch office of Metro, reports a rapidly growing business. He states that within the last three weeks 51 new patrons were added to the number of those using Metro programs in the city. Phil Solomon, assistant manager, devotes much of his time to outdoor work in the city, and to save time Mr. Weis and himself are seen in various parts of the city in a big new auto. Al. Rosenthal is down in Indiana working successfully as traveling representative, and R. H. Fox is down in Southern Illinois in a similar capacity. The first release of Metro in Chicago, "Second in Command," was delayed on the trip from the Coast studios to New York, and this handicapped the Chicago office seriously; for the picture had to be received in time for censoring and ready for rehearsal at the Studebaker theater, where it opened on Monday, July 26. No train carrying express could make the run from New York to Chicago in less than 20 hours, and so Mr. Laird, of the New York office, brought the prints to Chicago by the Twentieth Century. This incident shows that the Metro people have the inclination and the vim to carry out their contract to the letter.

* * *

It now appears that the Griffith-Ince-Sennett combination, known legally as the Triangle Film Corporation, has secured the Studebaker and Colonial theaters, two large Loop houses, for the presentation of their output in this city. It is said that the Studebaker will be a permanent home for Triangle features, and will open about September 6. The Colonial will take over the "Birth of a Nation" from the Illinois on or about August 23. There it will be presented as long as the receipts show paying profits, at admissions from two dollars and down. When the receipts fall below that mark, Jones, Linick & Schaefer will resume management, most likely with vaudeville.

* * *

H. L. Gumbiner, of this city, has leased the parcel of ground at the northeast corner of Lincoln and Lawrence avenues, at the intersection of Claremont avenue, for a period of 99 years. Upon the vacant part of the ground a handsome moving picture theater, with a seating capacity of 1,500, will be built. Mr. Gumbiner now owns the Bertha, the Temple and Paulina theaters in this city.

* * *

Frank Clifford, operator of the Harper theater, Fifty-third street and Harper avenue, this city, paid us a call last week and renewed his subscription for the World. The Harper theater, it will be remembered, is the house so often mentioned in my former brevities over the opening of which so much contention was raised by the trustees of the Hyde Park Presbyterian Church, which adjoins the theater. Mr. Clifford stated that the house opened about May 24, and that ever since business has been quite satisfactory. It has been still more satisfactory since the management has been offering programs of V-L-S-E, Paramount and Metro makes. The product of the two former companies is shown for two days each. "The Rosary" has made a tremendous hit, long lines of people waiting outside the door being always the rule when this feature had its two days' run. Mr. Clifford stated also that the Harper has just installed a new Radium Gold Fibre Screen, one of the largest in the city, which is giving fine satisfaction. A Kimball pipe organ was also installed recently and its accompaniment, in connection with an orchestra of five pieces, contributes much to the enjoyment of patrons. Fine stage settings are used with the presentations. Two motor-driven Simplex machines are used.

* * *

The Eden theater, 2409-13 West Harrison street, narrowly escaped having a record of injury and death Friday night, July 30. A presentation in aid of the Eastland sufferers was under way when suddenly all the lights went out. The house was filled to capacity, 650 people being present, and quite a number more occupied all available standing room. Those in the audience jumped to their feet and began surging toward the exit, when Thomas I. Nolan, proprietor and manager, rushed to the stage and, in a short speech, requested every one to keep cool, as there was no danger. The panic immediately subsided. Several were badly bruised, but none was seriously injured. It was discovered later that some practical joker had climbed a telegraph pole near the theater and cut the wire that ran into the theater transformer box.

* * *

The invitation exhibition of "Sarah Bernhardt at Home," given at the Illinois theater, Tuesday morning, July 27, was largely attended. The daily press of Chicago had nothing but praise for these pictures, which were taken in behalf of the Belgian Red Cross, the United States rights of which are owned by the Photoplay Releasing Company of this city.

* * *

The Chicago Evening Post, of July 30, had the following paragraph in a cablegram sent from London, England, on that date, which treated of the popularity of American photoplays in Great Britain: "Great Britain imports 5,000,000 feet of American film annually. From one American 2,000-foot negative, 120 copies were printed in England and sold at a profit of $8,750,000, and this is not an exceptional case." The amazing error in the figures showing the profits tends to make the uninitiated believe that there are millions in pictures when there are only hundreds or thousands of dollars. This would be a nice paragraph for the wind-jamming promoters of wild cat companies for the production of moving pictures. The error in the figures is so palpable that analysis is not necessary.

* * *

A number of theatrical managers of the Middle West will hold a convention in Chicago, on August 12, 13 and 14, which will be known as the Mid-West Managers' Convention. A committee of fifty, representing manufacturers, exchanges and theater managers are at present busy arranging a program for the entertainment of the visitors. It is expected by some of the optimistic that nearly 200 delegates will be present. One of the promised outings of the visitors will be a trip to the studio and factory of the Selig Polyscope Company, where they will be shown the process of the making of moving pictures. The headquarters for the visitors will be The Strollers' Club, where it is expected a banquet will be given. L. C. Zeleno, who is credited with fathering this affair, has evidently taken great pains to keep the matter as private as possible, as he never let this office know anything about the matter.

* * *

The Selig stars in Chicago have aided largely in the benefits arranged to provide funds for the families of those who lost their lives in the Eastland disaster. Miss Rita Gould, who is playing one of the leading roles in Hoyt's Comedy "A Black Sheep," sold tickets for several of the benefit performances, while Otis Harlan, Grace Darmond, John Charles and several other Selig photoplayers aided in various ways in obtaining money for the benefit funds.

* * *

The Eastland fund collected in Chicago since the disaster, from all sources, amounted to $343,000 on Monday, August 2. Mayor Thompson and the Eastland Relief Committee have thanked the public for the hearty response to the appeal and to Chicago newspapers for their hearty co-operation.

* * *

F. O. Nielson, who controls "Guarding Old Glory," the subject that has received such great attention from army and navy chiefs, is preparing to launch an aggressive advertising campaign for his big feature. This production will prove of especial interest all over the country on account of the present agitation on the question of adequate military preparation.

LOS ANGELES LETTER

Sennett, Ince and Griffith Finally Incorporate the Triangle.

The formal and official anouncement of the combination of the forces of Mack Senett, David W. Griffith and Thomas H. Ince was made here this week when Ad Kessel, Charles Kessel and C. O. Baumann, executives of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, arrived from La Junta, Cal., where they had been in session with the Big Three who went East to meet them for the purpose of organizing the five-million-dollar corporation.

The birth of this company, which is made up of a number of men most prominent in the business, marks an epoch in the history of the moving picture industry. At the meeting H. E. Aitken was made president; Ad Kessel, Mack Sennett, D. W. Griffith and Thomas H. Ince were selected as vice presidents, C. O. Baumann as secretary, and Charles Kessel as auditor.

This combination will make no material change in the present producing companies working under the personal supervision of the three directors. The same supporting players will be seen as heretofore in the big feature productions, and the only noticeable change will be in the screen appearance of well known legitimate stars. The pictures made at the Mutual Studios will be released on the Triangle circuit as Griffith features, while those made at Inceville will be known as Ince features. Mack Sennett is the only one who will retain a brand; his comedies will be known as Senett-Keystone Comedy Features. Of course, the regular brands of smaller pictures will be sold the same as heretofore.

In anticipation of the positive demand for lengthy pictures of merit, Thomas H. Ince has already signed Billie Burke, who will arrive at Inceville shortly to face the camera. He has also re-signed Frank Keenan, who will be a permanent film worker here. Ince's idea is to get stars, teach them the tricks of the camera and then keep them at salaries high enough to retain them so that they cannot work first for one company and then for another.

The Triangle Corporation is probably the most comprehensive film producing organization now in existence. The new concern will participate in every branch of the moving picture business. It will not only write its own stories and produce them, but will maintain agencies in every large city which desires the service. It is also said that a chain of theaters wherein will be shown features made under this name, will be owned and operated by the Triangle. The United States will not be the only field, for the plans of the Triangle are to have auxiliary companies in the principal cities of England, France, Germany, Russia, Italy, Australia, Spain and the South American countries.

After having completed the first arrangements for the production of pictures which will be released probably by October, Charles Kessel, Ad Kessel and Mr. Baumann left Los Angeles on July 27 for San Francisco. There they will spend a few days before going East, where the distributing plans of the newly organized corporation will be carried out under their supervision.

Lubin Completing Studio at Coronado.

Work has been rushed speedily the past two weeks and as a result of the dynamic efforts of Captain Wilbert Melville, managing director of Lubin's Western forces, a handsome new studio has been completed at Coronado across the bay from San Diego. The new plant will be opened about August 15 with officials of the exposition, mayor, city officials and others in attendance. A banquet, demonstration and ball will feature the opening date which marks the start of the first large company in the south.

* * *

Captain Melville has been working between here and the new plant for the past month, completing arrangements for the moving of the Los Angeles studio and equipment. This does not mean that this city is to be left off the Lubin map, for when the new place is opened and the present location vacated, a corps of artificers will immediately start work on the new and large concrete plant which was announced some weeks ago.

The San Diego plant is complete in every respect. The location is ideal. The plot of ground, nearly a ranch, is located near the water, on a sloping hill, with all kinds of locations nearby. There was a three-story building on the lot. This was converted into office, dressing rooms, and other like places where business is transacted. An ornamental wall ten feet high incloses the square. In the front is a forty-eight foot castle style gate, one of the towers of which is utilized as the scenario office so that the editors will be elevated for inspiration and at the same time be safe and far from the maddening crowd of writers.

* * *

The large and roomy stage is in the center of the lot. On one side and paralleling it is a two-story building for the technical and mechanical men. At one end is a cement building for the construction department, garage, chauffeur's home and other like spaces. A completely equipped machine shop is a feature of the plant; $1,500 was spent in tools alone for this department.

* * *

Thursday of this week the Lubin Western forces packed up the studio equipment and loaded it into a special baggage car train bound for the south. The train was run on passenger schedule so no time was lost. August 1st work began and only the week end was lost in transporting the big plant.

* * *

Captain Melville is about the busiest man in the land this week with so much to do supervising the moving and building of the new place. He also has been besieged by what he says seemed to be millions of little parasites who even climbed fences to get an interview with him in regard to working as extra at the new studio. And yet he managed to smile when the World man dropped in to get the details. He certainly is a worker and a pleasant man to talk to. The address of the new southern headquarters will be The Lubin Studio, Coronado, California.

* * *

While enjoying a pleasure ride through the big trees of the forest near the Universal Lake Tahoe studio this week, Helen Leslie, ingenue leading woman in the Kerrigan company, was thrown from her horse and received injuries which will keep her in bed for several weeks.

* * *

Glen Martin, the aviator, and three Universal players, were hurt in a sham battle at Venice this week, none, however, very seriously. Martin, though engaged to participate in the battle with a military hydroaeroplane, did not actually do so, as the sea became too rough for his machine. He was injured later, when one of the supposedly harmless bombs which it had been planned he should drop from the air exploded in his right hand, burning him quite badly.

* * *

Lillian Brown Leighton, star character woman of the Selig Polyscope Company, and who is well remembered in "When a Woman Is Forty," "The Transfer Corner," "The Mother of Seven," and a number of other successful Selig productions, is now playing lead in the Bloom Center comedies. Miss Leighton's particular hobby outside of the pictures is embroidering, and she is said to be an artist with thread and needle.

* * *

Chang, the pet supreme of the Selig Zoo, has been very ill for the last two weeks. Chang, or to give the gentleman his full title, Prince Chang, is a five-year old orang-outang of pleasing personality and many accomplishments. The prince is an actor, and like a true artist possessed of considerable temperament. W. E. Wing, the feature writer, who is interested in the Prince and a close student of animal psychology, ventured the opinion that wounded professional pride may have been the cause of Mr. Chang's illness.

* * *

Kathlyn Williams is threatening to transfer her affections from her pet leopard Kathlyn to this magnificent animal's two little kittens born ten days ago. In spite of their tender age these diminutive beasts are quite vicious and claw and growl at anybody approaching their cage except Miss Williams.

* * *

Colin Campbell, the dean of the Selig producers, is taking his regular July vacation at Catalina Islands. Mr. Campbell's conception of a vacation is to take a company of players along. The scenery of Catalina is picturesque and gives wonderful setting and atmosphere for stories of the sea.

* * *

The new stage at the Kalem Glendale studio is now completed. The equipment is modern in every respect, particularly efficient is the light installation. James Horne, the managing director, is working on the ninth episode of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel" series. Marin Sais takes the leading part, with True Boardman playing opposite. Mr. Horne is going to San Diego for a week with a company of fifty to get the appropriate setting for this picture.

* * *

Helen Holmes has just finished the fortieth episode of the "Hazards of Helen." In this picture, among other thrills, she jumps from a station roof to a moving train. Miss Holmes is not only a talented actress, but among other accomplishments she is also an inventor. She has recently completed a working model of a safety signal apparatus for railroad crossings.

* * *

Casey, the famous Kalem railroad dog, is lost. He was stolen about two weeks ago and detectives are working on his recovery. Gloom prevails at the Glendale studio, as Casey was a great favorite among the players. This valuable dog has done some notable things in the pictures. One of his great achievements was to throw a railroad switch by taking hold with his teeth and pulling the heavy thing over.

* * *

S. M. Spedon, the Vitagraph publicity man, made a friendly call at the World office this week. Mr. Spedon hinted at a possible change in location of the Vitagraph Western studio. The present location at Santa Monica is too far out of the way and the Vitagraph Company may decide to move closer to Los Angeles, possibly into Hollywood. Mr. Spedon also stated that several new women stars will be added to the Vitagraph forces and that some very elaborate feature productions are planned for the coming season. Mr. Spedon wanted to emphasize that no distinction should be made between the Eastern and Western studios. They are all of one Vitagraph Company, with the same policy and producing practically the same kind of pictures. That the Santa Monica plant is called the Western studio does not imply that only Western pictures are made out here; on the contrary, a number of society dramas and comedies are also produced by the Western companies. Mr. Spedon was given a delightful surprise party last Friday by the employees of the Vitagraph Company at the Sunset Inn, Santa Monica.

* * *

Rollin S. Sturgeon, who left the Vitagraph a short time ago, has been re-engaged, it is said, at a large salary. Mr. Sturgeon is now making preparations for a Vitagraph "Blue Ribbon" feature, "Sir Henry Morgan, Buccaneer," by the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady. This picture will entail so many hazardous scenes in mid-ocean that it will require care in selecting players. None but expert swimmers will be able to enact the many episodes of adventure and conflict in this unusual story. The building of special craft and employment of hundreds of extra players will require many weeks of work.

* * *

The terror of Inceville is over. The snake has been captured. Last week we stated that the cameraman's fright, that slimy reptile which struck fear into the hearts of the film grinders, was found in the dark recesses of the film vault being devoured by the rattler's deadliest of enemies, the king snake. But a few hours after the rattler had been extracted from the throat of the king snake he revived, escaped, and again took up his position on an upper shelf in the underground vault. The suspense and pain of knowing that the serpent was again in their "sanctum something" caused Robert Newhard to have the thrill of his life when he found the snake. The picture tells the story. The intrepid Static took the snake out and killed it, thus ending the nightmare of Inceville.

* * *

It is announced definitely by Prince O'Hara, Ince's publicity expert, that the Scream Club, which was organized several months ago, will be once more on the boards. Next week a meeting is slated to be held in one of the cafes at which every Western writer will be present, and plans laid for regular meetings. There will be no officers. A chairman will be named for each meeting. With the present large number of writers on the coast the club ought to pan out well.

* * *

According to the Mutual Press Association, of which Bennie Zeidman is the star reporter, a walking club has been formed at the Triangle-Mutual studios. Some of the husky boys arise at 7 o'clock and start for Mount Hollywood, three miles distant. After regaining their wind they trip back to the studio and start work. The foremost members are Lloyd Ingraham, Howard Gaye, George Walsh, Frank Bennett, Karl Formes, Jr., Margie Wilson, Greg Allen and Alfred Paget.

* * *

"Waifs," from the typewriter of J. G. Hawkes, is the story which is featuring Jane Grey this week at Inceville. The story is under the personal direction of Mr. Ince, subdirected by Scott Sidney. Some big scenes are included in the film and a great number of Western character people are used.

* * *

One of the youngest directors in the business, Frank Lloyd, who left the Universal to join the Morosco Photoplay Company, has started his first picture, "The Reform Candidate," which will feature Macklyn Arbuckle. A funny situation arose while this picture was being made. Manager Charles Eyton insists that the studio be kept spotless. One morning when he entered he was surprised to find a sight which went straight against him. At the rear entrance was a pile of rubbish, debris, garbage and most every kind of junk that would be found in a first class back alley. He started a silent search for the guilty persons, meantime ordering the janitor to clean up the chaotic mess. Some time later Director Lloyd arrived with his players and proceeded to his "alley" in the back yard and was more surprised to see it cleaned out, evaporated, incinerated—gone; his fine set ruined. Soon the two big men were brought together and it was laughter all around when the discovery was made that Lloyd had built the alley especially for a scene in "The Reform Candidate," putting it inside the yard instead of outside in the real alley. He thought it would be safe there, so the garbage cans and junk boxes had to be re-emptied into the clean back yard.

* * *

Jesse J. Robbins, head of the Essanay players, and directing the first company, has had his mechanics copy minutely the safe in one of the banks for use in a massive set in "The Bank," the current production. The safe is so realistic that at first one thinks a real vault door has been erected on the stage, but the deceiving workmanship is only wood and aluminum paint, so combined by the artistic workers that it looks too real. More workers from the Niles studios of the Indian head company have arrived and the local studio is a lively place.

* * *

Geraldine Farrar has started the third and last of the Lasky pictures. This photoplay well suits the star. It is a story of an opera singer. Cecil B. DeMille is directing. Of course, Miss Farrar can put in a few touches from her own experiences.

* * *

Allan Dwan, ex-director of Mary Pickford, was in town this week to visit his wife, Pauline Bush. He stayed long enough to say "Hello" to the old timers.

* * *

Screen stars drew an audience at the Mason Opera House; the money paid to see the filmers in action went for the benefit of St. Catherine's Church at Avalon, Catalina Islands. Two thousand dollars was cleared through the efforts of the players from the Keystone studios.

* * *

Universal City is building another big stage to accommodate some of the new companies which have been added within the last few weeks. At present there are three stages for use and they are crowded when the majority of the twenty-six companies are using them.

* * *

Maclyn Arbuckle, starring for the second time on the screen in "The Reform Candidate," finished it in time to go to San Francisco as the guest of the Bohemian Club during its annual Jinks. The celebrated comedian was a member of the club twenty years ago when he was a leading man in stock on the Coast and this will be the first Jinks he has ever had the opportunity to attend.

* * *

Andrew Arbuckle is a new member of the Balboa Company. Prominently on the screen today are three members of the Arbuckle family. They are Roscoe, Maclyn and Andrew. All are fat. Maclyn and Andrew are brothers, but Roscoe is not of the same clan, though there is a family resemblance. Until recently, Andrew has been with Lasky. He made a strong impression in the picturization of "The Woman." He will do comedy character work in a forthcoming Balboa production. Alma Ruben, formerly one of Vitagraph's players, is now appearing before the Balboa's cameras.

Myrtle Stedman of the Oliver Morosco Company has moved to a handsome new home on fashionable Hoover street. It is a better bungalow. Forrest Stanley has invested in a terrible looking racing car which he drove to the Yosemite on his vacation following the completion of "The Reform Candidate."

* * *

Henry Otto has bought an auto. You may now expect to hear of his Flying A-round Santa Barbara.

* * *

Anna Little, who was featured in many Ince pictures and who has been with the Universal for some time, has left that company and is on a vacation. Anna will not stand quizzing, but smiles and says, "I'll surprise you all."

* * *

E. A. Fisher has purchased the Optic theater, 533 South Main street, from the Los Angeles Investment Co. Mr. Fisher has not been engaged in the motion picture business for the last three years. He was formerly proprietor of the American Theater, Broadway and Fifth street, and the College Theater, Fifth and Hill streets. He is booking feature service from the General Film Company.

* * *

We made a friendly call this week at the Los Angeles offices of the All Star Feature Distributors. E. H. Emmick is the manager. Mr. Emmick stated that he was very much pleased with business in general and particularly with the showing of some of the productions handled by his company. He has had very good returns from the "Spoilers" and "Cabiria." The "Spoilers" has been played in almost every picture house in Southern California and is now repeating as high as third and fourth time. "Cabiria" is also doing very well and has never been played for less than 25 cents which is quite remarkable considering the age of the picture. The offices of the All Star Feature Distributors have been recently remodeled and look business like.

* * *

Fred Green, proprietor of the Unique Theater, Minona, Ariz., was in the city last week. The Unique is a well conducted house with a capacity of about 500. The admission charged is 10 and 20 cents.

* * *

John Barncord, proprietor of the La Mara Theater, Phoenix, Ariz., was in Los Angeles on business last week. The La Mara has a seating capacity of 500 and charges 10 and 20 cents admission.

* * *

G. E. Bush, proprietor of the Superba and Broadway Theaters in San Diego, was in town a few days ago. Mr. Bush booked service for one of his theaters with the All Star Feature Distributors. The Superba and the Broadway are the two largest houses in San Diego.

* * *

M. Rosenberg of Minneapolis, Minn., was in town for a short vacation. Mr. Rosenberg has recently sold out his state rights for the "Spoilers," "The Christian," and "The Escape," to the Supreme Feature Film Company of Minneapolis.

* * *

Margaret Edwards, who played the Naked Truth Girl in "Hypocrites," is featured this week in Pantage's vaudeville.

* * *

There is a Charlie Chaplin contest this week at the Republic. Some of the contenders are good.

"The Governor's Boss"

Interesting Melodrama in Five Reels by "The Governor's Boss" Photoplay Company.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS picture, in which ex-Governor William Sulzer is featured, was shown to newspaper critics early in June and an extended account of it may be found on page 2106, issue of June 26, 1915. It was then six reels in length, and had much matter that tended to confuse the story and hamper its effect as entertainment. Since that time the picture has been re-edited and we are asked to call our readers' attention to it once more. That it has been benefited by the process of elimination there can be no doubt. It still remains a bit confused in the early scenes, due to its many characters and the complex character of its situation. It is certainly rich in incident and in many ways a most unusual picture. That the story, once it gets under way, holds strongly is also true. It tells the story of a governor of New York (the pictures of Albany show that) who was elected and then impeached by the boss of the political machine, because he would not bow to the imperious will of the grafting gang.

Mary Fuller

MARY FULLER was born in Washington City, of American parents. Her mother is still living in that city; her father is dead. She has three sisters who have never entered theatricals.

When a child Miss Fuller showed tendencies toward the art of mimicry and would often steal away from her playmates to "act" before a cracked mirror in the garret of the little cottage in which she lived. She came to New York City to fight her own battle and secured a minor part with an unimportant company. Becoming discouraged she decided to apply for a position as an extra in one of the moving picture studios.

Mary Fuller.

The result is that in the past five years Mary Fuller has become known all over the globe. She has been featured in hundreds of photoplays. Since joining the Universal less than a year ago she has played in many successful features and her popularity has grown ten-fold since she became "Universal Mary." Miss Fuller is a finished artist, with her heart in her work. Those who enjoy her friendship know that she is an accomplished linguist, musician, author and that she devotes all her spare time to the study of the arts and sciences. Recently Julius Stern, manager of the eastern Universal studios, has arranged with Elaine Sterne to write one feature a month for Miss Fuller. "Mary's Duke," "The Daughter of the Nile," and the "Girl Who Had a Soul" are a few which have been produced recently. Miss Fuller has just completed "Under Southern Skies," a Broadway Universal Feature, directed by Lucius Henderson, and judging from the success which they have had in securing a splendid cast including Paul Panzer, Milton Sills, Clara Byer and several other well-known players and also in the fact that they succeeded in filming the beautiful Savannah scenes so necessary, "Under Southern Skies" should be another feature of which the Universal will have reason to be proud.

PALLAS PICTURES ON PARAMOUNT PROGRAM.

Pallas Pictures, Inc., is the name of the latest producing company to release through the Paramount Pictures Corporation, and already the new concern has arranged to present, in big screen offerings, Dustin Farnum and Maclyn Arbuckle.

Dustin Farnum's career is too well known to be reprinted here. His many stage and film successes in such productions as "Captain Courtesy," "The Squaw Man," "Cameo Kirby," "The Virginian," and others too numerous to mention, have made him known in every town in the country. It is stated that Mr. Farnum will appear in at least four productions for the Pallas Pictures, two of which have already been decided upon, namely, "Davy Crockett" and "The Gentleman from Indiana," by Booth Tarkington.

Maclyn Arbuckle, also well known to the devotees of the stage as well as the screen, is already at work at the Los Angeles studios of the concern on his latest motion picture subject, "The Reform Candidate," a comedy written by himself and Edgar A. Guest. This production is an adaptation of Mr. Arbuckle's well known play of the same name which has met with unusual success.

KLEINE MAKING "THE GREEN CLOAK,"

"The Green Cloak," one of Owen Davis' successful dramatic successes, is being filmed at the George Kleine Studios with Miss Irene Fenwick in the lead of Ruth McAllister. Miss Fenwick is supported by a selected cast which includes Richie Ling, Della Connor, Blanche Aimee, Roland Bottomley, William Anker, John Davidson, Anna Reader, Frank Belcher and Katherine Brook.

Writing for the Screen

By Roy L. McCardell,
Author of "The Diamond from the Sky."

Mr. and Mrs. Roy McCardell.

IT is an encouraging sign that the art-industry of moving pictures is awakening to the fact that silly and stupid scenarios, the work of illiterate and half baked minds—persons to whom $10 or $25 paid for their so-called scenarios are a godsend—will no longer satisfy moving picture audiences.

Manufacturers have ignored the value of a good story written for the screen by men and women of the highest literary ability. These leading fiction writers of America could not and would not write moving pictures for the reason that the pay was pitiful and the treatment they experienced at the hands of the average scenario department of even the largest companies disgusted them.

I have fought the good fight in moving pictures for fifteen years. In these fifteen years I have clamored at the studio doors, and have had experiences that would have dismayed and discouraged all save a few of us of the faithful. I have written hundreds of screen stories, many of which have been butchered by bad and stagey direction and some that have been greatly helped by good direction and capable and sincere acting.

At this point I wish to state that the moving picture art-industry would have long ago collapsed had it not been for some fifty most able and intelligent directors. I cite Griffith, Ince, Sennett, Powell, Taylor and Baker—there are many more whose names will readily occur to those who love and know good pictures.

For years I would not do feature films of four or five reels because the money offered was beneath contempt. Finally, William Fox offered me a price commensurate with the careful and painstaking way I write a scenario. As a result I adapted "A Fool There Was" for the screen in five reels, and Frank Powell directed it like the genius he is, and the Fox service has a feature that satisfies and makes money.

It is the same way with serials. "The Diamond from the Sky" is my first serial. Its success is due to the fact that I have carefully prepared the scenario and the most efficient and enthusiastic organization is behind me, from the director, W. D. Taylor, to the experts in the Chicago laboratory of The American Film Company—not to mention a wonderful cast of young screen stars—not old, hidebound mummers of the now defunct speaking stage.

I would never do a serial previous to "The Diamond from the Sky," although I have several outline scenarios for serials—because the pay offered would have been scorned by a ragpicker.

I have to smile at the many letters I receive which allude to my "great success," and which also state, "of course, you being on the inside, can sell all you write and get prompt action on all your work, and the biggest prices."

It is to laugh, not alone smile! Until recently every experienced writer who can write, and who has endeavored to write for the moving pictures, was up against the most disheartening conditions at most of the big studios. I wish to repeat, emphatically, it is my experience that there are not half a dozen moving picture companies who are "on the level" in the matter of scenarios.

The scenario editorial departments of nine companies out of ten are conducted by jealous and incompetent boneheads who would not last five minutes writing "local jottings" on the Jayville Bugle. For years I have endeavored to get such writers of my acquaintance as Albert Payson Terhune and other leading American authors to write directly for the screen. When they attempted to do so the unpleasant and exasperating treatment and delay—not to mention the pitiful prices they were offered, almost queered me with them. In a brief article of this sort I can only deal in generalities. But my letter files and books contain astounding evidence of the ignorance, impudence, discourtesy and even dishonesty of the so-called "scenario departments" of many of the allegedly leading and prosperous moving picture producing concerns.

Abuse is poor argument, and let us hope that these intolerable and disheartening conditions are at an end. The manufacturers are learning that telegraph operators, waiters, bartenders, shop girls and even lawyers and preachers cannot create literature for the screen any more than they can create literature for the speaking stage and magazines.

A writer who can write has worked at and studied his profession for years. He has invested heavily in his tools and instruments—his library. To write scenarios with any degree of efficiency entails the same care and training that it takes to write fiction successfully. I do not write a one-reel scenario that does not cost me $25. My expenses, the expenses, past and present of any trained, educated and practised writer, are heavy. Because a surgeon gets $5,000 for an operation or a lawyer may win $20,000 in one fee is no reason that would lead a writer to try and perform a major operation or plead a great case in court.

It is time the film manufacturers learn and I think they have learned that only trained and experienced professional writers can write convincingly for the screen. It is idle for the film companies to purchase the picture rights to successful old plays or new books and magazine articles, and then expect these to be made into good scenarios by incompetent "scenario editors."

The same men—the same minds—who write fiction first hand for the leading periodical must write for the screen first hand. As matters now stand, the audiences at moving picture shows are educated beyond the majority of the writers of film plays, and these audiences, rich and poor, openly scoff and jeer at the fustian of illogical screen dramas.

Much could also be said about the jarring effects of old stock company stage business and settings. Moving pictures are a newer and higher art. The fustian and claptrap of the speaking stage killed the speaking stage—and now old stage actors and old stage directors are flocking into moving pictures and presenting this same fustian and claptrap for the screen!

The Author of "The Diamond from the Sky" Turning His Back on Journalism.

The screen depicts life! The camera is unsparing of age and stilted action and emotion. It must have youth and naturalness. If an actress, to instance, is depicting a character, be it Orphan Annie or Marcia Van Style, the heiress just out of Vassar, the actress must be these characters from life, not a grimacing stock company soubrette with a vapid grin and a mop of false curls.

Moving pictures is the new art and the true art. In its every phase it makes for sincerity, and again sincerity—sincerity in comedy and drama alike. And this sincerity must permeate the story and the depiction with lifelike fidelity.

And it is all so simple. We do not need "hokum," as our stage friends would say. All we need to do is to pay the easy and earnest tribute of naturalness to "The Gods of Things as They Really Are."

British Notes.

A PREVALENT growl in the industry, especially from the exhibitor, is the scarcity of good comedies of the Chaplin type. The popularity of "C. C." during recent weeks has attained the dimensions of an epidemic. It is almost an impossibility to find a moving picture theatre not displaying the familiar cut-out, but try as they will, no theatre running a brand new programme seems to be able to screen more than one Chaplin comedy per week. Chaplin has arrived with a vengeance and the combined effects of a ravaging war and climatic conditions which costs the operator an extra ninepence a day has not prevented the Chaplin comedy from proving the best exhibiting stimulus we have known. The best of good actors and good picture-players have their allotted span, and in the midst of the insatiable clamor for Chaplin it is painfully admitted by the exhibitor "that there isn't half enough."

* * *

More trouble is brewing in Liverpool for the exhibitor. The first attempt of any police authority in this country to set itself up as an arbiter of films, independently assumed, without even consultation with its governing authority, happened in Liverpool last week, when the police stopped a local exhibitor from showing a war drama, "A Patriot of France." The grounds for the prohibition were given as showing too much of the troubled side of war.

* * *

The Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Ltd., through J. D. Tippett, has been fortunate in prevailing upon Mme. Sarah Bernhardt to appear in the lead in a French drama to be produced in the autumn. The famous actress has only just recovered from a serious operation, necessitating the removal of one of her legs. In all probability the subject will be photographed in France. The feature for which Mme. Bernhardt's services were particularly requisitioned is "Jean Dore." Although the new galaxy of stars which the Universal has secured are mostly to work at their Pacific Coast studios, it is unlikely that Mme. Bernhardt will make the journey across. The Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Ltd., the English paraphrase of the Universal, has been for a few months now in a strong position to produce, print and finish its own subjects entirely upon this side of the ocean.

* * *

"Hypocrites" has been banned "in toto" by the British Board of Film Censors because it reveals photographs of the undraped female form. This, of course, does not imply that the film will not be exhibited.

* * *

Representatives of film manufacturers, renters and exhibitors met in conference in London last week to discuss one or two problematical points in the present policy of film hire in this country. It was decided by all parties to maintain the open market system of hiring.

* * *

A case of great importance to film manufacturers was heard in the Chancery Court last week in which R. Ganthony, the author of the play, "A Message from Mars," successfully sued a moving-picture producing syndicate for a royalty of 7½ per cent. upon the gross receipts of the filmed version of his play. The defence submitted was that the kinematograph rights were identical with the acting rights which had already been disposed of. The Justice ruled the reverse and found judgment for the author with costs.

* * *

Relationship between author and producer both upon the stage and on the screen has long been a point provocative of misunderstanding. So far as moving pictures go, the British Authors' Society is preparing far-reaching plans to secure a free entry into the producing lines for its members' work.

* * *

The British and Colonial Company of Walthamstow is devoting its energies exclusively during the autumn to the consummation of three ambitious subjects.

* * *

The past few days has seen two well-known music hall comedians of world wide popularity, come over to "the pictures." The first of these is Billy Merson. After holding out for years, George Formly, a character comedian, is going to take his turn upon the silent stage. In certain personal eccentricities and grotesque mannerisms he is permissibly comparable to Chaplin.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

Robert T. Haines

ROBERT T. HAINES is making his introduction in moving pictures in "Human Cargoes," a five-reel photodrama of political life written by Walter Macnamara, which the author is producing for the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation at its studio in Flushing, L. I. In this play he appears in the role of Bill Madden, a son of the masses, who rises to supremacy only through the force of his own character and his indomitable will. In this role Mr. Haines' virility and directness make him an excellent hero.

Robert T. Haines.

Mr. Haines has been for years a foremost actor. After being graduated from the University of Missouri he made his stage debut in 1891 with Robert Downing and scored such a hit that the eyes of managers turned toward him. With Thomas W. Keane in repertoire and with James O'Neil in "The Count of Monte Cristo," the young man repeated the good impression he had made, and then followed rapidly successes in leading roles with Walker Whiteside in "Darkest Russia," "The Cherry Pickers," "In the Palace of the King" (in which he played Don Juan with Viola Allen), and engagements in leading roles with Mrs. Fiske for two years. Then came his notable triumph in "The Darling of the Gods." At first he shared the honors with Blanche Bates, but later was starred in it on the road. Next he starred in "Once Upon a Time," and "The Coward," the latter by George Broadhurst. This was followed by a long engagement as leading man for Robert Mantell in Shakespearian revival, which preceded a season with Grace George in "Clothes." Then followed "The Heart of Maryland," and "The Rose of the Rancho." "The Man in the Dark," a brilliant vaudeville sketch by William J. Hurlbut, was Mr. Haines starring vehicle for some time.

BOBBY CONNELLY VERY BUSY.

Bobby Connelly, six years old, the littlest big man of the Vitagraph Stock Company, recently enjoyed the distinction of seeing his name on the "board" as appearing in five different productions. While some of the parts were "bits," they were all necessary to the action of the story. As each and every one of the screen plays were being produced at the same time, a council of the various directors was necessary to arrange a schedule of scenes in which the little Vitagraph star appeared that would not conflict with rapid production of the stories.

Before the five pictures were completed, little Bobby was given the manuscripts for seven new stories that will continue the famous "Sonny Jim Series," and bring to new life in the Vitagraph films Sonny Jim, Daddy Jim, Mother Dear and Sonny's wonderful dog.

MERRILL GETS STANDARD PROGRAM.

William Merrill of Minneapolis has moved his exchange to the eighth floor of the Produce Exchange Building in that city and is making big preparations for the launching of the new Standard Program for which he recently acquired the rights for his territory.

Moving Picture Educator

Conducted by REV. W. H. JACKSON

LATEST EDUCATIONALS.

WHILE the European War has for the time being limited the output of educational films, the majority of which came from France, we are thankful that the production is not entirely suspended. From neutral Spain we are just now favored with a series entitled "Picturesque Spain," which are very interesting and serve to impart greater detail to much that was already in part, at least, somewhat familiar.

"The Mongoose in His Native Haunts" is an addition to the natural history series, and being colored, its value is enhanced. As is becoming usual with this class of picture, there is no slighting of details, evidently with much patience the photographer spares no time and secures for us habits, manners and associations which makes each subject a complete and thorough study.

The topicals continue in unabating interest. The arts of war and peace, together with the common happenings, as well as the comedies and tragedies of everyday life, is daily depicted. That "truth is stranger than fiction" is seen from these films. They are indeed the real "Life Portrayals" in which human life as it is lived, with the accidents and incidents to which it is subject, is most vividly repeated upon the screen. Nowhere is the rapid progress of the moving picture more exemplified than in these very helpful topicals, the happenings of today are the pictures of tomorrow, the illustrator follows hard after the telegraphed record, the time has come when these pictures are not records of the past—but with a readiness that makes the photographer seem almost omnipresent, the public is immediately enlightened by pictured news.

PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATIONS.

One of the latest and most useful organizations as an auxiliary to the school is the Parent-Teacher Association, now a recognized factor in almost every town or community where the surroundings are large enough to permit of such an organization. Every known benefit to the school, the scholar and the community is the purpose of the splendid work.

The notice of this work here is to mention and commend the fact that these organizations have universally taken special cognizance of the moving pictures.

In many instances they have been the means of raising funds to secure for schools the necessary equipment for picture exhibitions in the schools and filled the gap which so often the proper authorities were unable to do.

They have also proved helpful in bringing together divided factions and in concentrating all energies for the best purposes. It may also be recorded that their criticisms and vague conceptions of censorship have proved beneficial in that they have opened the way for a true knowledge of conditions and circumstances. In Houston, Texas, the Parent-Teacher Association met with the local picture exhibitors to talk over the best means of bringing together the best pictures and the children, indeed, the "children and the pictures" is a subject of paramount interest to this association and in their hands the best results may be expected. "Mothers Urge Pictures for Children" is the heading given in one paper reporting a meeting of the local association, so that the best interests of the moving picture is also the best interest of the Parent-Teacher Associations and mutual cultivation of those interests will be profitable.

NO. 5.

An official report recently issued presents the fact that the moving picture industry is the fifth of importance in the United States. It would seem unnecessary for any higher position to be occupied. This is certainly high enough to secure its importance as well as its permanence.

While of very sudden growth, there is nothing of an inflated nature about it, marked by steady progress under staple conditions it has become a combination of science, art and literature, consolidated commercially in one great industry. The supreme importance of the above fact finds its greatest value to the nation, first, as the people's standard entertainer, and, secondly, in its great educational possibilities. When the educational authorities realize that they have the fifth greatest industry of the country as an auxiliary to all their plans and purposes, they will then appreciate what hitherto unlooked for results are within their power.

What a blessing to the children of both the immediate and distant future, easier, quicker, more extensive and intensive study will be theirs; higher subjects brought within lower standards, lifting the younger grades and amplifying the higher ones.

The irksome drudgery of the past may be transformed into an attractive or even alluring study, education can be made to be sought for and not shirked, and in all probability compulsory education become a dead law. It now falls to the lot of the leading educational journals to take up the cause and make the fifth greatest industry of the country a mighty factor in their future plans.

IN DIAGNOSIS.

While the moving picture is universal in its possibilities and adaptabilities it is never a surprise to read of any new service which it may render to society. This, however, does not mean that any new discovery or purpose for which it is used should not be recorded. That branch of medical science known as Osteopathy is the first to discover and prove that the moving picture is helpful in diagnosis.

At a convention to be held in Portland, Oregon, by the American Osteopathic Association, Dr. J. Ivan Dufur, professor of nervous diseases in the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, will give the first results of the uses of the moving picture in detecting causes for epileptics, certain forms of insanity. He says: "Moving pictures will revolutionize the diagnosis and teaching of these especial subjects, as in no other way can they be vividly presented to the student."

To the student they become experiences, as he is able to see upon the screen in student days that which formerly he could only acquire later as a practitioner, consequently the coming students will be better equipped from the beginning; making the diagnosis experience second in value to the aid the moving picture has rendered in surgical work.

In addition to this educational value in training, it is purposed to show at the convention that a further blessing to humanity is in store. Dr. T. J. Ruddy of Los Angeles will give an illustrated lecture to show that a combination of these discoveries in connection with their branch of medical science has produced a cure for certain forms of insanity.

CHAUTAUQUA HONORS "QUO VADIS?"

George Kleine's "Quo Vadis?", first of the big features and even to-day one of the most widely playing attractions on the screen, was signally honored by the Piedmont College Chautauqua, Demorest, Ga., last week. "Quo Vadis?" was placed in competition with the best feature products of every exchange in Atlanta and proved the unanimous choice of the Chautauqua committee. Before reaching their verdict the committee reviewed all of the really great and internationally known motion picture masterpieces.

EQUITABLE ACQUIRES THREE ARMSTRONG PLAYS.

The Equitable Motion Picture Corporation has purchased the motion picture rights of three plays by Paul Armstrong, which will be released as five reel photoplays through the World Film Corporation. "Blue Grass" will be the first Armstrong picture. It will be produced by Charles M. Seay, formerly with the Edison company. Thomas Wise, star of "The Gentleman from Mississippi," will play Colonel Taylor, the leading role. "A Romance of the Underworld," and "The Bludgeon" are the two other plays by Armstrong, which will be produced later. The dramas are being adapted for screen use by Marc Edmund Jones.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Getting It from the Wrong End.

MELVIN G. WINSTOCK is one of the really BIG men of the business with a three capital spelling of a three letter word, and yet he is the second man of the Class A type, to get it from the wrong end.

Not very long ago we wrote Frank Montgomery and got a reply to the effect that Mr. Montgomery was absent and would reply as soon as he returned. But Frank Montgomery is not going to return. And now comes Melvin Winstock, a man who made one theatrical circuit in Portland, Oregon, and nearby towns, and took an encore. He says:

> Since your last issue I have been seized by the enemy and have been, so to speak, ejected. In other words, a man with money who told me three months ago that he was going to get me (but who was on my board of directors) walked in on Thursday and told me that on Saturday that I was through and though one of the largest stockholders I could not say a word because I was not absolutely in control. I was tired anyhow. Ever since last October I have been struggling to carry out my own ideas under most adverse conditions and here lately conditions have been so bad, that for the summer at least, it seemed sort of hopeless.
>
> Truth is, everybody's business here has been awful for at least a year. I was more than unfortunate in putting my all in a new theater this terrible year of war and on top of that losing control, but I am a good sport. I have no tears to shed and will start over again after a short vacation and rest.

Clearly this letter was not written for publication, but we are going to ask Mr. Winstock's pardon for using this, first, because there is a lesson here and secondly because we have Mr. Winstock's address.

But the lesson is the principal thing. Here is the second man within a few months to build a business and then find himself in the subcellar instead of on the ground floor. There are other men like Montgomery and Winstock. They are taken up by a company because their ideas are vastly bigger than their bank accounts. That is no slam at the bank accounts. We'll trade our own against either and give $7.50 to boot, but the point is that they think in thousands. They can anticipate. And they get in and build a success and then the majority rule comes up.

And the primary reason for all this talk is the warning that if you are in the Montgomery-Winstock class, and start a new company, do something to make assured that you keep control until you get what is coming to you. There are others who, like these two advertising geniuses, have ideas bigger than their pocket books can swing. If they could not think beyond their bank accounts they would not be worth troubling about. But they are bigger and better and they can take a million dollars and make good for it and still come out of the small end of the horn as soon as the dividends loom up and the stockholders think they have a real business. If you book to make a winning, get a darned good lawyer to fix it so that you hang on after the winnings come.

Surely Yes.

A correspondent sends in a post card picture of a float the theater had in a recent parade and opines that it will interest us. It does. It interests us a lot. It interests us so much that we wonder why they went to all the expense of a float and then did not take the trouble to spell the sign correctly. They advertise

THE JUGGERMENT.
Old Doc Yok

For the love of Philadelphia (and that is not heaven) why, oh why the Juggerment. What is a juggerment? The Moving Picture World spells it Juggernaut. The encyclopedia spells it the same way and so does the Vitagraph bulletin and the average spectator. Why hire two horses (to a drag that should be drawn by four) and yet not be able to spell the title of the feature advertised? We can forgive Old Doc Yok, though there is an animal called a Yak and none called a Yok, but why not get copy right on a classical word like Juggernaut? Look to your spelling. Your patrons are particular if you are not. You should be. There is no excuse.

Bing! Boom!!

Oliver B. Whipple writes that he does not send in his throwaway as a sample of the printer's art, but, as an idea. The idea is that he got the business men of Millington, Mich., to put up $20 for fireworks. Then he put in his own bit. They had a full show of fireworks after the last evening show at the Lyric, but at half past six they sent up two balloons each with ten tickets attached and he writes that a family three and a half miles out found one of the balloons and while they could not afford the money for the show, with ten free tickets they came in for the second night show and a slide played that fact up.

The best line in the letter is "It makes a general good time all around, and while we have never planned to more than break even on these shows, they have always proved a success financially."

Jusso. They are planned not as money making schemes but eventual advertising schemes. There is no gouge. And so they prove successful immediately.

They simply plan to help along the Fourth and trust to public spirit. They get the crowd into town and then into the show, but they will be content if the crowd comes into town. It is what we have always preached and what we preach in Picture Theater Advertising. Be not only a part of the town, but the big noise, and it will come back to you.

This is a town of 700 and with that, on three shows, they had a 200 turnaway. The fireworks show was free. Waiting for the fireworks the farmers had to go somewhere. They went to the theater and the stores, half to the first show and half to the second.

Please.

The Circle, Easton, Pa., sends in another nice program, but where does the printer get his sad looking paper Quarantine yellows and bile greens are not attractive to the eye. And the week's program and not the underline should go on the front page. They have some good ideas but if they will kill the printer we will come up and testify as to emotional insanity. Either the printer does not know his business or he is color blind.

No.

From a program we catch the news item that a special train carrying a film star passed through Chicago "yesterday." Which one? A program for a week should be more definite than that.

Copy.

This is taken from the program of the Empire, Los Angeles:

> The management purposely refrains from giving a synopsis of this play, believing that the enjoyment of patrons will be enhanced in witnessing the story as the film is unreeled.

It would be even better if the theater lived up to the idea and did not give other synopses in full. The same program gives the tags to eight other stories. What holds good in one case holds good in all. It looks as though this story had been omitted because the copy was not at hand, but in no case should the story be given in full in a program. Make it "to be continued in our next." Then interest will hold.

The general run of program here is not better than fair because it is mostly done with bulletins and a paste pot. It pays to go to a little trouble and rewrite.

Welcome.

Heretofore the Northampton theater, Easton, Pa., has always been a trailer to its sister, the Third Street, but for an anniversary, the management gets out a booklet that belongs. It picked out six of the best features it could find. They had heralds to match. These were bound up by laying them flat instead of keeping them four pagers. A single cover was provided and then they were doubled over. It is a new fold and a new idea. Both are good.

The idea is this: You take your heralds and lay them out as single sheets. Then you have a four-page cover printed and use that as a single sheet. Then you staple at the left hand, and fold to double over. The only trouble is that you read page one then two and three and have to turn back to get page four, but this is comparatively simple in comparison with the effect gained.

It is just a case of thinking something new, and this is new.

Another Rhodes Way.

Ezra Rhodes of the La Salle, South Bend, Ind., had another scheme for his pocket folder. It will be remembered that he got a new fold for the six page form in which the program shows as in a four page, the extra pages being hidden by a fold. Now he comes out with an eight page in which the layout gives the same effect, the folder opening naturally to the program with the reading notices showing on a further opening up. As the program is opened up, one side shows the first half of the program, the back page, the front page and the second half of the program. The other side gives a straight run of four pages of reading. In folding the program pages are brought over to cover the reading pages and then folded as a four. It is a handy fold since it gets the program at first glance and the reader is then more eager for the particulars.

Mr. Rhodes also sends in some coupon books. These sell ten for one dollar and fifty for five dollars. The inside front cover of the ten ticket book is a coupon which is good for a half a dollar on the purchase of a five dollar book if the name and address are filled in on the lines provided, which helps the mailing list. This is one of those nice little touches which marks the manager. The cheaper book whets the desire for more and the purchase of the larger book is made easy that the holder may get the habit.

Mr. Rhodes is also putting out some complimentaries and says that he has always found that a proper distribution of these is of benefit. This is true, but only when they are given out properly and not broadcast and indiscriminately in a manner to suggest that the house is trying to fill up any old way.

We like coupon books with a ticket to a page. A ten page dollar book with one ticket to a page looks more than a two page book with five coupons to the page. In the same way the five dollar book will then look so much larger than the other that the value will be more apparent. The books are good for any performance at which the admission is not more than twenty cents.

Two Styles.

H. L. Emde, of Proctor's Griswold, Troy, sends two folders for the same week. Both are on a bright red stock in black ink, four pages. One has a space for a stamp in the upper right hand corner and in the lower left hand corner a three line display—but small:

Everybody's Going
?

On the the other the two words are broken through the rule border just below the top at the right hand, to carry the suggestion over to the next page, the question mark appearing at the bottom of the panel. We prefer this latter form for two reasons. It looks better and it is held upright and merely turned where the other form required the holder to make a quarter circle, not a very strenuous move, perhaps, but still something that the reader should not have to do.

For a red stock the quality is excellent. It is not a pink or a salmon or a brick, but a real red. But red does not carry nicely a small point letter. It is good only where all type is ten point bold or better. And a glossy black is better than a straight black, though it takes longer to dry down, which is an important point to consider on a rush job.

Another ????? Scheme.

The Third Street theater, Easton, Pa., has a new scheme, or perhaps a scheme old enough to be new again. For a week a masked singer appeared at each performance and prizes were offered for guesses as to her identity. It is guaranteed that she is a resident of Easton and those apt to be in the secret are barred from competition. This looks too easy and yet it may not be as simple as it looks. This scheme was worked with The Girl With the Auburn Hair a number of years ago when that charming act appeared in vaudeville. There the prize was higher, but the chances of identification were fewer; indeed the prize never was awarded. In that instance the auburn hair was a wig.

Cartoons.

The Third Street theater, Easton, Pa., has taken off the colored cover and has gone back to a white stock. They now run a cartoon on the back page. It is not a service cartoon but one drawn for the house, and it is well done, too, without the suggestion of the amateur. As a practical issue, this is better than the colored cover style. If exhibitors who are looking for a model will send a return stamped envelope we think the management will be glad to send a sample, and by moving the week's program from page two to three and taking part of page two for editorial this would be a capital model.

The Third Street gives space to the conviction of a fraudulent "professor" of photoplay acting. If the house managers throughout the country would only give just a little space and a little time to warnings against fake schools of acting and photoplay writing, they would save their patrons money and gain their esteem. For that matter, they should warn against photoplay writing in general and not merely the schools.

One thing we like about the Third Street is that they stick. They are always good for a paragraph or two a month, and whether this paragraph is praise or corrective criticism, they keep right on. They do not drop out after a paragraph that is not wholly praise. They do not rest content with a couple of appreciative comments. They send in right along. If it is not just right, they want to know. If it is; and it more generally is, they want to pass it along to others.

An Advertising Department.

R. B. Heilman, of the Mystic, Chicago Junction, Ohio, sends in a pair of pictures of his "advertising department," which consists of a man and a white mule. On C-a-l-n days the manager of the mule makes up as the comedian. On other days the boards are used as shown in this cut.

An Advertising Department.

You will note that even on the billboard the times of performance are given. The man who reads the sign and thinks he would like to go but not if he had to start in the middle, go to the end and come back for the commencement, knows just when to be there to start with the start of the story. An outfit such as this is worth a dozen posted six sheets.

Can It Be?

This letter reads more like a dream than a business communication. It seems almost too good to be true. It is written by W. C. Yutzy, of the Olympic, Lebanon, Pa., and we would send it back and ask him to swear to it before a notary, only the whole spirit confirms the statement that he and his competitor can be friends. It is not remarkable that an exhibitor should be a regular man. The wonder is that there are two in the same town. It happens so rarely. He writes:

> There is nothing the matter with my projection. Ventilation is good. Both Simplex machines in good working order. My competitor is a good fellow, and I consider him a real exhibitor. And I don't fight him, nor does he fight me, only in the real channels of competitive business methods. I do the same. I have no kicks to register. Film service good. Is it not really a pleasure to receive a letter once in a while, and find exhibitors in a condition like this. We have here a Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, composed of my competitor and myself. We have a meeting, which is called to order whenever we chance to meet, and business methods are discussed very carefully. Whenever a radical change is presented a special meeting is called at once and the question is thoroughly discussed and disposed of. We give and take. No, there is no fighting. We give three reels of pictures for 5c; 4 and 5 reels for 10c. We do not give any silver spoons, groceries, prizes or attempt to run a department store in connection with our theaters. We give them their money's worth in show, in convenience and courteous treatment. Cleanliness is also one of the virtues. Our combined seating capacity is 1,122. Two Simplex machines. Mirror screen. Orchestra, 6 pieces. Direct current motor generator. Theater is 120x42, steam heat, ventilators and fans for cooling purposes. In fact, we believe we have a real up-to-date theater. Of course, Lebanon, Indiana, is but a small place, 5,000. My idea in writing you is to submit a method of advertising we have adopted here, of which I am mailing you under separate cover. Of the method. I am sure of the success. But of the form, am sure that it can be improved upon, and that is why of the wherefor of this letter. Give me some suggestions for improvement, &c. We get this page of the paper out every Monday, and this is the fourth edition. So go to it, and be as severe as you wish; am not looking after compliments; criticism is what I want. The more severe you are, the better I will like it. Go to it.

Lebanon must be pretty close to heaven. And the best part is, that if a third man should come along he would think it was an annex to hell, unless he joined in and acted pretty. Here is a town with no prize features or lotteries, and so well entrenched that the man who tries to win out with such methods could be licked by the two established exhibitors working in harmony.

The advertising referred to is a photoplay page in the daily paper. There is a current program for each house, about a third of a column. The rest is readers of coming films not too patently advertising. About the only suggestion to be offered is that a little more personal gossip be added to further attract the readers. It does not, in any way, appear to be an advertisement. It tells of the stories and says where they will be shown, but just because it is paid reader, it does not overflow with superlative adjectives.

The program might be improved by tabulating it instead of running in. Set the title in full face, then the names of the players in italic and start a fresh line for each new title. Date each day and set the day and date in full face capitals unless full face italic may be had in ten point, in which case use that with lower case letters.

Mr. Yutzy is invited to become a regular. We are sorry we have not met him before.

With Crackers.

H. A. Carleton, of the Istrione, Jackson, Miss., sends in some stuff, the most attractive piece being an 8 by 12 sheet folded in four. On one-quarter of the back surface is a Chinese laundry ticket type announcement and above "What does this mean?". To carry out the idea a tiny "for-sure" firecracker was pasted to the slip. We know it was a real one for four clerks and a boss are still looking out of the windows across the street to see who was shot.

The outside has nothing to do with the inside, but that fact has nothing to do with the further fact that the printing attracted attention to the inside. The inside is printed up with the announcement of an elaborate musical program.

Mr. Carleton writes that he always arranges his copy to try and get the reader at the first glance. Mostly he does. One single sheet has "War," "Germany," and "Lusitania" for the catchlines. The bill announces pictures made when the ship left New York on her last trip. Two others are miniature newspapers with scare heads that would get him a job on the yellowest of the sensational dailies. Mr. Carleton wants some criticism, but he is not entitled to any. When he knows that he must get the passer by with the first flash, he knows half of the lesson. When he knows how to do just that, he knows the rest. The only thing we have to say is to ask him to send in any more ideas he gets like the firecracker poster. You run Chinese type or something like Chinese type, paste the inch long crackers on, and add any catchline you want. If you can get real crackers the effect is better than if you used rolled paper. Also it is cheaper, but most people will shoot the cracker because it looks so real they want to see if it is real and when they find it is, the bill looks twice as interesting.

Don't.

The Theater Review, Tampa, is printing a lucky number stunt. The Post Office Inspectors are a mighty nice bunch of men until you meet them in a business way. Then they mean business and stick to it.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is enclosed.

Can Be Had From Lundeen.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S book on Photoplay writing, originally published by the Cloud Publishing Company, but which was permitted to drop from sight when the book by A. W Thomas came from the press, has been taken over by the Lundeen Brothers, Fergus, Falls, Minn.

Mr. Wright's book (his second) was fully commented on at the time of its first publication and it is good news that so helpful a work is again on the market. Mr. Wrights work in The Dramatic Mirror is well known as well as his early writings on photoplay technique. His teachings are sound and the simplicity of his style makes his work understandable, even to those who will not puzzle over the involved sentences of some well-intentioned teachers. It is a book of the right sort and one that is to be commended; indeed, it was at the recommendation of the editor of this department that Victor Lundeen got in touch with Mr. Wright Now that the book is in good hands, it should have a heavy sale.

McCloskey Changes.

Lawrence S. McCloskey, for several years editor for the Lubin company, has severed that connection and will devote himself to free lancing in features and adaptations. He will probably locate in New York. Perhaps his best known work is "The Drug Terror," but he was the author of a majority of the Arthur Johnson comedies and has written a considerable number of features. Mr. McCloskey is not only a writer but a developer of writers, and during his Lubin connection has brought to the front many who are now well known, including Harry Chandlee and Herman A. Blackman. His change to the writing end will be regretted by the many he has helped.

Visiting Studios.

There is no magic in the studio that enables an author to make a single visit and immediately write photoplays. There is value when a novice can stay in the studio week in and week out, studying conditions as they arise and facing the same problems repeatedly, but a single visit is no more helpful than looking at a photograph of a stage and reading about studio work.

Still the author seems to feel that if only he could see a studio in action he could write good plays. The reverse is true. If he can write good plays he will be invited by some editor to familiarize himself with studio conditions. Until then, and even after, studio managers and directors dislike to have their domain overrun by a lot of strangers who may walk into and spoil a scene and who assuredly will distract the attention of the players.

Most of the large studios receive each week requests by mail or in person for permission to look over the place. Each applicant feels that he or her has struck a new idea and that surely the studio will not mind just this one request. A single request might be acceded to, but so many come that all are refused—must be refused, in fact.

Don't add your own letter to the others. Do not ask. Wait and work until you are invited. Until that time it is not up to you to study studio conditions, but plotting.

Tact.

The other day we were sitting in the script room of one of the licensed companies when a man came in to ask about some stories he had sent in. He was told that a decision had not yet been made. He explained he did not really expect a decision, but that he had had a little time, so he dropped in to ask and to visit. He did visit. He talked for twenty minutes not only to the editor but to the other members of the staff, some of whom were decidedly busy and to none of whom he had been introduced. He possibly thought he was making a hit with his genial personality, but the moment he went away the editor telephoned to his assistant to get hold of those scripts and send them back. They might have been bought for their fairly good ideas, but the value of the ideas was not sufficient to offset his visits, and the editor figured, not without cause, that a man like that never would develop into a good writer.

You can be almost as much of a pest with your letter writing, if you go at it right, but learn to not be a pest if you want to sell to advantage.

Not Quite That.

Rollin S Sturgeon, in a recent issue of the Script says that the reason manufacturers do not employ highly-paid literary geniuses to read scripts is that not one script in a thousand would repay the expense and that the money to be paid such a genius might better be spent in the purchase of book rights of known value.

Mr. Sturgeon was one of the very first of the editors. He is also one of the best, but we cannot travel with him on the proposition he advances. In the first place, we believe that most companies employ persons competent to read and pass on manuscripts. They do not employ highly-paid writers, because these, as a class, possess the creative rather than the selective faculty. They cannot recognize good in the work of others; not because they are unwilling to, but because they are so constituted mentally, that they lack the discriminative faculty. They have so labored to make their own work better that they cannot find good in the work of others where a man with the editorial mind nicely appraises the value of each script. The best editor is a practical picture man, trained to his work.

We are afraid that Mr. Sturgeon's article gives a false impression that scripts are not read or are read by office boys. This is not correct in a majority of instances. Five feet from where this paragraph is being written, a well-known stage and photoplay dramatist is reading scripts; the scripts from Tom, Dick and Harry, as well as those by men well known. Scripts are read, as a rule.

Can It Be Posner?

Authors are receiving unsigned letters done on the mimeograph, which start off: "Having been connected with a film company to whom you have submitted some of your work as a photoplaywright, I take this means of inquiring as to your success in selling your stuff." If you have sold, he wishes you joy, but if you have had trouble he thinks he can help you, as "I am said by good authority to be one of the best Photoplaywriters in the world." After this modest brag he explains that three years ago he was a hotel porter. The help he offers is a pamphlet at two dollars. The letter is unsigned, the writer stating that "for business reasons I do not sign my name to any correspondence."

Here is a man who has taken addresses from the scripts sent into the company employing him and using them to further his personal schemes. Something should be done. The address given is Post Office Box 983, Los Angeles, Cal Enough Plot.

Too few writers realize the importance of having enough plot. This does not mean that they have but one reel where there should be two, but that they try to make a one reel idea serve for three to five reels and for the one reel offer something that would not hold the attention for half a reel. They get an idea but they get the bare idea and do not try to dress it up. There are not cunningly contrived situations, no intense developments. The finished story looks much like the skeleton from which the practical man begins to work.

The trouble is that the novice is looking for a plot. When he gets a plot, he writes it out. He does not wait to make his plot good. He slaps it down on paper and lets it go out. Then it comes back.

He is fishing for a story. He thinks of a story in which two men love the same girl. One man kills the other and gets the girl. That should make a pretty good story, because the author never thought of it before, so down it goes on paper and out it goes to the studio. Back it comes. Some time the author sees a story. One man kills the other, but he does it cleverly instead of crudely, and then the story starts and turns out to be the story of the consequences of that act. At once the first author knows that the story has been stolen by one of the companies to which it was sent and sold to the other company that made it to throw suspicion off the track.

The story of the two men and the murder has been worked hundreds of times and probably will be worked a few thousand times more. But each time there must be something new in the idea. There must be the saving grace of novelty of some sort. The basic story will not sell because it lacks detail. It is a starter, not a story.

The plot that sells may be started from an old foundation, but it must have new ideas. It must offer novelty of some sort. Holding to that basic plot we might get the story of the man who was haunted by the victim or who thought he was, which would amount to the same thing. Or it might be that he cared nothing about the act but that the woman for whose sake he did murder found the crime heavy on her conscience, feeling that she, through her encouragement of the two men was the real criminal. This would be an entirely new angle to an old theme. It would give the required twist. Most beginners would take the more obvious line that the man would feel that he was haunted. Those who worked it so that the wife became aware of the crime would probably work the motive of revenge. The man who made a specialty of new ideas would realize that this might have been done and certainly would be expected, and so he would do the unexpected and sell his story.

A bare skeleton of a plot is not wanted. Any staff writer can put his heels on his desk and think out those ideas. He can write two or three a week and every week. The free lance must do something better than that to sell.

He must offer full, well-rounded and unusual plots. He must put idea into his work. He cannot rest contented with the first thing that comes to him and in the form in which it came. He must cunningly advance his plot. He must give it grip through unusual and unexpected development and action in combination.

Sameness.

Ask almost any editor the chief drawback of his job and he will tell you that it is the sameness of the stories and the apparent laboriousness of the effort.

Only lately a staff dramatist (not merely a reconstructor) read about four hundred scripts to help the office out. It was his first experience in reading the full run of scripts, for most of the scripts that came to him were the pick of the hundreds received.

"Only about five per cent. of them seem to think," was his comment. "They get the same old, obvious plots; the stories that most naturally would suggest themselves to any writer just beginning, and then they work so hard getting the idea over that you feel the fatigue as you read the script. They may pound away at four or five scenes to establish one point and in the very next scene they will merely say that John tells his son the story of his life and fail to make half a dozen points. There is nothing finished; nothing workmanlike about the script. It is raw in plot and development and about half of them represented not more than half a dozen bases; the triangle, the father who falls in love with his illegitimate daughter, the boy who steals money and such simple things. I wonder how they ever expect to sell such crudities."

And it is merely that writers are eager to get the checks that to them will represent success, and in their haste they neglect to learn how to write before they submit. They want to get the checks and they want to see their stories on the screen, and they think that they have written stories because they are in the same style as some sample script they have seen printed. They do not realize that they must work until they become competent, and when they are told to work and wait they are positive that they have no part in this advice as they are certain that their work is already of value. If they are told in stronger terms, they are as positive that the warner is jealous of their success or seeks to keep the field to himself.

The writer who would win must first educate himself in his business. He must learn to write plots that are novel and good. He cannot hope to compete on even terms with the few authors and dramatists who have taken the pains to learn photoplay writing, but he must at least give stories of merit and there is no reason why his ideas cannot have the foundation of as good a story as the dramatist can write. His advantages is not so much in the story as the development of the story.

The moral of all of which is not to be in too much of a hurry for checks.

Condensation.

Learn to select from your story the important action and connect this up with as little padding as possible. Do not spread out all the unnecessary details of daily life. We know that Jim probably gets up in the morning and washes his face and hands and brushes his teeth and combs his hair and has breakfast and reads the morning paper, but all this has little or no bearing upon the story of how Jim prevented Marston from wrecking his business as part of the Marston plan for getting Jim out of the way that he may marry Alice himself.

Now and then some little touch of local color may add to the illusion of a story or throw a sidelight on character that can be gotten as simply in no other way, but do not load the script down with too many details. If Marston visits Jim at his office to deliver an ultimatum it is not necessary to show that he enters the building, rides up in the elevator, comes down the hall, gives his card to the office boy and waits until he is admitted to Jim's private office. All of this not only consumes footage, but it also means the building of some elaborate sets that will not pay a return on the investment of time and money. We see Marston enter the office building, then we see Jim in his office. The boy comes in with a card and presently ushers Marston in. That is enough. We can guess the details as to how Marston got there.

A recent script offered a succession of scenes following a break leader. The first showed the character reading. Then an exterior showed the arrival of a messenger boy. The third gave the character hearing the ring at the bell. He left the scene and we saw him come to the door and admit the boy. Back in the room the boy was told to wait while the letter was read.

Five scenes have been used where one would have been plenty. Coming after a break leader, particularly, it would have been sufficient had the character been discovered. A maid ushers the boy in and the letter is read. That not only saves about eighty feet, but it gives a smarter picture because the action moves more rapidly.

Do not merely write the action down. Study it to see if you have the action that will tell the story most directly and with the fewest number of unnecessary scenes. Until you gain proficiency, try for as many combinations as possible that you may learn from actual experience the most direct way of proceeding. Try to have at least eighty per cent. of the action vital to the story. You can get a still higher percentage with practice, but more than twenty per cent. of padding will hurt the story beyond redemption.

It is not well, in the early stages of study to stay too long with one script. The first thing to be mastered is plotting; the writing of innumerable plots. But while the plotting is being developed, give some thought to writing scenes and writing series of scenes rather than working an entire play. Take a situation. Try several ways of working the idea. Suppose that we imagine a situation in which Bess comes to Jack's rooms to enlist his aid in securing certain compromising letters that Tom holds and which seem to be a bar to her marriage to George. Jack is engaged to Nell and she comes with her mother to his apartment to consult about her wild young brother. Naturally Jack cannot tell about Bess. He cannot get her out of the apartment, which has but a single entrance. Something must be done. What is done?

Without regard for what has come before or what will follow, see how many developments of this idea can be worked.

Bess is discovered but selfishly refuses to explain, trusting to Jack to preserve her secret.

Bess is not discovered but Nell's suspicions are aroused.

Nell does not discover Bess but George comes to visit and it is he who finds her in hiding.

Perhaps it will help to make Nell's brother the young man who holds the compromising letters.

These are just a few of the situations that can arise. There are innumerable others. See what you can do with them. It is excellent practice even for advanced authors. The chess expert is less interested in the full game than in the problem. Look upon this study more as a diversion than a labor and presently you will actually enjoy practice work. At first you may not be able to get more than two or three developments from a single story, but later on you can get dozens and then scores.

And you'll be learning more from this than from the straight development of an entire plot into a single course of action and gain a flexibility of technique that will be invaluable later on.

Colors.

Tinting or staining the film seems to be worrying some authors. They want to know if they are required to mark in the tints, how to do it and what colors to use. One correspondent had a scene that he wanted to make as gruesome as possible. He thought that red would be the best.

The regulation tints are blue for moonlight, yellow for lamplight and red for firelight. Green is sometimes used for exteriors and a blue green for night. For a gruesome effect green would be better than red. Red is better for scenes of violence, where color is used, but green would show up a skeleton, for example, better than would a red. There is something hard and repellant in a blue-green that gives this effect and a green medium is always used on the stage for ghost and similar scenes.

In writing in color, it is better to write "Tint for night," or "Tint for firelight," than to say "Tint red" or "Tint blue." At best it is merely a memorandum to the director to remind him that tint should be used. As a general thing he will mark in the colors anyway.

It will sometimes be found that a print has a sepia or a warm brown tone that puzzles the observer who is studying the picture. He does not know why it is used. The explanation is simple. Perhaps the photography was poor. Toning (not tinting) the film, will make acceptable a print that in black and white would not be black and white at all but a dingy grey. The film is toned to make it presentable and not because the coloring has any hidden meaning or effect.

It might be well to understand the difference between toning and tinting, though it is a mechanical detail with which the author has nothing to do. In tinting the film is merely immersed in a bath of dye until the emulsion takes up the proper color. In toning the silver deposited is chemically reacted upon to change its tone or color. Tinting is simple. Toning is complex and expensive. Write it tint and not tone.

"Retards."

A questioner, who admits to having been a school pupil, wants to know something about "retards."

This seems to be a development of action introduced to retard the action when it commences to run too strongly too early in the story. The diagramatic sketch of the action of story should suggest a series of peaks and valleys, each succeeding peak a little higher than the last and each valley a little less deep. Each peak would then represent a crisis in the action and each valley a drop in the action. Each crisis is a little stronger than the last, and so the peak that represents it is a little higher than the last. Each drop in the action is less pronounced as the story progresses, so the valleys are less deep.

The idea for this is that the story that comes too quickly to the apex of action cannot maintain the speed. Instead of a succession of shocks there would be a sustained shock that presently would cease to be a shock and become merely action at a new and faster tempo, but without any contrast whatever. In order to hold back the action when it promises to get too strong, some new development is brought in that makes it possible to lower the tension, and it is probably this that is named a retard.

Let it be supposed that three murders form the basis of the story. If those three murders were done in successive scenes or in scenes too close together, then the story would burn out because after three successive murders the rest of the action would be too tame. Instead we work up to the first murder. Instead of getting right on to the second, we drop back a little and gradually work up to the second. Once more we slightly reduce the movement of the story, not dropping down to the lower limit, and then swiftly we work to the third and most important murder of the three and conclude the story as quickly as possible since we have done the most remarkable thing that we could do, not being able to do anything more dramatic cannot hope to hold the attention.

But retard suggests a deliberate endeavor to hold back the story, a mechanical effort to reduce the tension. This is not good. The retard should occur in the natural development of the story and not be extraneous matter. It should belong to the story and not be thrown in, like a lump of ice, to reduce the temperature.

It is all a part of the teaching of the school. Anything that sounds mysterious and interesting will lead the student to believe that he is getting something that others do not offer. The simplest exposition of the subject is the best. The profound and labored disquisition, bristling with technicalities will not help. The English language in its simpler form should be quite sufficient.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Important! Operators Notice!

THIS department has received such an enormous number of kicks about the poor inspection of films that I am going to make you the following proposition. I am doing this at the request of one of the largest film manufacturers in the country. Where you find evidence of poor inspection, cut out the faulty part, or the poor splices, and forward them to me, with the data as to what day the films were received, and what exchange they were received from. You may either sign the letter, or sign your name on a separate slip of paper, and enclose a stamped, blank envelope. I will then forward the whole thing to the headquarters of the company handling that exchange, with request they investigate the matter, and remedy whatever is wrong with the inspection in their exchange. Now please understand that I must have the following data: First: What make of film it is; second: Does it come from a Universal, a General Film, a Mutual, or an independent exchange? third: What day was it received? Don't mix up bad patches, or other faults, cut from several reels. If you take out faults from several reels put each one in a separate envelope and mark them with the name of the film, when the film was received, and what exchange it came from; or, if you cannot use so many envelopes, pin the pieces of film together and attach a tag; also don't forget the postage, because, while I am willing to do this, I cannot pay out two or three dollars a day in postage to accomplish even as great a good as I hope will result from this proposition.

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 97.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Suppose a plano-convex and a meniscus-bi-convex each be placed four inches from a given light source; which will transmit the most light and why? Which one of them will have the greater amount of axial spherical aberration? Which one will have the greater amount of chromatic aberration?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 91.

Question 91 brought out quite an assortment of ideas. However, I believe the following, while most of them leave considerable to be desired, are, nevertheless, entitled to the Roll of Honor: Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; M. W. Larmour, Waco, Texas; John Solar, Watertown, New York; W. C. Crawford, Brooklyn, New York; A. T. Weiss, New Orleans, Louisiana; J. H. Hanson, Lubec, Maine; F. V. Poyser, Brandon, Manitoba; Bert Meester, Hobart, Indiana, and B. Steinhauser, Terre Haute, Indiana.

Brother Solar's reply, while somewhat unsatisfactory in the matter of objections to high amperage, so far over-topped all the others in every other way that it stood alone when it came to selecting the reply for publication. He has given the best explanation of the action of the gaseous arc stream I have ever seen in type. It is plain and understandable; also it is correct, except in one or two details, which I believe to be wrong. These points are dealt with in my comment.

Reply to Question No. 91.

The Question:

What are the effects of high amperage and low amperage as applied to the crater, and what are the objections to using very high D. C. amperage, say in excess of 45? What A. C. amperage would, in your judgment, be required to equal a 45 ampere D. C. illumination of the screen? What is the approximate temperature of a 45 ampere D. C. crater?

The Answer:

To show the effect of different current strength at the crater requires a somewhat detailed explanation. If a vessel of water be placed on a fire, and heated under circumstances which permits of the resultant vapor readily escaping into the open air, the temperature of the water can never be raised above that of its boiling point under sea-level atmospheric pressure, namely, 212° F., or 100° C. Under these conditions the temperature of the boiling point of water is the temperature of its volatilization, and this is the general law for the volatilization of all substances, viz.: if the vapor formed during volatilization be free to escape, the temperature of the liquid will remain constant during its ebullition, or volatilization. An increase in the temperature of the source only has the effect of accelerating the volatilization and increasing the rate of the formation of vapor. It is believed that the temperature of the positive carbon or crater in the arc lamp is limited to that required to produce boiling or volatilization of the carbon under local atmospheric pressure. An increase in the current strength; i. e., in the quantity of electricity which passes per second through the arc, is observed to have no effect upon the temperature of the arc, but only to increase the amount of carbon volatilized, and, consequently, to be followed by an increase in the area of the crater. The temperature of boiling carbon, and consequently the temperature of the positive crater, has been estimated at 4,000 degrees C. (7,200 degrees F.—Ed.).

The resistance of a carbon voltaic arc that is to say, the resistance of the column of carbon vapor between the two carbon electrodes—like that of all ordinary matter, follows Ohm's law; that is to say, it varies directly with the length and inversely with the area of cross-section, consequently, if we could maintain the area of the vapor column at a constant value as the length of the arc is increased, the resistance of the column would vary directly with its length. This, however, is seldom, or never, the case; for, as the arc length increases, the tendency is for the vapor to spread laterally in all directions (see comment—Ed.), thus increasing its cross-sectional area, and it may sometimes happen that the increase in resistance caused by an increase in the length of the arc may be more than compensated for by the decrease in its resistance caused by the attendant increase in area of cross-section. If the distance separating the two carbon electrodes remain constant, the cross-sectional area of the column of carbon vapor will depend upon the current strength through the arc, since if the current strength be increased the increased volatilization must necessarily produce an increased area of cross-section, with a consequent decrease in the resistance of the arc. Whether the drop in the arc will be greater or less with the increase of current, will depend upon whether the decrease in resistance due to the widening of the vapor column has been sufficient to compensate for the greater current strength. A very short arc has comparatively little room to spread, owing to the edges of the crater, and in consequence such an arc cannot greatly decrease its resistance by lateral spreading (see my comment—Ed.) On the contrary, a long arc has abundant room for lateral spreading, and its resistance is capable of being markedly diminished by an increase in current strength. In view of the preceding facts we arrive at the two following laws:

(1) If the current strength passing through a carbon arc be maintained constant, the pressure at the terminals of the arc will always be increased by increasing the distance between the carbons; or, in other words, the apparent resistance of the arc will always be increased by an increase in its length, although said increase may not be proportional to the added length, owing to the tendency to lateral spreading of gas stream.

(2) If the distance between the carbons be maintained constant, and the current through the arc be increased, then the apparent resistance of the arc may either increase or diminish. It will usually increase when the arc is very short, that is to say, when there is very little room for lateral spreading, and it will usually decrease when the arc is sufficiently long to afford ample room for lateral spreading. Between these two conditions there will be a certain length of arc at which the lateral spreading will diminish the resistance as fast as the current increases; or, in other words, when the pressure at the terminals of the lamp will be constant for a wide range of current at all current strengths.

The voltage required to force more than 45 amperes through D. C. arc would cause excessive flaming, and the high amperage would tend to needle the carbons.

The temperature of a 45 ampere D. C. crater (or any other working amperage) is approximately 4,000° C. (7,232° F.).

Approximately 80 amperes A. C. would, under ordinary conditions, be equal to 45 amperes D. C.

The proposition advanced by Friend Solar that the temperature of the crater cannot be increased beyond the volatilization point of carbon by increased amperage is a new one to me, but, subject to some possible modification is, I believe, correct, though it involves the possibility that in Leadville, Colo., an arc working under precisely the same conditions an arc works under in New York City would not be so bright. However, I do not know whether or not Solar means to intimate that atmospheric pressure would have the same effect on the volatilization point of carbon as it does on water. Personally, I doubt it. It is an interesting point. I think that the idea advanced, while probably theoretically correct, must be modified by the fact that the increased size of the crater would in itself tend to raise its temperature to at least some extent. You know that under a given condition the heart of a large fire will be hotter than the heart of a small fire. Why would this not apply, at least to some extent, in the matter of the crater of the electric arc? I would like to have the views of operators on this particular point. This is something which, while of perhaps slight practical value, has, to me at least, considerable interest.

Another point upon which I differ with Brother Solar is the following. He says: "It may sometimes happen that the increase in resistance caused by an increase in length of the arc may be more than compensated for by the decrease in its resistance caused by the attendant increase in the area of the cross section." I am not prepared to dispute this proposition, never having made actual tests, but am inclined to think that while it is possibly true that the area of the gas stream is increased by increasing the arc length, still its density would be diminished, and probably its resistance would be higher than it was before. This is a point which could only be settled by careful tests with a voltmeter. For the first few seconds after the installation of new carbons I believe the gas stream is excessive and out of all proportion to what it is after the crater is burned in. Under this condition Brother Solar might be right in his assumption that the gas volume would more than compensate for added resistance of additional arc length.

Another point in which I differ is where he says that the short arc cannot greatly decrease its resistance by lateral spreading of the arc stream. This, I think, is an error. As a matter of fact it seems that with a short arc the decrease in resistance due to added gas volume would be excessive, by reason of the fact that the gas must of necessity spread out very wide and practically fill the whole space between the lower tip and the crater; also it would be comparatively dense, which would increase its conductivity.

Now please understand these comments are not designed to in any way discredit the reply of Friend Solar. In fact he may be right in all his deductions, and I may be wrong in my comments. I am simply putting the thing as it looks to me, freely admitting that I have made no tests of the points involved.

As to objections to the use of more than 45 amperes D. C. why to Brother Solar's I might add the following: increased tendency to condenser breakage and pitting the face of the back condenser; optical difficulties set up by reason of excessive crater size; additional temperature inside the lamphouse, and, consequently in the operating room, but, of course, the biggest difficulty encountered is in the increased crater size.

Two and Three Phase.

C. H. Rauschenberg, Charleroi, Pennsylvania, writes:

Referring to question of Mr. Searcy, Balboa, Canal Zone, will say that both single phase and three phase undoubtedly have their advantages. I personally would prefer the three phase, for the simple reason that it is self-starting. In other words, all that is necessary is to throw in the switch, and away she goes, whereas the single phase requires starting apparatus, which is usually put into operation by means of a double-throw switch being first thrown on the starting position, until the motor gains sufficient momentum and then thrown into running position, and if your power accidentally goes off you can have the pleasure of going down into the cellar and doing it all over again. With the three phase, all you have to do is to sit tight and wait until Mr. Power returns. (He is up in Vermont just now, if you mean that distinguished gentleman, Nicholas Power. Joke.—Ed.) There will, of course, be no difference in the D. C. end, the generator being the same for single phase and three phase motor.

Brother Searcy will kindly take note of the remarks by Friend Rauschenberg. What he says about starting the two motors is perfectly correct. The single phase motor has to be started by an arrangement which "splits the phase."

An Imitation.

J. C. Thompson, Lima, O., writes:

I am a traveling salesman, and see lots of moving pictures and some perfect projection. Most of it, however, is what I would call an imitation. I stayed in Lima, O., over Sunday recently, and visited the principal theaters of that city. Here is what I found. At the "Farout Opera House" they were showing Paramount pictures; projection very poor; center of picture was bright and faded away at edges. During the whole show I did not see a perfect light. At the "Lyric" they were showing General films and had very good projection most of the time. At the "Royal" Mutual films formed the program, but the projection was nothing like what it should have been. The operator kept freezing his carbons every minute or so, and the pictures were run too fast. The Universal films formed the program at the "Star," and here the operator certainly knows his business. If I ever saw perfect projection it was at the "Star;" not a flicker or a shadow during the entire run of four reels; just as though you were looking at nature itself. The "Strand" was my next stopping place and my patience was strained to the breaking point. I would not have imagined there could have been such miserably poor projection in a city of 35,000. The light was absolutely the poorest I have ever seen; it flashed up and down; the center of picture was illuminated fairly well, but faded away until you could hardly see where the picture ended. I have seen many shows, but this was the limit. The operator started one reel out of frame and it was out of frame for three minutes, until his attention was called to it by his patrons stamping on the floor.

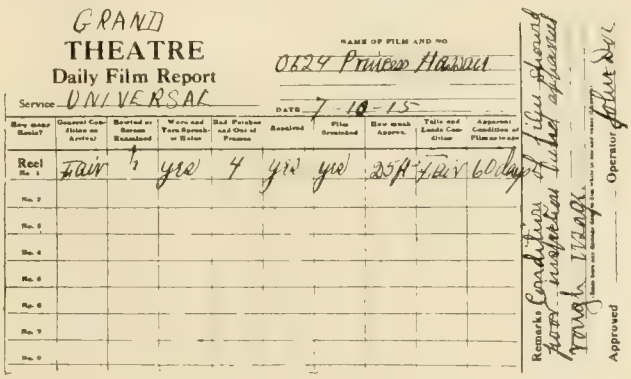
There certainly is lots of room for improvement in the projection end of the moving picture game. I am always glad to read the projection department, though I am not an operator. If this escapes the waste basket I will write again some time in the future.

I am very glad to have criticisms such as this, provided they are, as I think is, thoroughly honest. Persons visiting cities and commenting on the projection should, however, be very careful to state only the even and exact facts, and, if anything, give the theater the little the best of it. It is highly beneficial to have an unexpected roast of this kind appear, provided, of course, it be justified by the facts. It is, of course, practically impossible for this department to verify matters of this kind in all cases, therefore criticisms of this sort are usually scrutinized very closely.

A Good Idea.

Michigan writes as follows:

I have the honor to submit herewith a few samples of reports to be used by operators sending in pieces of bad film, etc., in connection with your plan outlined in July 10th issue of the World. I believe these reports would assist you very much in straightening things out. I had one thousand printed at a cost of $2.25. If we all pull together we can accomplish much good in compelling exchanges to properly inspect and repair their films.



GRAND
THEATRE
Daily Film Report
Service UNIVERSAL
NAME OF FILM AND NO. 0124 Princess Harem
DATE 7-10-15
Reel No. 1 — Fair — 1/2 yds — 4 yds — yds — 25A Fair — 60 days
Remarks: Conditions good. Inspected & film cleaned through. Operator Approved

A Good Idea.

In using the blanks it is better to use one for each reel, pinning the bad splices contained in that reel to the blank.

The report form is a very good one, and, of course, it would not be a bad scheme if one were sent along by operators forwarding clippings from films. I don't, however, quite understand what the "Rewind or Screen Examined" stands for.

The Best Investment.

L. S. Bolster, Weston, Vermont, says:

Have been greatly interested in the World, usually reading it from cover to cover before it has been in my possession very long. I consider it to be one of the best investments exhibitors can possibly make. And now I would like to mention some things which have been especially helpful to me, the first being the projection department. I am located in a very small town (five to six hundred population), and the opportunity to gather knowledge on matters electrical, and other things pertaining to projection, is conspicuous by its absence, or would be but for the projection department; consequently the department has been very helpful from the projection standpoint, as well as by reason of the discussions concerning the high speed at which many exhibitors run their films. Speeding will, to my mind, do great injury to the business if persisted in, and I believe exchanges would be fully justified in placing a fine on every theater where the practice is followed. It has been my privilege to handle the projection end of moving pictures for nearly two years, and to manage, or more properly, to operate for the past fourteen months, usually twice a week. From the very beginning it has been my purpose to run the film at the rate of speed which produced the natural movement of objects on the screen, always striving to keep the definition and perspective of my picture at its best, rather than running a picture of excessive size, as some exhibitors in near-by towns do. At present I project a 10 foot picture, and, by paying attention to details, have gained the reputation of giving as good a picture as men from New York have seen in their own city; also, I am told it equals the projection at Keith's Boston theater, and is superior to the projection in several theaters of the larger cities of Vermont. I attribute much of this directly to the projection department of the Moving Picture World, therefore, you may judge my appreciation of the department and the hard work which Brother Richardson must put in to accomplish what he has in the way of benefit to the exhibitor. What I have said with regard to the excellence of my own work is not said from an egotistical standpoint. It is merely a relation of the opinions expressed to me many times by others who have seen the pictures in many cities. The departments of the Moving Picture Educator and Comments on Films are exceedingly good for the country exhibitor. I am heartily in sympathy with the idea of churches and schools co-operating with exhibitors. As it has been said in the World, the object of pictures is to present life as it is, and that should be their exact purpose.

I noticed Friend Dann, Toronto, has something to say about this high speed business. When will managers and operators come to realize the fact that four reels at proper speed will give better satisfaction to the audience than six run in the same length of time. I, for one, firmly believe that the large number of reels in some houses for the sum of five and ten cents will kill the business, if anything in the world can kill it. Again, why do patrons of moving picture theaters expect so much more from us than they expect from the legitimate stage? To my mind the reason is: Through the foolishness and bull-headedness of "managers" who are out to "do" their competitors and try to accomplish the "doing" by a flood of reels. Well, they will themselves be the losers in the long run, unless the aforesaid competitor is foolish enough to follow their example. I would much rather my audience would go away saying: "I wish there was another reel," than saying: "Gee, I'm glad the show is over." And right here I want to say that if it is not worth three cents a reel to patrons to see the average film put out today, then they should look elsewhere for their amusement. I have been informed by some regular patrons who have attended the picture shows in Rutland, Vt., that some of the theaters were ruining the performances there—so much so that the people are becoming disgusted. Well, I have written a long letter before I got down to the primary object of my writing, which is to correct the list of "Books and Plays in Pictures," in July 17th issue. I find the list does not contain the following, unless they are given under another name: "David Garrick," three parts, World Leader Features; "Supreme Sacrifice," one part, Lubin, drama; "Birth of a Dragon Fly"—"Thieving Umbrella," Pathe-Gaumont; "The Regenerating Love," three parts, Lubin; "The Combination," one part, Vitagraph. Can you recommend a film exchange located at 35 West 39th street, New York City, as one which will furnish a reliable program of fairly up-to-date films?

As to recommending any film exchange, Brother Bolster, I refuse to be interviewed. In the language of the redoubtable "Teddy:" "Not a word, not a word!" I have printed this letter, long as it is, because it comes from a small town exhibitor who has ideas which might well be copied by managers of some large theaters in large cities, as well as managers of theaters of all kinds and grades. What Friend Bolster says about speed and its effect is, in my judgment, absolutely correct. I do not care to comment at length, because I have expressed my opinion on that particular proposition so many, many times that I can only repeat myself. Come again, Neighbor Bolster. Glad to hear from live wires at any time.

Speeding.

Jos. Fay, Brooklyn, New York, says:

That's right, Brother Richardson, just keep right after the speed fiends. Your remarks in July 17th issue concerning "The Alien" ought to wake up some of the big managers. I seldom go to the largest and best New York moving picture theaters without seeing a lot of room for improvement, and more than a few of the audience remark about the jumpy and jerky movements of the actors on the screen. It seems to me the operator starts his motor and lets the picture shoot along regardless of the natural action. Why cannot the producers send a printed slip with every film, telling at what speed the different scenes of the film should be run, and a speedometer should be included in the equipment of every moving picture machine, so that the instructions could be followed out correctly. I am not an operator—just one of the common people who love the pictures, but, nevertheless, I wish you success in your efforts to get the people's amusement put on the screen properly.

That is exactly what happens at that particular theater, Brother Fay. I have been up in its operating room a good many times, and mighty seldom have I seen the operator standing at the port-hole regulating the speed of his machine. As to the producers sending out a slip, why that would not do a particle of good, and, moreover, the operator who is worth his salt is able to properly judge the speed, if he attends to business, and if he has not pride enough in his work to do that, he would not pay any earthly attention to printed slips.

Condensers.

A. F. Davis, Erie, Pennsylvania, writes:

Brother Richardson, this is the first time I have broken into the department, but I am writing at the request of the manager of a house to be opened here shortly. He will project a 14.5 foot picture at 118 feet, which I figure will take a 7.5 E. F. lens. Now according to Brother Arkin's reciprocal method the condenser combination for a 7.5 lens figures a 7.5 rear and 8 inch front. I have tried Arkin's method before a 3.7 objective, but it did not work out in practice, nor does a 7.5-8 inch combination look right to me, hence I am writing for advice.

With regard to the lens proposition I would suggest that you get your 7.5 E. F. objective 2½ inches in diameter that is to say, having a 2½ inch opening. Place the lens in the machine, and using the condensers which came with the projector, focus the picture sharply on the screen. Having done this stick a rule through the aperture, and measure the exact distance from the surface of the film track on the aperture plate to the lens. This will be the back focus at which the lens will work, and that is as far as I can go with the matter until I know what the back focus is. When you get that dope send it to me, together with, as a reminder, the diameter of the opening of the objective, and I will tell you the rest, and I think it will be right too. Within a month from now you will have in your hands tables and data which will enable you to figure all these things out for yourself, and I believe figure them out very nearly correctly.

An Error.

My attention has been called to the fact that the scheme mentioned on page 303, July 10th issue, under title, "Edison Improvement" is not a new one, but, has, as a matter of fact, been in use for quite some time, though doubtless Brothers McChesney and Gall were not aware of that circumstance. Well, the editor of this department is not a film manufacturer, and does not pretend to be expert in matters of this particular kind, therefore I think the error made in assuming the scheme to be new may be pardoned almost without a struggle.

An Important Invention.

Some time ago the manufacturers of a new device designed to eliminate rewinding called upon me and made a demonstration of their machine. The demonstration was so thoroughly successful, and the machine itself so practical in its method of attachment to standard projectors that I at once became interested and believed that at last there had been evolved a device which would really eliminate rewinding of the film. Now, if this could be done, and done in a thoroughly practical manner it, in my judgment, would be one of the biggest things that had come up for quite some considerable time. This department, however, while it is enthusiastic over things which are really good, must know that they are good before being given its endorsement—particularly in a matter of this kind. We, therefore, told the manufacturers that, while we believed the device, known as the "Feaster Film Feed," to be a thoroughly practical, and in every way excellent machine, still, before we could deal with the matter in the department we would require them to equip two theatres, which we would select, here in New York City, with two of the rewinders each, one for each machine in each theater. This was really agreed to, and after watching the device in operation, handled by the operators who had received no special instructions, for a period of nearly two months, I am prepared to say that the "Feaster Film Feed" machine is in every way practical, and a thing which ought to be adopted by the theatres of this and other countries.

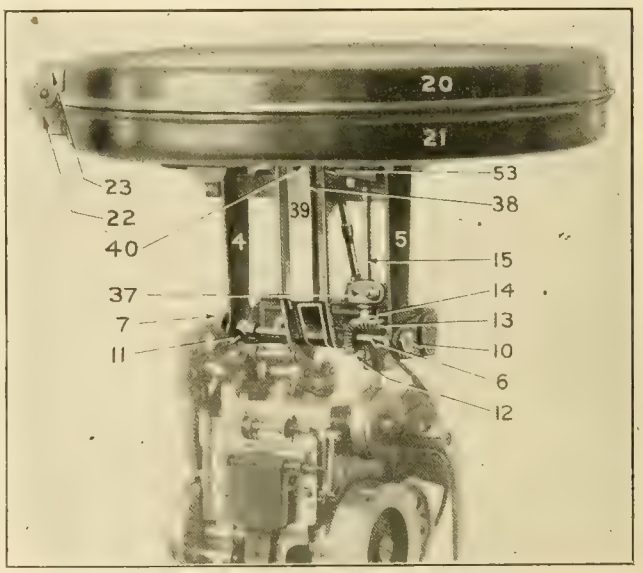

Fig. 1.

In Fig. 1 the device is seen attached to an ordinary Power's head. All that is necessary to do is to remove the old magazine and replace it with a "Feaster," leveling it with thumbscrews provided until gear 7, Fig. 1 meshes properly with the gear in the projector, tighten up the thumb screws, level it up and you are ready for business. This whole operation will not consume more than five minutes at the most.

The device is very similar in appearance to the old American Standard rewinder, which was introduced about six years ago but proved to be a drizzling failure.

The thing which makes the Feaster a success is spindle 41, Figs. 3 and 4.

When the machine is received it is placed on the head of the mechanism, and is held level by means of rod 16, which is in effect a turn buckle. This allows of magazines 20 and 21, Fig. 1, being set level, regardless of what the slope of the projection machine may be. The magazines are of pressed sheet steel; substantial and very well made. Special reels, see Fig. 6, are provided, a sufficient number of reels being sent with the machine to accommodate all the reels a theater will ever use.

When the films are received from the exchange they are rewound onto the Feaster reel and after the rewinding is completed, the reel side, shown better in Fig. 6, is by a simple turn of the wrist removed, and the film is laid in the pan in magazine, Fig. 5, as shown, and the other half of the reel is lifted entirely away. All this sounds a little complicated, but is, in reality, extremely simple. An empty reel is then placed in the lower magazine, and the end of the film shown at H in the upper part of Fig. 6 is passed over sprocket 41, Fig. 3, to which it is held by idler 42, Fig. 3. Then, allowing a proper loop, the end is passed down between fire trap rollers 35, Fig. 3, through film chute 39, Fig. 1, and is threaded in through the mechanism in the usual way, being attached to the Feaster reel in the lower magazine as shown at H, Fig. 6. The added complication in threading amounts to very little. And now comes the heart of the whole business.

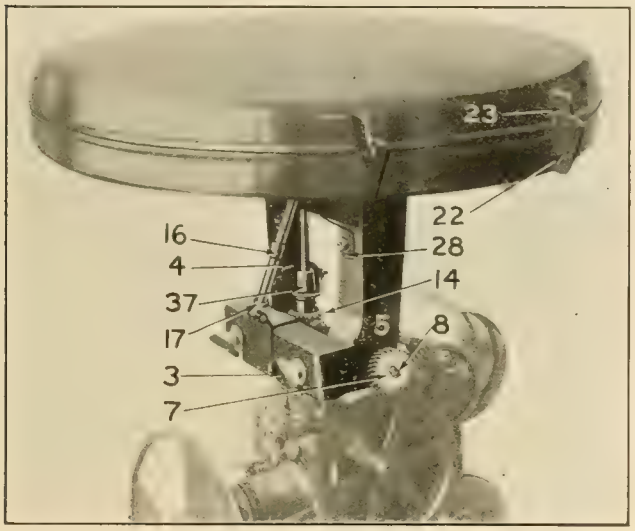

Fig. 2.

In Fig. 4 you will observe pan 31, which has been lifted out of magazine 21. To show you the "chronometer balance and cylinder escapement" of the thing. This pan is shown in place in Fig. 5. It carries the roll of film and runs on a ball bearing, consisting of brass track 55, Fig. 4, and three ½-inch steel balls, two of which are shown at 52, Fig. 4, which rest on a brass track, similar to track 55, and are held equi-distant from each other by keeper ring 32 Fig. 4. (These numbers have been adopted by the Feaster Company as stock numbers of the parts, and parts may be ordered by them). This pan revolves with practically no friction at all, and rollers 34, Fig. 3, carries the inside layer which passes around them (though as a matter of fact the film seldom really touches these rollers at all) and passes into the opening at the upper end of the roller frame, Fig. 3, behind sprocket 21, and so on down through fire trap 35 to machine, see Fig. 7.

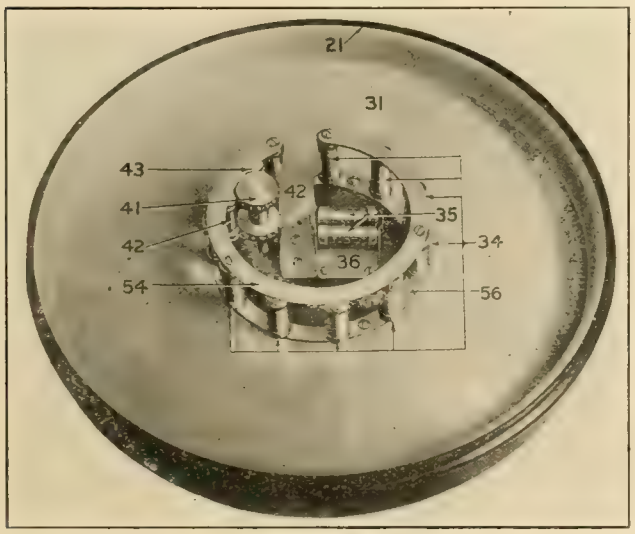

Fig. 3.

The secret of the success of the Feaster lies in the fact that sprocket 41 attaches to and is driven by a gear of the projection machine, the connection being shown in Fig. 1, in which 15 is the shaft carrying sprocket 41. Fig 3. 12 and 14 beveled gears, and 6 a shaft which connects to the mechanism gear through gear 7. This means that the loop between sprocket 41 and fire trap rollers 35, or in reality between sprocket 41 and the upper sprocket of the mechanism, is always held at uniform length, nor is there any likelihood of this loop ever being "lost," unless the sprocket holes in the film are ripped out entirely. I have seen some very bad film run through the Feaster, and can vouch for the fact that any film which will pass through the projector, will pass through the Feaster successfully. 26, Fig 4, is a window through which the operator can always see just how much film there is remaining in the magazine.

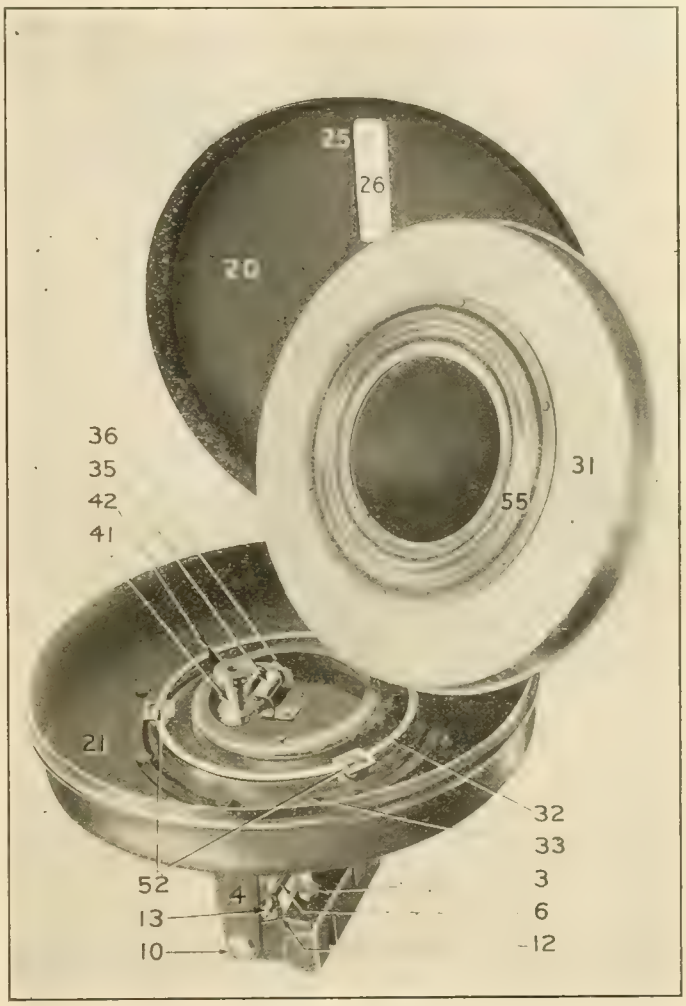

Fig. 4.

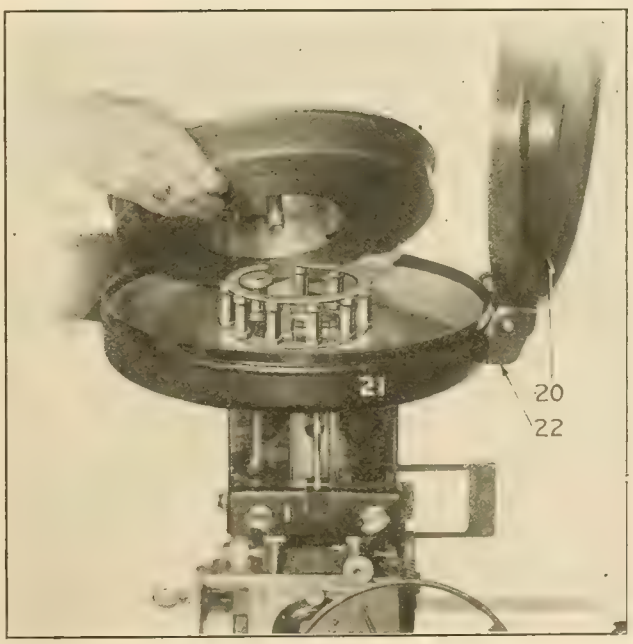

Fig. 5.

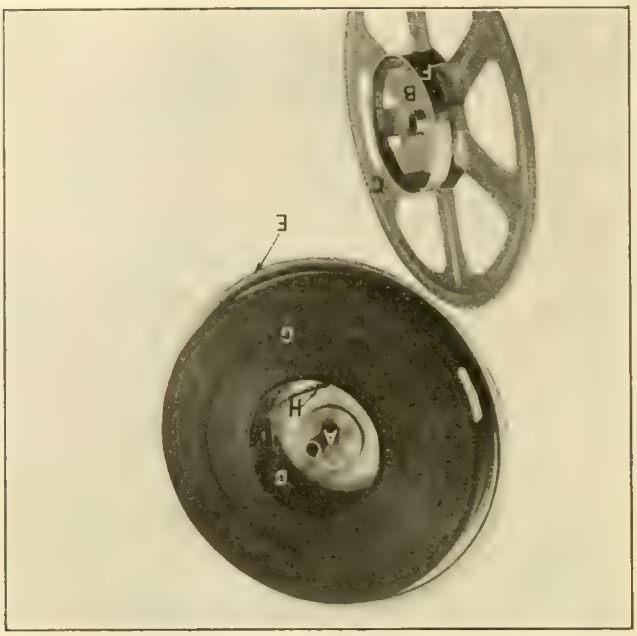

Fig. 6.

The gear attachment to the Power's machine is clearly shown in Fig. 2, in which gear 7 is the gear shown at 7, Fig. 1, attached to shaft 6, Fig. 1.

It does away with the rewind boy entirely and that alone should save the price of the equipment for two projectors in less than one year. If a rewind boy is not employed, then it lessens the labor of the operator, and allows him to watch his projection instead of rewinding film. It eliminates the noise of rewinding, which often is very annoying to the audience. It produces a better show because the damage to film is far less when the Feaster is used.

The purchase price not only includes the machine itself, but a sufficient number of reels to take care of the maximum number of reels used in the theatre, and this is, of course, an important item when one comes to consider the purchase price of the machine.

Fig. 7 shows the loop in place.

In closing, let me repeat: the Feaster Film Feed has the endorsement and hearty support of this department. The only possible objection I can see to its use is the fact that in case the film pulls in two it would mean a double rewinding of the film in order to make the splice, though there is less danger of breaks where the Feaster is used. As against this, however, are all the advantages named, and some others as well. And in considering the disadvantages suggested it must be remembered that in the ordinary course the film would have to be rewound anyhow, so that the broken splice would only mean an extra rewinding of the film.

My advice to managers is to purchase this machine, and stand not on the order of doing it. It is an up-to-date proposition that is, in my opinion, good, both for you and for the business. I sincerely hope that within a comparatively short time rewinding of film will be almost a "lost art."

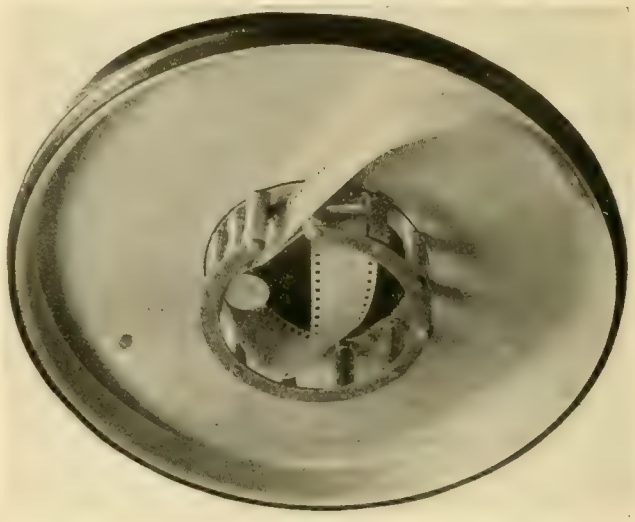

Fig. 7.

Lose Your Religion.

A. T. Weiss, New Orleans, Louisiana, says:

> Noticed in July 17th issue you advised the Jarvis Theater Company not to set machines off square with the curtain on a 50 foot throw. I am projecting a 16 foot picture at 70 feet with 60 amperes of 60 cycle current, using 5/8-inch Columbia carbons both top and bottom. The house is 58x170 feet. Curtain sets square with the audience. The operating room is clear over at the side of the house, which places the left-hand lens about 26 feet to the side of the center of the screen, and the other machine about 23 feet. The screen is not slanted in any way. I wonder how Brother Smith, Fort Worth, Texas, likes this proposition. He seems to have his ups and downs, while I have my sides and outs. The nicest part about the job is when you have to put on a new aperture plate, fill in with solder, and then do a delicate job of filing it out, so that the keystone is compensated for on the screen. Right here is where you can lose your religion. I have an aluminum screen, and the pictures are a little hazy, but this I think is due to the type of screen. Pictures viewed from the side the operating room is on show very little distortion, from the opposite side of the room there is some, though not much.

Brother Weiss, it grieves my tender young heart to dispute you, point-blank, but you cannot possibly project a 16 foot picture 70 feet, twenty-six off center, without having a lot of distortion in the picture. You may not notice it so much, but if you had a straight projection picture beside it you would see it quickly enough. However, there is a big difference between 50 feet and 70 feet. With a given size picture and the machine a given distance off center you decrease the keystone effect very rapidly as you increase the throw. It is all a question of angles, and I will say your manager might far better place the operating room at the back of the balcony, where it would be probably approximately 150 feet from the stage, though, of course, that would place you up with the colored population, which you undoubtedly would not like—the balcony being reserved for colored people. Oh, by the way, Friend Weiss is using Edison machines.

MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

Kindly note that the Richardson Handbook is completely out of print. Please send no more orders or remittances. The author is now at work on a new and revised edition, which will be still larger and better. Announcement of publication date will appear in due course.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD 17 Madison Avenue, New York

Motion Picture Photography*

Conducted by CARL LOUIS GREGORY

Inquiries.

QUESTIONS in cinematography addressed to this department will receive carbon copy of the department's reply by mail when four cents in stamps are enclosed. Special replies by mail on matter which cannot be replied to in this department for $1.00.

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is a rule of this department that no apparatus will be recommended editorially until the value of such appliances have been demonstrated to its editor.

Light (Continued).

IN Fig. 27 we have a diagram of the ordinary telescope in which the real image has been twice enlarged, in order that the eye may see the enlarged image as an erect object. As it is of no consequence that the image be inverted in an astronomical telescope, it is provided with only two sets of lenses and the image is enlarged but once, the large lens, or objective, being made as large as possible in order to collect all of the possible light from dim and distant stars. The image formed by this large objective with great light collecting power being then examined by a magnifying eye piece selected by the astronomer as being most suitable for whatever investigation he is conducting; large astronomical telescopes being provided with a number of eye pieces of various degrees of magnification. When photographs are taken of heavenly bodies the eye pieces are removed and the photographic plate inserted in the tube of the telescope at the proper focal distance.

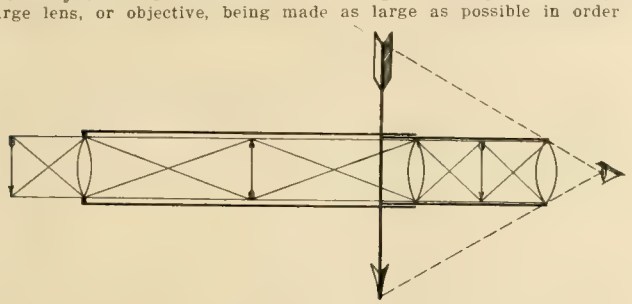

Fig. 27: Diagram of an Ordinary Telescope.

In our experiments with the prism, we learn that the glass of the prism had not only the power of refracting or bending the light, but also of dispersing or separating it into its component colors, and in our previous experiments with a single lens we will have noticed, if we have observed closely, that the images which we produced were fringed with prismatic color. In diagram 28 we see the reason for this, the blue and violet rays being refracted to a greater extent than those of the other end of the spectrum.

Very happily for photographic purposes, the light refracting power and the dispersive power of different kinds of glass are very different and not interdependent so that we are able to produce by cementing together, as in Fig. 29, or sometimes only mounting together in a metallic mount, lenses from certain combinations of different kinds of glass in which one kind counteracts the dispersive power of another kind and thus the different colors are brought to a focus at the same point. It would be very inconvenient to make a mathematical calculation and a very fine readjustment of a ground glass from the visual focus to the actinic focus of a lens every time we wished to take a photograph. This correction for visual and actinic focus is thus very important and is one of the principal reasons an ordinary magnifying lens is not suitable for making photographs.

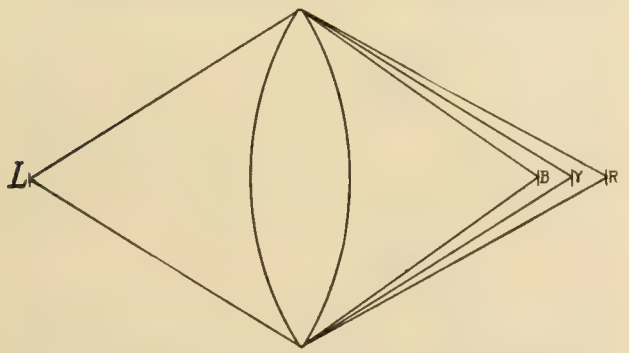

Fig. 28: Dispersion Produced by an Uncorrected Lens.

It is an unfortunate fact that there are on the market today some makes of cinematographic lenses which are not fully corrected for visual and actinic focus. The writer was at one time compelled through force of necessity, to use such a lens, and it was only after making many tests to obtain a focusing scale or by focusing upon an object at a certain ratio of distance nearer the lens, that he was able to produce pictures of satisfactory sharpness with it. As it is never necessary to change the focal distance from infinity in astronomical photography, no attempt is made to correct telescopic objectives since, when actinic focus is once obtained, it is never necessary to change it.

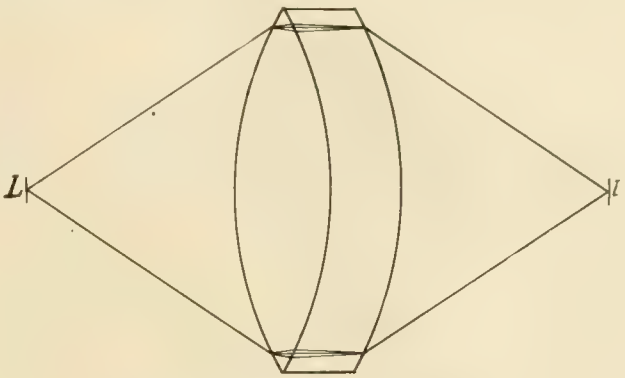

Fig. 29: A Corrected Lens.

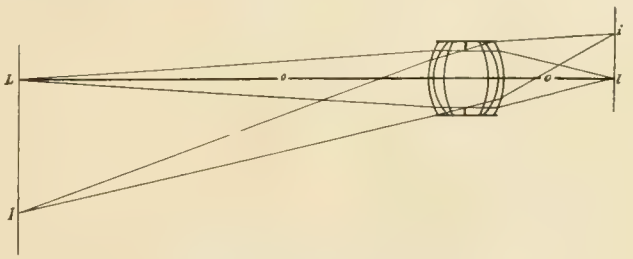

Fig. 30: Photographic Objective.

C, O, Axis of Lens. L, I, Axial Rays. I, Oblique Rays.

The lens is the agent by which the light is directed to the right spot in forming the image depending upon the refraction of light. But before taking up the consideration of this important piece of apparatus for photographic work it will be necessary to explain what we mean by the "Optics of Photography" as distinguished from the optics of other sciences, such as those of the telescope and the microscope.

The chief distinctions are of two kinds: 1st, in photographic optics, the lens must be capable of transmitting and bringing to a focus in the same plane oblique and axial rays of light, as shown in Fig. 30.

Zeiss Tessar Lenses.

The output of the Carl Zeiss Lens Company in Germany in photographic objectives has practically ceased, as the activities of the company are being devoted exclusively to the production of binoculars and other optical instruments used for war purposes by the German army.

The Zeiss Tessar series of cinematographic lenses have enjoyed the highest regard among motion picture photographers, and although the same series of lenses has been manufactured in America by the Bausch and Lomb Optical Company of Rochester, New York, under the same formulas and patents as the German concern, it was not until the present shortage of German ground objectives made itself felt by its absence that the excellence of the American made lenses has assumed proper importance.

Not only does the Bausch and Lomb Company manufacture these excellent cinematographic objectives and a large line of highest quality cinematographic projection objectives and high grade photographic lenses of all sizes, but they make in addition many other optical products, including binoculars and range finders for the United States Army and Navy, and periscopes for submarine boats.

At the Panama-Pacific Exposition in the Palace of Liberal Arts they have an exhibit which should be seen by every photographer who visits the Fair. The colored light effects upon the Tower of Jewels and the Palace of Horticulture are the products of this company.

*Copyright, 1915, by The Chalmers Publishing Co.

Comments on the Films

General Film Company.

A LETTER TO DADDY (Biograph), July 26.—Gus Pixley, Jack Mulhall, Irma Dawkins, and a bright little lady of five, are concerned in the telling of this one-reel drama. The child is the innocent cause of her brother's being accused of theft. There is also a pretty love interest connected with the plot. A light but pleasing little drama.

THE CALL OF YESTERDAY (Essanay), July 26.—A one-reel romance of average merit, the playing of Bryant Washburn, Ruth Stonehouse, John Cossar, Florence Oberle, and Thos. Commerford, and the thorough work of the producer, bring it into the acceptable class.

THE EARL'S ADVENTURE (Lubin), July 26.—As the titled gentleman's adventure, in this one-reel comedy, ends by his securing a beautiful American heiress, he may be excused for taking the chances he does—being accused of theft. The story is a highly improbable but diverting bit of romance, capitally acted by Thurston Hall, Herbert Fortier, and Ethel Clayton.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 59, 1915 (Selig), July 26.—Christie McDonald winning motorboat race at Thousand Islands, starts this number. The remaining items are: Elks Pageant at Los Angeles; Bayshore, L. I. horse show; Suffragette Blue Jay parade, Boston; athletic meet, Stagg Field, Chicago; marine disaster in San Francisco harbor; strike at Bridgeport, Conn.; bronze medal given to Hearst-Selig man at Panama-Pacific Exposition; girl bridge-jumper, Chicago; English and German prisoners being exchanged at Stratford, Eng.; on the battle line in France; burial grounds Nish, Serbia.

MR. JARR'S BIG VACATION (The Jarr Family Series, No. 15) (Vitagraph), July 26.—The bad luck which marks Mr. Jarr's starting off on his vacation, earns him the best kind of a time after he reaches his destination. The more Mr. Jarr suffers, the greater the enjoyment of his admirers. He has a full measure this trip, and becomes saturated with whiskey without tasting a drop.

THE TOILERS (Kalem), July 27.—There is a chaste atmosphere of high art about this one-reel comedy. "Ham" and "Bud" appear as a group of (animated) statuary, and exhibit the classic lines of a pair of Roman gladiators—without the aid of pads. The entire reel is good, clean fun.

AN AFRICAN HUNT (Lubin), July 27.—Vincent Whitman has drawn another half-reel cartoon comedy which will win many a laugh. It is on the same reel with "Susie's Suitors."

SUSIE'S SUITORS (Lubin), July 27.—A very good example of comic supplement humor is found in this half-reel farce. The producer has rightly instructed the actors to do their work in the same exaggerated manner, Eva Bell, Eloise Willard, Will Hopkins, and C. W. Ritchie, having the principal roles.

THE CHILD, THE DOG, AND THE VILLAIN (Selig), July 27.—There are several other characters in this one-reel drama besides those mentioned in the title. The story is cleverly contrived to hold the interest, and is acted by a competent cast.

POOR BABY (Edison), July 28.—The adventures of a "Weary Willie" and a stolen baby in this one-reel farce, are extremely ludicrous. Raymond McKee's tramp is cleverly over-drawn, and Lou Gorey and Caroline Rankin give amusing character impersonations.

DREAMY DUD GOES BEAR HUNTING (Essanay), July 28.—Wallace A. Carlson has drawn nothing more amusing than this living cartoon. Dud and the bear take turns hunting each other and indiscriminately use both ends of the gun. Western scenic views are on the same reel.

THE MISSING CLUE (Vitagraph), July 28.—This one-reel farce has much to recommend it, originality of plot being one of its chief virtues. The fun is extravagant, the construction skilfully done, and the acting and producing equally meritorious. Harry Fisher, Templer Saxe, and Florence Natol head the cast.

THE WANDERER'S PLEDGE (Biograph), July 29.—Vigor of action characterizes this one-reel drama. It is a western romance, adequately acted by Isabel Rea, Frank Newburg, and Hector V. Sarno.

SNAKEVILLE'S TWINS (Essanay), July 29.—The twins are among the most important exhibits in this one-reel farce, but two bottles of supposed hair-restorer have prominent parts in developing the plot. The acting of Victor Potel, Harry Todd, Margaret Joslin, and Ben Turpin, makes the reel continuously amusing.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 60, 1915 (Selig), July 29.—Incidents of the Bayonne strike opens the number, which also contains: Salt Lake City Cadets at the San Diego Exposition; Magnolia cut-off near Cumberland, Md.; recruits drilling, Epsom, Eng.; Lucile fashions; trotting race at Cleveland, Ohio; arrival of Liberty Bell, San Francisco; Chick Evans winning golf match, Cleveland, and Eastland disaster, Chicago.

CUTEY, FORTUNE HUNTING (Vitagraph), July 29.—Edwina Robbins, author of this one-reel comedy, has taken Wally Van's measure and furnished him with a snug-fitting and most becoming role. The comedy is bright, and also affords Nitra Frazer an opportunity for a clever bit of character work.

THE BATTLE OF ELDERBUSH GULCH (Biograph-Re-issue), July 30.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 2110, issue of June 26.

BRONCHO BILLY'S SURRENDER (Essanay), July 30.—A one-reel G. M. Anderson drama, with Broncho Billy repaying an act of kindness with the sacrifice of his liberty. The regulation Broncho number.

A BUSINESS BUCCANEER (Kalem), July 30.—An Alice Joyce reissue, this one-reel drama, contains several novel situations. The production is first class in every respect.

THE CALL OF MOTHERHOOD (Lubin), July 30.—A high grade one-reel drama, finely acted by Mary Charleson. Crane Wilbur is also excellent.

HE'S IN AGAIN (MinA), July 30.—George Ovey is again the chief fun-maker in a one-reel farce, the cast also including Goldie Colwell and Louis FitzRoy. The old squad of comic cops are once more led a merry chase, and again find is impossible to keep their prisoner behind the bars.

SOME DUEL (Vitagraph), July 30.—Flora Finch, Kate Prince, William Shea, and Hughie Mack, have congenial roles in this one-reel farce, which is a strong reminder of the grade of material turned out by Ned Harrigan, in the days of Harrigan and Hart. No better guarantee is required.

MORE THAN FRIENDS (Biograph), July 31.—There is a good bit of sensation in this one-reel drama, which deals with counterfeiting, and finishes with a realistic encounter with the police. Chas. Perley, Wm. J. Butler and Augusta Anderson are in the cast.

THE BEDOUIN'S SACRIFICE (Edison), July 31.—Love, passion and avarice in the breast of a Bedouin chief form a romantic chapter in the life of an American girl, and furnish the motive of this one-reel drama. Harry Beaumont has constructed his story quite skilfully. Bessie Learn, Edward Earle, Bigelow Cooper, Charles Sutton and Nellie Grant give a spirited performance of the play.

THE FATE OF NUMBER 1 (Episode No. 38 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series) (Kalem), July 31.—In this one-reel "thriller" it is a gang of train-wreckers that match their wits against Helen's and suffer ignominious defeat. As usual, events are run on a fast schedule, and the lady lightning-jerker hops on and off of speeding trains with the same smiling ease as of old.

BILLIE'S HEIRESS (Lubin), July 31.—This one-reel comedy is the best of the Billie Reeves series, so far released. On the ocean, in the ocean, and over the ocean, are all included in Billie's itinerary during a day at Atlantic City, a yacht sail, a swim, and a trip in an airship following on another as William R. is being pursued by divers disgruntled ladies.

THE QUEST (Selig), July 31.—A well-written one-reel drama, with several Jungle-Zoo animal actors in the cast. The incidents are not sensational, but tell a consistent, human story, and the entire production has been intelligently filmed.

General Film Company Specials.

THE LITTLE DECEIVER (Essanay), June 15.—Reviewed by James S. McQuade on page 1945, issue of June 19.

DON CAESAR DE BAZAN (Kalem), July 26.—Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson on page 506, issue of July 17.

THE UNFINISHED PORTRAIT (Selig), July 26.—An entertaining two-reel drama of modern life, the characters and situations command close attention. The quiet strength of the finish is very effective. The producing and playing of the entire cast are excellent.

REAPERS OF THE WHIRLWIND (Biograph), July 27.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 317, issue of July 10.

THE RED STEPHANE (Vitagraph), July 27.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 507, issue of July 17.

BOYS WILL BE BOYS (Essanay), July 27.—The plot of this three-reel comedy, by Joseph Byron Totten, is not at all complicated, but the author has fitted out his photoplay with a set of real human beings whose actions interest and amuse. Mr. Totten plays the hero with engaging naturalness, and receives excellent support from Alfred Gronell, Frank Wonderly, June Keith, Hazel Daly and Minnie Stanley.

THE DEAD SOUL (Lubin), July 28.—Wilbert Melville, the author of this three-reel drama, has written a powerful photoplay. It is crude in spots, and a few of the minor details of production are open to criticism, but there is no denying its hold on the attention and the strength of its theme. Captain Carson is a twin brother to Jack London's skipper in "The Sea Wolf," and George Routh plays him to the life. L. C. Shumway is equally excellent as the minister, Paul Stoddard.

THE GOLD IN THE CROCK (Lubin), July 29.—The human nature and naturalness of incident in this two-reel drama do credit to the author, Mildred Mason. The story is well worth the telling, and Edgar Jones has produced it in a worthy manner. His performance of the leading role is also in his best style. Josephine Longworth, Phyllis May, and Louis Mortelle, share honors with Mr. Jones.

THE ISLE OF CONTENT (Selig), July 29.—This three-reel drama need not be taken seriously. It is pure romance from start to finish, and will serve as a pleasant diversion from the stern realities of life. The production does justice to the subject, the scenes on the island in the South Seas being very picturesque. Anna Luther gives a remarkably clever portrayal of the heroine, a role easily over-acted. Jean Pallette is well cast as the hero.

THE GIRL OF THE GYPSY CAMP (Edison), July 30.—Lee Arthur is the writer of this three-reel drama. The theme is romantic, the incidents have served many a novelist and playwright, and the completed work is a very good example of its class. Bessie Learn, Charles Sutton, Johnnie Walker, Frank McGlynn, and Jessie Stevens, comprise the leaders in a thoroughly satisfactory cast.

A MAN AFRAID (Essanay), July 31.—A realistic auto race is the sensational feature of this three-reel drama. The race is led up to in an interesting manner, and the necessary love motive has not been forgotten. Richard C. Travers, John Cossar, Herbert Heyes and Rene Noel have the leading roles.

THE MYSTERY OF MARY (Vitagraph), July 31.—Novelty of plot and an engrossing and perplexing heroine, give this three-reel drama a firm grip on the interest of an audience. The romantic way in which the hero wins his wife, after helping her through a series of unusual adventures, will appeal to all admirers of a good love story. Captain Harry Lambert's producing, and the acting of Betty Gray, Lionel Adams, Anders Randolf, Evert Overton, Charles Eldridge and Frank Currier are of the best quality.

Mutual Film Corporation.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 30, 1915 (Mutual), July 29.—This issue besides various scenes from the seat of war, among which is a view of a ten inch mortar in action, shows the remains of an exploded powder mill at Louisville, Ky.; members of the Mayama Club of Washington State, climbing to the summit of Mt. Hood; the funeral of Archbishop Quigley at Chicago; the first shipment of American cattle from Guatemala to New Orleans; Harry K. Thaw arriving home, and the National Woman's Life Saving League giving an exhibition at Manhattan Beach, N. Y.

EASTLAND HORROR (Mutual), July.—This picture contains between 300 and 350 feet of film showing the removal of the bodies of the victims of the steamboat disaster at Chicago.

AFTER THE STORM (American), July 30.—This picture tells of how after many years a man finds his daughter whom he lost as a baby in a storm at sea. The story has been developed in an interesting way, and will be acceptable to any audience.

THE DEACON'S WHISKERS (Komic), Aug. 1.—A good comedy with Fay Tincher, Edward Dillon and Max Davidson in the cast. The root of the trouble is the persistence of the daughter in the face of the resolve of a determined father, to stick to the man she loves. Needless to say the plot develops some comical situations, most of which are set at the sea shore.

THE BRIDE OF THE SEA (Reliance), Aug. 2.—Francis Powers has directed this picture, which, although the tale is a rather improbable one in some respects, can boast of artistic development, and is also consistent as far as is possible with the story. The role of "crazy Ben" a fisherman whose wife and child have been, several years before the opening of the story, drowned at sea, has been given a splendid interpretation by George Beranger.

WHEN QUALITY MEETS (Rodeo) August 2.—A broncho busting film that is very interesting. Dot Farley is the star of the picture, a love story has been interwoven with the incidents of the rodeo, and the film may be classed as one of the most attractive of Luna releases.

BILLIE GOAT (Majestic), August 3.—A child story of fairly interesting parts. The youngsters overhearing their fathers talking about riding the goat at the lodge, institute a lodge of their own, and use a real goat.

THE LITTLE BOY WHO ONCE WAS HE (Reliance), August 4.—The idea of this picture was taken from one of Longfellow's poems. The picture is novel in that the man's boyhood days are filmed with double exposure of a delicate sort. The child figure can be seen in visionary form coming to the man at different times during the picture. The moral of the story is an excellent one, and the picture is one that could be shown to boys with good effect.

A PLUGGED NICKEL (Falstaff), August 6.—An amusing little comedy showing how a plugged nickel persisted in finding its way back to its original owner. The last resort of the nickel is in the stomach of a fish.

A WOMAN OF NERVE (Reliance), August 6.—Olga Gray and Howard Gaye appear to advantage in this film. The story of the film has no originality of any account, having the oft-repeated theme of the burglar entering the house when the master is away, and the wife having read of this particular burglar in the paper, assumes a calm exterior. The accidental return of her husband explodes certain grounds for jealousy, which he believed existed, and captures the burglar. The picture has been developed in a manner that has made it interesting in spite of its antiquated theme.

AUNT MATILDA OUTWITTED (Rodeo), August 9.—A rather amusing western comedy with Dot Farley in the lead. Aunt Matilda appointed guardian over her two pretty nieces, has her troubles keeping them away from their cowboy lovers, who to overcome the difficulty dress as girls and hire out with Aunt Matilda. They manage to get to the parson's with the girls, and the ceremony is performed before the desperate relative catches up with them.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

FATE TAKES A HAND (Reliance), July 31.—A two-reel crook story of especial interest. A son released from prison promises his old father that he will start life anew. A woman whom he has associated with formerly again asserts her influence, and he gets mixed up in the crook game again. In attempting to shoot the district attorney he shoots the woman who is at that moment being brought before him.

VICTORINE (Majestic), August 1.—This is a two-reel production that has large market values. The picture has been made by Paul Powell, and features Dorothy Gish. Opposite her plays William Hinckley. Others of the cast are Walter Long, Ralph Lewis, and Mae Gaston. The story of the picture treats of a young woman who left her job in a restaurant to act as target to a knife thrower in a circus. The picture is well developed and interesting.

DETECTIVE BLINN (American), August 2.—Here is a good two-reel detective story with Winnifred Greenwood, George Field, Edward Coxen, John Steppling and Beatrice Van in the cast. The leading jeweller of the town proves to be the head of a gang of thieves who stole and marketed to him at his own price many articles that had previously been bought in his store.

A LOVER'S LOST CONTROL (Keystone), August 2.—A Syd Chaplin comedy which is particularly gay. With his wife he visits a department store which is almost a wreck, so far as its goods are concerned, when he leaves it with his affinity. This is a good sample of Keystone ingenuity.

WHEN THE FLEET SAILED (Thanhouser), August 3.—Advantage has been taken of the naval review in the making of this two-reel production. Harry Benham and Flo La Badie are the central figures in a story that would have been interesting had the plot been worked out to a finish.

THE GIRL FROM HIS TOWN (Mutual Masterpicture—American), August 5.—Reviewed by James S. McQuade on page 832, issue of July 31.

SHORTY INHERITS A HAREM (Broncho), August 11.—A two-reel number, featuring Shorty Hamilton. He goes to India with a Wild West aggregation. While on a hunting trip he assists the Maharajah, and on the latter's death falls heir to his possessions, including the harem. The harem scenes are full of broad humor, which barely escapes going over the line. The subtitles are also a little rough. When Shorty finds he must be buried alive with his dead wife, he escapes and goes back to the show.

THE THOUSAND DOLLAR BILL (Domino), August 12.—This a two-reeler with a sprinkling of comedy in its makeup. The production has considerable in it that would be of interest to the average audience. The $1,000 bill is a portion of the cash turned over in exchange for a bag of gold dust, and is the chief factor in a chase that takes place after the owner of the bill.

THE TOAST OF DEATH (Mutual Masterpicture—N. Y. M. P. Corp.), August 12.—Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison on page 1013, issue of August 7.

OVER SECRET WIRES (Kaybee), August 13.—A two-reel number with Thomas Chatterton and Harvey Clarke in the leading roles. The plot is simple, dealing with the efforts of a secret service man to locate a radio station sending messages affecting the neutrality of this country. There is no love story, but the situations are interesting and have moments of dramatic interest. The plot has a certain modern atmosphere and the scenic effects are pleasing.

North American Film Corporation

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY, CHAPTER 14 (American), August 2.—"For Love and Money" is the title of this chapter, which is remarkably interesting. The story is now taking on attractive proportions, and Blair and Esther are about to reach the Veronica mines owned by Arthur who is now known as "John Powell." The episode is a thrilling one and cuts just as our anticipations are reaching a climax.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

SEVEN SISTERS (Famous Players), July 26.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 1013, issue of August 7.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

PATHE'S NEWS NO. 58 1915 (July 21.—The war pictures that accompany this issue are unusually interesting, showing many scenes in the Argonne district. The French cavalry mounted on beautiful Arabian horses climbing the hills, the gun carriages being drawn over the same hills by spirited steeds, views of a battlefield when the Germans are in the act of exploding poisonous gas bombs are intensely interesting. Other scenes of this issue are of the flood at Lima, Ohio, the Shriners in convention at Seattle, and the "Orduna" Cunarder attacked by German submarines, leaving her dock at New York.

PATHE'S NEWS NO. 59, 1915, July 24.—The Bayonne Strike is one of the interesting items of this issue, also several scenes in which Harry K. Thaw is the central figure, a tub race at the Larchmont annual carnival, and poor children getting free ice.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Specials.

THE ROMANCE OF ELAINE (Episode No. 31), July 26.—"The Death Cloud" is the title of this episode of "The Romance of Elaine." It may be said that it comprises one of the most interesting of the series. The "Death Cloud" is a poisonous gas that is exploded in bombs by Del Mar and his associates when their arsenal is about to be siezed. The episode is composed of well-connected scenes, and is thrillingly attractive.

MAX AND HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW (Pathe), August 9.—Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald on page 1016, issue of August 7.

THE DAWN OF FREEDOM (Victory), August 14.—Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald on page 1016, issue of August 7.

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO 177 (Universal), July 28.—Champ Clark at Los Angeles; firing heavy gun, Fort Hancock, Sandy Hook; Elks' parade, Los Angeles; Standard Oil strike, Bayonne, N. J.; New York State Troops at practice; The Eastland disaster, and other recent events are shown in this number.

THEIR BEWITCHED ELOPEMENT (Joker), August 7.—A pleasing one-reel farce in which a grateful and well-developed fairy befriends a pair of rural lovers. The evidences of the good spirit's magic power are cleverly contrived, and the playing of Lillian Peacock, Gale Henry, Milburn Moranti, and Max Asher, is well up to the required mark.

THE SOURCE OF HAPPINESS (Laemmle), August 8.—A gentle preachment in picture form, showing the charms of country life in contrast with city life. Charles Manly, M. K. Wilson, Gretchen Lederer and Olive Fuller Golden appear. Some fine pastoral scenes are shown. The story is simple but very pleasingly worked out.

SHOT IN A BAR-ROOM (L-Ko), August 8.—A low comedy number, featuring Fatty Voss and Louise Orth. Fatty has run away with another man's bride and great consternation follows when the other shows up. There is some amusement in this, though it is not quite so laughable as other numbers have been.

DAN CUPID, FIXER (Nestor), August 9.—A comedy number of fair strength, featuring Jack Dillon, Laura Oakley, Billy Rhodes and others. The chief scenes occurs in a beauty parlor where Jack's fiancee catches him making love to another. The action is good but the plot very slight.

WHERE HAPPINESS DWELLS (Big U), August 10.—A mountain story, by Ben Cohn, featuring Adele Lane and Edward Sloman. Both are city people on vacation and meet in the hills. The story is conventional, but pleasing. The scenic effects are unusually attractive, in fact constitute the chief strength of the offering.

TO FRISCO, VIA THE CARTOON ROUTE (Imp), August 10.—In spite of its descriptive title, this is really a series of humorous impressions of Hy Mayer, while on his trip West. He interpolates animated drawings between real pictures, extracting fun out of scenery and natives of the West, concluding with views of the expositions. The number is entertaining.

HELLO, BILL (L-Ko), August 11.—This film was made by courtesy of the Benevolent Order of Elks at Los Angeles. Billie Ritchie is featured in the picture, which is developed into an amusing comedy.

THE ELEPHANT CIRCUS (Powers), August 12.—A circus act, featuring two excellently trained elephants and their trainer in some familiar feats. This will perhaps be of particular appeal to children.

LITTLE PEOPLE IN FUR (Powers).—A Ditmars animal picture on the same reel.

LOST—THREE TEETH (Nestor), August 13.—A comedy number, written by Helen Jonas, featuring Eddie Lyons and Victoria Forde as a couple about to be wed. The bride-to-be loses her false teeth just before the ceremony. Her efforts to find them are quite funny. A pleasing light comedy number.

A DIP IN THE WATER (Joker), August 14.—A comedy number by Clarence G. Badger, with Max Asher, Gale Henry and others in the cast. This contains a lot of amusing incidents. The swimming scenes are a little breezy and might be cut to advantage.

HAUNTING WINDS (Powers), August 14.—A story by G. E. Genks, with Sydney Ayres, Doris Pawn and Frank MacQuarrie in the cast. The prospector kills a man and is haunted by his deed until he discovers the man was wanted for murder. This makes a fairly strong Western story with some quite dramatic moments.

Universal Film Mfg. Company Specials.

BETTY'S BONDAGE (Rex), August 8.—A two-reel number, by Ida May Park, featuring Pauline Bush. This story is well-constructed and the homely types presented exert quite a pull on the interest. The girl, thinking she is to be forced into an unfavorable marriage, goes to the city and takes up a theatrical career. She is glad later when her lover comes and saves her from an unhappy fate. The theme is an old one but is here presented in a sincere manner and has considerable appeal.

THE PRISON IN THE PALACE (Universal Special), August 9 (No. 8 of "The Broken Coin" series, in two reels).—Kitty makes her escape from the palace in this number, by stealing an automobile. First, however, she has a most amusing time flirting with the guards and nearly everyone else with whom she comes in contact.

A CIGARETTE—THAT'S ALL (Gold Seal), August 10.—An unusually strong and artistic two-reel number from a story by Helena Evans, the screen adaptation being made by Lois Weber. Phillips Smalley, Rupert Julian, Maud George and H. Scott Leslie are in the cast. The photography is very good and the settings are carefully chosen. The plot concerns a business man who is given a pair of glasses by a Hindu, which enable him to see everything. He discovers many things that make him unhappy and is inclined to discredit them. How the simple end of a half-smoked cigarette upholds his visions is skilfully shown. A good offering.

HIS BELOVED VIOLIN (Big U), August 12.—A two-reel number by H. G. Stafford, featuring Murdock MacQuarrie, Miss Condray, Betty Nathan and Frank MacQuarrie. The story, which is another variation of the theme of "The Music Master," concerns an old composer who pawns his violin to get money for himself and granddaughter. The ticket is lost and the old man later recognizes the violin in the hands of a former pupil, now famous. The story contains no very new or strong situations, but is pleasingly handled and quite satisfying.

DRIVEN BY FATE (Imp), August 13.—Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy on page 831 isue of July 31.

CHASING THE LIMITED (Bison), August 14.—A two-reel story of railroad life, by Julius Furthman, featuring Wellington Playter, Betty Schade, Marie Wolcamp and Kingsley Benedict. The story is well-constructed and convincing. The lunch counter scenes are particularly true to life. The hero at the close saves the limited by overtaking it with a wild engine. Though conventional, this situation proves exciting. A pleasing story of its type.

V-L-S-E, Inc.

THE CHALICE OF COURAGE (Vitagraph), August 9.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 1093 issue of May 15.

World Film Corporation.

MARRYING MONEY (Shubert), July 26.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 1015 issue of August 7.

HAYWARD MACK.

HAYWARD MACK is another well-known motion picture actor to desert New York for Los Angeles. As one of the original Imp company he is remembered for many clever character impersonations as well as for his delineations of light comedy roles. After more than three years service under the Imp banner Mr. Mack left to join the Eastern Majestic company, where he acted in and produced many popular comedies.

Hayward Mack.

Remaining with the Majestic company until its producing department was transferred to the Pacific Coast studios, Mr. Mack left this company to join the Biograph under the direction of Dell Henderson.

Closing his engagement with the Biograph he produced a five-reel picture for the World Film Program, and then accepted an engagement with the Progressive Motion Picture Corporation to direct George Sidney in a series of "Busy Izzy" comedies in which Mr. Mack played second business opposite Mr. Sidney. Following this engagement he joined the Famous Players, playing in support of Mary Pickford in "Mistress Nell," and "Cinderella." Recently, playing in support of Richard Carle, Mr. Mack has written several clever comedy scenarios for that star. He gained fresh laurels in a leading comedy role opposite Paula Edwards in that musical comedy star's initial appearance before the camera. Returning to his former line of dramatic character work Mr. Mack received much praise for a clever bit of character acting as the Arab Stranger in the Dyreda company's production of "Four Feathers."

RUBENSTEIN OFF FOR ITALY.

I. B. Rubenstein sailed for Italy on August 7 to photograph the operations on the Italian frontier for the American Correspondent Film Company, Inc. In "The Battle of Przemysl" this concern has prepared an interesting picture showing the Galician campaign of the German and Austrian armies, and it aims to present the activities on the other battlefronts with equal exactness.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

NATURALLY considerable indignation has been aroused among the players in the motion picture field by the address of one Robert C. Barton, of Los Angeles, Cal., at the recent convention of the International Purity League in San Francisco, in which he said "Investigation shows that it is almost impossible to be in motion pictures and keep virtuous." This is not the first time actors and actresses have been thus attacked by men of Barton's calibre, nor will it be the last. It is merely a periodical outburst of an aspiration for notoriety. They are a species of pests that cannot be excluded from the human race. Weeds will spring up in the best of cultivated fields. This man Barton well knows that investigation will not bear out his assertion. He has simply taken isolated cases and patched them so as to make a semblance of conditions. His mental operation in this matter is simply a facsimile of the methods of some of the film censor boards who have patched together and exhibited an assortment of clippings in a desperate endeavor to convince the public that the existence of censors is a necessity to protect the morals of the people against the influences of motion pictures. The two agencies are backed by the same class of people and both have the same purpose in view. The only distinction existing between the Barton type and the other spellbinders adds to the ignominy of the first class. There are some people among the censor agitators who have a conscience and are in the work with honest motives. The difference between them and the Barton type is the latter are ruthless in their desire to attain their ends and, in a cowardly way, assail, under the protection of a group of petticoats, thousands of pure, hard-working women who are endeavoring to earn a livelihood in an absolutely legitimate field of industry. Men who are capable of fathering such addresses as Barton made before the Purity Congress do not survive long in any sphere of usefulness. They injure their field of operations and kill themselves. Their utterances so stigmatize them in the eyes of their fellow people that the offenders must walk with their heads bowed in shame.

* * *

Some members of the profession have undertaken to reply at length to Barton's address and show the strong desire that really exists in the profession for a pure home life. Such a course lends color to Barton's claim that an investigation was made and unnecessarily gives him an opportunity to exaggerate isolated cases. Due reflection leads to the conclusion that the best course to pursue is to treat Barton and his utterances with contempt. There need be no apprehension as to the effect of them upon public opinion. One writer replying to the attack says that the standard of morality in the lives of the players will stand comparison with that of people in all other walks of life. This is perfectly true, and it may be added that considering the environments in stage and photoplay life, the players who come within the standard have justification for holding their heads higher than people who are constantly under puritanical safeguards. Let Barton pass from memory. He will soon sink in his own slime. Remember the old saying that "all are not hunters that blow the horn" and "It is not the cowl that maketh the friar."

* * *

The latest of the leading lights in the dramatic profession to forsake the stage for the motion picture studio is Robert Mantell, for years an exponent of the Shakespearean art. Like all the newcomers to the modern field of entertainment Mr. Mantell is bubbling with enthusiasm over his conversion to his new field of labor. Ten years ago, he says in an interview, he would have despised even the thought of going into motion pictures. He feels justified in now taking up the work because he finds that since that time the artistic work in motion pictures has increased a thousand per cent. and the greatest people are going into them. This concession from one of the foremost of American dramatic artists is a valuable addition to the many already made in answer to the attacks of the narrow-minded opposition. Mr. Mantell's interview is quite interesting in many other points, all of which are in strong confirmation of the claims by the motion picture people. The regular theatrical people have claimed that their business never had a serious competitor in the motion pictures, and that hard times, the European War and other conditions were the real causes for the falling of their business. Mr. Mantell tells us that the first intimation he got of the inroads made by the pictures into the regular business was the passing away of the gallery. Gradually the effect manifested itself in other parts of the house, and eventually Shapespeare fell into a deep slumber. Mr. Mantell will not say that Shakespeare is a dead one, but intimates very pointedly that he is doing the Rip Van Winkle act and when he awakes a new generation will have formed. Opinions of this kind coming from such a qualified mind would indicate that motion pictures have a long lease of successful life before them; at least until science evolves some equally satisfactory form of entertainment. The opinion, while chiefly referring to Shakespearean plays, dovetails with the impressions of many notables in other lines of the profession. They say the old field was never in such a discouraging condition as it is today. All must admit that industrial conditions in this country are steadily improving. The regular theatrical field has always been the thermometer in such conditions, but at the present time the rise in the glass is so slow as to be almost imperceptible. With few—very few—exceptions the managers have little confidence in the forthcoming season, although their calls for rehearsals and other arrangements have been under way for some time. It is not going too far to say that were it not for the fact that the motion picture field is overcrowded with players seeking employment the old-time managers would have difficulty in getting sufficient people to fill their casts; and were there not so many picture houses that can be run to equal advantage at much less than the regular theaters can be operated as picture houses over fifty per cent. of the managers who intend to stick to the old game for at least another season would install the pictures. Only the immense amount involved in their valuable leaseholds have kept many of the managers from converting theirs into permanent picture houses. The belated cry of certain managers against prominent players going into the picture business is but the last gasp of a badly crippled class. The threats to boycott such players are equally ineffective. Under existing circumstances, with a sudden revival of the old-time line of work, these managers would be compelled to make tempting offers to many of the players now working in pictures in order to properly fill their casts. The same cry was raised by some vaudeville managers last winter, but it bore no fruit. It gave them an excuse for making reductions in salaries when no other excuse was in sight. That is all. The cuts would have been made in any event. While they have not suffered, perhaps, to the same extent that the "straight" houses have, the vaudeville and burlesque houses have been obliged to make many retrenchments in order to cope with the competition of motion pictures. The managers will not admit this, and will endeavor to sustain their contention by pointing to the receipts of some old established houses in the larger cities. But averaging the houses in the large and small cities and towns a larger decrease from the business of former years is shown, and actual losses figured in many instances. The great factor in the success of motion pictures has been the persistent efforts of the standard producers to keep abreast of the times and give the people what they want. The field and its possibilities is so great that the motion picture people have been able to meet these conditions. The burlesque and vaudeville people have not. There is a great scarcity of new and novel acts. In many instances the main drawing power has rested in the names of people booked. Many of the headliners, so far as the acts themselves are concerned, are handicapped by pictures in the houses next door. Were it not for the opportunity to see for from 10 to 35 cents people and acts that they formerly saw for from 25 cents to $1.50, many of the vaudeville houses would be running for expenses. The comparatively few higher priced vaudeville houses—the big timers they call them—would be straight picture houses like those who have gone before, but for the combination of ownership and small profits. By this means the managers have been enabled to regulate salaries and expenses, so that the profits of houses that would not justify individual investment leave, when combined, a fair income on the whole. The pictures have them all going.

* * *

In these days, when competition on the part of rental exchanges for the patronage of exhibitors is so cheap, there should not be so many complaints from exhibitors about overcharges, booking disappointments and the condition of reels. There was a time when the situation could be better understood, but with exhibitors having absolute privilege to deal where and with whom they please there is reason for suspecting that they are not working in their own interest. If they allow themselves to be imposed upon by unreliable solicitors they must abide the results. In one respect the picture business is like the commercial line. You cannot get something for nothing, and exhibitors must not expect to get the same grade of service that costs their neighbors more than the complainants are willing to pay.

Jesse L. Lasky in New York

Film Manufacturer Returns from Coast for a Visit to the Headquarters of His Company.

TO consummate arrangements which have been the subject of negotiations lasting over several months and which have a direct bearing on the future exploitation and distribution in Europe of American manufactured photoplays, Jesse L. Lasky, president of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, returned to New York on Tuesday from Hollywood, Cal., where the studios of the Lasky Company are situated.

Conferences bearing on the distribution of Lasky productions throughout the warring countries of Europe as soon as the great international struggle is over will be carried on in New York during the next few weeks between Mr. Lasky, Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and their business and allied associates. To some extent Mr. Lasky's hastened return to New York may be connected with the departure to Europe several weeks ago of Carl Anderson, formerly business manager of the Lasky Company, and Harry Kohn, as representatives of the Famous Players and Lasky companies.

The importance of the pending negotiations may be best understood when Mr. Lasky chose to come east before the completion of "Carmen" and the other plays in which Geraldine Farrar is appearing in front of the camera in the Lasky studios.

"I do not think the importance of the European market to American manufacturers can be overestimated," said Mr. Lasky yesterday. "When the cruel war is over, millions of persons will as one swerve away from thoughts of strife to those of peace and reconstruction. History has proved that great popular forms of amusement form a very vital part of the lives of peoples in such conditions. The motion picture, the photoplay—particularly the American product, from which has been removed all taint of war and sordidness—will be received with the greatest enthusiasm by the masses.

"It has been the custom for many years for the governments of the continental countries to subsidize popular entertainment. On this account has it been possible heretofore for the support of numerous and generally quite excellent grand opera houses and organizations. To what extent the warring nations of Europe will be able to perpetuate this costly subsidy at the conclusion of the war is somewhat problematical.

"The motion picture and the photoplay, however, come without the range of government subsidy. They are popular entertainment at very moderate prices. We have received information from the foreign correspondents of our company of an already growing demand for preparation on our part to be ready to step into the European market. Of course, the photoplay industry has thrived to some extent in the sections not actually within the devastating range of conflict, but with the end of the war there will be a market for the right kind of photoplays of American manufacture so great as to tax the imagination.

"Nothing could be further from the truth than that the motion picture acting field is overcrowded," continued Mr. Lasky. "It is true there are thousands of persons in southern California engaged in the business of photoplay producing, but there is a greater dearth at this moment for great stars and great names than ever before. While I am in the east I will engage some well-known players for the Lasky organization at Hollywood.

"In this connection I feel that I must pay my unrestricted respects to Geraldine Farrar. Her enthusiasm and striving for the very best in the photoplay has been an uplifting example to all who have come within her direct range, and her influence for better things has had its effect outside even the limits of Hollywood. As for 'Carmen' and the other plays in which she appears as the star, all I can say is 'Wait.' Frankly, I think they are a revelation. No better indorsement of their artistic and dramatic merits is at hand than that they will leave the Lasky studios with Miss Farrar's own mark of approval of every scene and every foot of film. More than that no one could ask."

Mr. Lasky said he thoroughly enjoyed his visit to San Francisco at the recent convention of motion picture exhibitors and he expressed delight at the gracious reception accorded Miss Farrar, Blanche Sweet, Carlyle Blackwell and himself by members of the committee.

After several weeks in the east it is Mr. Lasky's plan to return west again.

J. E. Robin Joins C. A. Baird

JOSEPH E. ROBIN, for a number of years widely known as a projection expert and sales manager, has joined the business staff of the Baird Moving Picture Machine Company, of 24 East Twenty-third street, New York, as general manager of sales.

From an apprentice stage electrician Mr. Robin has worked himself to high positions as electrical engineer and projection specialist. Besides having a high technical knowledge of electricity, chemistry and mechanics, he has a personality that ingratiates him wherever he travels and makes many friends for the company he represents.

Joseph E. Robin.

In his boyhood, Robin was an electrical prodigy. He had a journeyman's knowledge at twelve, but was obliged to take his first job as an apprentice, which was as a stage electrician at the Bon Ton theater in Salt Lake City in 1893. He later held jobs as stage electrician in many cities. This naturally brought him in touch with the motion picture machine when it was first introduced in American theaters. Becoming a motion picture operator was only a step and he has been connected with that branch for fifteen years. Mr. Robin has compiled many standard tables on projection. He is a member of the I. A. T. S. E.

SCREEN CLUB'S REVEL SET FOR SEPTEMBER.

The official name for the stage show to be given by the Screen Club has been decided on by the Board of Governors of the eastern players organization. The occasion will be known as the Screen Club Revel, and will be conducted some time in September. Rehearsals are now progressing, and it is promised that many novelties will be presented for the entertainment of the public. In all probability four shows will be given, a matinee and evening performance in Manhattan and the same in Brooklyn.

TO REFUTE CHARGES AGAINST WOMEN PLAYERS.

To obtain from the men of the motion picture industry a reply to the charges made by a man in Los Angeles recently against the character of screen women, Arthur Leslie has sent a circular letter to all studios requesting signatures to a statement of refutation. By Wednesday Mr. Leslie had received over eight hundred replies, some of them from men prominent in the trade. Many more are expected. When all are in, Mr. Leslie will telegraph a message of denunciation, with the names attached.

SOME REMARKABLE MUTUAL INTERIORS.

Some of the most remarkable interior views of a theater ever taken, showing an enthusiastic audience watching a performance, are shown in "The Girl from His Town," a stirring four-part Mutual Masterpicture, produced by the American Film Company. The scenes represent the interior of the Gaiety Theater of London, England, one of the most famous playhouses in the world. However, despite the remarkable resemblance, they were not taken in the Gaiety, but in the Republic Theater of Los Angeles, Cal.

"HELLO BILL" IS COMPLETED BY KLEINE.

"Hello Bill," that well known, cheerful farce by W. M. Goodhue which was selected by George Kleine as the most fitting vehicle for the premier film appearances of Messrs. Bickel and Watson, has been completed. For the past four weeks the Kleine studios have been the scenes of much activity and much hard work in preparing the big comedy for the market.

Metro's Coming Productions

At Atlantic City Conference of Company Heads President Rowland Announces Quarter's Plans.

PRESIDENT RICHARD A. ROWLAND, of the Metro Pictures Corporation, after a four-day conference at Atlantic City, participated in by the eighteen exchangemen, composing the distributing forces of the organization; the heads of the five producing concerns whose products compose the Metro Program, the official and executive staff of the central office and those of the directors and studio managers who could be spared from their work, announced that plans and arrangements were now complete for the forthcoming Metro quarter. After concentrating for many hours, the various heads outlined a plan of action which, it is believed, will more than sustain the record of his company since its establishment five months ago. Mr. Rowland verifies the following engagements:

Francis X. Bushman in "The Silent Voice."

Mme. Petrova is now a permanent and exclusive member of the Metro staff and will appear solely in productions of the Popular Plays and Players Company, of which L. Lawrence Weber is the acting head. Mme. Petrova will characterize the Metro Program at various intervals, but as nearly as can be adjusted once every three months. Her forthcoming feature will be "Vampire," a five-act drama from her own scenario.

Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow, permanent and long-term members of the Quality Pictures Corporation, headed by Fred J. Balshofer, will feature the Metro roster at intervals of every ten weeks. The next release in which these two estimable stars will be seen is "The Silent Voice," which Charles Frohman produced in its original form. This, the second Quality feature, will see the light of screen day early in September.

Mary Miles Minter, whose work in "Always in the Way" called forth unusual and excellent comment, who was created a star of the speaking stage by reason of her work with the Farnums in "The Littlest Rebel," is now a permanent and exclusive Metro star and will be seen on that program about every fifteen weeks. Her next appearance will be in a most elaborate adaptation of the recently successful novel, "Stork's Nest," which is now in work at the Metro Scenario Department under the supervision of George D. Proctor, newly installed in the capacity of supervisior of scenarios.

Edmund Breese enjoys a rather peculiar distinction in the field of motography in that he has been engaged by the Metro Pictures Corporation for work in productions by the Popular Plays and Players of Robert W. Service's vivid poems of the Alaskan wilds. Mr. Breese scored such phenomenal success in "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" that L. Lawrence Weber purchased the entire Service collection from the publishing concern of Barse and Hopkins. "The Spell of the Yukon" will be the forthcoming Popular Plays and Players-Breese document.

Emily Stevens, niece of Minnie Maddern Fiske and one of the latest recruits from the legitimate drama, recent heroine of the remarkable success "To-Day" and lately seen in "Cora" on the screen, is under a five-year contract with the B. A. Rolfe Photoplay Corporation. At that concern's studio, Sixty-first street and Broadway, she is working with an all-star cast in a picturization of "Destiny," which, when completed, will prove a classical allegory, if the intentions of the producers materialize.

Ann Murdock, recently seen in "A Celebrated Case," is working in the final scenes of "A Royal Family," another Frohman production, while Hamilton Revelle is supporting Miss Stevens in her various screen efforts.

Ralph Herz, the inimitable comedian and actor, begins work August 18 in a big and spectacular production of "The Purple Lady," in which he will be supported by the dainty Lois Meredith. Mr. Herz will be compelled to divide his time between the Rolfe studio and the Maxine Elliott theater, where he is at present playing the star role in "Hands Up."

Henry Kolker, star of numerous Henry W. Savage plays and the direct cause of the remarkable success of "The Great Name," which enjoyed wide popularity two years ago, during its long run in New York, is completing the final stages of "The Bridge," which, when released, will probably be titled with a more appropriate name.

Emmy Wehlen is completing "When a Woman Loves," in which she has the support of Arthur Ashley and a strong cast, while Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow are working at the Hollywood studios of the Quality Company on an eight-reel production of the famous historical play "Richard Carvel."

Mr. Rowland while at Atlantic City proffered a suggestion which the exchangemen and company heads grasped. He fathered the wish that in future, when a prominent stage star was given the leading role in a picture, that a prominent screen star of acknowledged histrionic power be placed opposite, thus securing both screen and stage experience, with the two leading people able to suggest and aid the other as their work progresses, and draws them together in a mutual desire to procure proper effects. Arthur Ashley, working opposite Emmy Wehlen, is rather an experiment. Mr. Ashley bears an enviable reputation as a diligent, ambitious screen star, while Miss Wehlen has been a stage star of standing for seven years. The result is being watched with keen anticipation.

Gail Kane in "Her Great Match," a Forthcoming Metro Release.

At the conclusion of the Atlantic City gathering of Metro clans a vote of confidence and thanks was extended Mr. Rowland and Joseph N. Engel of the parent office for their attention to the affairs of the company and their determined effort since the inception of the enterprise, March 5, of this year.

WHITESIDE TO OPPOSE HIMSELF.

There has been a great deal of talk of late among theatrical managers about the harm which appearances on the screen do to legitimate stars when they go back on the stage with the intention of attracting the dollars of the public. Walker Whiteside, who has always headed his own company on the stage, is going out on the road this fall with the avowed purpose of finding out just how much of truth there is in these contentions.

Last spring Mr. Whiteside appeared for the Cort Film Corporation in a screen version of "The Melting Pot," which has since been sold to independent distributors on a state rights basis. This fall he is going on the road in a new play, "The Ragged Messenger," and says that he is going to invite the unique opposition of his own personality in every town and city in which he plays.

The Feature Has a Future

So Declares Tom Ince in the Article He Had Prepared for Reading at the National Convention—Neither Will Short Film Fail to Find Market.

IN anticipation of being able to accept the invitation of Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of American to address the delegates at the recent convention in San Francisco, Thomas H. Ince, chief producer of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, prepared an article for delivery on Thursday, July 16. Mr. Ince was prevented from going to San Francisco by an unexpected and urgent business summons to another state. The following is in part what he would have said to the assembled exhibitors:

To say that the feature has come to stay would be putting it mildly. Not alone has it come to stay, but it has come to grow even greater in importance, too. You have but to pick up the trade journals and cast an eye at the advertisements appearing therein to learn the truth of what I have said. Page after page is devoted to the exploitation of the feature film. And in the march of events, a comparatively few manufacturing companies are remaining loyal to the one and two-reeler.

That statement necessitates a discussion that is highly material—a discussion of the future status of the smaller films. It is not only my opinion, but the opinion, too, of numerous others with whom I have talked regarding the same subject, that the single and two-reel film will never pass. Both will always find a market. Neither ever will have to go begging for a place in which to show. Neither ever will have to fight to retain popularity with the multitudes of motion picture lovers throughout the country. Neither ever will have to be many times better than either has been within the past year or two. But both—and I say this unequivocally and without fear of contradiction—both will have to bow obedience to the multiple-reel feature, with more complete humility than ever before.

Shorter Film Will Never Lack Market.

I have said that the one and two-reel film will never lack for a market, that they will never have to go begging for a theater, and that they will never have to fight for popularity. Why? you ask. Because motion pictures in a measure may be compared with the so-called legitimate theatrical productions, as the latter were some years ago. The feature picture takes the same rank, when coupled with the single-reel or two-reel film, as the four or five-act play of the footlight realm does, or did, when coupled with the vaudeville program.

There are those among the amusement-seeking people of the world who can afford but a few spare moments for their entertainment. They must go where there is such entertainment as will have a start and a finish. They are not content to pay admission to a theater playing a four or five-act play, when they have but a half hour in which to be refreshed by pleasurable diversion. Urge the necessity of the variety house, where an act lasts from 10 minutes to a half hour.

This identical situation obtains in respect to pictures. Let me give you an illustration. I happened to be on Broadway, in Los Angeles, one day not long ago when two salesgirls from one of the local department stores approached. Obviously, they were intent upon spending the noon recess from their work, by attending a motion picture show. One house was exhibiting a five-reel feature. Another theater, immediately adjoining, was advertising two single-reel films and the same number of two-reel productions. The girls started for the feature house. They had scarcely observed the fact that a five-reel subject was the program, when they stopped, turned about and entered the other theater. "We only have twenty minutes," I heard one say as she passed me, "and, you know, it would be awfully disappointing to have to get up and leave, after seeing only one reel. In this place, we'll at least have time to see a complete picture."

That little incident, in itself, is adamantine proof, I think, that the smaller film production will never have to hunt for a market. Therefore, because it will not have to hunt for a market, it will not have to beg for a theater nor fight for popularity.

Two-Dollar Pictures Will Come.

There has been much discussion, pro and con, of late, over the prospect of "two-dollar movies" and the question propounded appears to be: "Will the public fall for them?" or words to that effect. The fact that the public is eager to spend two dollars a seat to see a film production has been demonstrated. And I feel that there will be no difficulty in demonstrating that the public will continue to spend two dollars a seat to witness drama on the screen.

It will require time and the expenditure of fortunes. But it can and will be done. It will take time to make perfect photoproductions, and money as well. And only perfect productions can possibly convince the public, as a whole, that the sum of two dollars is worth spending for an afternoon or an evening's entertainment.

To this end it is essential that we provide picture plays, such as have never before been provided regularly. In my opinion, there have been perfect photoplays. But they have been comparatively very few. They have lacked the "two-dollar" aspect. They, on the whole, have been unworthy of presentation to the public as a full afternoon or evening's entertainment. And it is that element of worthiness that we must impart to our future features, if we are to expect them to command theatrical prices.

One of the strongest arguments in support of my contention that the feature production is but in its infancy and that it rapidly is progressing to a position that will surpass our greatest "legitimate" productions is the fact that the most illustrious stars of the stage are recognizing the importance of the films. True, they are expensive—these stars—but I have stated that money must be spent, and payrolls constitute part of the expenditure.

For years and years the world has been paying handsome admission prices to see this or that notable actor or actress on the stage. The world has virtually admitted that the possibilities of the camera—of the studio—are vastly greater than those of the stage. Then, why should the world hesitate about offering the same amount of money to see the same stars on the screen?

Screen Gives Wider Field to Stage Stars.

I am a firm believer in the magnetism, the commercial value, of a prominent actor or actress in motion pictures. I am so staunch a believer in that doctrine that every one of the pictures I am making now and intend to make will have a celebrated artist at the head of its cast. And I do not believe only that a star has a commercial value. He has an artistic value to pictures as well. For such of his artistry as found no medium of manifestation on the stage is bound to find it in the studio. The limitless powers of the camera will seek out and give expression to his pantomimic abilities and thus will the drama, on the screen, be elevated to heights that have never been attained by that on the stage.

In producing "An Alien," adapted from "The Sign of the Rose," in which George Beban worked under my direction, I found those things to be true. I had long been an admirer of Mr. Beban's character delineations on the speaking stage. And yet until I saw and observed the very lines in his face, as his emotions dictated their formation—when I saw them on the screen—I never had accorded him the credit that was due.

This, I contend, is applicable also to other wonderful artists of the drama and time will tell if I am correct.

In conclusion, I might sum up my brief remarks by again emphasizing my prediction that the feature photodrama is only just coming into its own; that another year will see it still packing theaters with people who will think nothing of paying heretofore unheard-of prices; that achievements now almost unbelievable will have been accomplished; and that instead of having but a few masterpieces a year, we'll have one every few weeks.

The motion picture industry knows no bounds. That is a statement frequently made, but it cannot be too sincerely repeated. It is not in its infancy, but it is still going to school. And it will not have reached its maturity until my prophesies have been borne out.

Famous Players' President Speaks

In His First Published Personal Message to Exhibitors Adolph Zukor Employs Strong Terms.

IN THE first personal advertisement ever issued by Adolph Zukor since the organization of the Famous Players Film Co., the president of that concern in a message to exhibitors uses the strongest terms he has ever employed over his signature. He reviews the progress of the Famous Players during the three years of its existence and the influence this organization has brought upon the development of the feature branch of the film industry.

Mr. Zukor strongly remarks that it requires more than merely a star or play to produce a meritorious feature subject, and although the major portion of this personal statement is intended to induce exhibitors to book the Paramount program, it nevertheless bears a distinct relation to feature conditions in general. Mr. Zukor makes the end of the first and the inception of the second Paramount year the motif of his message. He recapitulates in chronological form the epochal events that represent feature industry and emphasizes the assertion that the principles of merit, service and co-operation, to which the Paramount organization and its allied producers are pledged, will be more assiduously than ever continued in the future. Although referring to the consistent strength of the Paramount program for the past year, Mr. Zukor firmly states that diligent plans are now being made by all the factors of the Paramount allied organizations to surpass in every manner the value and distinction of last year's program. In characteristic fashion he says: "We do not ask you to base your faith in our merit upon promises, but upon our achievement."

In one part of his signed advertisement he lauds the able producing management of Daniel Frohman and Edwin S. Porter, and the masterly efforts of Hugh Ford, to which he ascribes the credit for the uninterrupted, artistic standard of the Famous Players.

Mr. Zukor's first personal message to exhibitors will undoubtedly be welcomed by them, and its sincerity and blunt strength beyond doubt will be accepted by them as an evidence of his well-formulated convictions.

Among Denver Picture Men

World Man Says Hello to a Number of Exhibitors and Exchangemen in the Mile High City.

New York, N. Y.

SEVEN picture theaters on two blocks is packing 'em in pretty thick, yet that is the situation on Curtis street, between Sixteenth and Eighteenth streets, Denver. There is an eighth building. The seating capacity of these is, approximately: Paris, 2,300; Iris, 2,000; Empress, 1,800; Iris, 1,500; Princess, 1,300; Plaza, 1,000; Colonial, 440. The new house will have about 1,200 seats. Several of these theaters will rank with the best, both as to structure and program, but with three exceptions the admission is 5 cents. It does seem too bad the exhibitors of this splendid city cannot get together and secure in return for the entertainment they provide a more adequate compensation.

The situation in the mountain city must be different from what obtains in Brooklyn. The other night we visited an airdome in our neighborhood, a community of the common, ordinary sort. Over the box office was a sign stating that the night in question was one of the three in a week known as "feature night," and that the admission accordingly was 15 cents. Although the hour was 9 the house was well filled. The "feature" was months old; the music was furnished by a piano; the projection was not worthy of the name. When one of the attendants was asked how it was possible under such circumstances to put over the advanced price he replied confidently: "Easy enough; nobody complains."

* * *

One of the first Denverites met was H. E. Ellison, manager of the Princess theater. Mr. Ellison very kindly gave much of his time in escorting the World man about the various film offices or pointing out the shortest route to reach them. Mr. Ellison is a firm believer in adequate prices of admission. The Princess charges 10 cents in the afternoons and 10 and 15 cents at night. Paramount service is used.

* * *

There was a pleasant call on F. W. White, the veteran dramatic critic of the Denver Post. While Mr. White in no measure abates his adherence to the spoken drama, he is frank to admit the popularity of the motion picture and accordingly devotes considerable attention to screen doings. He has personally reviewed many of the larger subjects.

* * *

W. E. Knotts, representing in the Denver exchange territory the World Film Corporation and Shubert and Brady attractions, said that business in his jurisdiction was in particularly good shape. Just at the time he was making arrangements for the distribution of the forthcoming weekly news film.

* * *

Harry Lustig has been in Denver nine years and with the Mutual Film Corporation three years, and the last as manager. Mr. Lustig said that Denver was the last city to take up features, and that while the territory as a rule is one in which the regular program is still strongly intrenched, exhibitors take to features sometimes to save themselves. Although the Mutual has a good-sized office Mr. Lustig said the exchange would shortly be compelled to remove to larger quarters, which would be on the ground floor. W. S. Rand, outside representative of Mutual, with headquarters in Salt Lake City, was in town. Mr. Rand covers all the Northwest and West outside of California. He said business has held right up to the top notch in spite of competition.

* * *

The General Film Company has spacious offices on a ground floor, the quarters having a depth of about 125 feet. The executive offices are in front. The poster department and the film vault are of unusual dimensions. Walter Cree is the manager. He has been with the General Flm from the beginning, entering its employ in New Orleans.

* * *

"Muriel Lee," the pen name of Mrs. Elsasser, was busy on the day of the initial appearance in the Denver Times of the motion picture section which she is editing. We met Mrs. Elsasser in the office of the Notable. She said the Times intended to print reviews of pictures and all news of interest to picturegoers—and that the policy had been adopted not necessarily with an eye to obtaining advertising but rather to provide matter covering a subject with which so many of its readers are concerned.

* * *

M. H. Cohn is manager of the Notable's Denver office. The Notable, in Denver, as in Salt Lake, is the distributor of the Paramount program. It also represents Life Photo productions. Among the features on the shelves of the exchange are "The Eternal City," "Hypocrites," and Aylesworth's Wild Animal pictures. "Les Miserables" has had an excellent run.

* * *

In the office of the General Film we met D. L. Lehrburger of the Mascot Theater.

* * *

At the offices of the Universal Film and Supply Company, successors to the William H. Swanson Film Company, we met H. T. Nolan, manager, and C. A. Clegg, special representative of the home office in New York. Mr. Nolan said the fall trade usually starts around the end of July; he added that he had taken in $200 in new business that very day. Denver, Mr. Nolan said, is really the big end of the jurisdiction of the city exchanges, the other chief towns being Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Ogden, Salt Lake and Butte. The business in some of the smaller towns had been affected by the removal of the soldiers.

* * *

While in Denver we heard of how one bright young newspaper man had landed in a good place in the picture business. S. Barrett McCormick, who had been at one time connected with the Mutual office in the Masterpicture department, had for some months been writing scenarios, which he submitted to a local picture exhibitor for inspection and advice. The friend suggested that he send them to Tom Ince, and Mr. McCormick did so. After the receipt of the third or fourth scenario there was a bit of telegraphic correspondence which resulted in the sudden boarding of a train for Los Angeles by the young Denverite. He had a job and a good one, in the scenario department at Inceville.

* * *

G. H. Greaves, secretary of the Moore-Greaves Amusement Company, said there were about thirty theaters in Denver.

* * *

While in Denver we heard that a firm of local brokers had an option on Indianapolis property and were planning the erection of a theater thereon, the cost of which would be in the neighborhood of $200,000. The men behind the transaction were said to be of the highest standing. It was the intention to raise the first half of the money in Denver and the remainder in Indianapolis.

* * *

It was about 11.20 when we dropped in at the Isis to look up Samuel Baxter, who was installing a Hope-Jones unit orchestra. At that time L. S. Lockwood of Tonawanda, N. Y., began operations with his assistants. The work was nearing completion and Mr. Lockwood sat at the keys of the instrument, which is the largest ever made by his company, trying out the different factors of the organ. There was no chance of going to bed while Lockwood was at the board—it was altogether too interesting and too entertaining. It is said that the cost of the instrument installed will be close to $50,000. Surely it is a great and a splendid organ.

BLAISDELL.

AMERICAN INCREASES BEAUTY RELEASES.

Hereafter the American Film Company, Inc., will release two of its famous American Beauty films each week. Heretofore one Beauty release has been made weekly. The decision to make two Beauty releases each week has just been reached. "Love and Labor" is the title of the extra Beauty film, which will be issued August 14.

"Love and Labor" is a comedy drama, featuring John Steppling and Beatrice Van. It is highly amusing. Exhibitors will hail with delight the announcement that hereafter there are to be two Beauty releases each week. This brand of the American Film Company, Inc., output always has enjoyed wide popularity among fans.

INJUNCTION REFUSED LASKY AGAINST CROMELIN.

Judge Hendrick in the Supreme Court, Part One, has just handed down an opinion refusing to grant the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company an injunction and an accounting against Paul H. Cromelin, trading as Cosmofotofilm Company, because of the marketing of a film entitled "The Victoria Cross."

O. E. GOEBEL TO REMAIN EAST.

O. E. Goebel, who contributes the Premier brand of pictures to the Standard Program, is establishing offices in New York City, where he will conduct the business affairs of his company instead of in Los Angeles as he has done in the past. The Premier studio is located in Santa Paula, California, and has until recently been producing two reel dramas for release on the United Program.

Denies India is Backward

J. F. Madan, Well-Known Exhibitor, Records His Dissent from the Views of J. D. Williams and Offers Evidence.

A MOST interesting communication, full of solid information, has reached the Moving Picture World from Calcutta. The writer, J. F. Madan, who owns a number of motion picture theaters and is well known throughout India, takes exception to some statements made to a representative of the Moving Picture World by J. D. Williams, now on a trip to Australia in connection with enterprises of the World Film Corporation. Mr. Madan writes as follows:

To the Editor of the Moving Picture World:

I have read with great interest the review given in your issue of Feb. 27, 1915, by John D. Williams about the motion picture industry in India. As I am myself the sole proprietor of the Elphinstone Picture Palace, Calcutta, I have no intention of criticising the views of Mr. Williams. If India is "virgin teritory" and susceptible of great moving picture development let Mr. Williams explore the moving picture business, open various kinema circuits and "reap the benefits of the harvest."

Mr. Williams writes: "At present the films used in the motion picture houses of the Far East are with but very few exceptions the refuse, if I may say so, of the London market." From this it seems that he has visited but few of the first class kinema shows in the Far East. In support of my statement I herewith give below the names of exclusive films shown in India during the last year or two. "Spartacus," "House of Temperley," "England's Menace," "By the Cross," "The Sign of the Cross" (Famous Players), "Mary Pickford Series," "Anthony and Cleopatra," "The Last Days of Pompeii," Forbes Robertson's "Hamlet," Barkers "Life of Queen Victoria," Cines' "Quo Vadis," "Sherlock Holmes" series, Ambrosio's "The Slave of Carthage," "The Middleman," "Nero and Aggripina," Barker's "East Lynne," "The Lights o' London," "The Bible," "Joan of Arc," "The Million Dollar Mystery," Lawson's "Humanity," and Charles Hawtrey's "A Message from Mars," besides all the latest patriotic war dramas issued by the well know firm of Messrs. Barker and other film manufacturers.

The above is only a few of the many masterpieces secured on exclusive basis for India, Burma and Ceylon. Among the ordinary films it will be very interesting for Mr. Williams to know that films like "Protea," "Zigomar," "Lucille Love," "Trey o' Hearts," "The Master Key," are exhibited the same day they reach India. For your information I may point out that three new copies of the great serial film "The Master Key" will reach Bombay on June 12 and I myself am expecting a new copy of the same in Calcutta on the 14th, and we all will exhibit the same films on the same day the English mail arrives. These are not second-hand or show-room copies, but brand new ones. Besides this the well known firm of Messrs. Pathe Freres has got a hiring department in Bombay from which place they supply all the latest films on hire to India and Burma. Nearly all the big Pathe productions are sent through the Bombay Branch office to India and in some cases the films are shown simultaneously in India and the United Kingdom. Itala's "Cabiria," Cine's "Julius Caesar," and Barker's "Jane Short," have already been booked. All these facts will prove that India is not so backward as Mr. Williams writes nor are we showing the "junk" of the London market. Of course there may be a show or two which may be using the "junk," but this is the case all over the world.

Mr. Williams further writes: "When I get back there to work this territory I will immediately establish a school for operators. This will mean an immense saving of films to begin with, because at present the 'junk' does not last any time at all." From the above I may say that Mr. Williams is under a misapprehension if he thinks there is a scarcity of well trained bioscope operators. But this is not the case in India, as any amount of local talent can be had. If Mr. Williams is interested in improving the "Wear and tear" of the "junk," as he suggests, then it is all very good of him to open a school for operators. In passing it may interest you to know that there is yet a place for bioscope cameramen possessing perfect knowledge of the handling of the kinema camera in the Far East. As for projection his writing is most surprising to me when he says: "Very often it takes a great effort of the eye to see just what is happening on the screen." Though we do not use daylight screens, our projection in India of pictures are as bright as daylight and as steady as rock.

Mr. Williams also writes: "In Calcutta, for instance, the price of admission in the one good motion picture theater is 3 rupees for the best seats, and 3 rupees are about a dollar in American money. The average price of admission is one-half of a rupee, which is about 16 cents in our money. There are no daily changes and the theaters are crowded all the time." In this respect I may say it will not pay any one to charge for the best seats (sofa seats) under 3 rupees for the simple reason that except Pathes all the Masterpieces we have to buy outright after paying very heavy royalty. I generally give two changes of program per week, each program consisting of seven to eight thousand feet. I have also made arrangements for the exhibition of Kinemacolor with Charles Urban and show one or two spools a week, and a special expert Kinemacolor operator, Mr. Wark, who had also the good opportunity to instruct the Kinemacolor exploitation in America, was engaged to superintend the perfect manipulation of the Kinemacolor apparatus. It was his opinion that the projection of pictures was as good and perfect as in the Scala theater, London. Thus you will see that things are not done in a half-hearted way in India and the cinema public get a fair return for their money. Moreover, I have standing orders with Messrs. Pathe for their Animated Gazette and all topical films they issue, and I have standing orders with my London agent to send weekly the Topical Budget and Gaumont's Graphic. All the topicals are shown only at Calcutta (Bombay showmen have their own arrangements) for one week, and after they are shown at Calcutta they are quite useless, as in the interior the showmen would not have topical films on hire at any price, as the Indians do not care much for such films. The question now comes of Pathe films on hire. It is true that Pathe has got its own hiring department, but it has to charge fashionable amounts as hire for its film. As it has not even half a dozen circuits, it depends mostly on Calcutta and Bombay, as other minor shows pay very little hire, hence the hire charged for Calcutta and Bombay is very stiff. The lowest rent of a Bioscope theater is £100 per menseum. The Bandmann cinema and variety company pay £200 per menseum. The charge of the electric current is 6d. per unit net. In Calcutta two shows are given daily and in Bombay three, and not continuous shows from 12 noon. From this Mr. Williams will understand that it will not pay me to charge under 3 rupees for the sofa seats. Mr. Williams also writes: "Theaters are crowded daily." If that be so I would like to know the theaters that "reap such a good harvest." Mr. Williams further adds: "In order to attract the lower castes I propose to take the price of admission as low as 4 and 8 cents;" but, Mr. Editor, please note that in Bombay with one exception all the kinema theaters have the prices of admission as 4 cents; also in Madras, and hence this will not be a new venture and an extra drawing power in India. Furthermore, I would like to know from which place Mr. Williams bought the chicken for 3 cents, as the cheapest that we pay for the smallest chicken is 9 cents. In conclusion I sincerely hope that Mr. Williams will not think that because he is coming to India I am writing this to frighten him, as I am sure ere this reaches you Mr. Williams has already left America for India. But I think your readers should know that after all India is not so backward in the kinema line as Mr. Williams writes.

J. F. MADAN,
Proprietor Elphinstone Bioscope Company.

STANDARD PROGRAM REVIVES STATE RIGHTS.

With independent exchanges in every important territory placed in a position to offer a regular program of one, two and three reel subjects in addition to their feature offerings, a marked impetus to states rights buying and selling is promised for the near future.

The policy of the Standard Photoplay Distributors, Inc., is one which encourages independence on the part of the exchanges handling its program. Every exchange which has signed the Standard contract and almost every territory is now "tied up", was an independent exchange, firmly established and operating upon its own capital. With the signing of the papers which gave them the Standard Program for their several territories, these exchanges retained complete independence of the Standard Photoplay Distributors, Inc., and merely agreed to buy the Standard Program releases in exchange for the exclusive rights to them for their district.

Miss Farrar at the Exposition.
Left to right: Cecil B. De Mille, Geraldine Farrar, Jesse L. Lasky, W. W. Hodkinson, Morris Gest.

Wilk Starts Authors' Agency

World Film Publicity Expert Resigns to Conduct Business for Photoplay Writers—Original Work by Big Men, His Aim.

BELIEVING that the time has come for the launching of an agency which will bring our foremost fiction writers into closer relations with the big producing companies, Jacob Wilk, publicity director for the World Film Corporation since that concern became an important factor in the film market, has resigned that he may devote all of his time to the management of the Authors Associated Agency, Inc., with offices in the Longacre Building, New York. Percy Heath, for many years a press representative in the theatrical field and for some time head of Henry W. Savage's publicity department, has stepped into the position vacated by Mr. Wilk.

Jacob Wilk.

The Authors Associated Agency was inspired by a realization of the need for the betterment of the scenarios of feature pictures by interesting men of large capacity in writing directly for the screen, instead of merely selling the picture rights to works primarily devised for presentation on the stage, or in novel form. Whereas the past year has been marked by many adaptations of plays and novels, Mr. Wilk believes that the coming twelve months will see a new phase in photoplay writing, in which the rewards will be sufficient to induce men of national reputation to write dramas and comedies for screen production.

"Heretofore," said Mr. Wilk, in speaking of the aims of the agency, "producers have been content to pay for names with advertising value—names of plays and of authors—and very often they have received little else. Frequently the works purchased have contained a minimum of real motion picture material, and dependence has been placed on scenario writers to amplify the story into a five-reel photoplay. The completed product often presents so much that is foreign to the original that an author may be pardoned if he fails to recognize his own work. The picturization of stage plays is all right enough as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough for an art that has revealed so many possibilities.

"A great art never grew by merely reflecting some other art. We have the best actors in the country; we have reached technical excellence in matters of production, and now we are getting fiction writers of the caliber needed. In the past few months I have talked to many authors who a year ago scoffed at writing directly for the screen. They said there was nothing in it, that prices were too low and that it paid better to write for another medium and then sell the picture rights.

"I know now that a number of these same men are ready to write first for the screen and make secondary the novelization of their stories. The Authors Associated Agency is going to bring these men in touch with producers who realize the great need for giving their expensive actors and directors stories of real significance. Instead of buying a name and then paying a staff scenario man to write the story, the producers will be getting the actual output of an author of acknowledged ability.

"In the long run it will be cheaper and the results will be incomparably better. Only recently have established fiction writers become convinced that it is worth while for them to study the requirements of the screen, to master the technique of photoplay writing as they have mastered other forms. When these men have made themselves familiar with the new medium, the stories will be consistently on a par with the other branches of the art.

"To the best of my belief, the Authors Associated Agency is the first concern devoted to the interests of photoplay authors. It is thoroughly systematized to prevent delays in handling manuscripts and to assure fair treatment for all concerned. In addition to securing the original works of writers, we are dealing with publishers for the rights to books and with those who control stage successes."

During his connection with William A. Brady's press department and as director of the World Film Corporation's extensive publicity Mr. Wilk has established a reputation for businesslike methods that should stand him in good stead in his new venture. And of equal importance in an undertaking of this kind is Mr. Wilk's thorough literary education. At the University of Minnesota he specialized in English and after being graduated with high honors was appointed assistant instructor of English. The head of the Authors Associated Agency knows the classics and has kept in close touch with modern tendencies in literature. He is personally acquainted with practically all of the prominent playwrights in America.

Horsley Off of General Program

David Horsley Says That All His Releasing in the Future Will Be Through Mutual.

THE last David Horsley production to go through the General Film program was released Thursday, August 5. Mr. Horsley will no longer be associated with the MinA brand or with any other product marketed through the General. To explain his position Mr. Horsley sent out the following statement through his Bayonne offices:

"While I was proud and gratified over the fact that I was enabled to release my output through the General Film program; the first and only time an independent manufacturer obtained a distribution of his product through the licensed exchanges, I found that because of the multiplicity of reels offered that I could be afforded only a limited market. This, too, in spite of the fact that the MinA comedies, as originated by me, had set a new standard in comedy production and were in popular favor with exhibitors.

"For this reason I canceled of my own volition the contract I held and entered into a new one with the Mutual Film Corporation, into which all of my producing strength is thrown. Through the Mutual I am assured a wider market for my releases than I could have hoped to obtain by my former arrangement.

"I will continue the production of one-reel comedies for the Mutual under the brand name of Cub Comedies. These pictures will be directed by Milton H. Fahrney and will feature George Ovey, who has been called 'the funniest man in America,' both of whom were in a measure responsible for the success of the MinA releases.

"Whatever disposition is made of the brand name MinA after the release of August 5 I will have no association with it, or with any productions distributed through the General's offices after that date."

MISS CLAIRE DRAWS ON SCREEN AND STAGE.

Following the widespread controversy in theatrical circles as to the relative value of stars of the stage before and after they appear in photodrama productions, a specific case illustrating the stand which motion picture managers have taken that the popularity of stars is increased by entering the picture field took place on Broadway, New York, last week.

Miss Ina Claire, who is the star of "Ziegfeld's Follies" at the New Amsterdam theater, also made her appearance as the star in the Lasky Feature Play Company's production "The Puppet Crown" at the Broadway theater. These two theaters were within a block of each other, the New Amsterdam theater being situated on Forty-second street and the Broadway on the great thoroughfare of that name.

If the argument of the legitimate managers proved true the attendance at "Ziegfeld's Follies" during the week would have been smaller because the public would have seen Miss Claire for a less admission charge in motion pictures at the Broadway theater. But there was no such falling away of attendance; in fact, the audiences were as big as ever. And at the Broadway theater this big playhouse was filled afternoons and evenings by photoplay "fans" eager to see Miss Claire and Carlyle Blackwell in the same production.

EDISON TO MAKE "THE CAT'S PAW."

Thomas A. Edison, Inc., announces that it has secured the rights to William Hamilton Osborne's famous novel, "The Cat's Paw." Work on the big production is already under way with a carefully selected cast of Broadway players. The production will be released through the various offices of the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service. The first Edison Feature to be handled by the new service is Mrs. Fiske in "Vanity Fair" for release September 8.

Trade Holiday Appeals to Vitagraph

Big Brooklyn Company Will Aid in Celebrating the New York Exhibitors' Field Day at Brighton Beach, August 21.

IF EVERY film manufacturing company around Greater New York comes to the front with the same amount of ginger that has been displayed by the entire Vitagraph aggregation in the Gala Carnival and Field Day to be given by the New York Exhibitors' at Brighton Beach, August 21, it will be one of the most successful trade gatherings ever held in the motion picture business.

Joe Humphreys,
Master of Ceremonies.

The New York exhibitors are more than pleased with the general interest that has been shown, particularly on the part of the photoplayers, most of whom seem to have some athletic ability that has heretofore been bottled up. Without going outside of the profession it will be possible to find entries for every event that has been decided upon. The idea of making this field day a general holiday in the film trade is being received with favor everywhere. The only good argument against it is the fact that some of the directors have scenes which they wish to finish on Saturday. This is an excuse that can be applied to any business, so it does not go with the exhibitors. Their argument is: Let the directors work overtime on Friday and finish up the scenes, which is entirely possible. It should be remembered that it is all for a good cause, namely, to fight the battles of the motion picture trade against its ever active enemies.

A Contest in Real Film Making.

This is a most extraordinary contest and absolutely new. Five or six different comedy scenarios will be transformed into pictures in a remarkably short space of time. These scenarios are to be furnished by writers in competition. From all scenarios received the best six will be selected and prizes awarded the winners. The scenes will be taken right on the grounds and the picture directed by six directors and all at the same time. The films will be developed, printed and ready to show in the evening between dances and the public will decide which is the best. The director of the one so adjudged will receive a handsome prize. Scenario writers who enter this contest must produce a comedy that will film to not more than six hundred feet and with not more than three interiors, preferably two, but with as many exteriors as may be expedient, including in such exteriors one or two scenes for which the throng on the grounds must be used.

Program Taking Definite Shape.

Many additions have been made to the list of entries during the past week. Quite a number of film favorites are entered in the women's and men's swimming races, with other entries to follow. Teams have been selected to represent the Vitagraph, Universal and World players in the tug of war. A large number of names have also been entered for the horseback races for both men and women.

"ELAINE" ACTOR INJURED.

Paul Everton, who is one of the "Romance of Elaine" company at Ithaca, is confined to his bed as the result of an accident incurred in filming a scene at the Triphammer Gorge. The Pathe-Wharton actor fell over a cliff and suffered a painful injury to one of his legs. It was intended that he should fall at a place where there was only a six-foot drop but he accidentally picked out the wrong spot and fell twenty-five feet instead.

New Kriterion Company

Lee Sonneborn and S. L. Newman are Chief Factors in Reorganized Concern—Program Ready September 1.

UNDER the name of Kriterion Sales Corporation, in which Lee Sonneborn of Baltimore and S. L. Newman of New York City will be the chief factors, some of the producing companies and the best of the exchanges that comprise the old Kriterion company will be revived and supplemented for the manufacturing and distribution of a full program that probably will be ready for exhibitors about September 1st, according to a statement by Mr. Newman this week. The old Kriterion headquarters on the sixth floor of the Mecca building, 1660 Broadway, New York, will be retained.

Incorporation papers are being prepared at the present time and until they have been filed Mr. Newman said that he would not be ready to give out the full plans of the new organization. This much, however, is certain. Messrs. Sonneborn and Newman will fill the chief executive positions. Approximately twenty exchanges will be opened to cover every section of the country and there will be a varied program, including dramas and comedies of all lengths. The Kriterion Sales Corporation has enough films on its shelves now to supply a program for eleven weeks.

Mr. Newman said that the business will be conducted on sound business principles and that it will be to a large degree co-operative in furthering the interests of manufacturer, exchange man and exhibitor. "We realize the absolute necessity of good pictures," he said, "and our contracts are drawn with a view to eliminating all subjects that do not come up to the required standard." Some exchange territory remains open and this will be awarded to the first responsible men who apply.

Mr. Sonneborn is a member of the firm of L. Sonneborn & Co., Baltimore, and for several years has been connected with motion pictures, in the producing and exchange ends. Mr. Newman is head of the company of Reinthal & Newman, large art publishers in New York.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week at the New York Motion Picture Houses.

Vitagraph Theater Bill.

"From Out of the Big Snows," a tale of the Canadian Northwest, is being presented at the Vitagraph Theater this week. The story tells of an adventurer who, because of an accident, is compelled to remain in the cabin of the local doctor. During the time of his recovery he meets an attractive girl of the dance hall and becomes her most ardent admirer, thereby arousing the enmity of a half breed trader. The half breed induces the adventurer to accompany him on a hunting trip, and overpowering him while they are resting in a lonely hut, binds him to a tree and leaves him to the cold and the wolves. He is again rescued by the doctor, and finally kills his enemy, who tries to shoot from ambush. The cast includes James Morrison, Dorothy Kelly, George Cooper and Donald Hall. In the fourteenth chapter of the Vitagraph photoplay, "The Goddess," Tommy takes Celestia back to the cave that she was taught to believe was heaven, and dispells her illusion and she becomes a normal, lovable maiden. Maurice Costello and Leah Baird are seen in a domestic drama, "The Dawn of Understanding"; players from the Western Vitagraph company present an amusing story in which a country girl plays hide and seek with a city man; and Harry Davenport and Rose Tapley introduce the latest Jarr Family troubles in "Mrs. Jarr and the Society Circus."

Blanche Sweet at the Strand.

"The Secret Orchard," a picturization of the celebrated novel, is the leading feature at the Strand Theater this week. The subect makes an interesting photoplay, and Blanche Sweet, as the heroine, gives one of her pleasing impersonations. The Strand Topical Review, Travel and Educational pictures, new comedies and an excellent musical program, which includes Allan Turner and Grace Hoffman, complete the entertainment.

Pauline Frederick at the Broadway.

"Sold," a five-part drama, produced by the Famous Players Company, and featuring Pauline Frederick, heads the program at the Broadway Theater. The new Chaplin comedy, "The Bank," is also one of the features. Other numbers are the Broadway Animated News, South American Travel Pictures, and one-reel comedies.

The Feature in Small Towns

Queen Theater of Navasota, Tex., Takes in $212 on One Day's Showing of "Graustark."

SPEAKING on the subject of features, Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the V-L-S-E, says: "The experiences of a little theater in a small Texas town with a Big Four feature shows the bearing on the industry of the multiple reel picture play from a new angle, and a study of this case gives rise to the question of whether the feature will not make paying propositions of many small houses that are now doing little better than paying expenses."

In this respect the results attending the exhibition of a V-L-S-E feature in a small town in the Middle West is interesting in its bearing on the relations of the big feature to the house with a small seating capacity.

In Navasota, Tex., a town of 3,000 population, the Queen Theater, with a seating capacity of only 275, booked the Big Four feature "Graustark," paying a high rental for it. Following the advice of C. A. Meade, the V-L-S-E- representative in Texas, the manager of the Queen Theater advertised the attraction in the local newspapers and raised his admission prices to 20c and 25c, with the result that on the very first day of its showing the box office receipts totaled $212. This certainly proves that big features can be profitably shown in small theaters, if the handicap of limited seating capacity is offset by higher admission prices.

This case conclusively proves that features can be shown in any class of theatre; and that the problem of offsetting the handicap of limited seating capacity may be solved by the simple combination of strong features, proper advertising and increased admission prices.

In the small towns of the country where the luxury of a big theater is unknown, the introduction of big features will unquestionably give an added impetus to the popularity of motion picture entertainment, and for the privilege of seeing the big feature productions of the great producing companies, the people of these towns will undoubtedly give the theater their support to the extent of paying increased admission prices.

Miss Rockwell With Knickerbocker

FLORENCE ROCKWELL has signed with Knickerbocker Star Features to appear in a three-reel release. Miss Rockwell is one of the most widely known and versatile players on the American stage. She created the principal roles in Klaw & Erlanger's great success, "The Round-Up," "The Barrier" and "Mills of the Gods," and she has played opposite Henry Miller, Richard Mansfield and Robert Mantell in a variety of leading parts. Her Juliet and Ophelia, Nora in "A Doll's House" Hester Prynne in "The Scarlet Letter" and the heroine in the all-star cast of "Fine Feathers" are noteworthy among her recent performances.

Florence Rockwell.

Miss Rockwell has been on the stage since childhood and is popular in every city in the United States. Her last appearance in New York was five weeks ago as a headliner at the Palace theater, when she made a personal success in the dual role of a rich girl and a beggar girl in a sketch called "Her Awakening."

Miss Rockwell will appear in the release of September 1.

LINCOLN CYCLE INTERESTS A GOVERNOR.

One of the many notables throughout the country who have expressed themselves in unquestioned approval of the Lincoln Cycle now being issued by the Charter Features Corporation, is Governor Ferris, of Michigan.

Irene Fenwick

FILM men privileged to witness advance showings of George Kleine's feature, "The Woman Next Door," are loud in their praise of the work of Irene Fenwick in the role of Jenny Gay. This is Miss Fenwick's third picture following her premier appearance in "The Commuters," and later her splendid delineations of the spendthrift wife in "The Spendthrift."

Miss Fenwick, who saw a motion picture camera for the first time under George Kleine's direction in "The Commuters," has given one of the rarest and most beautiful examples of character portrayal in her latest picture, "The Woman Next Door." The gentle, timid pathetic figure of Jenny Gay, socially ostracized by the village folk and persecuted to the point of desperation, has given Miss Fenwick a role exactly suited to her temperament and remarkable talents. Careful direction and the experience of the last few months, coupled with her native capabilities, have already made a notable film actress of the former dainty star of "The Song of Songs."

Irene Fenwick.

"I studied picture work as earnestly as I ever studied a stage script," said Miss Fenwick in response to the congratulations that showered upon her after a review of the first finished print. "Many things, little in themselves, but vital in the aggregate, constitute success or failure in this work. Little mannerisms, such as how to carry the head, move the hands, enter and exit properly, are immense factors whose importance grows with me every day. On the speaking stage a gesture synchronizes with the voice and the two are blended into the emotion to be portrayed. It required some time for me to fully appreciate that, as constant stage rehearsals eventually make the combination an unconscious act."

FUNERAL OF SAMUEL LONG.

The funeral of Samuel Long, late president of the Kalem Company, whose death was noted in last week's issue of the Moving Picture World, was held at his late home, the Clarendon Apartments, 86 Riverside Drive, at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of Friday, July 30. The Episcopal service was read by the Rev. Dr. Alexander Hensley of Lambertsville, N. J. The services were attended by a large number of the friends of Mr. Long, including his associates in the Kalem company. Among these were J. J. Kennedy of the Biograph and General Film companies, George Kleine, C. H. Wilson of the Edison Company, of Orange, N. J.; George K. Spoor of Essanay, H. M. Marvin of the Biograph, J. E. Berst, general manager of the Selig company; Ira M. Lowry and Ferd Singhi of the Lubin company of Philadelphia, William W. Hodkinson, president of Paramount, James L. Hoff of the Moving Picture World, Albert E. Smith of Vitagraph, and Paul Melies.

The Kalem Company was represented by Frank J. Marion, long time partner of Mr. Long; William Wright, and the heads of all departments. Also present from the Eastern Kodak Company were Schuyler Colfax of Rochester, and Mr. Snow, manager of the New York office.

The floral tributes from the members of Mr. Long's family and his friends and business associates were many and beautiful. The big room in which the services were held was literally packed with the offerings. Interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery, New York City.

J. W. BINDER RETURNS FROM CONVENTION.

Jacob W. Binder, of the National Board of Censorship, who during his trip to the Pacific Coast was invited to address the delegates of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, in session at San Francisco, has returned to New York. Mr. Binder was accompanied by Mrs. Binder.

Gilday Talks to Ad Men

Manager of Kansas City Picture House Tells How Willis Wood Theater Was Popularized.

AT the regular dinner of the Ad Club of Kansas City, on July 26, the stated speaker was Joseph H. Gilday, manager of the Willis Wood theater. Mr. Gilday said in part:

"I have been asked by a member of your club to give a few facts concerning the methods used by the management of the Willis Wood theater, which contributed mostly to the success of our enterprise.

"It is well known that for some years past the beautiful Willis Wood theater, which opened about fifteen years ago as the highest class place of amusement in the west, had retrograded to the very dregs of failure. The obituary was written in the season of 1913-14 when the 'Smoke If You Like' burlesque reduced to ashes in the public minds.

"In looking over the ruins H. P. Lappe conceived the idea that Kansas City would support this theater as a photoplay house, if it were placed on a pedestal a little higher than the citizens were accustomed to seeing. With this idea in view he promptly secured the lease on the theater. This action was taken against the advice of his very best friends and advisors.

"A partnership with H. F. Tighe, a man who had no experience in the amusement field, but who had an abundance of confidence in Mr. Lappe's ability to succeed in such an enterprise, was formed under the name of the Lappe-Tighe Amusement Company, with myself as head janitor. The ruins were cleaned away, and on the ashes of the old Willis Wood there was built the finest palace of photoplay amusement in America today.

"As the work of remodeling and rebuilding progressed in the summer of 1914 people began to inquire 'What are they doing with the poor old Willis Wood?' When told a picture show was to be opened there they went away with a look of pity on their faces. For picture shows at that time were only known as a drop-in place, to kill a short time or a quiet spot to sleep. On the morning of October 10, Kansas City was staggered with a full-page newspaper announcement that the Willis Wood had arisen as a photoplay house with 25 cents top prices. The wise ones again shook their heads and said people will never pay twenty-five cents for moving pictures. On our opening week the house could not accommodate all that sought admission, and we were forced to extend the engagement of our opening picture for a second week—the picture was Annette Kellermann.

"I believe I can make the statement without fear of contradiction that we were the first exclusive picture house in the United States that had used a full page of newspaper space. As time passed on we hammered away with liberal newspaper publicity, and many a morning Kansas City woke up with a half page ad on the Willis Wood staring them in the face. A large portion of the credit for our substantial and encouraging start is due to newspaper advertising. As we progressed it became apparent to us that half page ads might become stale, so we cast about for some other idea. We were satisfied that while the people of Kansas City had responded generously to our appeal through newspaper advertisement for their patronage, there were still a large number of people who were not aware of the fact that the Willis Wood had arisen.

"We discovered the fact that there was such a thing as 'art in advertising.' It had become apparent to us that large ads in newspapers could be made more effectual and bring better returns if presented in a mort artistic manner than we were doing in our crude way. So we engaged an advertising firm. Presently our newspaper ads assumed a dressy appearance, entirely within keeping with the class of entertainment we were giving. Early in January this year we contracted for a number of de luxe illuminated painted bill boards with a large oval picture of the Willis Wood in one corner and a space announcing the fact that photoplays were property presented. Panels stretched across the bottom of the boards announced our current attractions. In this new sensational way of picture show advertising the Willis Wood again took the initiative as we were the first picture house in the United States to use de luxe billboards. We found this method of advertising very remunerative and received much notice in trade papers throughout the country, together with pictures of our billboads.

"In studying various other methods of directing the Willis Wood to the notice of the ladies of Kansas City, we started a personal letter campaign, using the blue book as our guide to make our appeal to ladies to entertain their friends, clubs or other social gatherings at our theater, emphasizing the fact that we had a large reception room and that special reservations would be made for them. We found that this idea contributed considerably to interest the fair sex in our theater both directly and indirectly. At the present time we are working on all auto owners of both Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kans., and all of Jackson County outside of Kansas City, Mo., in a personal letter campaign; six thousand letters go out from the Willis Wood to auto owners every week. All indoor amusement places have their poor business during the heated term and most of them close for a few months, but we have made an effort to slide through the dull season as gracefully as possible. An ice cooling system has been installed in the theater, making the temperature 20 degrees cooler than the government record. The summer is about half over and we are still operating at a profit.

"Our lighting system has also contributed to directing attention to our theater. No other house has such a display of electricity in front and all around the theater. A fifty-foot Willis Wood electric sign stands out on the corner of the building that can be seen and read on Eleventh street from Main to Broadway and on Baltimore from Ninth to Twelfth street. A complete outline of the whole building stands out at night. Our first year's experience, when everything is taken into consideration, financial depression, the war, and a general stringency everywhere, has been pre-eminently successful and in summing up the causes which promoted the success we believe that persistency and effort in different kinds of publicity has richly rewarded us. We have made mistakes—many of them—our judgment has not always proven infallible, but in those mistakes we have profited with the experience such mistakes have taught us."

Sol Bloom in Town

Former New Yorker, Now of Seattle, Comes to Buy Features and Book, "The Ski Man."

SOL BLOOM, who till a little over a year ago was an Eastern picture man, but who now terms himself on his business cards, "Pacific Coast Agent, Feature Films," dropped into the World office during a hurried business visit to the Metropolis. Mr. Bloom is the owner of four flourishing exchanges. He is also publicity agent for the Washington Film Corporation, and is here to buy features and to get bookings for "The Ski-Man," just finished by that company.

Mr. Bloom was for some time with the World Film Company, but left that concern to go with Felix Feist. In March last year he was tempted to go to the coast and now he never expects to forsake that wholly delightful locality. He has bought a home in Seattle, where one can get fresh vegetables all the year around and where out of every year there will be 300 perfect days—where the people, the city and the climate vie with each other to be pleasing.

On his way East he stopped over in Salt Lake to call on Offer & Wolf, the Exhibitors' Film Exchange, which will handle all his releases, as well as the Apex offerings out of San Francisco. Abe Warner has bought from him the rights in New York State for "The Ski Man" and the Apex Film Company the rights in three states—Ohio, Georgia and Florida. While here he ran across several old friends from the coast, among them D. Rosin of the Consumers' Film Company, here to buy a feature picture, and M. Winnick of San Francisco, who will sail Saturday for Cuba to represent the World Film Corporation. In Chicago he met another friend, I. Rosenthal of Seattle, who is figuring on leasing the old Inter-Ocean building for a big picture house. This site is on Monroe and Dearborn streets and should seat 1,600 people. It is, he says, a most promising site, and the 99 year lease will need a deposit of $100,000.

In speaking of conditions in Seattle he says feature offerings are doing excellently. Dr. Clemmer at his theater did, he said, a tremendous business with "The Birth of a Nation" at 25 cents to a dollar admission. Among recent changes in Seattle are the sale of the Alaska Theater to J. L. Gottstein, owner of the Coliseum Theater, and the sale of the Columbia at Portland, to Jensen and Van Hurberg of Seattle, owners of the Liberty, the Mission and the Alhambra Theaters, all in that city.

STERLING COMPANY STATES RIGHTS MEN.

The proposition to states rights exchange men announced in last week's issue of the Moving Picture World by the Sterling Camera & Film Company attracted widespread attention and aroused interest in the trade.

The greatest trouble experienced by many states right exchange men, especially the smaller ones whose capital is limited, is their inability to secure suitable film productions at reasonable cost and on terms suiting their finances. The Sterling Camera & Film Company has invented, and repeat their announcement in this issue, of a rather unique method of treating direct with states right customers.

KLEINE TO SHOW "WOMAN NEXT DOOR."

Following his usual custom of giving exhibitors a chance to witness initial reviews of his production, George Kleine will project his latest feature, "The Woman Next Door," with Miss Irene Fenwick, at the Candler Theater, Tuesday morning, August 17. The performance will commence at 10.30 sharp. Exhibitors and their friends are invited. "The Woman Next Door" is scheduled for release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service September 1.

South African Letter

THE people of South Africa were indeed sorry to hear of the death of John Bunny. In his day he had probably more screen admirers than any other picture artist in the whole of South Africa. His acting, though extremely laughable in comedy pictures, was never vulgar; it was always clean and wholesome, and his facial expression! it was an acre-plot of laughter and smiles.

* * *

I am pleased to see that two producing companies have started work out in South Africa. In their last "Film News" the trust makes the remark "that producing companies would do well in South Africa." The names of the two producing companies are: The D. F. S. A. and the Africka Film Company. Both have started excellently, and their first pictures, namely, "The Trek" and "Dop," are accorded excellent reviews in the English trade papers.

* * *

We have had the following pictures recently: "Cheap Transportation," Lubin comedy; "Vivian's Transformation," Crystal; "Defenders of Egypt," Universal topical; "The Trail of the Lovelorn," Thanhouser; "The Making of a Man," American; "A Mother's Way," American Biograph; "Charlie and a Dog," Crystal comedy; "The Trey of Hearts," Universal special. "The Trey of Hearts" has caught on well, and people flock to see the portion shown each week. Packed houses are the result in Johannesburg, Bloemfontein and elsewhere.

* * *

Mr. Kingdon of the Films Trust has gone to London to take over the management of the film-buying section of the business. Mr. Kingdon, with Mr. Rufe Naylor formed the company known as Africa's Amalgamated Theatres, Ltd., which later on was merged into the Films Trust. He is a competent showman, and an expert critic of both picture plays and vaudeville. As the buyer and exploiter of "Les Miserables" in South Africa, he established a record which has not yet been broken.

* * *

The Safety First film has been completed by the Trust. I quote extracts from the report issued by the Films Trust. It should be explained that so far as known here at any rate, no actual picture of underground operations has ever been attempted, the difficulty of course being the lack of proper lighting arrangements for good photographic work. The Trust said that if the lighting problem could be overcome, they would undertake the making of the film. Mr. J. Albrecht, the chief operator, and Mr. A. H. Forni, the chief electrician of the Trust's laboratory, set to work and finally succeeded in obtaining eight half-watt Philips lamps, each of 2000 candle power. These lamps were specially prepared for the job, and were fitted with powerful reflectors. The mine selected for the taking of the film was the South Nourse at Denvek, in the Transvaal, and a special transformer was erected in the winding house at the shaft head; and over 600 feet of cable mains were installed in the mine, to enable the lamps to be moved about from place to place as occasion required. The film occupied three weeks in making, and during that time Mr. Albrecht and Mr. Forni were underground every day except Saturdays and Sundays from 9 o'clock in the morning until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the actors who took part in the production were: Mr. Mosenthal, mine captain; Mr. Evans, foreman machine mechanic; Mr. Home, foreman timberman; Mr. Clarke, pipe fitter, and numerous others, and to mention a saying of Mr. Albrecht, they acquited themselves like regular Costellos. With the exception of one or two minor mishaps providentially not attended by serious consequences, the job was put through without a hitch. Every incident depicted was made as real as possible. The following were among the subjects illustrated. Riding on the bridle of a skip, sitting too high on an inclined skip—head likely to catch any projections on shaft—sliding on hand rail in inclined shaft, passing skip strikes rider (invariably fatal); tramming boy riding behind truck, which leaves track and strikes side of drive—boy badly injured against side of drive; ringing away skips before the top decks are properly loaded; carrying a lighted carbide lamp in a cage or skip with a load of men; locking up a carbide lamp without turning off the water—next day boy goes to get lamp from box with a lighted candle—result, a dangerous explosion; capping fuses by biting the cap on, instead of using nippers—detonator explodes and blows man's head off; selfish workers steal equipment from ambulance boxes, an accident occurs, and boxes are empty, and so forth. The film will be released shortly, and will be shown first in Johannesburg, probably at the Carlton Theater, it will be 2,000 feet long.

In conjunction with the making of this picture, the Trust took a film illustrating the gold mining industry from A to Z—underground and surface working. This reel is about 3,000 feet in length. The Carlton Theater of Johannesburg is the first to issue a weekly house organ, called "Carlton Chat." This is given weekly to all patrons of the popular resort.

SYDNEY HAROLD CRAWFORD.

Real Stories from Reel Studios

By Thornton Fisher.

WELL-KNOWN phrases: "Well, let's try it over again!"

* * *

John C. Graham, the new General Manager of Mutual Films, is one of the most ruthless critics of pictures in the business. "That's awful!" "The directing's poor!" "The acting is fierce!" "That's enough; I dont want to see any more of it!" These being a few of Mr. Graham's phrases as he watches the projection of an unsatisfactory picture, while on the other hand, he is just as quick to land a good production. Not for sheer love of criticism, but a demand for excellence explains J. C.'s critical attitude.

* * *

Carl Pierce of Bosworth made the press boys happy the other day. After a private exhibition of Miss Lenore Ulrich's work as "Kilmeny" in the Morosco production of that name, he invited the bunch to a hotel nearby, where they all became full—of a good dinner. Miss Ulrich sat at the head of the table. Some of the fellows apparently had not eaten for a—well, at any rate, Carl Pierce had the right idea.

* * *

If you want to start something, just go and tell Charlie Kessel that the Brooklyn baseball team is an all-star aggregation of colossal pikers. C. K. would lay a wager on the "Dodgers" if they had an armless pitcher, the basemen were blind and the outfielders were tied to the fence. Try it once.

* * *

J. Allen Boone, that delightful little ex-publicity man of Lubin, dropped in to see me the other day. Looks as though Allen would stay in New York.

* * *

In one of the New York studios a few days ago one of the actors was cast for an important part. The picture was going fine, when it suddenly dawned upon the director that one side of this actor's face was beginning to look like the left side of a military balloon, and was getting larger in every scene. Said thespian was rushed to the nearest dentist and quickly relieved, whereupon work on the picture proceeded.

* * *

Bigelow Cooper of Edison has been annoyed at an unusual sound in his auto and doesn't know whether it's in the transmission or cylinders. Inasmuch as Bob Conness of the same company has the same make machine they might take the car apart and see what's bothering Bigelow.

Reviews of Current Productions

"The Substituted Jewel"

Fifth of the Mysteries of the Grand Hotel—Two-Part Kalem Picture.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE unusual quality of these Grand Hotel Mysteries is known to exhibitors and the public. Three or four of them have been seen by this reviewer and this one seems to be about on the same level as to quality with the others. It is an amply entertaining offering and there is much that is praiseworthy in the way it is acted and staged. Of course, the big lobby set is the background of the larger part of the story as in the others; but this lobby, so big and so filled with figures is not one of which the spectator grows tired.

Scene from "The Substituted Jewel" (Kalem).

The reviewer has seen the letter written to the Kalem Company in which the outline of the actual story, the basis of the picture, was given and the picture is astonishingly like the incident set forth by A. S. Katz, house detective of the Auditorium hotel in Chicago. The crooks are regular guests at the hotel (in the original story there was only one) and of them the older pretends to be blind. His secretary leads him about the corridors, and when not busy makes sketches of the other guests. He seems very reluctant to let the inquisitive house detective see what it is that he is drawing; but this is put down as mere eccentricity until there are complaints that jewels are missing. Then it occurs to the woman detective that he was once found by her making a sketch of a valuable pin owned by an actress. They go to his room and find the "blind" man alone. The book of sketches is lying on the table and in it are found several drawings of different pins and things that have been lost. The secretary enters and is confronted with the evidence. This is then made certain by one of the house detectives finding stuck in the lapel of the "blind" man the last bit of jewelry stolen. The others are discovered in a bag hidden in his pocket. The chief crook thereupon throws away his black goggles, and, pulling a revolver, holds the group at bay while he climbs out of the window. There is an exciting moment of struggle and both are at length safely handcuffed. Then, when all is up, the story of how the two did their clever work is shown as told by the older crook.

There are minor things that add to the final impression, bits of humor and the like. One hardly needs to add to a Kalem review that the camera work is excellent.

CHARLOTTE WALKER IN "OUT OF DARKNESS."

It was decided last week by the Lasky Company that the name of Miss Charlotte Walker's new photoplay production, which will be released in September through the Paramount Pictures Corporation, will be entitled "Out of Darkness." Previously one or two other names had been selected, but "Out of Darkness" has been definitely settled upon. This will be Miss Walker's second appearance as a Lasky star. Her first photoplay was "Kindling."

"Victorine"

A Two-Reel Sensational Majestic Adapted from a Story by Julian Street.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

GIVING a picturesque inside view of a phase of life little known, that of performers and freaks in a circus sideshow, "Victorine" presents some interesting types in a novel manner, but interest centers upon a ferocious knife-thrower, impersonated by Ralph Lewis, and a little girl who is induced to stand strapped to a target while keen-edged knives are hurled with great accuracy to barely miss her arms and face, none other than demure Dorothy Gish. There is a strong man with whom she becomes enamoured and an "Angel" who loves her, and a lot of amusing entanglements in consequence.

All goes well until one day the knife-thrower stretches his "occasional" drink to the limit. He becomes so intoxicated that the Angel protests against his carrying on his perilous part of the performance. He insists—he has never killed but one woman in doing his specialty, and that was a long time ago, in some foreign country. A glance at the assembled audience decides matters for the old showmen—a great crowd has gathered—so the Strong Man carries off the Angel and locks him up in an empty animal cage.

Drunk or sober, an actor must do his duty, so demure little Dorothy is strapped to the target, and the liquor-crazed thrower of knives begins his act. He barely misses her ear at the first shot, causing the little girl to shiver with misgiving. His next knife nearly puts out her eye and causes both of them to open wide with horror. The Angel obtains release from confinement and rushes on the scene to save Dorothy and receives in his shoulder the blade that would have killed her. The story is effective from fine treatment.

Scene from "Victorine" (Majestic).

"When Love is Mocked"

A Diamond "S" Special with a Strong Love Story and a Thrilling Climax, Fine Acting and Picturesque Settings.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

DIRECTOR GEORGE NICHOLLS has not only cleverly produced the story of "When Love Is Mocked," but he is also the author. After viewing the story on the screen, I am of the opinion that my commendation of the films will be lost among the many that will be awarded it.

It is the story of a fisher boy and his sweetheart, in a small village on the French coast, in which the boy's sturdy old mother sacrifices her life so that he may be saved from the snares of a temptress and live happily with the girl whom he has chosen.

Several beautiful coast views are seen in the pictures, and the exterior and interior views of the fisher boy's home are quite in harmony with the requirements. A happy view of French atmosphere is furnished in the exterior, showing the betrothal dance, with the quaint costumes of the boys and girls and the old village doctor, and in the steps and postures of the dance itself. In strong contrast with views of the fisher boy's home are the luxurious furnishings in the Parisian home of La Glou (the woman in the case) in Paris. Very impressive are the tinted night scenes which show the rescue of the fisher boy from the waves by his mother and the sinking boat, in which La Glou and the boy's mother go to their doom.

Lillian Hayward, as the fisher boy's mother, impresses me as giving the finest drawn character in the cast. The costuming of the part, at widely varying ages, is most happy and the facial make-ups are admirable. The rugged strength and devotion of that French mother compel both admiration and awe in the life-saving scene and in the final scene, the latter showing her sinking the boat and willingly going to her death in company with the woman she hates.

Scene from " When Love Is Mocked" (Selig).

La Glou, the gay, married Parisienne, is also well impersonated by Anna Luther. The selfishness, disloyalty and heartlessness of the creature are brought out with delicate shadings. The young fisherman could scarcely have been assigned to better artistic care than that of Eugene Pallette. He is young, stalwart and good looking, and never gets outside the mental and unsophisticated limits of his prototype. La Glou's husband is impersonated by Geo. Demerest. I congratulate Mr. Demerest for furnishing—next to Miss Hayward—a finished characterization. His style of dressing the part, his make-up and his mannerisms and gestures are well-nigh perfect. The old village doctor, by Al. Filson, is also a pleasing character sketch.

The release will be made through the General Film Company, Thursday, Aug. 12.

"The Battle of Przemysl"

American Correspondent Film Company Releases a Four-Part Picture of Exceptional Value.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THE herald advertising this four-part production, prepared by the American Correspondent Film Company, reads: "Smashing the armies of the Czar. Showing Austro-Hungarian-German drive through Galicia, terminating in the Battle of Przemysl." To a degree, of course, the picture tends to glorify the prowess of the Teutonic allies. It could not be otherwise, for Cameraman A. K. Dawson was one of them during the campaign in Galicia. But an audience that is totally out of sympathy with the motives behind the armies of the Kaiser and Archduke Frederick may overlook the political significance of the operations and marvel at scenes that so graphically suggest human tragedy and military resourcefulness.

To view this remarkable picture, for it is remarkable, is to gain a clearer idea of the appalling European tragedy than can be realized from descriptive newspaper reporting, or from the far less complete picturization of incidents of the war, included in pictorials along with other news happenings. It is not going too far to say that "The Battle of Przemysl" has a cumulative force not possible of realization in a short subject of episodic character. Here we see so much and from so many angles that an appreciation of the vastness of the operations is gradually driven home. Figures that fail to stir the imagination when read in newspaper headlines take on a new significance in the light of these scenes, enacted by thousands and thousands of men—men who dance and jest before they die.

In a military sense, the pictures that show the campaign in the Carpathians and the drive through Galicia are highly illuminating. They treat of every phase of the manoeuvers—the shifting of troops, the handling of guns of all sizes, the transportation of the great armies and their suplies, the destruction and rebuilding of bridges, the service rendered by aviators in locating the batteries of the enemy, and so on; every military operation of which we read is visualized to the last detail. But no less valuable in conveying the spirit of war are the many very human scenes of the soldiers in camp on the eve of battle, relaxing after a forced march, or aiding their wounded. There is much to show that the normal, kindly man does not become a different being when he dons a uniform and shoulders a gun.

Cameraman Dawson frequently risked his life in the making of this picture, and for a crowning achievement photographed an actual battle—the capture of a town. It seems safe to suppose that these scenes in the concluding reel never have been equaled. It would be rather unjust to criticise the photography of a picture secured under such difficulties. Naturally, it varies considerably. Edward Lyell Fox has prepared a lecture to accompany the showing of this important production.

Scene from "The Battle of Przemysl" (American Correspondence Film Co.).

Coming Biographs

A Two-Part Roy Norton Story and Three Griffith Reissues, Including "Oil and Water."

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

ONE bit of characterization stands out in the Biograph Company's two-part production of Roy Norton's story, "Mister Paganini." It is that of the blind musician as portrayed by Jack Drumier, who realizes to the full the sympathetic qualities of the pathetic old man, without discounting his effects by overemphasis. Aided by a capable company, including Mary Maletesta and Ivan Christy, Wray Physioc has made a western subject that is a good bit more than the classification generally implies.

Scene from "Mister Paganini" (Biograph).

Possessing a strong human appeal, "Mister Paganini" rises above the artificiality of the conventional plot in which a claim figures. We have the claim, to be sure, and the last-minute triumph of the rightful owner; but even the usual plot turns do not seem trite, in view of the sound character foundation given the story in the person of the kindly fiddler. Here, as in other of his recent productions, Mr. Physioc shows himself to be a painstaking director gifted with imagination.

The success of the Biograph Griffith reissues is now an established fact. Exhibitors who have run the first releases in the series know that there has been no deterioration in the photography and that in subject matter and treatment the pictures to-day excel as they did at the time of production. "The Wanderer," a single reel; "Oil and Water," in two reels, and "The Girl and Her Trust," one reel, will be released September 3, 10 and 17, respectively. As is usually the case in the old Biographs, the casts include players who have since become famous. In "The Wanderer," a romantic, colorful treatment of an Italian poem, we have Henry Walthall, Mae Marsh, Lionel Barrymore and Bobby Harron. The picture is extremely well acted and beautifully staged.

The strongest of the three subjects, however, is "Oil and Water," a fine study of temperament, showing the probable results of the marriage of a puritanically disposed man and a frivolous woman enamored by the stage. Miss Sweet as the actress and Mr. Walthall as the husband have interesting roles in a story of real significance. "The Girl and Her Trust" is a well-presented western, acted by Dorothy Barnard, Wilfred Lucas, Charles Mailes and Alfred Paget.

"Judy Forgot"

A Five-Part Broadway Universal Feature in Which Marie Cahill Gives a Humorous Performance.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THE adaptation of Avery Hopwood's "Judy Forgot" has a number of entertaining qualities in the comedy story, prepared by Raymond L. Schrock, in T. Hayes Hunter's production, and best of all in the performance given by Marie Scene from "Judy Forgot" (Universal).

Cahill. The picture is on the border line dividing comedy and farce, and at its best, in the last two reels, reaches climaxes of exceptional humorous force. True to the demands of farce, the author keeps adding to the embarrassments of Judy, who loses her memory in a railroad wreck. She forgets her name, has no recollection of her husband and becomes badly entangled with the wrong man. It is something of a surprise to find that she is the mother of three children; but Judy is ready to make the best of the situation when the parents of her alleged offspring protest vigorously. A second accident, the collision of automobiles this time, restores the fugitive memory and Judy returns to her legal mate.

Earlier reels offer less in the way of plot complications; but the scenes, even when not essential to the story, are brightly acted and entertaining in themselves. It is amusing to watch the consequences of Judy's peculiar affliction: how every innocent smile is accompanied by a wink, which men attribute to a friendly spirit when in reality it is due solely to a muscular weakness. Having once fallen under the spell of the wink, Freddy courts the actress in and out of season and the ultimate success of the wooing but paves the way for hours of tormenting jealousy, for Judy cannot make her eyes behave even on the honeymoon. Responses are too frequent to suit Freddy, so the bride is continuing her wedding journey alone when the railroad smash-up destroys all memory of her jealous husband. The wrecked coach, by the way, is rather too artificial to be convincing. Otherwise there is no fault to be found with the staging and the acting is capable. Samuel B. Hardy strikes a correctly farcical note in his interpretation of Freddy.

"American Game Trails."

Four Thousand Feet of Entertaining Pictures Depicting the Fauna and the Scenery of the Canadian Wilds.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THESE pictures were made by two real sportsmen, F. M. Buckland, and J. F. Cleary. These men, with the aid of their photographer, L. Galezio, have succeeded in providing an hour's excellent entertainment. It is not too much to say that something of the spirit of the Call of the Wild has found its way to these films. The eternal charm of wood and water and of God's creatures disporting themselves in their native haunts is present in these pictures. The titles are very good and tinged with genuine humor, which means quite a good deal in a film offered to please and amuse the general public rather than to delight hunters and sportsmen. There is but one scene in the pictures which ought to come out, and I understand that it is going to come out, and that is the killing of a trapped bear with an axe. As to the rest the authors have evidently grasped the fact that there is no entertainment value whatever in showing the slaughter and mutilation of wild animals. The exhibitor, of course, is looking for entertainment values, especially in films of this nature.

Scene from "American Game Trails" (F. M. Buckland).

With these objectionable parts eliminated there is plenty of genuine entertainment value in the pictures. There is a humor and a pathos in the life of wild animals which is hard to get on the screen, but which successfully filmed and visualized, delights every audience. The two bear cubs are at once pathetic and funny, and I wondered why there was no more of them, until I was told that the cubs escaped long before the cameraman was through with them. The liberation of the young moose from a bear-trap into which he had stumbled by an untoward accident is a fine scene and one is tempted to smile at the evident astonishment of the animal in being set free. The young moose for a moment or two forgets its fear of man and trots off slowly more like a mule than a moose. The little wild ducks skimming across the water in their eagerness to escape the camera make an amusing sight; indeed, the whole picture is full of good touches like these.

The cameraman was evidently working under severe handicaps and at times these handicaps become quite apparent on the film, which in parts is hazy and indistinct. Some of the deer moose are often seen only in dim outline. On the other hand it must be said that the obvious genuineness of the picture in no little measure atones for these shortcomings, which, in the nature of things, were more or less unavoidable.

"The Stolen Voice"

Robert Warwick Is Starred in Four-Part Drama Released by the World Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

PAUL McALLISTER, well known as an actor, but new, one may surmise, in the field of scenario writing, is credited with the authorship of "The Stolen Voice," a somewhat unconvincing drama that none the less profits by capable acting and a few scenes of dramatic force. The chief defect in the story is in the author's failure to impress an audience with the likelihood of the happening that is at the very basis of the plot. We meet a great singer, a man who has reached the top of his profession, and suddenly, for no better reason than that a jealous physician wills it, he loses his voice completely. It is hypnotism made so simple that even the least skeptical of spectators is likely to question its possibility and probably conclude "it can't be done."

Had the hypnotic scenes been given a more scientific aspect the picture would have benefited appreciably; but overlooking this shortcoming there is much to praise in "The Stolen Voice." Mr. Warwick, an actor of powerful physique and sound dramatic method, gives a telling impersonation in the character of Gerald Dorville, the singer who loses his voice, even his speaking voice, and eventually finds employment as a motion picture actor. In the same studio is a shopgirl, who in the old days used to wait outside the stage door for a peep at the famous tenor. Their romance is continued, and while making a scene for an Indian story Dorville saves his little sweetheart from being washed over a rocky falls in a canoe. Then the hypnotic doctor dies of heart failure, the spell is broken, and the singer regains his voice. Of course, he weds the pretty picture actress.

More picturesque exteriors than those shown in the last reel could not be desired, and considered individually the scenes were admirably directed with several odd photographic effects. Frances Nelson is very engaging in the role of the shopgirl who becomes an actress, and others in a nicely balanced company are Violet Horner, Giorgio Majeroni and Bertram Marburgh.

Scene from "The Stolen Voice" (World Film).

"Rags"

In the Latest Famous Players Production Mary Pickford Gives a Performance of Great Appeal.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

IN writing the scenario for "Rags" it is evident that Edith Barnard Delano had the most likeable traits of Mary Pickford's personality in mind and aimed to produce a story in which they might be revealed in all their variety. The charge urged against "Little Pal," that it showed Miss Pickford in only one mood, and not her most attractive one at that, is in no way applicable to this five-part production. From beginning to end it is a picture of the winsome little star in a career humorous and pathetic by turns and occasionally dramatic.

The real strength of "Rags" lies in the quite inimitable interpretation Miss Pickford gives the ill-treated child, brought up in poverty with only a drunken father for a guardian. Rags is presented as a spirited, loyal little creature, always ready to fight in defense of those she loves. After a brief prologue, in which Miss Pickford plays the role of a deserted wife, there is a lapse of years and in a capital scene we are introduced to Rags, the offspring of the unfortunate marriage. It is the kind of a scene that immediately establishes the nature of a character and is humorous in the bargain.

Scene from "Rags" (Famous Players).

A stray dog is being decorated with tin cans and tormented by a gang of boys. Rags, wearing an old pair of overalls and somebody's cast-off waist, straightway becomes the champion of the abused dog. With active fists and feet she jumps into the ring and fights so effectively that the vanquished youths surrender their prize. After this the scraggy little dog is the boon companion of the lonely child. Another incident certain to appeal to an audience is that showing Rags's visit to the saloon in search of her father and how she fights his battle against a roomfull of loafers. Through such happenings as these Miss Pickford is able to build up a consistent characterization of a loveable child whose fine nature shows through a rough exterior.

There is a pleasing romance in the girl's attachment for the young easterner, and at the conclusion a sharp contrast, revealing Rags transformed into a young lady of wealth and fashion. Save that some of the scenes seem unnecessarily prolonged there is little fault to find with this attractive production, directed by James Kirkwood with Marshall Neilan, Joseph Manning and Joseph Farrell MacDonald in support of Miss Pickford

"The Ingrate"

Three-Reel Victory Drama of High Interest to Appear on the Program of the Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A CLEVERLY arranged version of the domestic triangle never fails to interest on account of the intensely human nature of its outlines. It is clothed and re-clothed, ornamented with various innovations in villainy, misunderstanding, retaliation, etc., and still it remains the same as to the primal idea, but is enhanced in its power of entertainment by the treatment given it.

In this instance the clever European actress Henny Porten plays the role of the injured wife, and puts into it a large part of what her richly emotional temperament has to offer. She is supported by an excellent cast of players, who have been wisely chosen as to their respective roles.

The story of the production opens in the home of the couple, one of whom is the affectionate and devoted party, and the other a gambler, and otherwise perniciously inclined, and, satiated with the love of his own wife, turns to another as unscrupulous as himself for fresh entertainment.

Scene from "The Ingrate" (Pathe).

The plot takes an unusual turn when the wife, to cover the gambling debts of her husband, steals from the woman with whom her husband has fallen in love. And it is through her husband's angry creditor that she is made cognizant of the perfidy of the pair. There is a pretty complication of things as the picture progresses, and the heroism of the play is invested in one who has been content to love the dutiful wife at a distance.

The production is a good one, which, although it holds more than one questionable incident, shows by cause and effect some faults that have their actual origin in the social constitution.

Two Vitagraph Comedies

"The Cub and the Daisy Chain," and "His Fairy Godmother" are Cleverly Conceived Sketches.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

SIDNEY DREW must share credit with L. Case Russell for the humorous appeal of "The Cub and the Daisy Chain," an exceptionally bright, one-reel comedy soon to be released on the General Film program. Mrs. Russell wrote a scenario based on a real comedy idea and Mr. Drew's playing of the cub reporter was capital. The story is original in its conception and depends on a legitimate situation susceptible to photoplay treatment. It is not a combination of broad farce and slapstick parading under the dignified name of comedy.

The first assignment of a reporter, who is a cub in everything save years, is to get a story about the celebration of a woman on the one hundred and forty-sixth anniversary of her birth. Jimmy journeys to the suburbs in quest of the story, but the difficulties he encounters in locating the old lady are such that he gives up the search and returns to the office with an interesting fake. According to Jimmy, her birthday party is a delightful affair in which the venerable woman is bedecked with daisies and made the center of a merry festival, all the children of the neighborhood taking part. Unknown to Jimmy, the subject of his colorful story died on that very day and a death notice is phoned to the office. The situation is saved for the cub reporter by the tactful intervention of the young woman who receives the message and makes a few wise alterations in Jimmy's account of the birthday celebration. Mr. Drew does much with a genuinely clever scenario.

Another comedy that went more than ordinarily well when presented at the Vitagraph Theater is "His Fairy Godmother," written by Mabel Burgess and acted by Wally Van and his company. Here there is an adroit building up to a situation of comedy suspense in which a henpecked husband dreams that he is in the midst of a gay gathering in a fashionable restaurant. On the stroke of twelve, according to the decree of the fairy godmother, his evening clothes disappear and he finds himself clad in a suit of pajamas. There is effective humor in the resulting embarrassments.

"Extravagance"

A Gold Seal Three Reel Drama of Modern Life, Released by the Universal.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THERE is a sound moral to this three-reel drama—married folk should be sure of their facts before becoming jealous of each other. Although in no sense a preachment, the play contains several useful lessons—the folly of extravagance being one. The story opens with a foolish mother trying to prevent her daughter from marrying the man she loves, because the young fellow is not wealthy. The young couple have their way, however, and start housekeeping in a cottage. Then the expected happens: the young wife longs for social pleasures, has her wish gratified, meets a wealthy suitor once favored by her mother, is compromised by him, and then deserted by her husband, after he has denounced her in good, set terms.

Scene from "Extravagance" (Universal).

Later on the husband becomes rich, gets the former suitor and his wife's mother in his power, and becomes reconciled to his wife. Such a tale as this has often been told in fiction, and has even found its counterpart in real life. The author has been fairly successful in adapting the material to the requirements of a photoplay, and the producer has shown good judgment in his method of transferring it to the screen. Cleo Madison, Adele Farrington, Wyndham Standing and Hobart Henley meet every demand of their respective roles.

HITCHCOCK IN BIG FOUR COMEDY.

An announcement of importance has been made by the V-L-S-E to the effect that they have added to their list of releases for the month of August "The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros," a Lubin four-part farce comedy, featuring America's foremost comedian, Raymond Hitchcock. The story allows every latitude for Mr. Hitchcock's wonderful fun-making abilities, and in it this famous comedian and his one thousand and one laugh-producing tricks have been recorded in their minutest detail.

Mr. Hitchcock was funny on the stage, but it is said that he is one hundred per cent. more humorous on the screen. His wonderful personality is intensified and preserved in all its force in his first screen play. Playing opposite to Mr. Hitchcock is Flora Zabelle, a national favorite on the speaking stage, who in private life is Mrs. Raymond Hitchcock, and, like her husband, makes her first screen appearance in this Liberty Bell feature. "The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros" will be released August 16.

"The Mystery of the Tapestry Room"

A Big U Three Reel Crime Drama, Which Holds Its Secret Until the Finish, Released by the Universal.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE course of action pursued by the different characters in their attempts to unravel the mysterious murder which gives this three-reel drama its title, are, generally, along the lines of sane and consistent conduct—an unusual quality in plays of this class. The author has contrived to throw strong suspicion on two innocent men, and, finally, fastens the crime upon the most logical person in the story to have committed such a deed. As this is the ultimate object in fashioning such a piece of dramatic craftsmanship, the word success may be applied to "The Mystery of the Tapestry Room."

Scene from "The Mystery of the Tapestry Room" (Universal).

The story opens with a son finding his father dead in bed. The murdered man's will leaves his entire fortune to his son; in case the son dies, the family butler becomes the heir. Both men suspect the other. A son of the aged retainer is the real culprit. The butler's brother is the detective who solves the mystery. A sliding panel, a black mask and a domino are part of the machinery used to give the necessary enigmatic air to the murder. Expert work on the part of the producer, and intelligent acting by Murdock MacQuarrie, Frank Newburg, Frank MacQuarrie, Kingsley Benedict, and Margery Beardsley supplement the efforts of the photoplaywright.

YONKERS LIKES "THE ROSARY."

A. E. Hamilton, president of the Hamilton Amusement Company, proprietors of the big Hamilton theater in Yonkers, N. Y., is now an ardent booster for the V-L-S-E owing to the unprecedented crowds that were attracted to his theater by "The Rosary." Mr. Hamilton says that this feature is the best drawing card he ever booked.

"The Rosary" was first booked at the Hamilton on July 12 and 13. The first night the former house record was equaled; the attendance on the second day broke all house records.

On July 20, Mr. Hamilton rebooked the feature. At the very first showing the house was crowded, and people were standing in line waiting for the second show.

AYLESWORTH PICTURES TAKEN OVER BY PARAMOUNT.

The Aylesworth animal pictures, which recently played an engagement of three weeks at the Strand theater in New York, where they were well received by the large audiences there, have been taken over by the Paramount Pictures Corporation and are being booked through the Paramount Exchanges.

Arthur J. Aylesworth, the noted sportsman and naturalist, took a two years' trip into the heart of the Canadian Rockies and Alaska, obtaining views of practically every variety of big game known to the North American Continent and received special permission from the Canadian Government to kill four buffalo out of the only large herd still in existence.

In the Aylesworth pictures there are "close-ups" of splendid specimens of the bull moose, elk, bear and lynx, in addition to those of the buffalo and sheep. Many of the scenes of life in the semi-arctic winter are unusually good.

CHANGES IN LUBIN RELEASES.

Through error in the plate the advertisement of this week's Lubin releases contains "A Midnight Mix-Up," to be released August 17th. Instead, the release for that date is a split reel, "The Dead Letter," a comedy, and "Persistent Dalton," a cartoon comedy.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"THE CLAUSE IN THE CONSTITUTION" (Selig).

The "Clause In The Constitution," a Selig Diamond Special in three reels, will be released in regular service on Thursday, Aug. 19. This unusual production upholds the Selig Diamond special standard, for there is a strong story, an all-star cast of players, beautiful photography and a succession of gripping climaxes.

On Thursday, August 26th, "The Strange Case of Talmai Lind," a Selig Diamond Special in three reels, will be released in regular service. This Selig Diamond Special is particularly noteworthy for the reason that Kathlyn Williams not only stars in this production but was the authoress of the plot.

Scene from "The Clause in the Constitution" (Selig).

Exhibitors and their patrons will be delighted to welcome Miss Williams back to a jungle-zoo wild animal pictureplay. In "The Strange case of Talmai Lind," Miss Williams again toys with the wild beasts of the jungle in her own fearless way. She enters the den of an African lioness at the risk of her life in order to provide thrills for the audiences. There is an appealing love story running through this most unusual plot, which also possesses that unusual ending so much to be desired. Miss Williams is supported by a carefully selected company of players. "The Strange Case of Talmai Lind" is certain to be popular, for both the plot and the action is strickly out of the ordinary.

OUTDOOR SCENES FOR ESSANAY.

Essanay has made a specialty this summer of taking a large number of outdoor scenes. In this way it has been able both to secure realistic settings and artistic backgrounds for its pictures. Five separate companies have been established at different places throughout the country to take these scenes. A new summer studio has just been established at Lake Zurich, Ill., an unusually picturesque spot. The first photoplay to be taken at this outdoor studio is "Rule Sixty-three," the play written by P. G. Wodehouse, the well known magazine writer. Other summer studios have been established at "The Pines" and at "Starved Rock," Ill., while another company is touring through the East to take scenes along the Atlantic coast. The pictures taken in the Tennessee mountains have been completed and the studio relinquished after four months' work.

"YORK STATE FOLKS" (Dra-Ko).

In selecting this well known play for one of their feature four reelers the Dra-Ko Film Corporation selected a play that for years has been dear to the hearts of thousands of playgoers from Maine to California.

A number of the original cast who helped Fred E. Wright make this play famous have been secured, among them are James Lackaye, whose ability as a screen artist has long been recognized, and Ray L. Royce, who also originated his part in the initial production. The Dra-Ko announces that the feature will be released in August.

"THE MAKING OVER OF GEOFFREY MANNING" (Vitagraph).

Much interest and excitement has been crowded into five minutes of terrific action in the Vitagraph feature, "The Making Over of Geoffrey Manning," by William Addison Lathrop and Charles T. Dazey. Harry Morey as Geoffrey Manning, and Belle Bruce, as Harmony Laurie, his sweetheart, and a boy are trapped in an elevator between floors during a factory fire. Geoffrey, as a last resort, breaks through the car roof, and with the girl and boy clinging to his back attempts to climb the elevator rope. The weight is too much and he falls. Firemen break through the shaft above and throw a rope to the terror stricken trio. Harmony and the boy are drawn to safety and the rope is being lowered a third time when an explosion loosens the car and it drops through the fire, with Geoffrey in it, to the basement. Thrill follows thrill in rapid succession during the enactment of this scene, with the suspense being sustained until rescuers find Geoffrey, still alive, buried in the wreck of the elevator car. Associated with Harry Morey and Belle Bruce in the portrayal of the principal characters are: L. Rogers Lytton, Ned Finley, William Dunn, Harold Forshay, Jack Brawn, Logan Paul, Katherine Franek and Marion Henry.

"The Making Over of Geoffrey Manning" when completed will be a Vitagraph feature in four parts and released through the V-L-S-E.

LUBIN ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Jack Pratt, who directed the filming of "The Garden of Lies," is a recent addition to the staff of Lubin directors. The engagement of Allen Farnham as general art director is also announced.

Louis Reeves Harrison has written a five-reel masterplay, as yet unnamed, which Lubin will produce at once as a special feature. The play deals in a big way with the present war situation and is pregnant with things vital to today.

"DEATH'S MARATHON" (Biograph).

Bored with the monotony of married life, the self-centered husband becomes estranged from his wife. Gambling is his ruin; he appropriates funds of his firm and loses all. Determining to commit suicide, he calls his wife on the phone to tell her of his intentions. His partner, who, at his wife's instance, has been searching for him, answers the call, and, in desperation, conceives a plan. While he races with death in a swift motor car, the wife attempts to hold her husband on the wire with her own pleadings and, with the lisp of their child. But Death wins the Marathon, setting the wife free from her unfortunate alliance. The story is told in the usual Biograph convincing manner. The photography and directing are perfect.

Scene from "Death's Marathon" (Biograph).

"Death's Marathon" is a marvelous piece of plot construction, original and unrelentingly dramatic as played by Blanche Sweet, Henry Walthall, Lionel Barrymore, Walter Miller and Robert Harron. It should prove equally as popular as "The Battle at Elderbush Gulch," although one is a big spectacle, while the other is a dramatic masterpiece.

"THE FATAL FINGER PRINTS" (Komic).

Edward "Komic" Dillon in person supports the featured player, Fay Tincher, in the Komic comedy, "The Fatal Finger Prints." Mr. Dillon is Ben, the man whom Fay ultimately marries in the photocomedy. As usual, Mr. Dillon directed this Tincher product, while others in the cast were Max Davidson, Jennie Lee, Eleanor Washington and Frank Darien.

The comedy derives its name from a slap in the dark administered by Frank Darien as Austin Force, a jewel thief, to Fay Scene from "The Fatal Finger Prints" (Komic).

Tincher as Nell. Nell would have married Ben almost any day but for the appearance on the scene of Austin Force. His suave manner and apparent deference won her for the time being. So she becomes engaged to Force.

Nell's aunt buys a diamond necklace as a wedding present and takes it to her home. That night Austin breaks into the house. He saw the aunt buy the necklace, but did not know that she was related to Nell. It happens that Nell is spending the night with her aunt. Soon after Austin seizes the necklace he meets Nell in the dark. In order to get out of the house he is obliged to strike her, but he does not recognize her.

The wedding of Nell and Force is to take place the following day. Force gives the stolen necklace to Nell's father with the promise that he will present it to her a few moments before the ceremony. He is astounded and disconcerted when he recognizes his own finger prints still visible on the face of Nell. He realizes that if Nell's father gives her the necklace his romance will end. He tries to steal the necklace from Nell's parent but is unsuccessful.

Ben traces the robbery and in the end wins Nell.

"A BOLD IMPERSONATION" (Reliance).

Highly absorbing and unusual are the effects in "A Bold Impersonation," a two-reel Reliance feature from the pen of Bernard McConville, produced under the direction of F. A. Kelsey. Scenes which have these qualities are laid in a theater with "Romeo and Juliet" in progress on the stage and an active flirtation going on between the Romeo and a lady of quality in a box; a successful escape on horseback of two true lovers; a duel which terminates when the heroine wounds the hero's adversary; a leap by the heroine on horseback from a cliff into the sea; the escape of the hero and heroine through swimming to a yacht, where there is a happy wedding.

Scene from "A Bold Impersonation" (Reliance).

Olga Grey is Louise, Eric Von Ritzau is the Count Rene Reviere, Carl Formes, Jr., is the Duke de Mauriere, Maxfield Stanley his son Raoul, Francis McDonald is Bartollomeo Boceni, and George Walsh is the hero, Hawksford.

HAZEL DAWN IN "THE HEART OF JENNIFER."

Hazel Dawn, the charming young star formerly celebrated as "The Pink Lady" and who since she abandoned the stage permanently to appear exclusively on the screen under the management of the Famous Players, has acquired international fame as a film favorite, displays an entirely new aspect of her versatile talent in the next Famous Players production, "The Heart of Jennifer," scheduled for release on the Paramount Program Aug. 23.

Scene from "The Heart of Jennifer" (Famous Players).

Although her early screen successes presented her primarily as a comedienne, it is evident that the Famous Players detected unusual dramatic ability in their captivating star, for more recently they have selected strong, dramatic subjects as her vehicles. As Clarissa, her last film impersonation, Miss Dawn illustrated a difficult dramatic-romantic role, and it is now apparent that the Famous Players have been developing her for just such a characterization as "The Heart of Jennifer" provides. This subject was especially written for Miss Dawn by Edith Barnard Delano, who is also the author of the next Mary Pickford photoplay, "Rags."

"WHEN MY LADY SMILES" (Essanay).

This is a touching drama that may bring tears to the eyes, but it has a happy ending. Ruth Stonehouse does exceptional work as Janet, the daughter of a proud but penniless Southern family. She is loved by the scion of a wealthy family, whose mother does everything possible to break the match. When the young couple elope she disinherits her son. Never trained to work, he barely manages to scrape along until he falls ill. Then the mother proposes to the girl that if she will give up her husband and her baby she will take her son back and bring up the child in luxury. Janet sacrifices herself and the baby is torn from her arms. She makes her husband think that she has left with another man, in order to induce him to leave her. But, heartbroken, he gets no better. Finally the mother relents and Janet is brought to the home, where her happiness over the recovery of her baby puts her husband on the road to recovery. Thomas Commerford is unusually well fitted for the part of the old Southern colonel, while Florence Oberle, as the mother, and Richard Tabor as the husband do excellent work. This is a three-act drama.

Scene from "When My Lady Smiles" (Essanay).

"RIGHT OFF THE BAT" (Arrow).

The end of this week saw the completion of all the adult scenes in "Right Off the Bat," the five-reel comedy drama, in which the Arrow Film Corporation, of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, is starring Mike Donlin, America's great ball player. The Arrow players, who for three weeks had been in Winsted, Conn., where most of the scenes in "Right Off the Bat" are laid, returned last Wednesday to New York to make the very few interiors there are in this unique photoplay. Almost immediately a few members of the adult company, under the stage direction of Hugh Reticker, will go back to Winsted to finish the prologue of "Right Off the Bat." The prologue is played practically in its entirety by children.

Scene from "Right Off the Bat" (Arrow).

A good deal of a thrill may be anticipated in a daring leap made by Donlin from the side of a big bus, in which he and other players are returning to town from a Fourth of July outing game, to the side and then to the back of a runaway horse driven by Hiram Bradley, father of the girl Mike loves and owner of the factory in which Mike works and also of the Winsted baseball team on which Mike plays. Miss Mersereau is very charming in her role of Viola Bradley. She is as slender as the proverbial reed, and to see her in real life is to wonder where she gets her tremendous vitality.

There is a secondary love story running through "Right Off the Bat," with the parts played by Rita Ross Donlin, niece of the world-famous Charles Ross and Mabel Fenton, and Charles Mather, who also is assistant director to Hugh Reticker. Mabel Wright is seen as Mrs. Hiram Bradley. Fan Bourke and Frances Walton supply a number of comedy scenes that are of a different order to those usually played by women. Theirs is the highest type of clean, straight comedy that depends neither on make-up nor slapstick to get a laugh.

It is expected that "Right Off the Bat" will be completed in about a fortnight more and it is scheduled for immediate release. President W. E. Shallenberger of the Arrow Film Corporation will make his decision early next week as to through which of three distributing sources the Donlin photoplay will be released.

"AN ALIEN" GOES STRONG AT BURLAND.

George Beban's film version of "The Sign of the Rose," produced by Thomas H. Ince under the title of "An Alien" and presented by the Select Film Booking Agency, recently played a five days' engagement at the Burland theatre, the Bronx, New York. Following its big success at the Astor theater it is not surprising that Beban's masterpiece should have been enthusiastically received at the uptown house. That its reception was enthusiastic is the statement made by Whitman Bennett, a partner in the Burland enterprise, who states that "The Eternal City," the former release of the Select Film Booking Agency, and "An Alien," literally packed his huge house to capacity.

The Burland, a combination of indoor and outdoor theater, seats more than 3,000 persons. On one occasion the audience was so large that those in the rear of the huge auditorium—198 feet from stage to promenade—were unable to see the entire action perfectly. The manager stepped upon the stage at the conclusion of what would ordinarily have been the last performance and announced that owing to the marked approval with which the spectators had received the picture, if those in the front would change places with those in the rear, a midnight performance would be given to satisfy the latter. Accordingly, the thousand or so persons seated in the last rows moved down in front and those who had seen the entire performance, instead of leaving the theater, were so impressed with the production that they descended upon the rear seats and again followed Pietro Massena through the appealing and thrilling action that characterizes the story.

Reports from other theaters where "An Alien" has been shown indicate a like popularity with all types of audiences in every section of the country.

CHAPLIN ADDS TO HIS COMPANY.

Newcomer Is No Chicken, But She Is Some Bird—Miss La Turque Tells the Sad Story of Her Life.

THE most recent addition to the ranks of Essanay is Charlotta, nee Charlotte La Turque. Miss La Turque had just returned from a barn storming trip, in fact that has been her occupation since her early infancy—she acknowledged herself that she is out for the corn—when she was interviewed by a Moving Picture World representative.

Charlotte was taking her usual morning promenade on the lawn behind her east side apartment in New York when she was found by our busy reporter. Reluctantly, she consented to a brief interview, for like all actresses Charlotte is a shy creature and shuns publicity like the plague. "Let my work speak for me," she said modestly, "my art is all I live for, everything else—fame, wealth, position—are but as dross compared to my art."

Miss Charlotte La Turque.

Charlotte is an Easterner, it was learned. She was born in Rhode Island of humble yet honest parentage and points with a just pride to the legend that one of her ancestors was at the same Thanksgiving table with President Taft. "My ancestor was so overcome," sighed Charlotte reminiscently, "that there was little left of him after that occasion." Miss La Turque was one of a family of twelve and was early forced to look out for herself. Her father and mother had a quarrel over some brooding question and separated shortly after her birth. It is surmised that Mr. La Turque was somewhat fickle, but his daughter blushingly requested not to be quoted. All she would say was that he was never out after sundown.

Changing the subject abruptly, Miss Charlotte said that her earliest ambitions were for a secure perch on the stage, and that it was noted even before she had been weaned that she had talents as a protean artist. "That decided me," said Miss La Turque brightly, while partaking daintily of her late breakfast, "and I determined to leave home. I hated to do it, for I have the best, the sweetest, the dearest mother in all the world. No stage girl ever had such a mother, and then there are all my little sisters and brothers; but my art was calling me. At first it was difficult and even now life is hard. There are many temptations placed in the path of the young girl—there are many worms in life. Ah! what might have been my bitter end if I had not been so wonderfully gifted!"

"At first I thought my voice was my strong point," she went on, "but I was dissuaded. Even now I sing a little, but only for my own pleasure. Then my face seemed my fortune, but I never could keep it under control and so finally it came to me that (here Charlotte hid her blushing cheeks under her wing) it was my legs." Here Miss La Turque walked a few steps away and the secret was out!

She gives a perfect, triumphant imitation of Charlie Chaplin!

Charlotte La Turque is a brunette of pronounced type. She has bright dark blue eyes of searching directness. She wears her few clothes becomingly—and modestly, too. She attributes her perfect health to early hours and good habits, and her advice to all aspirants is never to smoke or chew—she does neither. Her pet hobby is collecting—she is always at it—picking up little things here and there. She has no pets—not even a monkey—and wears absolutely no jewelry. "Beauty unadorned is the best," she insists.

Miss La Turque was engaged by Essanay for work with Chaplin at a perfectly incredible figure and is now on her way west to the Los Angeles Studios of Essanay in a luxurious private compartment and her own chef—all at the expense of the company.

"Watch for my first appearance with Charlie," were her parting words. "My bare-legged dance is some prance! Don't let it get by you, kid!"

"THE WHITE SISTER" ESTABLISHES NEW BOX OFFICE RECORD.

A new box office record for the Majestic theater, Detroit, "the millionaires' picture palace," has been established by Essanay's six-part feature, "The White Sister," during its seven days' engagement.

A. W. Goff, Cleveland branch manager of the Big Four, who was in Detroit at the time, reports that on Thursday night at 10:15 p. m. there were 2,176 seats filled at admission prices varying from 10 cents to 25 cents.

While in Detroit, Mr. Goff attended a meeting of the board of directors of the Majestic theater, and in a letter to Mr. Walter W. Irwin Mr. Goff says that the board of directors of the Majestic theater is composed almost entirely of men whose names are a power in the world of business and finance.

Mr. Goff says that the stockholders of this theater represent sixty millions of dollars.

WORLD FILM INSISTS ON LOCAL COLOR.

World Film will shortly release the powerful William A. Brady photodrama, "The Cotton King," in which George Nash plays the lead, with the charming Julia Hay as his "opposite." As its name implies, the story treats of the cotton business in some of its aspects. There is an attempted corner on the New York Stock Exchange; and then down South the burning of a cotton mill and many other incidents illustrate the romance and tragedy of the South's great industry.

Local color being always a strong ingredient of World Film features, Director Eagle took his entire company down to Cartersville, Ga., where they selected a well known cotton plantation for their scenes. The Cooper Iron Works were also included. World Film's company made a very favorable local impression, being entertained by Mr. Gould of the Dixie theater, where the picture will be shown as soon as it is released.

Scene from "The Cotton King" (World Film).

"THE KINSHIP OF COURAGE" (Majestic).

Francelia Billington and W. E. Lawrence have the two chief roles in the Majestic feature, "The Kinship of Courage." They are supported by a strong cast of Reliance-Majestic players, including Wilbur Higby, William H. Brown, Walter Long, Mildred Marsh and the juvenile player, Violet Wilkey. The latter, by the way, appears in the same role as Mildred Marsh but is shown as a little girl. The scenes in which Violet Wilkey appears are laid seven years before those in which Mildred Marsh takes part.

The chief theme of "The Kinship of Courage" deals with the efforts of Carlos Dunning to escape from follies which he has determined shall be entirely of his past. He is an Arizonian and the son of the principal legislator of that State. He has spent much of his youth in breaking his father's laws. He meets Olive Temple, an Eastern girl traveling in the West, is influenced by her, and determines to live another kind of life.

His efforts in this direction, however, lead to many complications. An attempt is made by his former associates to fasten a robbery upon him. In combating this attempt he very nearly loses his life. After these events he goes to New York, where he again meets Olive Temple. He seems upon the point of breaking entirely with the past when his former associates again try to claim him. In the end, however, he is successful and wins the love of Olive.

Scene from "The Kinship of Courage" (Majestic).

W. E. Lawrence is Carlos Dunning, while Francelia Billington is Olive Temple.

VITAGRAPH TO PRODUCE TWO BIG PICTURES.

The Vitagraph Company has secured for immediate production in pictures an original story by Robert Edgren entitled, "Black Caesar," and the late Morgan Robertson's wonderfully virile book story, "Masters of Men." Both are masterpieces of fiction and crowded with the thrilling action that is the life of a photodramatic masterpiece. Carefully selected casts, picked from the flower of the Vitagraph Company, will enact the principal roles in each of the features, which are destined to be representative Vitagraph features.

A NOVELTY SCOOP.

The Novelty Slide Company of New York has secured wonderful views of the Eastland disaster and has prepared an interesting set of twenty slides, in natural colors, each slide bearing a descriptive reading. The scenes are the best of exclusive views made by the Hearst staff and Underwood & Underwood, photographers.

These slides should prove a big attraction in picture theaters; they can be purchased outright or booked on rental. Publicity matter also is furnished, one sheet posters and advance slides.

TRANSPLANTING SPAIN TO CALIFORNIA.

What is said to be one of the most elaborate and extensive exterior scenes ever built in America for the purpose of providing a background for a photoplay production has been completed at the studios of the Lasky Feature Play Company, at Hollywood, Cal. The scene is a replica of the famous Plaza de Toros, Seville, Spain, and it furnishes the setting for some of the important action in the Lasky cinematograph production of "Carmen," in which Geraldine Farrar, the famous prima donna, appears as the star.

Building the Plaza de Toros Scene for "Carmen" at the Lasky Hollywood Studios.

The "plaza" was several weeks in building and required a steel frame construction for all the score of buildings which were built. Wood and plaster completed the building material. There was no less than twenty-five tons of plaster used, of which eight tons went into the construction of the gate and arch. The setting shows the intersection of two streets and the houses abutting on the highways have their balconies and porches just as they have in far away Seville.

One of the features of this great setting is a real stone and concrete drinking fountain in the center of the plaza. In the warm Californian summer days this has proved a boon to the several hundred workers in the Lasky studios. Long after the Plaza de Toros disappears to make way for some equally wonderful setting of a future production, the "Carmen" drinking fountain will remain at Hollywood. It will be removed from its present place to a location near the new studio building. Already it has been named, "Farrar Fountain."

METRO SEEKS SCRIPT FROM BARRIE.

Harry J. Cohen, now in England representing the Metro Pictures Corporation, has been instructed by that organization to make an earnest effort to prevail upon Sir J. M. Barrie, the noted British author, to write an original scenario for the use of the new Metro star, little Mary Miles Minter.

Miss Minter, who was recently seen in "Always in The Way" and who is now a permanent Metro player, wrote Sir Barrie several weeks ago, pleading with him to give her a screen "Peter Pan," and in reply Mr. Barrie told her that he had not taken enough interest in the actual production of motion pictures to know whether he could write a silent drama, but that he would be pleased to hear more from her on the subject, to which Miss Minter replied.

Mr. Cohen will see Sir James this week and hopes are entertained at the Metro offices that he will be successful.

"SCHOOL BELLS" (Harris).

"School Bells," a five reel feature photoplay written by Charles K. Harris, is being produced under the direction of Perry Vekroff, assisted by Eddie James, for the Charles K. Harris Feature Film Company at the Kinemacolor studio at Whitestone. This is the second feature produced by the Harris company, the first one being "When It Strikes Home," recently released through the World Film Corporation.

"School Bells" is the first motion picture produced which has featured so many children. The leading juvenile roles are played by Frank Longacre and Ethelmary Oakland, two stage children, who play the part of two Dutch children who are going to school in America. There are over 200 children in the picture. One of the features is a school room, in which there are over 65 children, reading, writing and teasing one another as if they were in real school. Nicholas Long, Jr., Jack McCauley and Florence are the other stage children appearing in the picture. Miss Gertrude Braun plays the role of the teacher.

Scene from "School Bells" (Harris).

The leading adult role in "School Bells" is that of Fritz Wagner, a German chemist, interpreted by Arthur Donaldson. Other members of the cast are Beulah Poynter, Robert Fisher and Gladys Peck.

KALEM FEATURE PLEASES NASHVILLE EXHIBITOR.

The Crescent Amusement Co.,
Nashville, Tenn., July 23, 1915.

Kalem Company,
235 West Twenty-third Street,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen: It is with the greatest pleasure that I write to thank you for releasing such a feature as "Midnight At Maxim's" on the regular program.

Usually a feature of this kind is released special and the exhibitor has to pay extra for it, but the releasing of this feature on the regular program has been a great help to the exhibitors and I wish to thank you, on behalf of the many theaters that I control and which will have the opportunity of showing this feature without extra cost. "Midnight At Maxim's" was quite a success in Nashville and we expect to play a return booking as soon as possible. Thanking you for this splendid production and trusting that many more will follow, I am,

Yours very truly,
THE CRESCENT AMUSEMENT CO.,
By TONY SUDEKUM.

P. S.—Inclosed find photograph of display.

THANHOUSER FALSTAFF ANNOUNCEMENT.

Beginning with Monday, Aug. 16, and every Monday thereafter Falstaff comedies will be released at the rate of two single-reelers weekly instead of one, as heretofore. This announcement means much at this time, when comedy is concededly the most difficult branch of production.

When Mr. Thanhouser launched the Falstaff comedy brand it was with a very definite policy in view. This was to build a consistent reliable product of the kind of comedy that will not wear out. That he has succeeded in this is proved when the market demands the doubling of the output.

MINUSA SCREEN FOR FOURTH ARTILLERY.

The troops stationed at Texas City, Tex., have a very complete projection apparatus and they have just recently added a brand new Minusa gold fibre screen to their equipment. The order was placed by Capt. G. E. Merrill, of the Fourth Artillery, at Texas City, in the home office of the Minusa Cine Products Company, at St. Louis.

FORTHCOMING ESSANAY RELEASES.

Essanay has an unusually strong list of releases for the next month, most of the photoplays having been written by authors of national prominence. Perhaps the most noted is the three-act comedy-drama, "The Woman Hater," written by the well known Chicago and Washington society leader and litterateur, Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, author of "The Crimson Wing." Henry B. Walthall takes the lead in this play, with Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn supporting him. "The Cave on Thunder Cloud," in two acts, by Mary Roberts Rinehart; "Business Rivals" and "Le Grand's Revenge," by Henry C. Rowland; "The Fable of the Tip and the Treasure" and "The Fable of the Roystering Blades," by George Ade, and "Rule Sixty-three," by P. G. Wodehouse, are among the other noted releases.

"THE JILT" (American).

An unscrupulous girl of good family, who trifles with the affections of men, is the leading character in "The Jilt," a two-part "Flying A" drama to be released Aug. 16. The role of Marie Thompson, who sins and suffers thereby, is wonderfully well played by Winifred Greenwood. This role into which Miss Greenwood is cast is most difficult, yet the film actress succeeds, and achieves a noteworthy success.

Scene from "The Jilt" (American).

The other characters in the pictures are played by Edward Coxen, who portrays Allan Boyd, George Field, who enacts the part of Roy Norman, and John Stepling and Lillian Knight give a commendable interpretation as Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, parents of the girl.

Notes of the Trade

WE TAKE it that Julian M. Solomon, Jr., of the Oliver Morosco Company is vacationing in Lexington, Ky. He postcards in a scene which is our idea of an ideal vacation place.

* * *

"The $100,000 Bill" is the unusual title of a stirring Alaskan drama, screened by the New York Motion Picture Corporation, for release on August 12. Walter Edwards has the lead, supported by a notable cast which includes Ethel Ullman, Leona Hutton, Lewis Durham and Robert Kortman.

* * *

"Billie" West plays the part of a crook (something she has not done before) in "Editions De Luxe," a Reliance production under way at the Reliance-Majestic studios. She is Freda alias "Society Shirley" in this photoplay.

* * *

Another long run for its features is reported by the V-L-S-E. "The Blindness of Virtue," four part Essanay production, on the Big Four Program, completed its second week's successful run at the La Salle Opera House in Chicago, playing to capacity houses at 25 cents admission.

* * *

John Emerson, the well-known Broadway actor, author and director, has been retained at the Griffith studio, to be starred in another multiple reel feature photoplay production. He will portray a character similar to the one he created in the Charles Frohman success, "The Conspiracy," that of Winthrop Clavering, the eccentric conceiver of mystery stories.

* * *

The Vitagraph Company will put in immediate picture production A. E. W. Mason's comedy, "Green Stockings," in which Margaret Anglin played the leading part for three years. Eugene Mullin has just finished the picturization which will make a feature picture in five parts.

* * *

Fred Burns, famous for the many cow-boy portrayals he has furnished in Reliance releases, was recently assigned to direct a picture at the Hollywood studios.

Arthur Row, who has been especially engaged by Edison to play Pitt Crawley, in "Vanity Fair," the part which he played with Mrs. Fiske, who is to be starred in her stage presentation of a few years ago, has succeeded equally well in such seemingly diverse fields as actor, writer, and producer. For Mr. Row, who has made considerable of a name as a student of Greek theaters and plays, recently produced at the New York University Maeterlinck's "Aglavaine and Selysette," and has appeared often as a reader before distinguished bodies.

Though a youth in appearance, he has a record of four seasons.

* * *

Captain Harry Lambert took a company of Vitagraph players to Lakewood, N. J., on Tuesday, July 27, where he took a number of exterior scenes of an old English Mansion, with extensive gardens. These scenes will be seen in "Youth," a three part Broadway Star Feature, in which Mlle. Valkyrien (Baroness Dewitz), Antonio Moreno, Donald Hall, and Frankie Mann will be seen in prominent parts.

* * *

The juvenile players Violet Wilkey and Harold Goodwin have leading parts in "The Little Orphans," a Reliance subject now being made at the Reliance-Majestic studios, under the direction of Ray Myers.

* * *

A picture in which Hale Hamilton, Charlie Murray, Polly Moran, Harry Booker and "Slim" Summerville, as well as a number of others appear will soon be released. Dick Jones, the youngest Keystone director put the picture on.

* * *

Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby have just signed another contract with the Universal whereby they will appear in productions both for the regular program and features.

* * *

The new policy of the Keystone Film Company, which limits the output to two two reel subjects a week has met with the instant favor of exhibitors everwwhere. Letters and telegrams have been pouring into the Edendale studios and the New York City headquarters from all parts of the country and Canada, expressing satisfaction with the new arrangement.

* * *

Allen Curtis has just completed another of his famous Joker comedies entitled, "Her Heroic Hubby." The scenario was written by Clarence Badger and in it the regular Joker cast plays the leading roles. Max Asher, Gale Henry, William Franey and Lillian Peacock comprise the cast.

* * *

W. Carey Wonderley is the author of "The Lie," in which Mme. Adoni Fovieri is making her Mutual debut. William Hinckley, Betty Marsh and Joseph Singleton also appear. Ray Myers directed.

* * *

Clarence Badger, director of the second Joker comedy company, has just completed his first Universal release, a one reel comedy written by himself under the title, "So They Made It a Family Affair." Carmen Phillips, Fred Ardarth, Eddie Boland and Bobbie Vernon play the leading roles.

* * *

Exhibitors all over the country realize the commercial value attached to the name of Thomas Jefferson and are featuring him prominently. In "The Americano," a two reel Reliance release in the Mutual program, Jefferson is supported by Levey Marsh, Raymond Wells, Kate Toncray, Larry Peyton and Carl Fornes, Jr. John Emerson directed.

* * *

"Leah, the Forsaken," with Vivian Prescott and William will be reissued by special request on the Universal program.

* * *

Director Reginald Barker is filming the wheat pit scenes for "The Conqueror," a powerful story of finance, in which Willard Mack, former legitimate star recently engaged by the New York Motion Picture Corporation, has the title role. He is being supported by a cast headed by Enid Markey.

* * *

Bobby Fuehrer is scheduled to reappear in Komic-Mutual films as a crook in "Safety First." Director Edward Dillon told the other producers at the Mutual studios that he couldn't spare his boy comedian for long, so he will again be seen in the company of Fay Tincher, Max Davidson, Chester Withey and Frank Darien.

Picture Theaters Projected

RIO VISTA, CALIF.—A new moving picture theater has been opened here by P. S. Braun.

VALLEJO, CALIF.—A. Bernheim is having plans prepared for a commodious moving picture theater to be erected here in the near future.

CRAIG, COLO.—J. R. Kilpatrick is planning to erect a two-story moving picture theater, store and office building, 75 by 75 feet, to cost about $20,000.

GALESBURG, ILL.—Harvey Craig is having plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater, 65 by 132 feet, to cost $75,000.

MILFORD, ILL.—H. V. Brown will build an addition to his moving picture theater, 20 by 60 feet, to cost $4,000.

BURNETTSVILLE, IND.—Work on the construction of a new moving picture theater for Anton Perrigo will be completed in about thirty days.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The Meridian Theater Company is planning to erect a two-story moving picture theater and store building, 70 by 195 feet.

ELLSWORTH, KANS.—The theater building owned by G. T. Tremble will be remodeled. The improvements will cost approximately $15,000.

LYNN, MASS.—John A. Swain, 67 State street, has obtained the contract to make alterations to the theater building of the Lynn Amusement Co. The improvements will cost about $5,000.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—A new airdome has been opened on Mississippi avenue, opposite Lafayette Park. It has been named the Parkview and has seating capacity for about 1,200 persons.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Extensive alterations have been made to the Robin Theater, 2301 Robin avenue. New equipment has also been added.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—I. Fox has taken over the interest of G. A. Gordon in the Happy Hour theater.

LINCOLN, NEB.—The Orpheum Building Co., 1323 P street, will shortly begin work on the erection of a two-story moving picture theater, 100 by 142 feet, to cost $75,000. The house will be known as the Orpheum. The Acme Amusement Company are the lessees.

DUNKIRK, N. Y.—James L. Drohen, 23 North 4th street, will erect a one, and two-story theater, store and office building, 60 by 150 feet.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Nathan Fromm, 691 Broadway, is planning to build a two-story moving picture theater, 46 by 100 feet.

WAVERLY, N. Y.—Pulford & Dempsey, Elmira, N. Y., have been awarded the contract to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 60 by 80 feet, to cost $10,000, for John Collins, Ithaca, N. Y.

CINCINNATI, O.—The interior of the Alhambra theater, located at 146-48 West 5th street, has been redecorated. Two hundred chairs have also been added to the seating capacity of the house.

CLEVELAND, O.—O. G. and F. Melaragno will shortly erect a commodious new theater and office building at the corner of Central avenue and East 14th street to cost approximately $60,000.

SYLVANIA, O.—E. P. Parker, Cleveland, O., will build a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 90 feet, to cost $8,000.

IDABELL, OKLA.—J. B. Lee expects to have his new moving picture theater completed and opened to the public in the course of a few weeks.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—James Geho, 949 Gordon street, has been awarded the contract to erect a one-story addition, 32 by 30 feet, to cost $1,500, to a moving picture theater, for Nedison Co., 338 N. Fulton street.

BROOKVILLE, PA.—Brookville Park Association is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, to cost about $50,000.

GLASSPORT, PA.—Hapsley Brothers have obtained the contract to build a one-story addition to a moving picture theater for J. H. McGreevy, to cost $2,500.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—S. & B. Amusement Company are having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 113 by 65 feet, to cost $30,000.

CLIFTON, TEXAS.—Griffin Brothers have taken over the Lyric theater, and will operate it as a first-class moving picture house.

COLLINSVILLE, TEXAS.—The Pastime moving picture theater has been purchased by C. L. Hilger.

WANTED
Experienced Scenario Writer

Fine opening for right man with prominent New York company. Write qualifications fully at once. Strictly confidential. Address: "Originality," c/o Moving Picture World, New York.

The largest staff of experts in all departments makes the MOVING PICTURE WORLD the one paper in the trade that fully fills the requirements of every reader.

THE MOTION PICTURE STORY (A Textbook of Photoplay Writing)
By WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT

It contains authentic information that you are looking for daily. It answers all the questions that confront you when you have trouble in writing your scenario. It has over 240 pages—from cover to cover a masterpiece in suggestion, expert advice, authentic explanations, rules and example.

It contains three model plays in the correct technical form. Endorsed by Sargent, Hall, Leeds, Peacocke, McClosky, Plimpton, etc. It is a most valuable guide book to have constantly at your right hand to direct you to greater achievements.

Artistically bound in cloth and gold stamped. Price, Two Dollars Postpaid.

LUNDEEN PUBLISHING CO., Publishers Fergus Falls, Minn.

Descriptive literature sent free by addressing Box 91

SOUTHWESTERN NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

FREE motion picture shows are given for the Mexican residents of the corral district in San Antonio, Tex., every Wednesday night on the lawn of the Immaculate Heart of Mary church. The work is under the auspices of the philanthropic department of the Daughters of Isabella. Educational pictures will be added later to the religious, comedy and dramatic pictures now shown.

Manager Momand has made some innovations at the Rex theater in Waco, Tex. He had made Saturday childrens' day, having "Rumpelstiltskin" as his first offering. He photographed the mothers and children at this first show. A limited number of special summer tickets—$1.30 worth for $1.00—were sold. These were transferable.

Short-change artists recently made a raid on motion picture theaters in Galveston, Tex. The pair would approach a ticket window, the front man would lay down a $5 bill and ask for two tickets. His companion would tell him that he had the change and begin searching in his pockets for the money. In the meantime the first man would ask for five silver dollars. As the ticket seller would shove the dollars forward the other man would lay the price of two tickets in the window. While the ticket seller was handing out the tickets the first man would have covered the bill and silver with his hand and shove it all back to the girl, asking for a $10 bill for the silver and five. In nearly every case the request was granted and the men disappeared without using their tickets.

Col. J. S. Rogers, commanding the Sixth United States Infantry at Douglas, Ariz., has issued orders forbidding attendance at the camp moving picture show in shirt sleeves and other negligee. The men must wear the regulation olive drab shirt or blouse.

The Lyric theater at Hot Springs, Ark., closed for two weeks for overhauling was dated to open early in August under new management.

The Grand Opera house at San Antonio, Tex., enlarged on the Charles Chaplin contest idea by calling also for local imitators of Ford Sterling.

The Queen at San Antonio, Tex., has been giving Charles Chaplin statuettes to lucky patrons.

The Pearce theater, at Houston, Texas, had a "Children's Day," running "Sleeping Beauty" until 6 p. m. for the youngsters at 5 cents.

The Tivoli at Beaumont, Tex., ran a Mary Pickford picture on the day it gave half the proceeds to the babies' free ice and milk fund.

Allessandro's band of twenty-five pieces is an attraction at the reopened Cozy theater in Waco, Tex., giving daily concerts.

IN DETROIT.

The Family theater, New Baltimore, Mich., has closed for lack of patronage.

Joe Friedman has been appointed assistant to Abe Siegel, manager of the Detroit branch of the Fox Film Corporation. Mr. Friedman started with the company as city salesman. His new position is in the nature of a promotion for good work.

The Detroit branch of the Fox Film Corporation in the Peter Smith building is doing so well that more room is necessary. Extensive remodeling is now being done at the company's offices, new partitions being added and the shipping room materially enlarged, which will give Manager Abe Siegel a private office, as well as private quarters for his bookkeeping department. In this connection it might be stated that the marriage of Mr. Siegel to Miss Levy of Philadelphia will take place at the home of the bride on Sunday, August 15th.

A. Carlos, general representative of the Fox Film Corporation, was a recent visitor in Detroit.

Auctioning Films

Detroit Exchange Managers Perplexed Over Best Method of Exploiting Big, New Features—Often Several Exhibitors Want the First Run, Yet Some Refuse to Bid —Practice Growing of Putting Up These to Highest Bidder.

By Jacob Smith, Detroit Correspondent Moving Picture World.

BIDDING for feature pictures is a practice that is growing very rapidly among the leading exhibitors of Detroit. An exchange man told me the other day that no less than five people had asked for first run on one of his big features, and that he really didn't know what to do. He wanted to be friendly with all of them, and yet he felt that he must sell to the one making the best offer.

One exhibitor who was asked by this exchange man how much he would pay replied by saying: "We don't bid for any pictures. Tell me your price and I will fell you how much we can afford to pay." The exchangeman said he wasn't setting any price and that the picture would go to the one paying the highest price. The exhibitor answered: "You can count me out." Now, there are two sides to this matter. You can hardly blame the exchange for getting all it can for first-run rights, and yet the practice for bidding for pictures really demoralizes the industry because there is no standard to work from.

The writer would like to see this subject further discussed, and invites comments both from exhibitors and exchange men as to their views. The point is, should the leading producing companies tie up with one house and let that house boost that particular company's pictures, or should all of the exhibitors do business on the "open booking" basis, which means that they must bid for their pictures. (The Detroit office of the Moving Picture World is at 503 Free Press building.)

PROGRESSIVE ADVERTISING.

It is surprising the amount of money being spent each week by the leading exhibitors of Detroit in advertising and publicity. All of the larger houses—such as the Washington, Broadway-Strand and Majestic—have paid press agents, who work along the same lines as the press agents for the legitimate dramatic show houses. These theaters are using large space in the daily newspapers every day, as well as other methods of getting publicity, such as the billboards, street cars, window cars, etc. The Broadway-Strand has even gone so far as to give away leather photographs of the leading film stars. The use of "house organs" is on the increase as well as high-grade programs. It only goes to prove that moving picture theaters are reaching the point where they realize the value of publicity and advertising, and they are going about it in the right way.

A "DOLL" OF A THEATER.

Frank Drew, who is building the Drury Lane theater at Woodward avenue, near Grand Circus Park, says that he expects to have the house ready to decorate by November 1st, which means that it will be ready to open about Christmas time. Mr. Drew says it will be a "doll" of a theater, seating about 600, with a change of pictures daily. When asked what kind of pictures he would show, Mr. Drew said: "I am not worrying about that. By the time we are ready to open there will be plenty of good stuff available."

BERT ST. JOHN TO MANAGE MAJESTIC AT GRAND RAPIDS.

A. J. Gillingham, who recently took over the lease of the Majestic theater in Grand Rapids, Mich., which is now being remodeled, announces the appointment of Bert St. John as manager when it opens in August. Mr. St. John is now manager of the Toyland theater at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. For many years he was associated with B. C. Whitney of Detroit, both as a producer and manager.

ARBOR THEATER SOLD.

The Arbor theater, Woodward and Harper avenues, has been sold by Alvan D. Hersch to George Cottrell, who has already taken possession and who is managing it now. Mr. Hersch is an attorney and is devoting a great deal of time to the leading film exchanges, which he represents as counselor. Mr. Cottrell was formerly in the real estate business.

HEARD AT THE WORLD FILM EXCHANGE.

A. W. Blankmeyer, of the Grand Circus theater, played the World film feature, "Marrying Money," with Clara Kimball Young on July 26, 27 and 28. He said that as long as he has been in business he never heard people comment so favorably or so much about one particular feature. Miss Young has never done better work, while the picture itself is put on unusually well, from every standpoint—photography, production, cast and story.

Denham Palmer, east central division manager of the World Film Corporation, with headquarters at Cleveland, was in Detroit July 28, and expressed himself as being extremely pleased with local conditions.

DETROIT FLASHES.

Charles H. Miles, who owns theaters in Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsbugh, says he is watching the moving picture industry with a great deal of interest. Mr. Miles has always been an ardent devotee to the vaudeville end of the theatrical business and never before gave any serious thought to pictures. But during the last two months he has given more attention to pictures, and is so convinced of their ability to draw the best trade in large numbers that he has decided to abandon vaudeville in his Pittsburgh house and play pictures instead when that playhouse re-opens in September. For a while his Detroit and Cleveland theaters will continue to play a combination of vaudeville and pictures.

In its prospectus, the Ferry Field Theater Company, with offices at 1026 Dime Bank Building, state that the gross earning capacity per year of the theater which they will erect at Grand River and the boulevard will be $164,320, based on 1,200 seats at 10, 15 and 20 cents, although average capacity should show yearly earnings of $95,100. The company is placing a limited amount of stock on the market at $10 per share. Theodore L. Smith is president of the company. He is also secretary and treasurer of the Maxine theater.

The Empire theater, Detroit, is showing a decided tendency towards feature pictures. For a whole it was thought that features were not a good thing for the Empire on account of its shopping-center location, but Manager Smith says that feature days seem to be the largest in point of receipts, which is the best answer in the world that features are what the people want. For this reason he has arranged to show Universal-Broadway features every Wednesday.

The recent pleading of guilty by Ben Gettleman, of Hancock, Mich., to a violation of the motion-picture law by employing an under-aged operator. has caused Fire Marshal John T. Winship again to call attention of the moving picture theater owners to the law in all of its details.

Tennessee Indictments

Sunday Law Charges Brought Against Several Chattanooga Exhibitors in Test Case to Get Final Interpretation of Law—Bound Over to Grand Jury—Picture Men Are in This Fight to the Finish.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Chattanooga Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

IN all probability Chattanooga, Tenn., in the future will be without Sunday moving picture shows, if the proprietors of a number of the moving picture houses are convicted on indictments returned against them in the report of the grand jury, which was submitted to Judge McReynolds, of the Criminal Court. For alleged violation—a test case—of the Sunday laws in allowing their picture houses to remain open on the Sabbath, true bills were returned against Howell Graham, manager of the Quality Way Shows; F. H. Dowler and F. H. Dowler, Jr., of the Alcazar and Lyric theaters, and W. F. Howell, C. T. Bobo, H. M. Lusk, M. H. Silverman and Peter Bloch, managers of picture houses scattered all over the city.

The moving picture men had previously been arrested by Sheriff Bush. They waived examination before the magistrate, and were bound over to the grand jury. The indictments against the picture men read that each, "heretofore on the 4th day of July, 1915, in Hamilton county, did unlawfully, on Sunday, and on other Sundays before such date, within twelve months thereof, follow his usual vocation by operating in the City of Chattanooga a moving picture show at which an admission fee was charged, and in which were gathered large crowds of people."

A prominent attorney later suggested that confusion as to the meaning of the word "avocation" might make the indictments demurrable. Attorney-General Whittaker, in his letter to Sheriff Bush, which started the prosecution of the moving picture men, stated that "the carrying on of one's ordinary business on Sunday is an indictable offense, and hence a violation of the law." Webster defines the singular of avocation as "that which calls one away from one's regular employment or vocation." If this construction of the meaning of the word is taken, the indictments might apply to a Sunday game of golf or other amusement. The plural of the word, however, is defined as "usual employment." The plural form of the word appears in the statute covering the offense. Even the Supreme Court has disregarded the distinction, using this language in construing the statute in question: "The statute makes it unlawful for anyone of the enumerated classes to follow his ordinary or secular avocation on the Sabbath day." However, the moving picture men are in this fight to a finish and will know whether the law is constitutional or unconstitutional and a few other things by the time the case is decided.

THE ROBERT HILL & CO. BUY CRYSTAL AND DIXIE.

The most important deal in Tullahoma, Tenn., amusement circles since the sale of the Wigwam theater by Doak Aydelott to S. H. Bixey, was consummated on July 20, when Robert Hill & Co. purchased the Dixie theater from Miss Clara Norton, and the Crystal theater from Homer Smith. The new management has not announced its future plans, but both theaters will continue for the present as 10-cent motion picture houses.

THE "QUEEN NEWS."

George N. Shorey, manager of the Queen theater, of Knoxville, Tenn., is publishing a small paper under the title of "Queen News." This paper lists prominent moving picture people who visit the city, news of the plays and players to be seen at the theater, and other items of interest to the picture fans. The paper is published on Monday and is sent out to a big mailing list of regular patrons of the theater.

TENNESSEE GOSSIP.

Tony Sudekum, president and general manager of the Crescent Amusement Company, of Nashville, recently returned from a trip to Chicago, Detroit, Louisville and other points. Mr. Sudekum is contemplating the erection of another motion picture theater in Nashville.

Richard C. Travers, leading man with the Essanay Company, who recently completed his part in conjunction with Viola Allen in "The White Sister," recently arrived in Chattanooga, Tenn., to take part with the Essanay Company's Signal Mountain producing squad in producing Mary Roberts Rhinehart's play "Affinities."

The International Moving Picture & Film Company, of Nashville, Tenn., has been incorporated by E. H. Smith, C. Smith, D. D. Dixon and others, all of Watertown, Tenn., to manufacture devices used in moving picture theaters.

At Knoxville, Tenn., the Queen theater recently had a camera man to take pictures of the crowds which were present at Beaman's Lake on a busy Sunday. The pictures were later shown at the theater and big attendances were present to see themselves as others saw them.

Mary Pickford made another big hit with patrons of the Fifth Avenue theater, of Nashville, Tenn., when she recently appeared in the five-reel Famous Players production of "Little Pal," the big, gripping Alaskan play in which she takes the part of a half-breed. Patrons of the Fifth Avenue theater saw Miss Pickford in such plays as "Tess of the Storm Country," "Such a Little Queen," "Hearts Adrift," "Behind the Scenes," "Mistress Nell," "Cinderella," "Fanchon the Cricket" and many other big productions. The patrons of the theater have become very much interested in the widely differentiating roles which Miss Pickford is enabled to take with ease, and she always plays to packed houses in the Tennessee Capital.

STOCK OF EIGHT THEATERS AUCTIONED FOR $2,000.

By A. H. Giebler, St. Louis Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

TEN thousand and twelve shares in eight St. Louis theaters, with a par valuation of $54,860, were sold at auction on July 24 for $2,000. The stock was pledged as collateral security for loans amounting to $5,400, made by Harry Koplar to the Vaudeville Theater Construction Company. The collection of securities included 240 shares in the Shenandoah theater, of a par valuation of $25 each, and stocks of a par valuation of $5 each, as follows: King's theater, 3,000 shares; Marshfield theater, 500; Montgomery theater, 1,529; Novelty theater, 1,000; Mikado theater, 2,904; Gravois theater, 439; Cherokee theater, 400. The Shenandoah, King's, Marshfield and Novelty theater stock went to William Goldman for $950, and the other stocks were purchased by A. F. Forster for $1,050.

SELIG PARTY ATTEND BANQUET IN ST. LOUIS.

The Selig Polyscope Company's excursion train to the Panama-Pacific Exposition stopped in St. Louis on the way back to Chicago, and the members of the party were given a banquet at the Hotel Jefferson. More than 120 actors, scenario writers, exhibitors and producers were in the party, which was in charge of Clarence A. Frambers. In regard to the progress of the moving picture industry, Mr. Frambers is quoted as saying that prices will go up instead of down, and that in the future exhibitors of high class features will ask a price of admission in some proportion to the cost of the production. "It is the aim of producers behind the syndicate to produce higher grade pictures than ever before. Instead of the motion picture prices getting down to a nickel they will go the other way."

ST. LOUIS' FREE PICTURES CONFINED TO CONGESTED DISTRICT.

A delegation from the Theater Managers' and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis, headed by J. William Beubach, manager of the Nebraska airdome, have succeeded in getting the promoters of the free moving picture shows in the city to confine the exhibitions to the really congested districts, where there are not many theaters and where the people are very poor. Park Commissioner Cunliff told the committee that he could not eliminate the free pictures entirely, as the Board of Aldermen has set aside money for them and the contracts could not be broken, but he agreed to carry out any suggestion that might put an end to competition between the city and legitimate business. Mr. Deubach claims that this arrangement will permit a dozen exhibitors to remain in business that otherwise would have been forced to close.

SCHERRERS LEASE THE MIKADO THEATER FOR SIX YEARS.

Scherrer Brothers have leased the Mikado theater, at 5951 Easton avenue, for a term of six years from the Hagerman-Fitzsimmons Real Estate Co., who control a chain of high-class theaters in St. Louis, including the Park, a $100,000 structure at Delmar and Hamilton avenues, and the Shenandoah, a $75,000 building at Grand and Shenandoah avenues. The lease for the Mikado provides an annual rental of $33,000. Scherrer Brothers have tried out a plan of giving only high class features and pictures at the Mikado for several months, after the theater had been suffering from a reputation of poor shows and unruly audiences, and the long lease just taken by the firm speaks well for all the picture bill.

HEARD IN ST. LOUIS.

When "The Island of Regeneration" was shown at the New Grand Central during the week of July 25, Wm. Sievers, manager of the theater, was under considerable difficulties, owing to a suit brought by him, as manager of the New Grand Central Theater Company, and the V-L-S-E Company, against the Board of Police Commissioners, Chief of Police William Young and Chief of Detectives Samuel B. Allender. A temporary injunction restraining interference with the production of the photoplay was granted Mr. Sievers. The injunction suit was filed after complaint against a bathing scene in the film had been made to the police department by Attorney E. V. P. Schneiderhahn, representing the Federation of Catholic Societies. Mr. Schneiderhahn said two representatives of the organization and the morality squad of the police department had viewed the films at a trial performance, and came to the conclusion that certain parts should be left out. Mr. Sievers invited fifty representative St. Louis citizens to view the pictures, and they assured him they did not find anything objectionable in the films. At the first showing of the films on Sunday, July 25, the audiences were the largest the theater ever had, and at the conclusion of the picture almost the entire audience applauded heartily, a sure sign of approval from the conservative patrons of the New Grand Central.

William West, private watchman at the Novelty theater, 3530 Easton avenue, discovered a man with a jimmy hiding under a rear stairway of the theater at about 8.30 p. m. on July 28. West seized the burglar and was taking him to the nearest patrol box, a block away, when the man tripped him and escaped Three weeks before this $15 worth of stolen jewelry was found under the stairs, and West believes the man with the jimmy was the thief who had stolen the jewelry and had come to recover it.

John Karzin, president of the McKinley Amusement Company, and proprietor of the Casino and Royal theaters, on Market street, reports that the Casino at 1620 Market street is to be rebuilt. The present wall of the Casino will be used, but as it is only 50 feet in length, it will be extended 50 feet further, and the building, when completed, will be 50 feet wide and 100 feet deep at the back, and 25 feet wide at the entrance, giving an L shape to the auditorium. The new building will have a balcony, and the seating capacity will be 900, of which 268 seats will be in the balcony. The front will be of white enameled brick, with a canopy extending over the pavement. This will be the largest moving picture house on Market street, and will be ready for business when the airdome season closes. Mr. Karzin, owner of the Casino, also owns the Royal, across the street from the Casino, and a big airdome at 18th and Chestnut streets, besides being the president of the McKinley Amusement Company, that operates the Majestic theater at 1024 Franklin avenue.

LOUISVILLE NOTES.

A. J. Wagner, who deserted the moving picture business a few months ago to enter the shoe business, has decided to spend a portion of his time in the old game, and has taken charge of the airdome of the Germantown Amusement Company, at Clay and Kentucky streets.

Herschel Mills, who for the past two years has been connected with the Dixie theater, of Russellville, Ky., recently resigned his position when the theater began using power from the local power house. When the theater was first built there was no public power plant in the city, and Mills operated the private plant and did other work around the theater.

The Hazard Motion Picture Company, of Hazard, Ky., a recently organized producing company, is making a number of pictures of the various mountain towns just now. A "Movie Queen" is selected in the various towns filmed, and in this way a great deal more interest is stirred up. A voting contest of some kind is generally used to secure the "Queen."

The Tabb theater, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., was recently closed for several days while improvements were under way. The theater reopened with Orrin Johnson, in "Satan Sanderson." The new Paramount theater is now running and the city has two picture houses.

The Pastime theater of Maysville, Ky., is still in financial difficulties, and it is probable that the theater will be sold shortly to satisfy a judgment of $150 held by the Farmers' & Drovers' Bank, in which was recently sustained by the county court. The theater was successful for a number of years, but changes in management and other theaters opening in the city finally placed the show house in financial trouble.

Ralph Whittinghill, of Jeffersonville, Ind., who was employed as a moving picture operator in Louisville, died recently of myelitis, following an illness of two weeks. He and his family came to Louisville from Brandenburg, Ky., a short time ago.

The moving picture theater in many of the small towns throughout the Kentucky district are becoming headquarters for all big civic movements. The Fairland airdome, of Corbin, Ky., was recently used by the Corbin Business Men's Club when they entertained a large delegation of Louisville boosters who represented the Louisville Commercial club on a trade-extension trip. Over 500 persons were present.

Mushroom Film Concerns

Get-Rich-Quick Picture Company Promoters Find Credulous Investors for Their Worthless Stock Sales—Many Such Temporarily in the Field—Leave a Narrowed Market for Really Promising Undertakings—A Case in Hand.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Louisville Correspondent of Moving Picture World

PROMOTERS of legitimate film companies and other moving picture projects are strongly of the opinion that some movement should be started to keep down money grabbing and "get rich quick" concerns out of the field. It is probable that there are more moving picture schemes started just now than there were gold mining schemes promoted during the Bonanza era shortly following the Civil War.

Moving picture concerns are being incorporated daily for large amounts, and in many cases the shares are placed within reach of the smallest investors who are promised fabulous returns on their investments. Few of these schemes ever pan out and the investors hold the bag after a few hundred feet of film has been produced, and officers' salaries and various expenses paid. The consequence is that legitimate concerns are having considerable trouble in floating their stocks, and the small investors reach for their gun when you mention moving picture investments. However, the adage still stands that "there is a fool born every minute," and some of the smaller ones are bound to be singed from time to time.

One of the most interesting of the "get rich quick" or "Wallingford schemes" which has been "pulled" in this district for some time was that of Charles W. Franklin, 34, who hails from Paducah, Ky., and David Griffin, 24, of Bloomington, Ind., who recently tried to organize a $100.000 moving picture concern in Indianapolis, Ind. When arrested Franklin was discovered to have a total capital of 11 cents. Mr. Franklin apparently found a fertile field as far as securing actors was concerned, but getting money was another matter. There was no evidence to show that Franklin had attempted to defraud anyone, and Judge Deery discharged the men. The court told Franklin, "You had better get out of town before a sanity inquest is held on you." It is said that Franklin proposed to start an actors' school and to charge a tuition fee of $50.

"HYPOCRITES" GOES WELL IN LOUISVILLE.

At the time of our last week's issue, many Louisville exhibitors were anxious about the result of the prospective showing of the Bosworth (Paramount) offering, "The Hypocrites," at the Alamo. Some expected that local censorship would be agitated, but their fears were unfounded, as the following telegram will show: "Report regarding 'Hypocrites was based on criticism of other exhibitors who had seen the picture and were afraid the local public would not stand for it. As it happened, however, the exhibition was without incident, Mayor Buschemeyer seeing the picture and giving it his approval."

PRIZE INSURANCE FILM COMING.

The Insurance Field, an insurance trade paper published at Louisville, recently staged a prize contest for the best insurance moving picture play. The contest was open to all insurance men, and a large number of high class scenarios were submitted during May and June. The winners in the contest will be announced in the August number of the Life Insurance Educator Monthly, one of the papers gotten out by the concern. The prizes amounted to $50 and were divided into $25 for the best scenario, $10 for the second best, and $5 each for the next three. These scenarios will probably be produced later on and will be shown at various insurance men's meetings throughout the country.

THE NEW THEATRICAL COMBINE

Mr. Sievers originally planned to organize a corporation of principal theater owners of the United States with a stock of about $50,000 to buy, sell and probably produce films for a number of the leading exhibitors scattered over the entire country. The majority of those present at a recent meeting were of the opinion that it would take a capital stock of somewhere in the neighborhood of $2,000,000 to organize a company such as that suggested.

Mr. Dittmar of the Majestic Amusement Co. of Louisville is serving on the temporary committee on organization and membership which is composed of the principal theater owners of the country, and to all of those present at the meeting held in Chicago. Mr. Dittmar stated that a good deal had to be done before the members would be in position to organize a permanent company, and that a meeting would be held on August 25 in Chicago to complete arrangements.

Those present at the meeting and who are working on organizing and securing members are: J. E. Bryant, Waterloo, Ia.; William Sievers, St. Louis, Mo.; E. H. Hulsey, Dallas, Tex.; Tom H. Boland, Oklahoma City, Okla.; N. H. Gordon, Boston, Mass.; Thomas Saxe, Milwaukee, Wis.; Thomas Furniss, Duluth, Minn.; J. H. Kunsky, Detroit, Mich.; E. Mandelbaum, Cleveland, O.; A. H. Blank, Des Moines, Ia.; Aaron Jones, Chicago, Ill.; F. J. Rembusch, Shelbyville, Ind.; J. Ditmars, Louisville, Ky.; Tom Moore, Washington, D. C.; J. Eugene Pearce, New Orleans, La.; Max Spiegel, New York City; M. H. Mark, New York City; Turner & Dahnken, San Francisco, Cal.; H. A. Sims, Salt Lake City, Utah.

RENEWS OLD CONTRACT WITH OPERATORS' UNION.

The Louisville Photoplay Association has just renewed a contract with the union machine operators of Louisville whereby the old contract, which has been in existence for some months, will be continued for eighteen months. The local association had a series of short meetings at which the matter was discussed before the contract was completed. The organization is now holding its meeting in the big directors' room of the Fouth Avenue Amusement Company, over the Alamo theater, instead of in the cramped quarters over the Novelty theater, which were used for a year or two.

QUICK WITTED OPERATOR HUGHES.

Harry Hughes, an operator at the Casino theater, of Louisville, and the doormen at the theater displayed considerable coolness when a reel took fire while being run through one of the machines on Sunday evening, July 25. Hughes was enveloped in fire from ignited material in the room. He quickly grabbed a fire extinguisher, and had the blaze out in a jiffy.

The patrons of the theater started for the exits when the flash occurred, but there was no stampede, as the doormen threw wide the big double doors and told the people that there was no danger, and that the blaze was out. The fire department had practically nothing to do when it arrived. One machine was spoiled, and a new Simplex machine was purchased. The theater was closed on Monday, but resumed operations on Tuesday. Hughes was burned about the face and hands and his clothing was badly scorched, but he was not seriously injured. The fire occurred shortly after eight o'clock.

New House in Oakland, Pa.

Natatorium Building Being Remodeled—Will Be Made Into Up-to-Date Picture Theater—Located Between Atwood and Meyran Avenues—Designed to Seat 750 People—Those Who Are Interested in the New Project.

Special to Moving Picture World from Pittsburgh News Service.

OAKLAND is to have a new moving picture theater in the Natatorium building. The lower floors, being remodeled, show careful attention to details and give promise of a thoroughly up-to-date and practical theater. The building, between Atwood and Meyran avenues, runs to a paved alley way in the rear, and with this private alley complies fully with the city laws on the subject of exits. The plans call for the abandonment of the present swimming pool and the lowering of the auditorium floor to the Forbes street level. The present stone steps leading to the entrance will be done away with. The auditorium ceiling will be 24 feet high. The floors above the auditorium will not be disturbed by the alterations, although the stairs will be moved to the left of the entrance, and a new elevator lobby constructed. It will seat 750 persons.

The owners of the Oakland Natatorium building are the Oakland Amusement Company; George H. Schwan is the architect; C. H. Keer Construction Company are the contractors, and the lessee is James B. Clark. The operation company will be the Rowland and Clark theaters, which also operates the Regent, in East Liberty, the Belmar in Homewood, the Arsenal in Lawrenceville, the Bellevue and the Oakland and the Schenley Photo play in Oakland, which latter house will be discontinued on the completion of the new house. Construction starts July 26, and the date set for the opening is November 1.

HOW PITTSBURGH TOOK THE HONOR.

The entire motion picture trade of Pittsburgh joined in one big cheer last week and it seems as though they would never get done talking about it, when they learned that Pittsburgh was signally honored at the annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in San Francisco, Cal., when Fred J. Herrington was chosen president of the organization.

Every one was more than pleased and just bubbling over with joy when they learned of the choice for president, and they are equally satisfied that Mr. Herrington will undoubtedly endeavor to institute a policy of progress and expansion in the League. His ideas on censorship are well known—absolute, unequivocal repeal of all existing censor laws and prevention of the enactment of the same in the future, "Free speech, free press, free films" is his motto.

INSPECTOR DELAYS BUILDING PERMIT IN ERIE.

Although application for a permit to begin operations on the new theater in State street, between Ninth and Tenth streets, Erie, Pa., was made more than a month ago, Daniel P. Dundon, building inspector, has withheld his permission. Slight technicalities in the plans which call for a long entrance to the theater, it is said, are holding up the permit.

For the past two weeks workmen have been employed in tearing down the structures in the rear, where the theater proper will be located. Leo Wortheimer, of Buffalo, who is the owner of the building, has been in the city several times preparatory to having work started. Plans for the theater have been sent to Harrisburg authorities and have been approved, but it is said that Inspector Dundon is not quite willing that the long entrance from State street should be constructed.

Estimates of the construction of the theater, which have been given the building department, amount to $24,000, but do not include the furnishings, which it is expected will cost more than $25,000. The building will be more than 100 feet in depth and about 60 feet wide. It will have a seating capacity of more than fifteen hundred persons.

TOLD IN THE SMOKEY CITY.

The Metropolitan Booking Offices, of Pittsburgh, announce that they have received a large consignment of comedies featuring Charles Chaplin, which they are handling as direct representatives of a well known importer.

A beautiful new moving picture theater is being built in Brownsville, Pa., near Pittsburgh, with a seating capacity of 700. James Lasky, a Uniontown florist, is building the theater, assisted by J. D. Polites, of the Majestic theater, in Charleroi, in selecting the films for the new house.

Work has been started on the remodeling and enlarging of the Orpheum theater building at the corner of Main and North streets, Butler, Pa., and operations will be pushed as rapidly as possible as the management is hopeful that the improvements will be completed for the opening of the remodeled playhouse some time in August.

Joseph S. Skirboll, general manager of the Pittsburgh, Chicago, and Kansas City offices of the Metro Pictures Service, returned last week from an extended tour of the West. He says that the Metro program is in great demand in the West and that some of the biggest houses in Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City contracted for the service during the past few weeks.

George J. Sweitzer opened his Century Family theater in East Ohio street, Northside, Pittsburgh, last week. This is one of the prettiest houses on the Northside and is complete in every detail and is the only house on Ohio street using direct current for the projection of their pictures. The interior decorations are old rose, green and gold.

The Avenue theater, in Turtle Creek, Po., owned by H. C. Bowers, has been closed. Mr. Bowers purchased this house May 1. He is looking for another location.

The Metro offices, in Pittsburgh, are again being enlarged and remodeled. Due to the rapidly increasing business, the present quarters are always found crowded and more room is necessary. Accordingly the second floor of the building, which is located at 212 Fourth avenue, is to be taken up almost entirely by offices. Another stenographer and shipper was added to the force last week.

An application for a Pennsylvania State charter of incorporation has been made by Leo Wertheimer, William J.Hayes, C. B. Hayes, G. C. Boughton and William H. Roueche, for the Strand Amusement Company of Erie, Pa.

Al W. Cross, manager of the Hudson Feature Film Company, of Pittsburgh, announces that he will leave for New York about Aug. 1 for a week's business trip, when he expects to close several deals for big subjects, negotiations for which have been pending for some time and which will be included in a series of big subjects to be released by him during the fall and winter season.

Edward Thompson, of the Hudson Feature Film Company, of Pittsburgh, is working in central and southern Ohio and is breaking all records for bookings.

J. C. Ragland, a well known theatrical and newspaper man, is now on the road for George Kleine, receiving his instructions from M. F. Gibbon, local manager for that concern.

John Hafner, of Natrona, Pa., has sold his Keystone theater there and is said to be looking for some other proposition in the motion picture business.

Michaels & Freeman, of Pittsburgh, report the sale of prints on the "Italian-Austrian War," on which they own the negatives and United States rights, to exchange men in Ohio and Massachusetts.

S. A. Pfender, owner of the Royal theater, at 1940 East street, Northside, Pittsburgh, has sold that house and is now enjoying a well earned vacation. It is expected that he will buy another theater in the fall.

Antonio Cioritarese has started work on the erection of a new motion picture theater in Pitcairn, Pa. It will be an up-to-date house and will be finished about October 1.

Pete Demas, proprietor of the Minerva theater, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, is spending his vacation in New York City.

The new moving picture house being erected on the Heinz lot at Thirty-fourth and Butler streets, Pittsburgh, will be known as the Penn theater. The date of opening has not been announced as yet.

David Adler, of Friedberg & Adler, of the Alhambra theater, East Liberty, says their handsome new house in Cleveland will be named the Strand.

Charles Miller, who left the Smoky City six months ago to take charge of the Kansas City office of the Metro Picture Service, is back again in Pittsburgh, managing the special features and serial department of the Universal Exchange. He says he is very glad to get back in the old town again and that he is doing exceedingly well since he took charge of his new position.

The management of the Grand and Keystone theaters, in Natrona, Pa., have closed down the Grand for a few weeks on account of repairs that are needed in the entrance floor and inside the theater.

Herbert Griffin, traveling representative of the Nicholas Power Company, is in Pittsburgh for about ten days and is making his headquarters at the Feature Film and Calcium Light Company and Ludwig Hommel & Company. Mr. Griffin is en route to New York from the Pacific coast and expects to be in New York in a few weeks to take a well earned vacation.

EXTENDING USE OF FILMS IN NORTHWEST.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

THE municipal motion picture show and the wider use of films in the rural districts of the state of Washington are near at hand. The Washington State College, under the direction of Professor Tormey and the Tacoma News, are two forces that will promote this plan.

The trustees of the Commercial club at Puyallup appointed a committee "to purchase a moving picture machine for municipal uses." This projector will be for use primarily at the high school, but it also will be available for the Woman's club, the Commercial club or any other beneficial organization. Professor Tormey has promised the State College will loan films. The Pathescope, which he recently demonstrated in Puyallup, is likely to be used.

The plan of the Tacoma paper to make it possible for every community to have a motion picture show is based upon this or some other portable projector. The college will loan the films.

Professor Tormey's chief aim is to interest the entire state in intensive farming. He will not only take argricultural educational pictures to the country, but will show them in the cities. Programs will not be limited to educational, but will be interspersed with comedies and other entertaining pictures.

CAPITOL CITY JOTTINGS.

C. O. Moss, who has been managing the Charlotte, N. C., office for the United Film Service, held down the manager's desk of the local branch during the week's absence of Sidney B. Lust in New York. The Charlotte office was closed during the week and hereafter the business in that territory will be taken care of from Washington.

J. D. Hofheimer, who operates the Palace, Arcade, Strand and Manhattan theaters in Norfolk, Va., was seen here last week. Mr. Hofheimer visited Washington on business connected with those houses.

W. F. Harrison, of the Superior theater, Richmond, Va., stopped over in this city on his return from a trip to New York.

William Fox, of the Fox Film Corporation, of New York City, was a visitor at a majority of the motion picture houses here, although the exhibitors in many instances did not learn of this fact until after he had left. Mr. Fox wanted to see local conditions for himself, according to Lieut. Jim P. Anderson, manager of the exchange in Washington, and to give final instructions concerning the placement of the Fox films uder the new scheme of service. Mr. Fox declared that there was need for a large theater in Washington with an admission charge of twenty-five cents.

Samuel J. Mayer, formerly manager of the local office for the Universal Film Company, and at one time holding a similar position with the General Film Company, has accepted employment with the World Film Company as traveling representative in the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia.

BAMBERGER LEAVES FOR NEW YORK.

Leon J. Bamberger, the former manager here, left for New York on Saturday. Before departing from the city he called on many of the local exhibitors, all of whom expressed their best wishes for his future success. Mr. Bamberger is indeed a hustler and one who will carve out success for himself.

BACHRACH STILL WITH WORLD FILM.

The attention of the Washington correspondent of this paper has been called to what is termed an inaccuracy in that it was reported in these columns that Alan J. Bachrach was to become an employe of the V-L-S-E. It is stated by his present employers that such is not the case.

G. J. SCHAEFER IN TOWN.

G. J. Schaefer, sales manager for the World Film Corporation, of New York, spent the week in Washington adjusting the affairs of the local office.

AT THE PATHE EXCHANGE.

Sam Flax, booker at the local office of the Pathe company, was a member of a party of four who last week traveled to New York in a "jitney." Sam is reported to have cut quite a swath along the Great White Way and that he made quite an impression with his genial good nature and mile-wide smile.

Herbert M. Osborn, local manager for Pathe, Inc., is much pleased with the advertising which is to be given to the new serial, "Neal of the Navy," and the new "Gold Rooster" films. Mr. Osborn is at present arranging for the placing of seventy-five 24-sheets, advertising the latter, in this territory. These posters are to line the country side and start the ball rolling towards increased box office receipts. The Pathe Company is following this same procedure in other parts of the country, the number of posters in a single locality varying with its size. The posting of these 24-sheets will be done by A. M. Briggs Company, of New York.

Tackling Credit Problem

Washington, D. C., Exchange Men Seeking Better Methods of Handling Collections —Some Exhibitors Seem to Favor the Advance Deposit Plan—Think That Many Houses Bound to Fall Are Kept in Business Longer Than Necessary.

By Clarence L. Linz, Washington Correspondent Moving Picture World.

THE matter of poor collections continues to hold the entire attention of the exchangemen in this territory and conditions are coming to pass where to protect themselves those who rent films to others will find it necessary to demand a week's rental in advance. This is the greatest complaint of the exchangemen at the present time. They have forgotten all about abuse of paper and films and nearly everything else and are devoting much of their time to devising ways and means of bringing delinquent exhibitors to time.

Several well known exhibitors were discussing the local situation the other day in company with one or two exchangemen. Naturally this all-absorbing topic came up. To the surprise of some of those present, one of the best known exhibitors declared himself to be in favor of the adoption of an iron-clad rule to demand a deposit equal to the amount of a week's service from all exhibitors in the territory. When asked for his reasons for this assertion he declared that the exchanges were carrying along too many of those who cannot hope to continue in business under a continuation of slow times. Very often these are forced to show more than the number of films deemed proper considering the admission price demanded, or to offer other inducements to the public to increase their patronage. Without the continued backing of the exchanges many houses would be closed, according to the speaker; much unfair competition could well be dispensed with, and the city would not be called upon to support so many theaters. It is, of course, a case of the survival of the fittest. In the meantime, the exchange managers are going after those who fail to live up to their rules concerning the giving of credit, and in turn they are "jacked up" by headquarters for not turning in what the latter believe to be the correct amount of checks ordinarily coming from rentals. The exhibitor gets his money before the people can see a performance, the film men say, then why should not the film-renters be willing to pay in like manner?

WORLD FILM TOPICAL REEL.

Arrangements have been completed between the Washington Times and the World Film Corporation for the showing of weekly news films at the theaters in this city. Each reel is to be a thousand feet in length and is to be made up of five hundred feet of news pictures from other cities supplied by the World Film Corporation and five hundred feet of local events. To furnish the latter the services of Edward J. Greene, camera operator who has been engaged in making moving pictures throughout the world and who has been lately making pictures of America, Panama and South America for use by Burton Holmes in connection with his travelogues, have been secured. The first release of the Times-World pictures will be made during the week, but thus far no definite release date has been announced.

It is pretty generally believed that this scheme will meet with great popularity in this city, for it is a fact that people are universally anxious to see themselves pictured in the public prints or on the screen. It is a "failing" of the American people to seek publicity, almost regardless of its nature, and the projectors of the scheme realizing this are very hopeful of success. The Washington Times is conceded to be the picture newspaper of the city, for it is the only one at the present time which devotes regular space daily to the industry.

In announcing the coming service the newspaper says that, "The most important feature of Times-World Film picture will, of course, be the part that is devoted to Washington itself. Heretofore, such news pictures as have been exhibited here of Washington events have been connected only with affairs of big national interest that would be proper features for exhibition throughout the world. Now it is the purpose of the Washington Times to give the people of the city a film of those events that are peculiar to Washington and are interesting solely to Washingtonians." In addition, the newspaper itself is to be illustrated as profusely as possible.

HOME AMUSEMENT CO. TRUSTEES NAMED.

Dr. Harry Bosley, Henry A. Johnston, Luther W. Gibson, D. Edward Clarke, Dr. C. C. Weeks and William S. Plager are named as the six trustees of the Home Amusement Company, of this city, who will manage its affairs during its first years. This company was last week incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000 divided into 5,000 shares of a par value of $10 each. The general offices of the company in this city are to be located at 1230 C street, northeast, in which neighborhood it will engage in a general theater business, including the establishment and maintenance of motion picture houses, music halls, vaudeville theaters and vaudeville, burlesque and standard theater projects, together with the leasing and rental of films, equipment, paraphernalia, supplies, etc. Its charter covers its operations in all parts of the United States.

As previously reported in these columns, the new corporation has recently promised plans for the erection of a motion picture theater on C street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, northeast. It is estimated that the building will cost in the neighborhood of $25,000. The plans call for fireproof construction throughout and the building will have a frontage of fifty feet and a depth of one hundred and ten feet. The new theater is to be modern in every particular. The plans were drawn up by William S. Plager, architect, who is himself a member of the Home Amusement Company.

BRANCH MANAGER FRIEDMAN AT THE WORLD FILM HELM.

The lightning-like changes in the personnel of the World Film Corporation's local office created quite a stir in local film circles and the many exhibitors who have learned to know Henry E. Friedman since he came into this territory some few weeks ago are hastening to congratulate him upon his promotion to the position of branch manager, succeeding to the position made vacant here by the resignation of Leon J. Bamberger, who has gone to New York to join the V-L-S-E forces. Mr. Friedman is quite a heavy built chap both physically and mentally. He is one of those men who seem always on the go and who are willing to go a long distance out of their way to help those with whom they come in contact. A willingness to give the best of personal service and an ability to quickly grasp situations should make him a valuable man in his new position and win for him the favor of all exhibitors in this territory.

Censor Backs and Fills

Kansas State Censorship Board Shows Irritating Proclivity to Not Know Its Own Mind—A Case in Point Is a Fox Offering Passed and Sealed and Listed, Then Peremptorily Ordered Out of State—It Is Exhibited.

Special to Moving Picture World from Kansas City News Service.

ANOTHER highly complicated situation has arisen in Kansas that probably will need a great deal of "straightening out." The question involved is: "How many cracks at a film does the state board of censors get?"

On June 22 W. D. Ross, chairman of the State Board of Censors, reviewed "The Devil's Daughter." He ordered certain eliminations. The film was sent back to the Fox Film Corporation's office at Kansas City, and the cuts were made. The picture was then returned to Topeka and shown at the Iris.

Mr. Ross sent, the next day, a peremptory order to Manager Harden at Kansas City, prohibiting the showing of the film in Kansas. Almost with the same mail, however, came the weekly bulletin of the Board, with "The Devil's Daughter" included among films passed and permitted in the state. Mr. Harden had also convenient in his desk the usual certificate of passed and approved issued over Mr. Ross's signature.

Mr. Harden is sending the film to the customers in Kansas—and it will be up to the State Board to take the next move.

K. C. FEATURE FILM CO. MOVES.

Special to Moving Picture World from Kansas City News Service.

The Kansas City Feature Film Co. has moved from the Gayety building, Twelfth and Wyandotte streets, to 922 Oak street. This is over the school supply store of Hoover Bros., a handsome two-story building in a pleasant neighborhood. The company now has about 5,000 square feet of floor space. A printing department has been installed to handle the heralds, stationery and other advertising material. P. D. Flinton, president of the company, is well known in the profession, and his success is due to energy as well as business wisdom.

NEW MEZZANINE AT THE ROYAL.

A mezzanine floor is being built in the Royal theater, at a cost of $10,000, for the special accommodation of parties There will be loge seats for 175 persons and a detail of the decorative plan will be a fountain. The Royal has been very successful—and one of its chief difficulties has been its large patronage! This was a detriment to the business in that parties could not conveniently be cared for. With the mezzanine floor, several parties can be given choice seats, reserved for them, at the same performance.

MARTY WILLIAMS GOES TO METRO.

Marty Williams, formerly manager of the Mutual at Kansas City, has been made manager of the Metro service at Kansas City, succeeding C. F. Miller, who has gone to Pittsburgh. F. L. Kiltz, formerly United manager here, succeeded Marty Williams at the Mutual. The vacancy at the United has not yet been filled.

WARNER TO MANAGE ST. LOUIS METRO PLAYHOUSE.

Charles Werner goes to St. Louis to manage the Metro Picture Playhouse. Mr. Werner was manager of the Picture Playhouse Film Co. at Kansas City.

HELSBERG AND GREEN BUY THE ROANOKE THEATER.

Two Kansans picked out a likely spot in Kansas City, Mo., for a moving picture show—found a house already located there, and took it unto themselves. These gentlemen are comparatively unknown in moving picturedom, but not entirely without acquaintance with the business. They are Gilbert Helzberg and C. H. Green. They have leased the Roanoke theater, at Thirty-ninth and Summit streets, have re-named it the Barrymore theater, and are operating under the name of the Helzberg Amusement Co.

The partners have renovated and redecorated the theater, and have adopted a definite policy—a policy of "give the people what they want, but assume that they want the best" on the fair-price basis, ten cents for adults, 5 cents for children.

KANSAS STATE NOTES.

F. C. Smith, formerly of Tulsa, Okla., is now manager of the former Mallory Opera house, and changed its name to the Empress theater. Mr. Smith thoroughly renovated and refurnished the house, installed fans and other improvements and conveniences, and intends to give Paola the best there is. Mrs. Smith sings at each program. Mr. Smith is well known at Springfield, Mo., Columbus, Mo., Dallas, Tex., and Hot Springs, Ark., where he managed moving picture playhouses in the past ten years. He has also previously managed in Topeka.

H. P. Wareham is spending up to $20,000 in refurnishing and remodeling the Opera House at Manhattan, Kan. He will open this fall with pictures.

V. L. Wagner used to own the Belldorf at Independence, Kan. He let it go, and recently it has been closed. Mr. Wagner has control of it again, and will soon reopen it with pictures.

Joe Hickey will open a new house at Ellis, Kan., soon.

W. B. Emrich, road man for the Fox Film Corporation, has acquired a house at Chanute, where he will run a feature every day. His wife will manage it.

T. M. Henneberry is the new manager for J. W. Wendell for his Junction City house.

KANSAS CITY GOSSIP.

Electric Park has added moving pictures to its attractions, which will be shown every night in the German Village, the section which constitutes the cafe element of the amusement park. This is the only amusement park in Kansas City, its "Coney Island." The pictures shown will be of the Kansas City Feature Film Company's service, and exclusively features. The pictures will take the place of a cabaret entertainment, which was the feature in previous years, and until Saturday, July 24, when the orchestra was discharged.

L. Simmons, camera man for the Pawnee Bill Buffalo Ranch Feature Film Co., was in Kansas City recently and called on the trade.

The V-L-S-E has put H. J. Gilinsky on the road in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Missouri, and R. Bechenstein into Kansas. L. E. Schaefer has been transferred to Denver, to take the place of Fred Solomon, who goes to Cheyenne, Wyo., to manage a theater for Carl Ray.

The high water on the railroad routes out of Kansas City and through Kansas and Missouri has seriously impeded the movement of films. Many shipments have been late and exhibitors disappointed. There were no losses reported from wrecked trains, but the delays were quite serious and upset the schedules most distressingly.

Simon Libros, the new manager of the Picture Playhouse at Kansas City, was formerly manager of the Pennsylvania office of the company. He came here direct from the New York home office, where he was assistant manager.

The Standard Amusement Co. had a small fire on the second story of the Twelfth street property, July 20, as a result of which the picture show house was closed one day.

The Alamo theater, at Thirty-fifth and Main streets, which has been showing features at a dime has turned to programs at five cents.

A. W. Bennett has sold the Dale theater at Twenty-fourth and Troost to J. T. Coleman.

Olson Brothers have closed their office at Kansas City, but are continuing their booking business from Topeka.

F. L. Wallin has bought the Merit theater, Thirty-first and Main streets, from W. G. Jones.

The Navajo Film & Supply Co., Chas. J. Scherer, manager, is installing a projection room and machine repair shop in connection with its offices in the Gumbel Building.

The Wichita Film & Supply Co., owners of "The Melting Pot," "Cabiria" and many other large productions, report an unusually good summer business. At a recent private exhibition of the "Melting Pot" at the Princess theater at Wichita, there was in attendance practically all of the leading citizens of the city. The film was pronounced by everyone to be a most worthy picture and several ministers, priests and club women wrote opinions on the picture and sent them to the company. The Wichita Beacon, the leading paper of the town, gave a full column of space to the picture and it was pronounced by it as the finest picture of the season. It has been run at Winfield, Lyons and Eldorado, Kan., with remarkable success. "Cabiria" is also still doing a fine business. Many of the towns that have used the picture early in the year are now playing return dates with it. It is in great demand at the Chatauquas. The Chatauqua at Winfield, which lasts two weeks, and is considered one of the finest in the United States, made the picture the feature of the meeting and has been running them on Sundays.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the one paper you need.

NORTH CAROLINA NOTES.

By Clarence L. Linz, Washington Correspondent of the Moving Picture World.

EXHIBITOR C. L. Welch has taken over the Main theater in Salisbury and has been renovating the house in addition to installing a new and expensive pipe organ. The theater was formerly operated by Mr. Jenkins, of this city. Mr. Welch plans to put in an all-feature program.

Clara Kimball Young is at Bat Cave, near Asheville, N. C., playing in scenes for the "Heart of the Blue Ridge," soon to appear in the World Film program. While in this vicinity she will appear at a number of the motion picture theaters. This star is extremely popular with the fans of the South.

F. H. Harris, who operates the Amusu theater, in Charlotte, plans to put in an all-feature program.

H. E. Friedman, who formerly covered this territory for the World Film Corporation, with headquaters in Charlotte, is receiving the congratulations of the many friends he made while traveling through the state upon his promotion to the position of manager of the territory with headquarters in Washington, D. C.

George Bros., of Selma, have taken over the Palace theater and are remodeling it.

C. O. Moss, manager of the Charlotte branch of the United Film Service, is spending the week in Washington, D. C.

R. H. Mason, of the Acme theater in Goldsboro, who has had considerable experience in the handling of features, having been connected with Harry Raver in the exhibition of the Itala pictures, traveling from the Atlanta office, and who is one of the pioneer motion picture men of the South, is about to join the forces of the World Film Corporation as manager of the Atlanta branch. The Acme will be operated under the management of Mr. Phillips, the father-in-law of Mr. Mason.

The Strand theater, owned by the Blomburg Amusement Company, opened the latter part of last month at Asheville, N. C. L. Blomburg, a well known cigar dealer of this place, is at the head of the company. The house itself is well fitted out and very attractive. F. A. Abbott is the manager.

Howard & Wells expect to open their new $60,000 Royal theater in Wilmington on or about Sept. 15. This will be strictly a feature house with an admission price of ten cents. Two Powers 6-A machines and a Mirror screen are to be installed. A five-piece orchestra and good features are counted upon to make this a most successful venture. Howard & Wells are among the best known exhibitors in the southern territory.

The city commissioners of Asheville at their meeting last week passed the first reading of an ordinance regulating the playing of pianolas and other automatic musical instruments between the hours of 8 a. m. and 8. p. m. The ordinance reads, "That it shall be unlawful for any person to play a pianola, auto-piano, or other self-playing musical instrument at any point nearer than fifty feet from the sidewalk within the legally designated fire limits of the city between the hours of 8 a. m. and 8 p. m." The ordinance must go to a second and third reading and twenty days must thereafter elapse before it becomes a law.

Charlie Chaplin night at the Auditorium, Winston-Salem, made a great hit with the patrons of that house.

The exhibitors of North Carolina are looking forward with interest to the coming convention to be held from Aug. 15 to 17, inclusive, at Wrightsville Beach, near Wilmington. Many important matters will be brought up for discussion and with the interest now being taken in the activities of the State League, this convention will probably prove among the best held anywhere in the country. The exhibitors in session will themselves be filmed together with prominent officials of Wilmington and the reel will thereafter be shown in nearly every theater in the State whose proprietor or manager holds membership in the league. It is intended that this film shall prove a booster for Wilmington and the cost of its production will be made up of contributions from among the business people of that city.

HAWAIIAN NOTES.

Special to Moving Picture World from Hawaii News Service.

MUCH comment and not a little amusement has been caused throughout Hawaii by the action of the Honolulu board of supervisors deciding that the big comedy, "Tillie's Punctured Romance," was educational and passing it for Sunday exhibition.

Hilo's board of supervisors has passed an ordinance legalizing Sunday motion picture shows if the deputy sheriff of any district decides a picture is educational.

Talking motion pictures from Japan were shown for three days at the Japanese theater in Hilo. The pictures included the "Japanese Army at the Siege and Fall of Karchau" and "Geisha Dancers" and other features. They were shown at 35 and 50 cents, children 10 cents.

Summer in New Orleans

Theaters Take Time During Hot Days to Remodel and Fix Up for Winter Campaign—Pearce's Trianon and Dreamland Theaters, also the St. Charles Street Lyceum, Are Making Interesting Changes.

Special to Moving Picture World from Trades News, Gulf States Correspondent

NEW ORLEANS' picture theaters are all in the course of or about to begin their midsummer remodelling in preparation for the winter season, and taking advantage of the comparative slackness of business during this month. Of particular interest are the improvements made on Pearce's Trianon and Dreamland theaters and on the St. Charles Street Amusement Company's Lyceum.

The Dreamland is being made a reverse house, the screen being placed toward the street as is required where rear exits are not available, and as is now being done by preference by a number of theater operators. Its seating capacity is being increased by 125 to 345. Something distinctly novel in interior decorations, as well as increased lobby facilities, is promised, for the opening which will take place about the middle of August. The overhauling is being done very thoroughly and as a result the house is closed for some weeks.

Manager Frank A. Heiderick of the Lyceum claims to be doing something unusual in the matter of remodelling his house and bringing its seating capacity up to 650 with an additional 220 seats in the balcony. He has let a contract by the terms of which the house is to be closed and out of operation but five days. Much of the work will be done at night and there will be no trashing up of the house until the five day period begins for the material is being brought in through the rear exits.

This is the third enlargement made in the Lyceum in the last two years. It will bring the house well toward the front both in size and appointments. The cooling system being installed at present is worthy of especial note. It consists in three sets of Typhoon fans, of 36, 42 and 72 inch size. This makes the Lyceum the first New Orleans house to install this new system in favor of which a great deal is being urged and much interest is being shown by the exhibitors of the territory.

The Lyceum is rich in rear exits. It has three of them, one is through the yard of a fire engine house situated adjoining and a fire plug has been installed in the alley for the especial protection of the picture theater, this being brought about by special arrangement with the city government.

Pearce's Trianon theater has just completed the installation of its new organ. It was heard for the first time July 25 and is considered by musicians in the way of an acquisition to the city. It was purchased of the M. P. Moller Organ Factory of Hagerstown, Md., for the Trianon by J. E. Pearce, Southern manager of Josiah Pearce and Sons.

The work of installing the big instrument, which meant putting together something like a million pieces, was looked after by George C. Bollinger representing the manufacturers. It took him just seven weeks, working nights only, while the theater is closed. The instrument is one of the largest in use in the United States and the first of its kind installed in a theater in the South. It is noted as being of the highest artistic perfection in voicing as well as in orchestral effects.

These latter mark a further advance in theater organs. There is even a complete player piano within the organ. The orchestral effects include the bass drum and cymbals, tympany brass drum, snare drum, triangle, song birds, tango drive, castanets, horns, policeman's whistle, fire gong, steam-boat whistle, French horn, cello, violin, viola vibrato, vox humana, diapason, clarinet, tuba, chimes, orchestral bells, sleigh bells, the brass flute and various other effects found in regularly organized and complete orchestras.

PEERLESS FEATURE FILM CO. LOCATES.

New Orleans' new feature film exchanges, noted recently as having been formed by Paul L. Ford and E. B. Smith, both well known to the industry throughout the South, will be known as the Peerless Feature Film Company. Their offices are at 832 Common street, right in the heart of film row, Fox on one side and World on the other. Messrs. Smith and Ford are issuing a special invitation to all their friends to call.

THEY'RE CHAMPIONS, MAYBE.

"Yes," said Al Shear, who runs the New Orleans end for the Consolidated, "we have organized a baseball nine here in the office and are challenging every film exchange in the South to come on and mix it with us."

Those were his words. Further cross-examination developed the fact that Al will carry the balls, bats, water and other impedimenta and, on occasion, act as umpire; in short, shoulder the heat of the day or words to that effect.

This is in line with Mr. Shear's policy of further fostering the spirit of Universal peace in his organization, Universal enthusiasm, etc. Another thing that he did recently was to provide every employee in the offices with especially secured passes to the houses showing Universal pictures.

It was learned further, on the highest authority, that every employee of the Consolidated office knows every Universal actor by name, just like Napoleon did, and that consequently they just can't keep from selling those Universal films.

The vacation season has begun at the Consolidated and a number of the staff are already away for their two weeks, somewhere along the coast from Waveland to Pass Christian. Shear sure is strong on that morale thing.

Speaking of the baseball challenge Mr. Shear says he means it and that he will meet any exchange team half way, and that if this is not satisfactory he will get together with any challenger with a view to meeting under some other conditions.

GULF STATE BRIEFS.

Mayor Simmonds, for some time New Orleans manager for the Apex Film Company, returned recently from New York and will handle some special features out of New Orleans

The rumor that Klaw & Erlanger would put the Crescent, their second best New Orleans house, in the pictures has died, it having been announced that K. & E. would play the Baldwin stock company there during an indefinite season. It is known that there had been several deals on for the lease of the theater as a picture house.

J. E. Pearce, Southern manager of the Pearce interests, is recently back from a cruise along the Gulf.

Al Shear, New Orleans manager for the Consolidated Film Co., recently made a flying, hand-shaking trip up the road to Jackson, Miss., where he was the guest of H. A. Carleton, owner and operator of the $50,000 Istrione theater at that city.

Herman Fichtenberg, head of the Fichtenberg interests, returned recently from a hurried business trip to New York. He and his general manager, William Gueringer, left shortly thereafter for a trip of inspection to Pensacola.

Zig-Zag Censorship

Ohio Local Censors Give Crazy-Quilt Pattern to Censorship in That State—Of Its Censors in Many Localities Some Will and Some Won't—Keeps Picture Men on Uneasy Seat—Experience with the Eastland Films.

By Kenneth C. Crain, Cincinnati Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE multiplicity of censorships existing in Ohio under the rather remarkable state of affairs now legally possible, which has been referred to in various connections in these columns heretofore, was never better illustrated than in the case of a reel of pictures showing scenes in connection with the "Eastland" disaster. The immense news interest of the tragic affair is not a matter of dispute, of course, and the pages upon pages of newspaper matter run, accompanied by photographs showing every possible phase of the wreck and of the work of rescue, indicated the extent to which the press and the public desired to know all of the details.

Hampered by state and local censorship, however, the people who secured a thousand feet or so of moving pictures showing the identical scenes which have been brought before the public by means of photographs and by newspaper descriptions have been standing on their heads, metaphorically speaking, for some time. It was at first rumored that the state board would refuse to permit the pictures to be shown at all, but a full reel was O. K.'d, with the elimination of several scenes showing the removal of bodies from the hull of the vessel and in the morgues.

This was only the beginning of the producers' troubles, however, for local authorities all over the state began to announce for the information of the world at large, that they would, or would not, as the case might be, permit the exhibition of the "Eastland" pictures in their respective cities. There was no difficulty of this sort in Cincinnati, where, it will be remembered, the grisly spector of municipal plus state censorship first showed itself in a case a few months ago. Manager I. Lipson secured the pictures for exhibition at the Strand Friday and Saturday, and silent crowds viewed them with sad interest. However, at Youngstown and Canton, to name only two other cities, the mayors promptly announced that they would not allow the pictures to be shown, and the question again arises of just what force and value is the formal approval of a picture by the Ohio State Board. The question is one of considerable practical interest to exhibitors and producers alike, not to mention exchange and "state rights" men.

EXHIBITORS WANT THE REFERENDUM.

Action taken last week by some of the leading exhibitors of Canton with reference to the referendum on the present censorship law is rather significant in connection with the continual friction which is heard from in the application of the various rights of censorship over moving pictures in Ohio. This, it should be said, is very frequently entirely without fault on the part of the state board, which has been much more liberal in recent months than formerly. It has been declared by advocates of the law that those who are attempting to secure referendum vote upon it are the producers and exchange men only, and their hirelings. Judging from the broadside turned loose by the Canton exhibitors in question, however, this view is hardly accurate. The Alhambra, the Odeon, the Grand, the Orpheum, the Lyceum and the Valentine signed their names to a full page advertisement appearing in a Canton paper on behalf of the referendum, and setting forth reasons why the patrons of moving picture shows should sign petitions and then vote against the law at the election. Copies of the petitions are on file with the theaters named. A good many other exhibitors take the view indicated by these, that the interest of the exhibitor lies in being able to show films of interest and value as they come from the hands of the producer, without mutilation. Of course there are many others who take the other side of the argument, and the fight grows warmer as the days go by.

A NEW CINCINNATI THEATER.

The more or less definite rumors which have been floating around Cincinnati for some time with reference to the construction of one or more new motion picture houses in the downtown district have at last taken shape, in at least one case, in the announcement that property has been acquired on the north side of Fifth street, just west of Race, upon which will be constructed a handsome house, a credit to that block of moving picture theaters.

I. W. McMahan, of McMahan & Jackson, widely known as theatrical magnates and film men, with Charles Schaengold, a local business man, is behind the new venture. The property has been taken under a twenty-year lease at an annual net rental, it is understood, of $9,000, carrying the privelege of purchase for $130,000, which is over $4,000 a front foot for the thirty feet in the lot. The depth of the plot is 90 feet, and it is estimated that the space available will enable the new house to seat 500 persons without difficulty.

The value attached to the site, and the pregnant fact that in the motion-picture business, as nowhere else, "many a mickle makes a muckle," is indicated by the mathematical conclusion, from the above figures, that it will take exactly 90,000 paid admissions to pay the annual ground rental, aside from such expenses as interest on the building investment, salaries, and so forth. The new house, the name of which has not yet been announced, will be in excellent company, in the same block as the Lubin, the Alhambra, the Colonial and its location is just a shade better than that of any of these large and popular houses, being closer to Vine street and the heart of the city by a few feet. The beginning of building work will not be delayed any longer than necessary, the vacation of the structure at present on the site and its destruction being planned for an early date.

LEW FOSTER ENTERTAINS NEWSIES.

Lew Foster, manager of the motion picture season at the Grand Opera house, hit upon a unique and kindly idea last week, when he threw open the gallery of the big house to the newsboys of the city to see Clara Kimball Young in "Marrying Money," without charge. Much excited interest was added to the performance for the newsies by the fact that Mr. Foster offered three prizes of $7.50, $5.00 and $2.50, for the best three criticisms of the performance. "I was a newsboy myself once upon a time," said Mr. Foster, "and I believe these youngsters are keen enough to shed some new and interesting light upon the real merits or defects of our shows." A group picture of the boys, to the number of several hundred, taken upon the Fountain Square esplanade, before the performance, was shown at the theater Monday night.

CINCINNATI JOTTINGS.

Last week was to have been the last of the summer season of vaudeville and moving pictures at B. F. Keith's Cincinnati house, but things worked out in such a manner that the management decided to keep the house open for another week. Pictures, as usual, have played an interesting part in the program at Keith's during the summer season, several reels being offered at each performance, and, incidentally, it is also whispered along the Walnut street Rialto that pictures played a part in the determination of the Keith management to close the theater until the regular season begins again, although the usual annual overhauling is a perfectly valid and legitimate reason for this action. At any rate, there are not lacking those who point to the difficulty of competing, by a show of the usual class of summer vaudeville and some miscellaneous moving pictures, with high-class feature productions, played by leading dramatic stars, at the Strand, the Lubin, the Alhambra, and other leading downtown and suburban houses, at the same price of admission. The experience of theatrical managers in New York and elsewhere lends color to the suggestion, at least.

Moving-picture exhibitors in Cincinnati were not backward in their response to the appeal sent out last week by the Governor of Ohio for assistance in relieving the serious distress existing among miners in the Ohio fields, where work has been almost entirely at a standstill for over a year. Among those who gave either all or a substantial percentage of the proceeds of a designated performance for the benefit of the miners were the Grand, the Lubin, the Nordland Plaza, the Norwood, and the Arcade.

Those interested in the suffrage question, whether pro or con, in the vicinity of Cincinnati, had an opportunity for the first time last week to see the much-discussed suffrage photoplay, "Your Girl and Mine," at the Park airdome, in Covington, Ky., just across the river. A strong delegation from the Cincinnati Equal Franchise Association witnessed the first exhibition of the picture, and the work of the "suffragettes" in advertising it to their friends helped the attendance very considerably. It is understood that, although the picture is in such demand that it is difficult to secure a print, a strong effort will be made to arrange for its exhibition in one of the Cincinnati houses, where a larger number of people can see it than was the case across the river.

ALAMEDA HOLCOMBE SUPPORTING ANNA PAVLOWA.

By A. M. Beatty, Atlanta Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

ALAMEDA HOLCOMBE, the Atlanta girl who won the beauty contest trip to the Universal City, and was expected home this month, it is rumored, has accepted a position with the Universal company, and is in the cast supporting Anna Pavlowa, under the direction of Lois Weber and Phillip Smalley. After the picture is completed, Miss Holcombe will return to Atlanta for a few weeks and will then go direct to Universal City to become a permanent member of the Universal cast. Miss Holcombe is a girl on the sunny side of the twenties, a striking brunette, graceful and vivacious. She is not unknown to Atlanta audiences, having appeared in a number of films in this city, notably "Husband or Lover" and the "Belgian's Relief." For years she has had a desire to become an actress of the silent drama, and previous to her trip to California she was secretary to a local florist.

SAVANNAH SOCIETY FOLK IN A FILM.

Fifty young Savannah people have plunged into the moving pictures. When the feature film "Under Southern Skies," now being taken there by a producing cast of the Universal Film Company, is shown on the screen, the faces of about twenty-five young ladies of Savannah and as many young men will be seen. The local screen aspirants figured in several scenes of the Universal Company's picture, dancing the minuet being their most important duties.

HEARD IN ATLANTA.

F. R. Sandford, of New York, has leased the Bijou theater, Birmingham, Ala., formerly operated by Jake Wells, and will put in a stock company, and is considering a run of moving pictures also.

The Scenic Film Company, Atlanta, has closed a contract with the Strand theater, this city, whereby the clients of the Scenic will be advertised by the Rowntree, of the process in that theater exclusively. Mr. Rowntree, of the Scenic, is the originator of the trick advertising films, and his work is in keeping with the class of clients he represents.

S. A. Lynch, president of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, was an Atlanta visitor this week.

The extremely warm weather is cutting down moving picture theater attendance in Atlanta.

Atlantians will flock to the Alpha theater Wednesday to see 'Who Pays." The reason is William Oldknow, head of the Consolidated Film and Supply Co., is one of the actors. How the Universal people got Mr. Oldknow in the film no one seems to know, for naturally he is of a retiring nature. The Atlanta man is featured along with Eddie Lyons, Victoria Forde and Lee Moran. The picture was taken at Universal City, and is said to be very laughable.

The Grand theater at last has Marguerite Clarke in a new play this week, "Seven Sisters." Miss Clarke is a favorite among all moving picture patrons, and the Grand will play to crowded houses Tuesday and Wednesday. The balance of the week "The Blindness of Virtue," and "The Puppet Crown" hold the boards.

"The Diamond From the Sky" packs the Vaudette theater every Friday. It is one of the best serials ever played in Atlanta.

The Forsyth theater is dark this week, and will be until vaudeville returns, the latter part of August. The Forsyth management refused to substitute poorer class of vaudeville, and after experimenting with moving pictures for two weeks without any great success, decided to give the theater a vacation until the regular theatrical season opens.

"The Broken Coin" was given in the first two episodes at the Savoy, Monday. Coupons were printed in the Sunday papers good for admission between the hours of 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. The beginning of this serial is good, but it looks as if Atlanta audiences are tiring of serials. The complaint is too much of the sameness in plot of them all.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

IN CLEVELAND.

Edward Hornick has taken over the Dreamland theater at Xenia, O., from H. L. Binder who has been running it in connection with his other theater, the Orpheum. The Dreamland has been completely remodeled and the state fire marshal gave it his approval. A Simplex machine and a new piano were installed.

Sydney E. Abel, manager of the Cleveland branch of the V-L-S-E, has adopted a new policy that meets with the approval of Ohio exhibitors. One day a week he will have a private exhibition of films in the V-L-S-E offices, Sincere building. Everyone having a direct interest in the motion picture business of Cleveland will be invited to the exhibition, as a means of acquainting the exhibitors with the quality of his company's productions and to permit them to obtain ideas in advance for advertising methods.

League Censors a Film

Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Agrees Not to Show Lengthy Films of the Chicago Catastrophe—Regular Weekly News Topicals with Eastland Views Counted Sufficient—Some Managers Show the Longer Pictures.

By J. D. Raridan, Cleveland Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

APPROVED and disapproved, subjected to conflicting opinions on every hand, motion pictures of the Eastland disaster in Chicago have gone through a series of convolutions in Cleveland and as noted on another page throughout Ohio. Two days after the disaster two Cleveland exchanges received pictures, E. H. Painter, manager of the Kriterion Film Co., leasing the Chicago Tribune's reel and Frank L. Greenwald, manager of the United Film Service receiving another.

The pictures were shown at private exhibitions, Mr. Painter placing his on review at the Ray theater. Mayor Banker, A. A. Benesch, director of public safety and Police Inspector Norman A. Shattuck were present. Personally disapproving of several scenes but without serious objection to the film as a whole the mayor and Director Benesch said they would be unable to prevent exhibition in Cleveland theaters provided it were approved by the state board of censors. Mr. Benesch directed three scenes be eliminated and this was done. The pictures then were sent to Columbus and were O. K.'d by the board.

Simultaneous with this action the Cleveland local, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held a special meeting and censored the censors. They agreed not to show in their respective theaters any lengthy films of the disaster even though the state board granted permission to do so and the city authorities were in accord. A resolution to that effect was passed, the exhibitors relying upon the regular news picture releases. Many exhibitors criticised the board for asserting the Eastland film would be educational. Nevertheless, a number of downtown theaters presented the pictures and the exchanges were deluged with applications from managers in other cities and towns of Ohio. Objections were raised by local authorities in a number of these towns but the exchange managers advised exhibitors to run the pictures in spite of these objections, holding that the authority given by the state board overrides any local criticism,.

Manager Painter of the Kriterion advised W. Urban, proprietor of the Orpheum theater, Canton, O., to run the film with his operator locked in the booth. The mayor and safety director of Canton forbid the showing of the picture but their objections were overriden by the exhibitor's show of fight. Painter received 300 orders for the film the first week. Mayor Hartenstein and Safety Director Harry Parrock at Youngstown attempted to have the pictures banned but were unsuccessful.

PLAN OHIO STATE EXCHANGE FOR SCHOOL FILMS.

Frank W. Miller, state superintendent of public instruction says he is planning a system by which his department may be the clearing house for films purchased by boards of education in various cities or rural communities, to be exchanged with other boards. As soon as school starts in the fall he will make definite proposals to the local school authorities and see how the plan is received.

"Most city schools now have projecting machines, and either buy or are given pictures," said Superintendent Miller. "They use them a few times and then lay them away until the next year. Thus the films are used comparatively little. I propose to establish a bureau in the state department of instruction, which will regulate the shipping of these films from place to place in the state. Each film will remain the property of the school board which purchased it originally, and will come back to it after it has been shown elsewhere. The pictures could be shipped direct from one place to another, but account of them would be kept by this department."

Superintendent Miller predicted that eventually the state will have to buy educational films and distribute them to local boards of education. He pointed out that with the clearing house exchange system which he advocates, many industrial films of educational value would be donated o the state exchange by manufacturing interests. "We could get scores of such films from food, machinery, camera and furniture manufacturers," he said.

TWO NEW THEATERS.

Two new theaters will be erected in Cleveland. Application has been made to the building department for a permit to erect a $25,000 playhouse at Cedar ave. and E. 75th street, for M. A. Pawlowski. Plans were drawn by J. F. Jasienski, architect and provide a structure 50 x 193 feet. The house is designed to seat 1,000 people. A smaller theater, to seat about 500, will be erected at 11507 Miles avenue for J. F. Profant. Plans were submitted by J. L. Cameron, architect. The building will cost $5,000.

CLEVELAND BRIEFS.

The Grand theater, Bellefontaine, has been conducting a baby contest. One night seven freezers of ice cream were distributed, with twenty Bellefontaine merchants contributing prizes.

The Dome theater at Youngstown has been reopened after extensive improvements, including the installation of a new balcony, thus increasing the seating capacity and brightening the appearance of this playhouse.

The Majestic theater, Columbus, recently fostered a contest for the collection of pennies to be donated to the babies summer camp. Winners received portrait paintings of Mary Pickford and were entertained at the Majestic's presentation of "Tess of the Storm Country."

In his plan to make Garfield park, Cleveland, a big municipal amusement park, T. L. Sidlo, public service director, proposes to introduce a picture theater.

"The Maid of Miami," a romantic picture presenting Dayton and Dayton people, has been completed and is on exhibition in theaters of that city.

N. S. Forbes, proprietor of the Family theater, Salem, O. is missing, according to information from that city. He purchased the house from R. W. Holden several months ago. Search for Forbes has proven futile.

The Liberty, Cleveland, increased its prices to 50 cents on showing of George Beban in "The Alien" and played to packed houses an entire week.

Justice of the Peace William Gape at Ashtabula has announced that films entitled "The Princess Visits Ashtabula," taken some weeks ago by Gulett & Harris, will be sold at public auction September 2 unless attorneys for the partners file answer to suit started by J. R. Freeman, manager of the Lyric theater. Freeman asks $100 due on contract he claims for the exclusive right to the pictures.

Manager Grossman of the Standard theater, Cleveland, announces he will install a Hope-Jones unit orchestra, costing $20,000.

NEW ENGLAND NEWS LETTER.

By Edwin H. McCloskey, New England Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

MANAGER Samuel Bernfield of the New England Pathe Exchange has contracted with Manager Frank Ferguson of the Boston Theater for first run of the new Pathe serial, "Neal of the Navy." The Boston theater is one of the largest picture houses in the city and of late has been playing to capacity business, featuring pictures and the Fadettes' Women's Orchestra.

Manager I. W. Smith of Smith's theater, Woonsocket, R. I. was a visitor to Boston during the past week booking several features. He announces that he has done an enormous business with the Pathe Elaine serial. He claims that his patrons don't seem to tire of the series as they have of others which he has exhibited.

William J. Prendagast, proprietor of the Mt. Pleasant House, a summer hotel at Jefferson, Mass. has added a moving picture theater to his hostelry.

Geoffrey L. Whalen, the well known lecturer on the Olympia theaters circuit, is the author of "Beddingford Junction," the novel and mysterious vaudeville playlet, which was presented by Miss May Whitney and company at the Scenic Temple, Cambridge, during the past week. Mr. Whalen is a resident of Cambridge, where he is a prominent member of the Elks. Mr. Whalen has written several other vaudeville sketches but this one is said to be his greatest success.

Through the courtesy of Manager Cramer of the Olympia theater, Cambridge, a very interesting and instructive exhibition of moving pictures was given by Robert Derrah, representing the New England Educational Association, in an endeavor to interest city officials and the public in this method of instruction, particularly in the public schools. Among the pictures shown were Boston Common, Franklin Park and the zoological display, State street, the water front, Bath, Maine, iron works and the navy yard and the warships. Pictures are to be made of places of historic and commercial interest in the city of Cambridge and will be shown later with a collection from Metropolitan Boston. Mr. Darrah was congratulated on his pictures by Mayor Timothy W. Good and Secretary Russell D. Crane of the Board of Trade of the University City.

On his return from a recent visit from New York, Chandos St. John Brenon, brother of Herbert Brenon, the Fox director, was commissioned to present Manager Harry F. Campbell of the New England Fox Exchange with autographed photographs of the following Fox stars, Theda Bara, Herbert Brenon, Nance O'Neill and William Shea, all of whom met Mr. Campbell while he was attending the recent convention of Fox branch managers.

Manager Fred B. Murphy of the New England United Film Service is confined to his home in Brookline, Mass, by illness. His many friends hope for a speedy recovery and are anxious to see his smiling countenance behind the wheel of his "road devil" once again.

September 1 will be a gala day in Woburn, Mass. Jack Watts is to open his new theater in that city. Governor David I. Walsh and several state and city dignataries have signified their intention of attending the opening performance when Fox features will be used.

Mrs. E. C. Farrinton, proprietress of the Princess theater at Brattleboro, Vermont, has announced that she broke all attendance records at her playhouse during the past week, when the Fox feature "The Clemanceau Case" featuring Theda Bara, was used.

Manager Harry F. Campbell of the New England Fox Exchange and Ed Connolly of the New England United Film Service finished the trout season last Sunday when they hooked 34 fish.

It is rumored about town that Loew's Back Bay playhouse, the St. James theater, will be devoted more to pictures this coming season than ever before. It is claimed that big features will be used.

Harold Sabourin of the Lyric theater at Richford, Vermont, was killed during the past week, when a freight train hit an automobile in which he was riding.

Sam Moscow, the hustling road man for the New England United Film Service, has returned from a most successful trip through New Hampshire, during which he added several houses to his company's list. During the illness of Manager Fred B. Murphy, Mr. Moscow will safely pilot the destinies of the United program in the New England territory.

FIGHT FILM SUIT

Arguments at the Hearing in United States Court at Portland, Maine.

From John H. Flanagan, Maine Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

ARGUMENTS as to whether or not the negatives of the Johnson and Willard championship fight constitute a moving picture film in the ordinary sense of the term were made at the hearing before Judge Hale of the United States court in Portland, Maine, Friday. The negatives which have been reposing in the cellar of the Portland customs house for about five weeks were formally presented as evidence.

I. W. Ullman, a New York manufacturer of moving picture films, testified that a negative such as this was a representation that could not be exhibited. Similar testimony was given by a Portland photographer. H. A. Frasee of New York, secretary and treasurer of the Kalisthenic Exhibition Company, stated that the value of the film in question for private exchange was $100,000, whereas if it were used for public exhibition it would be worth a million. R. T. Whitehouse, counsel for the film men, cited the difference from a Federal case between a private and a public exhibition, namely, that a private exhibition is one where there is a select audience, while a public exhibition is made up of an indiscriminate audience. Numbers do not count in determining whether or not an audience is private or public.

District Attorney Merrill, stated that the negatives constitute a pictorial representation and therefore come under the law. Further time was given for filing briefs, and it is expected that Judge Hale will give his decision next week.

MAINE SCENERY FOR FILM PLAY.

The directors of a photoplay company have been at Oquossoc, Maine, this week seeking a suitable background for one of Clyde Fitch's plays which is to be staged sometime this summer with Gail Kane as leading lady. He has been all through the Adirondacks in vain looking for the scenery for this play, which is said to be one of the author's best, but found exactly what he wanted in the heart of the Rangeleys. All arrangements have been made for the pictures, though it may be some time before the company arrives.

RICH MAN HAS PICTURE THEATER OF HIS OWN.

To Ernesto G. Fabbri, a prominent summer resident at Bar Harbor, Maine, gets the palm for originality among the many who have entertained at moving picture shows. He has erected on the spacious lawns of his estate at Bar Harbor a tiny moving picture theater. Mr. Fabbri several times this week has shown dinner company pictures, taken himself with his own camera.

C. S. Pettengill of Island Falls was a visitor to Bangor during the past week, selecting features for his theater.

Fred Johnson, proprietor of Music Hall, Farmington, has commenced using Universal service.

The New Pastime theater at Brunswick had a formal and most successful opening on August 9, and the proprietor, Wallace Gould, received many congratulations on the event. It will be remembered that the Pastime was destroyed by fire last winter, and Mr. Gould soon after began to rebuild. The New Pastime seats 700 and is a model small town house.

MAINE THEATER NOTES.

The Empire thater, Portland, Maine, is providing, in addition to a big feature production with every change of program, musical selections by the Empire Symphony Four, which gives unusually pleasing numbers at every afternoon and evening performance.

The Silver theater, Waterville, Maine, has been showing the six-reel Vitagraph feature, "The Juggernaut," and owing to the extra expense the prices have been increased to 20 cents for the floor and 10 cents for the balcony.

Papers of incorporation for Greely's moving picture theater, Portland, Maine, have been filed in the Cumberland County registry of deeds. The theater is incorporated Greely's theater, with an authorized capital of $10,000, all of which is in common stock, to own and operate a general theater business and to purchase or lease or otherwise acquire, real and personal property. Nothing is paid in. The officers of the company are Charles W. MacKinnon, president; and James W. Greely, treasurer; and these two men with Albert R. Addison, form the board of directors. Organization was effected at the office of Attorney Harry E. Nixon.

PINE TREE ITEMS.

A moving picture entertainment and ball was given in the Casino, Bar Harbor, Maine, on Friday evening, August 6, for the benefit of the annual fund to be disbursed by Miss Juliette Nickerson, state agent for the Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Miss Nickerson serves in this capacity without regular salary, and is dependent on this annual entertainment for the furtherance of her work. No worthier cause is presented to the public during the summer, and the cases of destitution and actual suffering revealed by Miss Nickerson are in numbers that run large.

E. B. Wilder, who conducted a competition for the naming of his new theater in South Brewer, awarded the prize of $5.00 to the patron who sent in the name "Dawn Theater" and Dawn theater it will be from now on. The opening, held on Monday, August 2, was a success in many ways.

Mrs. Stiner, proprietor of moving picture houses at Winterport, Greenville Jct. and East Millinocket, has taken on Universal service.

MORE JERSEY CITY NOTES.

By Jacob J. Kalter, Newark Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

Under the new management of E. J. Carpenter and F. B. Peterson, the Electric Park Amusement Resort was opened as the Vailsburg Park. Moving pictures will feature. The management claims huge success, thus far.

Miss Anna Gold, formerly at the Crawford theater, Broad and Orange streets, is spending her vacation at Greenwood Lake, N. Y.

Jesse Levine has been placed in charge of the Newark branch of the World Film Corporation. He has opened up a fine suite in the Strand theater building.

Henry D. Amo, treasurer of the Orpheum theater, Paterson, was arrested at Schenectady, N. Y., on a charge of embezzling funds of the Paterson theater.

The Newark board of education has made an appropriation for the installation of a moving picture outfit for the Barringer High School.

Educational moving pictures on health matters will become part of the curriculum of the Chestnut Street Summer School, Montclair. The Montclair board of education has so decreed, and has made an appropriation for same. Several healthful topics will be shown.

OTHER SAN FRANCISCO BRIEFS.

Local bookers of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., are proving their mettle as business getters, having landed first and fifth place for the volume of busines secured during June in competition with bookers in all of the other branch exchanges.

L. G. Dolliver, business agent of the local Operators' Union, has returned home from the International Convention, which he attended as a delegate.

The Realty and Rebuilding Co. has awarded contracts for the decoration of the moving picture house recently removed to a new location on Fillmore street, and this will be ready for occupancy within a short time.

"The Birth of a Nation" has completed its fourteenth week at the Alcazar theater and has been seen by 200,000 persons.

The Poppy Film Company has been incorporated here with a capital stock of $20,000 by A. Goldenberg, G. Dolcibella, J. Lupo, T. Alexander, S. N. Modica, G. Carcione and A. Claris.

Michael A. Fisher has been given a permit to conduct moving picture exhibitions at Jones and Eddy street in a large dancing pavilion. A Powers Cameragraph No. 6A has been installed.

Edward H. Kemp, the local Motiograph representative, has fitted up a light road outfit for C. A. Beagles and W. D. Walker, who are preparing to take the Sontag and Evans films through the mountain territory.

New Simplex equipment has been installed in the Queen theater on Polk street.

Levin Bros. have purchased two Simplex machines and a Westinghouse motor-generator set for the Haight Street theater.

The Fox Film Corporation has given up its plan for moving its offices from 107 olden Gate avenue and has commenced work on a number of improvements, including the installation of a fire-proof vault for the storage of films. Manager William Citron is planning a trip shortly through his entire territory.

Eugene Roth, manager of the Portola theater, and J. R. Crone, manager of the California offices of the Mutual Film Corporation, visited the new colony of Atascadero recently and secured moving pictures of civic activities there.

Andrew J. Cobe, of the Alliance program, was a recent visitor here conferring with Nat A. Magner, the local representative. In company with Mr. Magner he left for Los Angeles for a brief stay.

CALIFORNIA NOTES.

K. Ota, a prominent Japanese of Isleton, is equipping a new moving picture house at that place and will cater to Japanese only. While in San Francisco recently he placed orders for high-grade opera chairs and purchased a late model Motiograph from Edward H. Kemp.

R. Perroet has transformed the Pavilion skating rink at Grass Valley into a moving picture theater and has installed Simplex projection equipment.

J. W. Squires, of the Elks Home, Reno, Nev., has opened an airdome at Sparks, a small town nearby.

J. G. Hunter has been promoted to the management of the Richmond theater conducted at Richmond by the Turner & Dahnken Circuit.

St. Leander's Catholic Church at San Leandro has adopted the policy of showing moving pictures each Sunday evening in connection with church work.

OPERATORS PREPARING FOR ANNUAL BALL.

The Motion Picture Operators Union of San Francisco is preparing for its third annual ball which will be held this year at the Civic Auditorium on August 14. Many spectacular effects are being planned and the event promises to be a noteworthy one.

Business Quiet on Coast

In California, Summer Business Reports Show Marked Falling Off in Attendance —Number of Smaller Houses in Interior Close—Greater Slump Than Normal, Due to Cheap Automobiles and Good Weather.

By T. A. Church, San Francisco Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

FROM all sections of California reports are coming in of a marked falling off in the attendance at moving picture theaters, and the managers of film exchanges state that there are more small houses closed in interior towns than is usually the case, with others making frequent changes of service, indicating that receipts are not up to the normal. While the summer season always witnesses a slump in theater attendance the present one is more acute than usual and in view of the fact that there are many more people in California this season than ever before an explanation of this is being sought.

Many of the exhibitors from the interior cities, who have been in San Francisco recently, have been interviewed on this question to ascertain whether or not people were becoming tired of moving pictures, or if the late releases were not to their liking, and the general expression of opinion has been that the people enjoy pictures as much as ever and are satisfied with what are being shown. Almost without an exception country exhibitors blame the extensive sale of automobiles for the decrease in business. They point to the fact that while the population of the entire State is less than half of that of the City of New York, the registration of automobiles is second among the States of the Union and promises to be first by the end of the present year. Good weather and good roads conspire to attract people to evening joy rides and the moving picture houses are neglected. People are buying automobiles on installments and this tends further to keep them from the shows.

In the towns near San Francisco the Exposition is blamed for quiet times in the moving picture business, people spending their spare time and money there. Doubtless this is having a marked effect on business in the East bay cities. In San Francisco summer business is about normal, especially with the houses in the downtown district. Thousands of Exposition visitors are here and many of these are finding time to visit the local moving picture theaters and thus make up for any falling off in local patronage. Exhibitors express the belief that following the close of the Exposition moving picture houses will be patronized as never before, pointing out the fact that vast sums of money will have been placed in general circulation by then and one great source of amusement eliminated.

GLOBE EXCHANGE ENLARGES.

The Globe Film Exchange, located in the Pantages Theater building, 930 Market street, is now handling the former Criterion releases from both the San Francisco and Los Angeles offices, in addition to a large line of Charles Chaplin and Keystone productions. Additional space has just been taken over and within a short time a splendid exhibiting room will be opened adjoining the exchange for the benefit of customers. This film exchange was started about a year ago with forty reels and under the management of I. H. Lichtenstein has grown to its present healthy proportions.

NEW FEATURE FILM CONCERN.

C. L. Williams, who came to San Francisco last fall to manage the Coast interests of the Blinkhorn Photoplays Corporation, has organized the firm of C. L. Williams & Co. and is now handling feature films of his own selection, having taken over the former Blinkhorn offices in the Mechanics Bank building. For a time Mr. Williams was in charge of a wild animal concession at the Exposition, but is now manager of the Samoan Village on the Joy Zone, dividing his attention between this and the feature film exchange.

WALKER AND DUKE OPEN OFFICES.

Walker & Duke, who control the rights to the U. S. Feature Film Company's production, "The Folly of a Life of Crime," have opened offices in the Mechanics Bank building, 948 Market street, and are disposing of state rights. They are also planning to purchase other feature productions for the states west of the Mississippi River.

W. V. CRONE A BENEDICT.

W. V. Crone, manager of the Sierra Film Manufacturing Company, 948 Market street, was married two months ago but has just made the announcement public. He has also moved to new quarters in the same building in which he has been located for some time and has secured the services of an expert assistant in Walter N. Schulze, formerly of Los Angeles.

KOLB & DILL IN MOVING PICTURES.

C. William Kolb and Max Dill, a team of comedians whose antics have convulsed audiences in Coast theaters for many years, are to be seen shortly in moving pictures. The K. & D. Film Company has been incorporated here with a capital stock of $50,000 by C. William Kolb, Max M. Dill, O. de Bretteville, Maude Lillian Moulin and George D. Perry and pictures will be made at San Francisco.

SOL LESSER RETURNS HOME.

Sol L. Lesser, head of the Golden Gate Film Company, Inc., and the All Star picture Distributors, has returned from a business trip to New York and while away reviewed several of the new Kleine-Edison releases. He also secured the sequel to "Cabiria" and anticipates that this will make a hit on the Coast. While in New York he booked the San Francisco Exposition film, "The Birth of the Jewel City," at the Strand, the first official Exposition pictures to be shown in the metropolis. While away he also attended the meeting of Metro representatives at Atlantic City. Leon Netter has been placed in charge of the Kleine-Edison department, while S. W. MacLewee will have charge of the Metro program. Irving Lesser, who has worked in all departments of the firm has been made manager of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc.

MARK CORY ILL.

M. E. Cory, the prominent San Francisco exhibitor, who has for years taken such an active part in local and national organization work, was recently striken with an attack of typhoid fever and for a time was in a very precarious condition. Late reports, however, were more favorable and it is believed that he is now out of danger. His illness was brought on, according to his physicians, by overwork and irregular hours and those familiar with the strenuous efforts he put forth to make the recent National Convention a success will realize that the diagnosis was a correct one. His many friends in the exhibiting and producing field wish a speedy recovery.

Censors Seize Picture

Portland, Oregon, Censor Board Stops Sontag-Evans Film Exhibition—Theater Manager Contends That It Was Approved Under the Old Ordinance—He Is Conditionally Released by Municipal Judge—Censors Want Police Help.

By Abraham Nelson, Portland Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

WITH each side claiming the victory, Municipal Judge Stevenson released George M. Harris, manager of the Burnside theater, charged by Mrs. E. B. Colwell, secretary of the censor board, of showing "The Folly of a Life of Crime" without the sanction of the board. The records of the police court show the disposition of the case as "continued for sentence." Mrs. Colwell contends that its outcome was a conviction without a sentence or fine; Mr. Harris construes it as a dismissal. At any event, the films were not confiscated and they will be presented to the board for viewing soon.

Court Once Decided in Favor of Film.

The film in question treats with the doings of the Sontag-Evans gang of train robbers and general desperadoes in California's balmy days and upon the first of March of this year the film was submitted to the censor board operating under the old ordinance. The board refused to pass the picture and an appeal was taken as provided by the ordinance then in force, Municipal Judge Stevenson then being one of the appeal board. The decision of the censor board was reversed and the picture allowed to run. Mr. Harris exhibited the picture on March 3.

On July 22 the picture again came to Portland and on the theory that it once had been approved, Mr. Harris again booked it at his theater. Mrs. Colwell, seeing the picture advertised in the lobby of the Burnside theater, ordered its immediate removal for the reason that the provisions of the new ordinance had not been complied with. Mr. Harris declares that Mrs. Colwell created a disturbance on the sidewalk in front of his theater, in the lobby and in the house itself, in her efforts to stop the picture which was then about half run through. Police officers were called, the motion picture machine stopped and Mr. Harris made an announcement to his audience stating the facts. He then called for witnesses to the disturbance caused by Mrs. Colwell in the theater and forty people left their names in the box office.

Police Co-operation to Be Asked.

Heretofore the duty of seeing that the censorship ordinance is enforced has devolved upon the censor board and Mrs. Colwell declares that the incident of the Sontag-Evans pictures shows the possibility of exhibitors showing uncensored films upon one theory or another or out in the suburbs away from the watchful eye of the censor board. The duties of the secretary in arranging the viewers' time and the board reports are already taxing her entire time, says Mrs. Colwell, and the board is trying to devise some plan which they will recommend to the council in the next monthly report whereby the co-operation of the police will be asked in searching for uncensored pictures.

SOUTHERN OREGON BUSINESS FAVORABLE.

Reports from the Willamette valley and southern Oregon by film men recently through that territory indicate that the picture business is on the pick-up. During the month of June, however, conditions were not so favorable. It is rumored that manager Vining of the Vining theater, at Ashland, Oregon, is about to dispose of his house to a well-known showman from Portland and other transfers heretofore reported have given the picture business in the southern part of the state a boost.

S. BENSON HONORED.

S. Benson, one of the timber kings of the Pacific Northwest and the Portland philanthropist who donated Benson park and the Multnomah falls along the Columbia Highway to the public, has been honored by having a special day set apart for him at the San Francisco Exposition. On this day, throughout the United States, Pathe will release through its weekly, pictures of Mr. Benson taken at Multnomah Falls. Cameraman Van Scoy motored out to the Falls with Mr. Benson July 24 when the films were taken.

SECOND RUNS POPULAR.

Following in the footsteps of the National theater in showing second run pictures, the Star and Sunset theaters have put on second run features at ten cents and all three theaters report the experiment a success in the face of the dull summer season. The Star has been showing "St. Elmo," by Fox, the Sunset has booked Metro's "The High Road" and the National reports big business with the Bostworth-Paramount "Hypocrites."

GENERAL IMPROVES QUARTERS.

The General Film Company's Portland office is completing extensive improvements in its interior and when they are finished the General will have about the most presentable quarters of any film exchange in the city. New poster shelves have been erected, the shipping room rearranged and the new woodwork will be stained to conform with that of the executive office.

WESSLING ATTENDS CONFERENCE.

Paul Wessling, manager of the local Pathe Exchange, returned recently from Seattle where he attended the conference of the Pathe Exchange managers of the Pacific Northwest, covering Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. The conference was called at the instance of Joseph K. Burger, Comptroller of Exchanges of the Pathe Company, to consider extensive improvements contemplated by Pathe in this territory.

ORPHEUM CLOSES TO PICTURES.

After a somewhat varied experience in the picture game, the Orpheum has closed to pictures and T. R. Conlon, its manager, has taken over the management of the Empress, playing Sullivan and Considine vaudeville. Mr. Pierong, formerly manager of the Empress will be in charge of the Orpheum when it opens to big time vaudeville in the fall.

Just where the V-L-S-E and Mutual Masterpictures service will go from the Orpheum is a matter of conjecture at the time of this writing but rumor has it that both services will go to the Columbia.

PORTLAND PERSONALS.

G. A. Metzger, manager of the Film Supply Company of Oregon, left recently for Butte, Montana, on a business trip. He will call upon the offices of the Universal Film Company in Seattle and Spokane.

W. Kollross, manager of the Empire theater, lays the good business he has been enjoying to the temperate weather with which Portland has been favored.

F. M. Simonton, of the Standard Feature Film Company, has engaged a road man to handle the increased business since his concern purchased the local rights to "Prohibition."

C. E. Small, of the Majestic theater, Corvallis, Oregon, was a recent visitor to the Portland Pathe Exchange.

George Endert, Seattle manager of the World Film Corporation, was a recent visitor.

Alex Tagg, manager of the Jewell theater, Astoria, Oregon, was a visitor at the Pathe Exchange.

JAMES CRUZE REACHES SPOKANE

By S. Clark Patchin, Spokane Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

SPOKANE moving picture enthusiasts were given an opportunity of seeing James Cruze, star of "The Million Dollar Mystery," in the flesh, and hear an interesting story of his experiences enroute across the continent in his automobile July 22 and 23. As the young man stepped on the stage at the Liberty theater in khaki uniform he was greeted by cheers from the expectant crowd which filled the theater and through which a ripple of excitement had been noted.

He was several minutes late in putting in an appearance as his automobile broke down at Court d'Alene, Idaho, 30 miles east of this city, and he made the trip by electric train, arriving just in time to appear as per schedule and without time to brush off the dust, wash or change clothes. He made good in his appointment and after his appearance, showing moving pictures taken enroute and telling some of his experiences, he was forced to shake hands with many women and girls and kissed many babies carried in the arms of fond mothers who visited the theater to see the motion picture actor. In the evening he was entertained at a dinner in the Davenport hotel by Frank T. Bailey, president of the Montana Amusement company and the Liberty Amusement company, who is in direct charge of the Liberty. Those at the dinner were Mr. Cruze, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ruffner, H. Bagley, Mrs. McBride and J. Nase of Portland, Ore., and Wilbur W. Hindley.

Start of New York-San Francisco Tour of James Cruze and Sydney Bracy.

Mr. Cruze tells many interesting experiences of his trip including how mid-west farmers directed him to mud-holes, according to his story, then charged him to haul his machine out.

He was accompanied by Sidney Bracy, another moving picture actor, part of the way, but Mr. Bracy received a telegram to return home while in Montana, leaving Mr. Cruze to complete the journey with his mechanic. He will continue down the coast to Hollywood, Cal., where he will again appear before the camera in a new company being organized, according to his statement here.

"Since leaving New Rochelle, N. Y., May 15, I have shaken hands with 292,000 people, not counting the last three towns," said Mr. Cruze. "My secretary, who stands near, has a ticker and keeps accurate count. The muscles of my right arm are almost paralyzed. My car is the feature of our trip. It bears the signature of 10,000 people who got near it during the various stops."

NEW THEATER PROMISED IN WALLACE, IDAHO.

Plans for a $30,000 modern picture and show house to be erected at Fifth and Cedar streets, Wallace, Idaho, by Dr. J.

E. St. Jean and H. F. Samuels were made by Architect L. R. Stritesky, of Spokane, and the active construction of the new playhouse is to be started forthwith.

The building is to be a two-story brick, 50 by 100 feet, with concrete floors. The specifications call for a seating capacity of 700 people, 550 in the main auditorium and 150 in the balcony. The building was orginally intended as a picture house, but owing to the destruction of the Masonic Temple theater the original plans were changed so as to accommodate traveling attractions as well. Bids for the construction of the new playhouse will be opened July 29 and it is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy within 90 days. The backers of the enterprise will take over the contracts of the Grand theater, now conducted by Spencer & Bedard, who will have the management of the new theater.

SPOKANE BREVITIES.

Ed Armstrong, formerly a director of the Essanay company, is spending a week in Spokane with his "Stars of the Movies" company, which appears in vaudeville in impersonating famous stars. A feature of the attraction is that moving pictures are taken in each town and shown in connection with the appearance of the company.

There are a total of 22 persons in the company, all of whom claim to have had some experience before the camera.

Although the past few days have been the warmest of the year, in Spokane, Edith Storey in "The Island of Regeneration," advertised as an attraction which passed the National Board of Censorship by a majority of only one vote, proved an excellent attraction at the Casino theater. The attraction was viewed by almost capacity houses at the late afternoon and evening presentations of the production.

The Lyric reports that Florence LaBadie in the Mutual Masterpicture, "God's Witness," was the best drawing card of the week just closed.

Maud Allan in "The Rug Maker's Daughter" opened a three days' engagement at the Clemmer July 25 and played to good houses.

JOHNSON-WILLARD PICTURES IN CANADA.

By E. C. Thomas, Vancouver, B. C., Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Johnson-Willard fight films have been brought from the east by Jack Curley, and are being handled in western Canada by the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd. A private showing was given in Calgary after the regular performance at the Allen theater (Ben Kronk, manager) in the presence of about fifty invited guests. The pictures have been passed by the Alberta censors, and will shortly be shown at the Allen. No decision has been reached as yet regarding the prices of admission to be charged.

In Vancouver a hundred or more fans viewed the pictures privately one morning at the Orpheum, as the guests of I. Soskin, in charge of the Famous Players exchange in this city. At the present writing the film has not been submitted to the British Columbia censors. It was during Mr. Curley's stay in Vancouver that a report was received stating that "John Bull," a British Weekly, had charged that the contest was a fake. This was indignantly denied by Mr. Curley, and surely the pictures themselves show nothing to support the charge. The photography of the entire seven reels is remarkably clear, and in addition to the contest itself there are the usual preliminary scenes, as well as some beautiful locations in Havana and vicinity, and also pictures of Willard's triumphal return to the United States.

PRESS CENSORSHIP IN CANADA.

Canada is evidently scheduled for a taste of press censorship. On July 24th the Canada Gazette published a new order-in-council establishing censorship in the Dominion. Large powers are taken by this regulation, which has been framed under the War Measures Act. One clause provides that censors may be appointed to censor all productions of any publisher or printing establishment, and that after such appointment no literature is to be issued until censored. The printing of any news concerning war movements or operations, or criticising or commenting upon the policy, proceedings or action of the government of any neutral state, if such would interfere with the success of the Allied forces, or prejudice Allied relations, will be deemed a violation of the censorship order. Prosecution is to be undertaken by the Attorney-General of Canada. A fine not exceeding $5,000 and imprisonment not exceeding two years is provided for conviction on indictment, and for summary conviction a fine not exceeding $2,000 and imprisonment not exceeding two months. Publication by offending establishments may also be suspended indefinitely at the will of the secretary of state, under whom censorship will be exercised.

WAR FEELING CAUSES SALE OF THEATER.

Owing to the intense feeling against Germans in this country at present, J. Strassburg, who formerly conducted the Westholme Opera House at Prince Rupert, B. C., has sold out to A. Alberts, and the house is now being managed by Vincent C. Knowles.

CITY OF KAMLOOPS NEEDS THE MONEY.

On account of the unfavorable condition of the city's finances, the City Council of Kamloops, B. C., has just passed an ordinance levying a tax of $5.00 per six months on all theaters and mercantile establishments.

BRITISH COLUMBIA NOTES.

The Garland theater, Edmonton, Alberta, recently added to its regular show three reels advertising the products of a tire and rubber company.

W. P. Nichols, of the National Amusement Company is now in Calgary to purchase a new set of leather upholstered chairs for the Columbia theater at Victoria, which is controlled by his company.

C. C. Gaisford, of the Silver Fox Moving Picture Co., of Chicago, has left Dawson (Yukon Territory) for the coast, aboard the S. S. "Whitehorse." Before leaving he secured pictures of the midnight sun on its horizontal passage through the sky. This unusual film was made at midnight.

In the $500,000 fire which swept through Valdez, Alaska, on the morning of July 15th, the Empress theater was among the buildings destroyed.

It is reported that Herbert Blache, director, with Edmund Breese and six other members of his company, have arrived at Sitka, Alaska, to produce a dramatization of Robert W. Service's poem, "The Spell of the Yukon."

R. C. Newman, censor for Ontario, has been visiting his nephew, Frank Amor, secretary to Chief of Police McLennan of Vancouver.

BUILDING THE NEW ST. DENIS THEATER.

By Gerald Gallagher, Montreal Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE WORLD man was recently conducted by Mr. W. H. Conover over the site upon which the new St. Denis theater is being erected, in the eastern section of Montreal, a few hundred yards above St. Catherine street on St. Denis Boulevard. The lot measures one hundred and twenty feet by one hundred and ninety-four. When the World man visited the place the concrete foundations had already been built, and a large crew of iron workers were putting a thirty-four ton cantilever beam in place. Some idea of the magnitude of this may be gained when it is known that the beam supporting the balcony at the Imperial theater, which Mr. Conover also manages, weighs twenty-eight tons. The rate at which the work has been carried on so far gives fair promise of a speedy completion of he structure.

While showing the writer around Mr. Conover said: "The policy will be similar to that now in vogue at the Imperial. Moving pictures of good entertaining value will be screened, and this part of the program will be supplemented by high-class musical attractions. In view of this latter intention, an organ larger than that at the Imperial will be installed. As yet I have not decided whether the program at both houses will be identically the same, as I am considering just now presenting different offerings at both theaters with a view to the public patronizing both. As the theater will be in a district the majority of whose people speak French, special efforts will be made to cater to their tastes. I judge that the house will open its doors around December."

SPECIAL FILMS FOR CANADIAN CHILDREN.

In a recent edition of the local Herald-Telegraph, P. St. Charles Hamilton writes an article on the recent formation in New York, by the Social Centre Bureau of the People's Institute, of the Juvenile Motion Picture Federation. In concluding his article he says:

"While this is all very well for children in the United States, there should be some effort made to produce special children's programmes for Canadian children, with not too much foreign flag-flapping in them. The Montreal theater which sets apart certain afternoons a week for good, wholesome children's programmes should deserve the warmest endorsement of every sensible father and mother."

To which we answer with a hearty "Amen." Although there is not a mint of money in the plan for the exhibitor, yet such films rent cheaply, and if handled properly should prove fairly remunerative. Interest the school-teachers, and put up a show which would be looked forward to by the kiddies, and you have nothing to fret about.

SUMMER BUSINESS BAD.

Montreal film men have just been experiencing about the worst slump in business ever. With very few exceptions business has been poor. The weather has been bad, the last six weeks was the time for the big rush to seaside and mountain, and war conditions helped the jinx. One exchange has now ceased to import films. Business is due to pick up a little during the latter end of August.

BRIEF MONTREAL NOTES.

"The Spoilers" ran for two days at the local Imperial recently. The playing on the organ had the requisite beauty in bringing forth the fine points of the picture. In none of its previous presentations in this city was it accompanied to better advantage. The London theater also gave it a few days' run the next week. Down in St. John, N. B., it played at the Imperial to ten thousand people. Mr. Broy, one of the gentlemen who has the Canadian rights, told us an amusing story how, when it was being shown in an Ontario mining town, a drunken miner did his best to help Glenister in the fight by taking a shot at McNamara.

The Chaplin fever has long been felt in Montreal. But the latest Chaplin stunt in this town is a Chaplin Contest. Many houses give prizes for the cleverest imitator of the comedian. Only recently Dominion Park, Montreal's Coney, held one of these contests, and assumed the appearance of a gross of Chaplin "cut-outs" on a riot.

J. Marier was in town recently on business in connection with the Quebec Provincial Exhibition which will be held this year in the Ancient City the week of August 30. Mr. Marier booked a United Film show.

INDIANAPOLIS SCREEN CLUB.

Special to Moving Picture World from Indiana Trade News Service.

MANAGER A. DRESNER, of the Kriterion Film Service, Indianapolis, one of the live wire exchange men of Indiana, is organizing a Screen Club composed of exchange men in Indianapolis and surrounding cities. The first meeting will be held in the next month. It is proposed to open club rooms where out-of-town exhibitors may be entertained. The primary purpose of the club is social, but all matters of general interest to exchange men will be discussed. Mr. Dresner organized the Washington Screen Club and the Screen Club of Pittsburgh before coming to Indianapolis.

SUNDAY SHOW IN ROCHESTER.

The K. G. Garden, Rochester, Ind., will be open Sunday nights from now until cold weather with a free show. The hour has been set as 8:30 p. m., so as not to conflict with church services. There will be a contribution plate at the door. This form of entertainment has been found not in conflict with the Indiana law. The experiment is new in Rochester and it remains to be seen how the innovation is received by the public. Outside of Indianapolis this form of Sunday opening has not been uniformly successful.

HIS HOME RUNS WILL BE GOOD ADS.

Ray Blauser, of Kewanna, Mich., who bought My Show, Rochester, Ind., of Charles Walker of Plymouth, Ind., is a ball player, having played shortstop with Bay City in the Southern Michigan League. He will take charge of the picture show at once and will play with the Rochester Red Sox, a local team of professionals playing independent ball.

IT'S A PITY, ALL RIGHT.

Like the fish you never catch, Emil Irion, Lafayette, who opened a show at Rossville, Ind., believes the crowd that got away the afternoon of the opening because of the failure of films to arrive on time was the biggest he ever saw. There was an auction sale on in the afternoon and lots of people in town for miles around. They all wanted to see the show, but Irion had to turn them away. The film arrived just before the night show.

NO DOUBT AT ALL.

Taylor Ballard of the Whiteland Airdome, Whiteland, Ind., thinks he has a kick coming. The airdome was opened in June and was to show every Wednesday and Saturday. Rain has spoiled every date but two. Ballard opened the house at the invitation of the Whiteland Commercial Club, which promised he would be well patronized. Airdomes are worse than a single crop farm.

A GOOD IDEA.

James Alcorn, Greensburg, Ind., has hit upon a plan to make his press notices alive. Instead of the stereotyped stuff, he is talking to patrons and from day to day is telling what Violet Allen thinks of this comedy and that romance, and how Bill Hoover and Fred Nash regard the Chaplin series. Alcorn has found that people like to get their names in the paper and that it has a disposition to start them thinking of the good things they can say about the shows they have seen. It seems to be good advertising because it apparently is making good boosters.

INDIANA GOSSIP.

Invitations are being issued to Culver Military graduates in Indianapolis to be present at the Victoria theater, Indianapolis, to view the showing of Lyman Howe's pictures of the Summer School, Naval and Woodcraft work at the Academy Aug. 5.

The St. Joseph Valley theater, South Bend, Ind., has been incorporated with $10,000 capital; the directors are J. Sosnoski, R. Codd and W. P. Furey.

The Coburn Film Company, Indianapolis, is filming the maneuvers of the Indiana National Guard in camp at Ft. Harrison. The company will have about a thousand feet to show.

Moving picture shows and other places of congregation were closed in Princeton, Ind., because of a smallpox scare, but have been reopened once more by permission of the board of health.

The exhibitors of Attica, Ind., were rebated $10 on their city licenses by the city council because the city, which furnishes the electricity from the municipal plant, has not given continuous service and several shows were missed as a result.

R. T. Megibben has bought the Princess theater, Huntingburg, Ind., from Andrew Greener. Mr. Megibben was the partner of Mr. Greener when they opened the Princess two years ago. Since then, Megibben has been in Cleveland, Miss., where he ran a house, also called the Princess.

The Why Not theater, Greenfield, Ind., was crowded for the first chapter of the "Diamond from the Skies." Manager White is making many changes to the interior of the house that will make it more attractive. The orchestra pit is being enlarged to accommodate twenty musicians.

The National Motion Picture Company, Chicago, filmed Gosenn, Ind., recently.

George B. Thompson, Jr., and Miss Katherine Siler have been added to the staff of the Family theater, Lafayette. Mr. Thompson, Jr., is assistant manager and Miss Siler is cashier.

The Lyric theater, Connersville, Ind., after being closed ten days for the installation of a ventilating system and a complete overhauling, has been opened again. A new ticket booth has been added and large brass bound bill boards.

The Auditorium picture garden, Connersville, Ind., has been opened. The place is made up in Japanese garden style and is getting lots of favorable comment as a result.

The lease on the Blinn theater, Frankfort, Ind., has been taken over by Sam Carlton and Cecil Sawyer from Hufford and Langebrake, who have been in charge of the house since it was built ten years ago. The new management will do business under the name of the Carlton Company.

MAMMOTH THEATER FOR NEWARK.

By Jacob J. Kalter, Newark Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

EDWARD SPIEGEL from his offices in the Strand theater, New York, announced plans for a great, modern theater building. The playhouse will embody features of fireproof construction absolutely unique. The showhouse will be erected on the site of the old Newark theater in Market street. The other members of the corporation, besides Mr. Spiegel, are Michael H. Marks, Henry Waterson and Max Spiegel. The company owns the Strand theater in New York and also the playhouse in Newark of the same name.

"The building will be of modern fireproof construction and will contain a feature which has not been in any other playhouse which has come under my observation. There will be seventeen exits on the lower floor alone, and sixty altogether throughout the theater. The playhouse will have the largest stage in Newark," said Mr. Spiegel in summarizing his plan.

"The upper part of the structure will be fashioned in a series of three suspended mezzanines, each hung from the balcony. The mezzanines will be connected with one another by runways, not stairways, so that when one has reached the first level, he may proceed above without the expenditure of strength required in climbing steps. This arrangement has been provided so as to avoid the usual crowding at the conclusion of the performance.

LICENSE APPLICATION WITHDRAWN.

Reapplication for a license to run a moving picture house at 688 Summer avenue, Newark, was withdrawn by counsel for William A. Pearson, before the license committee of the Common Council, after it was plainly stated by members of the committee that no licenses would be granted for moving picture houses within 200 feet of a church. The Rev. O. M. West, pastor of the Summerfield M. E. Church, and Rev. William J. Richmond, rector of the Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel, made objections to the granting of the license. After all this argument had been gone over, Henry Hahn, counsel for the moving picture applicant, withdrew his application, but declared he would be back again soon with his client with all opposition removed.

PICTURES AT OCEAN GROVE.

Moving picture shows will be shown during the summer at the Auditorium, Ocean Grove, according to a statement attributed to Tali Esen Morgan, the manager. Paramount pictures will probably command first position on the program. Oscar A. Morgan, the present resident manager of the Paramount theater in Newark, and press representative for the Ocean Grove Auditorium, stated that the "Storm," a wonderful feature of the house, may be given after each performance, but this is up to the music committee. A board of censors has been appointed by the association, consisting of Dr. A. H. Ballard, B. G. Moore, and Joseph Jackson. Mr. Morgan claims that the auditorium is the largest place in the country devoted exclusively to moving pictures, since the Hippodrome has closed. The seating capacity is 10,000.

KEARNY GRANTS ANOTHER LICENSE.

Although the Kearny Town Council had gone on record last fall as being opposed to any more moving picture houses in the town, it recently voted to grant another license. The applicant was James Durkin, who desires to open up a playmouse on Kearny avenue, near Grove street, Arlington. The vote stood 5 in favor, and 3 negative.

PASSAIC'S NEW PLAYHOUSE.

Passaic will soon have a beautiful new moving picture house. The large showhouse now in the course of construction at 284 Main street, in the heart of the city, will be run by the Hudson Amusement Company, of New Jersey. The concern has leased the house for a number of years at a total rental said to be in the neighborhood of $75,000. It is expected that the structure will be completed by September 1.

BENEFIT FOR FIRE VICTIMS.

With the permission of Frederic C. Briedenbach, president of the Police Board, about 24 local theaters opened on a recent Sunday, for a benefit performance for the families of the firemen who lost their lives at the Stengel leather factory fire. According to the arrangements made with the police commissioners, the widows of the dead firemen received fifty per cent. of the proceeds. It was stated that the performances were a financial success. Tiis is only one illustration of the helpful work of local moving picture men.

JERSEY FILM BREVITIES.

An innovation at the Orpheum theater which is meeting with the approval of its patrons is the showing of moving pictures between the acts. This does away with tiresome waiting during intermissions.

Ned Cottrell, with offices in the Strand theater building, has invaded Elizabeth with United service.

SPECIAL NEWS LETTER FROM ANDERSON, IND.

By Leon Louiso, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

FOR the first time in the history of the motion picture industry in Anderson the exhibitors are running Sunday shows. Some of the local exhibitors have made attempts at exhibition on Sunday, but all previous attempts have met with opposition and closing.

The oldest theater in point of years, the Grand Opera House, recently closed, after an unsuccessful attempt with feature pictures. The oldest motion picture house, the Nickelodeon, was recently purchased by W. R. Walker & Son. The new management will immediately set about on complete reconstruction and renewal of the theater. A new front, in plaster, will be added, rewiring and reseating will be installed and two Power's 6A projection machines will be installed. The theater will be completely decorated and equipped. Walter Jackson and Wayne Rittenour furnish the music, and Owen Fowler is the operator.

The Royal, which was the former location of the oldest vaudeville house here, is under the management of C. M. Lockwood. The seating capacity is about 200. The Universal program, with a World Film Feature on Sunday, is used. A Wurlitzer organ furnishes the music. Chas. Burkholder is the operator.

The Orpheum is managed by Dode Fitzgerald. A mixed program, including features, is used. Exploits of Elaine and The Master Key serials are run. The seating capacity is about 160. The music is furnished by Chas. Hester and John Smith. Geo. Knight is the operator.

The Cozy theater, owned by Brown, and managed by Robert Gilmore, uses the General Film Company regular service. 198 is the seating capacity of the house. The music is furnished by a new Wurlitzer electric piano. Ray Miller is the operator.

The Meridian theater, owned by the Meridian Amusement Co., and under the management of F. H. Heller runs General Film regular service and a Paramount Feature on Sundays. "The Goddess" is being followed with great interest by the patrons of this theater. Chas. Chaplin first releases are shown here, too. The music of the theater is one of its features. The theater is undergoing extensive improvements. The excellent location on the principal business street of the city has necessitated an enlargement of seating and when the new addition is made the capacity will be about 500. A new ventilating system is being installed, also a generator. The management has raised the admission to 10 cents and the theater has suffered no loss of patronage. Martin Greenwalt is the operator.

The Starland, Earl Martin, of Cleveland, Ohio, manager, with Pavin Cook as local manager, handles all features. The World Film, Wm. Fox Features and Metro programs are used. The theater has the greatest seating capacity in the city and is one of the best equipped. The capacity is 550. The picture on the screen is 13 x17. A complete ventilating system, two 6A Power's machines and a generator set are included in the equipment. The music is furnished by Elmer Howell. A pipe organ and a baby grand piano are included. Lester Young is the operator.

Bert Davis and wife has been advertising this theater locally for the last few weeks, as "Hira Birdseed and Aunt Lucindy."

PENNSGROVE, N. J.

G. H. Elkenton has opened a new theater in Pennsgrove, N. J., which he has named the Riverside theater. He has splendidly furnished the new establishment and purchased much of the equipment from the Swaab Film Service, 1327 Vine street, this city.

Pennsylvania Minor Law

Philadelphia Exhibitors Astonished by Summons to Answer Charges of Employment of Minors After 9 o'Clock, P. M.—New Law Limits Girls' Working Hours—Theaters Favored by Inspectors.

Special to Moving Picture World from Philadelphia News Service.

PROPRIETORS of some of the largest moving picture theaters in Philadelphia, including the Locust, Imperial, Stanley, Globe, Nixon and Cross Keys theaters, were recently greatly surprised when served with a summons to appear in court and answer to the charge of having employed girls, under twenty-one years of age, after nine o'clock at night.

An inspector of the department of Labor and Industry paid a visit to the city and quietly made a tour of the various theatrical houses in this vicinity, inquiring as he went of the numerous young ladies, employed as cashiers and ushers, as to whetner they were of age or not. In this manner the inspector equipped himself with absolute proof against the exhibitors, the majority of whom were perfectly innocent of the fact that they had committed any breach of the law. The law which makes it a misdemeanor to employ girls under twenty-one years of age after nine o'clock in the evening in the State of Pennsylvania is of recent composition and many business men scattered throughout the entire State are not acquainted with its terms.

Just why the moving picture people should be picked as the "goats" for the enforcing of the new measure cannot be exactly doped out, but the fact still remains that they were selected. However in despensing judgment, the judge was very lenient and the majority of the exhibitors were dismissed with warnings against future offenses of a similar nature.

MAGARO TO BUILD.

Peter Magaro, proprietor of the Regent motion picture theater, 410 Market street, Harrisburg, Pa., recently confirmed the rumor that he had purchased a plot of ground, 149x150 feet, at Maclay and Susquehanna streets, on which he proposes to erect a new moving picture theater.

"I have not decided when to begin building," said Mr. Magaro. "It may not be for a year, but I propose ultimately to erect a brick, fireproof theater that will seat 2,000 persons. I will exhibit pictures of a first class nature only and it is my opinion that there is an excellent field for a good theater in that rapidly growing section of the city." The ground was purchased from the Rev. W. S. Harris.

TRENTON THEATER BUILDING COMPANY ELECTS.

Harry C. Taylor, recently re-elected president of the Trenton Theater Building Company, Trenton, N. J., which controls and operates the Taylor Opera House and the Trent theater. Mr. Taylor has been identified with the theatrical business for a long time. He was first elected to the presidency of the company following the death of former William S. Hancock. Other officers elected were: James C. Tattersall, who was recently added to the directorate, first vice-president; Alexander C. Yard, second vice-president, and Thomas B. Taylor, secretary and treasurer.

FILM PLEASES JACKIES.

The "first run" of a new comic motion picure, with "Billie Reeves" in the stellar role, was recently shown amid appropriate surroundings. The first view of the picturn was had on board the U. S. battleship Alabama at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. The reason is this: Lieutenant John J. McCracken, of the Alabama, is the man who penned the scenario and all of the principal scenes in the picture were taken on board the man-o'-war. Many sailors of the fighter were seen in the picture.

The exhibition was in the nature of a treat for the sailors. They certainly had things arranged to perfection. The main-deck was the auditorium and seats were arranged for the officers, relatives and friends. Many members of the Lubin company were in attendance and officers and sailors from other ships were also invited. After the exhibition of pictures had concluded, refreshments were served and dancing enjoyed on the deck.

A. H. NACE VISITS.

A. H. Nace, proprietor of the Broad theater, Quakertown, Pa., was a recent visitor in this city and paid his respects to many friends, both socially and otherwise, scattered throughout the city. Mr. Nace is one of the best known moving picture men of the State of Pennsylvania and has always conducted his establishment in a manner which has met with the approval of those who attend the performances.

PRESIDENT ZERR IN PHILADELPHIA.

Ben Zerr, president of the Pennsylvania Exhibitors' League, and proprietor of a large moving picture theater in Reading, recently visited Philadelphia and made the rounds of the various exchange houses. Mr. Zerr is a familiar figure in the world of moving pictures and is immensely popular through the entire State.

PHILADELPHIA ITEMS.

George Athens, proprietor of the Victoria and Photoplay theaters, Harrisburg, Pa., has taken out a permit for making alterations to the building, 221-23 Market street, so as to consolidate the two theaters. The alterations will be of a most extensive nature and will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000.

The Great Northern theater, Broad street and Erie avenue, which had been closed for a short period of time, has reopened under the original management. It will be devoted to the exhibiting of first-class motion pictures and the program will be changed every day.

This theater was one of the first neighborhood playhouses in Philadelphia and has a large seating capacity. Much attention has been devoted to decorations during the closing of the theater and several improvements to facilitate the projection of the films have been made.

Mr. Goodwin, former manager and proprietor of the Frolic theater, West Philadelphia, has obtained the Somerset theater, 26th and Somerset streets, from Mr. Rafflo who has left for the South. Mr. Rafflo has not declared what his intentions for the future are, but it is thought that he will re-enter the theatrical business in some Southern town.

The Panama theater, 4th and Dickenson streets, under the management of Mr. Smith, has been indefinitely closed and the property has been turned over to the lessee who has put it up for rent.

Extensive improvements are being made to the Lubin Palace theater, 1214 Market street, one of the most beautiful theaters in this city. The exterior of the theater is being remodeled and new paintings are being drawn by artists. When finished the theater will present a wonderful sight and should most certainly play to a larger audience than ever before.

Illinois Approves

Governor Dunne Has Pleased the Majority in the State by Killing the Olsen Censorship Bill—Newspapers Voicing Commendation—Call Official Censorship Unreasonable and Cannot See Why Legislature Passed Bill.

By Frank H. Madison, Illinois Correspondent Moving Picture World.

GOVERNOR DUNNE continues to receive approval for his veto of the state censorship bill.

"The governer acted wisely," says the Hoopeston Herald, "never have such high grade pictures been produced as at present. Especially is this true in Hoopeston. The Princess and Lyric have given to their patrons the highest grade of pictures that have ever been produced."

"Governor Dunne pursued the right course," says the Springfield News-Herald. "Just why the legislature passed it is not quite clear. Perhaps it did it in a moment of abstraction. This is the charitable view."

Even the nationally known Public of Chicago concurs: "Governor Dunne did well in vetoing the bill. Moreover, an official censorship is unnecessary not only because the unofficial national board is sufficient for every justifiable purpose, but because owners of moving picture theaters are not so deficient in business judgment as to deliberately offend the public taste. The local official censorship in Chicago is bad enough, and Governor Dunne deserves credit for preventing a further spread of the vicious institution."

WHY FILMS ARE GOOD IN A CHURCH.

Moving pictures in the church were defended by Rev. George A. Gable, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, in the following Gable-Grams:

"It is no insult to your grandfather when you replace the 'open shoulder' shirt he wore with an open front. It is no reflection on John Wesley when some human alteration is effected in the great church he founded.

"When the salt of any service has lost its savor, it is fit for nothing.

"You will never hamper Christ or His church by the introduction of a fresh, wholesome, novel program. The hour of worship should not include an uninteresting moment.

"Jesus was an innovationist. He tore from the church formula many a perfunctory custom, hoary with age.

"When the coin of church currency becomes worn, return it for re-minting with a new superscription of the increasing Christ upon it.

"Should a Christian demand a 'service to his taste,' when a different setting of the table might attract others to the feast?

"We deem this 'movie' as incidental, not essential. But while it attracts the people we desire, entertains to their satisfaction and preaches what we wish to say, it will have out utmost sanction."

GATHERED IN ILLINOIS.

The Palace theater at Rockford has switched from vaudeville and began its picture season with an eight-day engagement of "Uncle Sam at Work."

The Grand theater at Elgin has been closed for overhauling.

The Evanston theater at Evanston has begun an all-feature career, starting with the Vitagraph, "The Island of Regeneration."

Robert Mathies of the film weekly at Quincy has been preparing to produce a local story, "My Hero," in which a member of the Quincy team of the Three-I baseball league takes an important part. The principal scenes will be laid on the local diamond.

The Harper Amusement Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $375,000. The incorporators are: Willis P. Clement, August E. Martin and John F. Parth.

The Exhibitors Film Exchange, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are: James T. Igoe, Patrick J. Garvey and Bernard E. Callahan.

The Scenic theater at Bloomington ran the motion picture story of the Typographical Union in co-operation with the local printers.

"The Spoilers" has been to the West theater in Galesburg again.

The Hebron opera house at Hebron conducted a rooster drawing contest in connection with the "New Exploits of Elaine." Free prizes were given to the persons who drew the best pictures of the familiar Pathe rooster.

Merchants in De Kalb had a big picnic one day recently and chartered the Princess and Star theaters, throwing them open to the public.

Al Dockstader, Sr., has opened a motion picture show under canvas at Savanna. He will also show vaudeville.

The showing of the films of the Grant Highway tour through Illinois, made by R. S. Hopper, of Freeport, was a big event in Galena. They were shown two days at Turner Hall under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. Manager Zimmerman of the Grand not only loaned the projectors, apparatus and other local pictures, but closed the Grand for the two days.

The merchants at Tuscola have taken over the Globe theater for a series of Saturday matinees at which their customers will be guests.

Phillips & Huffman not only started a contest to select a name for their new motion picture theater at Delavan, but wanted expressions of opinions from prospective patrons as to the best liked kind of pictures.

The films of the big Fourth of July celebration in Morris were shown at the Grand theater in that city.

MIDWEST NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

In Michigan.

SUNDAY shows, given by the Vaudette in Three Rivers, led to action by the city council. When reports that citizens objected reached the council that body adopted a resolution to stop the Sunday shows and also to exercise the power of censorship in regard to the kind of pictures shown. The regulation also will be applied to vaudeville.

Hanold Brothers have remodeled the opera house at Stambaugh and opened it as a five and ten cent motion picture house. A dance was a feature of the opening night. A balcony has been added which increases the seating capacity to 500.

Charles De Paul has opened Dreamland theater (formerly Bijou) at Sault Ste Marie after three weeks spent in making it a thoroughly modern photoplay house. Allie Trenope is in charge of the three-piece orchestra.

The "Rest-a-While," a new motion picture theater, has been opened at Marlette.

The doorman and ushers at the Idlehour theater, in Grand Rapids, have been outfitted in white flannel uniforms, with gold braid.

In Wisconsin.

THE new Toy theater on Second street in Milwaukee, which will be opened early in September, will be a high-class photoplay house, charging probably a minimum of 35 cents for matiness and 50 cents for evening shows. Seats will be reserved two weeks in advance. A large orchestra will be a feature. Edwin Bigelow has been selected as manager.

Two years' growth of the city of Grand Rapids was emphasized when the Palace theater dug up some local motion pictures made two years ago.

Even the smaller cities liked Selig's "The Spoilers." The Majestic, at Barron, recently played it for a return date.

Manager Adler of the Adler theater at Marshfield had a solid week of vaudeville. The Woodmen of the city recently showed their tuberculosis sanitarium films at Adler.

In Iowa.

MANAGER E. R. BAILEY'S new motion picture house at Marble Rock is said to be the only one giving daily shows in a town of less than 1,000 in the state. Another claim to distinction is that Bailey got his house ready in ten days. His outlay was about $7,500.

The Cusack theater at Iowa City has been leased by P. R. Isley, of Kansas City, and N. J. Cook, formerly manager of the Sapphire theater in that city. The latter will act as resident manager.

F. W. Bailey has opened a motion picture show in the opera house at DeWitt.

Films of "The Life of Moses" were shown by the M. E. Church at Madrid.

The New Hildreth at Charles City has cut out all matinees except on Saturdays and days when there are features. "Tillie's Punctured Romance" and "Neptune's Daughter" are among the bookings of this house.

The Palace at Cedar Rapids played a return date of "Sampson."

The building at Council Bluffs occupied by the American theater has been sold and may be remodeled into a store and office building.

The partnership of the Majestic Theater Company at Ft. Dodge has been dissolved. Thomas L. Murphy retires and H. J. Lego will conduct the business.

The city commission at Omaha has under consideration an ordinance which will prohibit boys under 21 from acting as operators for motion picture shows. Smoking in the operating room also will be forbidden. The ordinance also requires operators to be licensed by a board of five members, four appointed by the mayor and acting with the city electrician

In Minnesota.

THE AMERICAN AMUSEMENT COMPANY lost little time because fire gutted the Grand theater in Faribault in which its motion picture show was housed, although the place was put out of commission for several weeks. Manager D. W. Chamberlain telegraphed for a big tent and has been running his show under canvas. Alex Parlova, leader of the orchestra, is happy because he saved his musical library.

The Star theater at St. James has been reopened with A. T. McGiffin as manager. Universal service will be used.

Manager Elmer Larson of the Cecile theater at Cokato recently was at Dassel, looking over the Premier at Dassel, getting pointers for the new house he is erecting in Cokato.

Feljen & Lovejoy have opened their new motion picture theater at Rush City. The house, which is 28x70, seats 250, and was erected at a cost of $3,300.

The Northwestern Weekly of St. Paul and Minneapolis probably will be engaged by business men in the North Side of Minneapolis to make a reel of civic development pictures for them.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brown, of Cleveland, O., have been getting some good wild-animal pictures at Basswood Lake, near Winton. Among the most striking scenes are live moose at large.

The Palace theater at Owatonna has been giving some vaudeville in addition to its motion picture program.

Stories of the Films

General Film Company

KALEM.

HAM AT THE BEACH (Ham and Bud Comedy—August 17).—Finding a roll of money, Ham and Bud buy some new clothes and go to the beach. They meet Fifi, an actress. Because he can lick his little pal, Ham proves more successful in making Fifi's acquaintance. Ham further arouses Bud's ire by refusing to share the money with him.

Bud sees the gambling conducted by Braley. Between them, they concoct a plan. Bud steers his chum up against Braley's roulette wheel and in a few minutes Ham's money is separated from him. Bud steals the roll from the table and decamps with Fifi. Ham, pursued by the irate gambler, takes refuge in the dressing room of the tent show conducted by Sass. The fugitive dons a ballet skirt belonging to Fifi.

Bud and Fifi enter. Ham, mistaken for the actress, has been compelled to go on and do a turn. Bud takes one glance at the "soubrette's" feet. Fifi discovers her loss. Followed by the members of the company and Bud, she pursues Ham. The chase leads to the big pier. Cornered, Ham is compelled to jump off into the ocean. While Bud is gloating, the gambler, who is among the pursuers, sees him and makes a grab for him. Without further ado, Bud follows Ham.

THE LEGACY OF FOLLY (Broadway Favorites—Three Parts—August 16).—Reared in a convent, Constance remains in ignorance of the gay life led by Corinne, her mother. Heart disease kills the latter and causes Constance to leave the convent. She becomes Scott's stenographer.

A cynic and a man-about-town, the novelist determines to win her. At his suggestion, Mrs. Hale, an aunt who keeps house for him, invites the girl to live in the mansion. The luxury of the place fills Constance's heart with vague longings.

Scott gives a dinner party, to which he invites his stenographer. Constance innocently accepts the invitation and the taint inherited from her mother causes her to become the gayest member of the party. But an awakening comes when Scott later seizes her in his arms and endeavors to make love to her. Terrified and disillusioned, Constance rushes to her room. Scott follows and there sees the girl press Corinne's picture to her breast. In a flash he realizes that the gay "Queen of Bohemia" is Constance's mother. Taunting the girl with her origin, he gives her an hour in which to decide whether she will accept his attentions.

Left alone, Constance prays for strength. Slipping from the house, she rushes back and seeks shelter in the arms of the Mother Superior. In the meantime, Scott has come to realize the contemptible part he has played. His beliefs, expressed in his new novel, cry out against him. He sees the young minds it might corrupt and the Sin in its wake. Thrusting the manuscript into the fire, Scott wonders if Constance can forgive him and be his wife.

THE SUBSTITUTED JEWEL (Mysteries of the Grand Hotel—Two Parts—Aug. 18).—Major Dunbar, a guest at the Grand Hotel, reports that someone had stolen his valuable scarf pin, substituted imitations in place of the gems, and then replaced the pin on his dresser. The major's complaint is but one of many similar cases reported.

Francis and Hilton have frequently observed Jeffries, an attendant employed by Balmer, a blind guest, making sketches. Francis discovers that the sketches are remarkably accurate copies of the scarf-pins worn by the other guests. Their suspicions aroused, the detectives call upon Balmer and his attendant in their room.

Learning that Jeffries is about to be arrested, Balmer suddenly removes his goggles, holds the detectives up with a revolver and backs into an adjoining room. Jeffries attempts to escape, but is shot in the wrist by Francis. The girl then shoots at Balmer, knocking the pistol from his hand. The man is captured.

The two crooks then confess that they have made a regular business of replacing jewels with imitations. Balmer posed as a blind man, knowing that suspicion would never be directed against such an individual. The room occupied by the two adjoined Major Dunbar's room and it was easy for them to steal his pin.

THE GAME OF LIFE (Two Parts—Aug. 20).—Brought before the faculty on the charge of conduct unbecoming a gentleman, Professor Trenton is dismissed. Professor Layton's merciless indictment of the man causes the members of the faculty to turn deaf ears to the disgraced man's pleas.

The parents of Ilman and Roy arrange a match between their children. The marriage is a loveless one. Roy, a rake and a drunkard, takes no pains to conceal his aversion for his wife. Layton comes into Ilma's life and falls in love with her.

The Van Dykes give a reception. Layton attends and overhears a conversation in which the speakers tell of Roy's infatuation for Cora, a cabaret singer. Roy leaves the house. Ilma sees the gossips preparing to follow her husband and learns the reason of her husband's conduct.

In alarm, she turns to Layton and begs him to help her. It dawns upon the man that Ilma really loves her husband and that the disgrace he is about to bring upon himself would kill her. promising to save Roy, Layton hastens to the cabaret and arrives before the gossips appear.

He finds Roy with Cora. Explaining the situation, he forces the young man behind a screen and takes his place at the table. By the time the scandal-mongers arrive, the little drama is ready for them. To their horror, they find Layton—the man who brought about Trenton's expulsion—in an intoxicated condition.

Layton's scheme works only too well. Roy, begging forgiveness, hastens home. The professor pays the adventuress for her part in the plot and orders her to leave. When an attendant endeavors to awaken Layton shortly afterward, he finds the man with a bullet in his brain.

A PERILOUS CHANCE (Hazards of Helen Railroad Series No. 41—Aug. 21).—Bull, Reno and Red make a getaway after holding up the Limited. Helen later sees the men and summons the detectives.

The convicts escape from the trap and board a passing freight. Helen also succeeds in getting aboard. The train crew discovers the fugitives. Reno, in charge of the valise containing the loot, throws it into the boxcar ahead.

Helen is on the roof of this car. In spite of the awful risk, she swings from the top of the car and lands inside it. Seizing the valise, she leaps from the train. The convicts, who have bested the trainmen, see the girl, and promptly pursue her.

Helen dashes toward the Elton drawbridge, making it just as it is raised and barely escaping capture by the crooks. Undaunted, the latter leap into the river and swim to the other side. They come just in time to seize Helen as she slides down the raised structure.

The girl is being beaten to the ground when the detectives arrive. A furious battle ensues. Reno comes within an ace of slaying Pike, the chief of the detectives, but is frustrated by the girl telegrapher. The crooks are finally overpowered and taken away.

THE HAPPY HOUSE (August 9).—Carlotta didn't know which she loved the best: James Arnold, old and rich, or Jack Wells, young, poor, but ambitious. She chooses Jack and he shows her their future home, a quaint, vine-covered house back from the country road, explaining that is where he and his father were raised. Carlotta doesn't like the idea and slips the ring off. Miserable, several days later she wanders to the old country home. The ghost of the house's life rises before her and tells her of the house's spirit. She sees Jack's grandfather bring his bride there. As the years pass, they keep the optimistic, cheerful atmosphere about the place and fortune smiles. The family scatters but soon one of the sons returns with his bride. A child comes and grown up. This child is Jack. Carlotta is astonished to see the little girl playing in the dust with him is herself. The spirit tells Carlotta through the visions: "The generations past have stamped this house with happiness for all brides who come." The ghost is gone and Jack walks up and she asks to be taken to his happy house.

THE CAVE ON THUNDER CLOUD (Special—2 Parts—Aug. 14). -Tish organizes a walking tour, together with her two old-maid friends. Aggie and Lizzie. They charter a donkey called Modestibe. Armed with a 22 "cat" rifle they make headquarters in a cave on "Thunder Cloud" Mountain. A young clubman, possessing an empty revolver and a sense of humor, holds up a railroad train and hides his weapon in the cave. The authorities are hot on his trail and they stumble over the Ladies' Aid Society pillars, and after discovering the train loot they cart the three off to the county jail. It is only when Charles Sands, prosaic nephew of Tish, reads of their incarceration in the newspaper that anything like escape comes to them. He arrives at the jail simultaneously with a letter from the real robber, stating that he won a $500 bet and that the stolen money would be found under a tree by the cave. On verification of this the three innocent ladies are released.

SELIG.

THE FACE IN THE MIRROR (Special Two Parts—August 9).—Richard Savage and his wife Blanche, live by their wits, and they are worried upon receipt of an expensive hotel bill.

They encounter George Gray and Robert Morris, his friend, in a cafe. Gray has received an invitation from Mrs. Philip Dundore to attend her reception. He reads the letter aloud and he tells his friend he failed to reach Mrs. Dundore by telephone to tell her that he would be unable to attend her reception and that he must post a letter to her on their way to the steamer. Savage and his wife overhear the conversation.

Savage secures possession of the sealed letter and reads the contents to Blanche. The letter indicates that Gray and Mrs. Dundore have never personally met. Savage resolves to impersonate Gray.

Philip Dundore has given his wife a pearl necklace and she is still admiring it when Savage enters the house. He poses as Gray and is shown the necklace. Mrs. Dundore wears her necklace at the function. She and Savage repair to a divan. His arm steals around the back of her neck in an endeavor to take the necklace, when Dundore enters and he is annoyed at Savage's attitude.

Aboard the steamer Gray is worried at his loss of the letter to Mrs. Dundore, and he sends a wireless message. Savage secretes himself in the Dundore home when the others leave. As he cautiously approaches the door of her bedroom, Mrs. Dundore in her dressing room sees a reflection of Savage entering. As she rises, the crook covers her with a revolver. Dundore just then enters his home. He goes toward his wife's room. He confronts Savage, who says: "Your wife and I are old friends and you returned sooner than we expected." Mrs. Dundore is prostrated. Outside Dundore and Savage struggle and Savage is overcome. At this juncture a wireless message is delivered signed by George Gray. At the police station Savage is recognized as one of the cleverest crooks in the country, and Dundore and his wife understand each other again.

THE GOLD DUST AND THE SQUAW (August 10).—Ned and Bob strike it rich and hide the bags of gold dust under the floor in a shanty. When Ned leaves to tell Hazel of his good luck, Bob plots to take the gold. With the aid of Lame Dog, an Indian, he buries the gold in the woods. They are overseen by Little Fawn, a squaw. Bob and Lame Dog tie him fast to the floor in the shanty.

Hazel and Ned arrive at the shack and find Bob helpless. Bob explains that he was overpowered by Indians and the gold was stolen. Little Fawn, captured by Lame Dog, escapes and falls over the edge of a cliff. Her dress catches on a tree. Ned, Hazel and Bob discover her, and Ned lowers himself on a rope to rescue her. Bob decides to cut the rope and let his partner fall to his doom, when Tall Elk, an Indian, who loves Little Fawn, sees the act and shoots Bob. Tall Elk pulls Ned and Little Fawn to safety, and Little Fawn shows Ned where the gold is hidden.

WHEN LOVE IS MOCKED (Special—Three Parts—August 12).—In the little French village the young Fisherman and Yvonne play together as children, and grow to young manhood and young womanhood as almost inseparable companions.

La Glou, a Frenchwoman, living in Paris, covets an expensive necklace. Her husband finds himself unable to purchase this. In petulant passion she says: "I shall leave you and take up my home by the sea. When you secure the diamond necklace bring it to me and we will again live together." La Glou arrives in the fishing village. One day the young Fisherman meets La Glou, the beautiful woman of the world. She exerts her charms to capture the heart of the young man and she is successful.

As the days pass the young Fisherman becomes more and more neglectful of his childhood friend.

In Paris, La Glou's husband purchases the diamond necklace which his wife longed for. He hastens to the village where he gives the necklace to his wife. Together they sit near the edge of a cliff overlooking the sea. The young Fisherman has missed his inamorata and searching for her, encounters La Glou and her husband. Passionately he springs between the two and demands to know who and what is the stranger man. La Glou has tired of the young Fisherman.

The young Fisherman in desperation flings himself over the cliff and into the sea. There the young Fisherman's mother ends her search for him. She finds her son lying unconscious and carries him to their little home.

La Glou and her husband return to Paris. Months later the thoughts of La Glou return again to the youthful Fisherman. She recalls the days in the picturesque fisher-village when she won his youthful loyalty. She resolves to see him once more. Arriving in the village she goes to the young Fisherman's home. There she is met by the old mother who says: "I will take you to my son." Together they enter a boat, go far out to sea, and the aged mother batters a hole in the bottom of the boat, and as it is slowly sinking beneath the waves, she exclaims: "You took him from me once, but you shall never have him again."

THE ORANG-OUTANG (Jungle-Zoo Animal Picture—August 14).—Tom Howard, a young sailor, returns from a voyage in the China Sea with an Orang-Outang. He is warmly greeted and made comfortable by his sweetheart, Grace Lyons and her aunt, Mrs. Blake, at Mrs. Blake's home. Another roomer at Mrs. Blake's residence is John Horton, an ex-miner. He persist in annoying the pet Orang-Outang, and is cautioned to cease by Tom, who says: "Some day the Orang-Outang will turn upon you."

Tom Howard, in the past years, has been instrumental in saving the life of Jim Hand, another seaman. Jim calls on Tom at Mrs. Blake's home. Chang, the Orang-Outang, has evidenced a fondness for John Horton's silver-handled cane. He slips into Horton's room, and abstracts the cane, taking it into the room of his master. Tom returns to his room and is horrified to discover Horton's cane there blood-stained. He finds Horton dying from blows upon the head. The blood-stained cane being found in Tom's room, he, together with Chang are taken in charge and placed in a cell.

Jim Hand, the sailor, reads of Tom's incarceration. Hand says that when he left Tom's room he encountered Horton; that years ago they were miners together; that Horton had decamped with Hand's savings; that in the boarding house Horton tried to attack him and that he felled him with a blow from the cane. Tom and Chang are liberated and the young sailor is again happy in the love of his sweetheart.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 59 (July 29).—Thousand Islands, N. Y.—Miss Christie MacDonald wins woman's motor boat race championship in thrilling speed contest.

Los Angeles.—Elks in gay costumes march at big gathering in Los Angeles where members of Grand Lodge review parade.

Bay Shore, L. I.—Society folk flock to horse show where blue blood equines are put through their paces.

Boston, Mass.—Suffrage leaders dress daughters in blue jay costumes and send them out to tack up appeals for vote.

Chicago.—Athletes of the middle west contest in bouts to pick team for Panama Pacific meet.

San Francisco.—Schooner Hardy is rammed by steamer Shasta and left beached on Fort Point just inside Golden Gate.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Strike threatens tieup in arms industry where war munitions are being made for European countries.

San Francisco.—Director F. L. Brown of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, presents Edward A. McManus, of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial with bronze medal marking highest award for moving picture industry given at exposition.

Chicago.—Woman jumps from Clark Street bridge on the Chicago River in test of novel self-inflating life jacket.

Stratford, England.—First exchange of prisoners between Germany and England is effected when skilled ambulance drivers held captive at Stratford are marched to pier to take boat for the Fatherland.

On the Battle Line in France.—Old French castle captured by Germans is made headquarters. Court yard is filled with mounts of officers when call for horses is sounded.

Nish, Serbia.—Typhus plays havoc with Serbian forces. Special details of soldiers dig graves for dead. Convalescents form bread line.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 69 (July 24).—Bayonne, N. J.—Strikers at Standard Oil Plant fight fierce battle with guards. Remarkable photographs show the battle still under way and crowd gathered about the Tidewater Oil Company office.

San Diego.—Gov. Spry of Utah reviews Salt Like City High School cadets at Panama California Fair.

Cumberland, Md.—Engineer's Society pays first visit to Magnolia cut-off on the B. & O. Railroad which eleven miles of track cost $6,000,000.

Epsom, England.—Kitchener's recruits taught to use bayonets, practicing on dummy figures in trenches.

New York.—Latest fashions exclusive for the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial by Lucile, Lady Duff-Gordon.

Cleveland, O.—Grand Circuit races bring out big field in important stake.

San Francisco.—Thousands greet Liberty Bell and strew flowers in path and it is taken to Panama Fair grounds.

Cleveland, O.—"Chick" Evans of Chicago wins Western Amateur Golf title.

Chicago. Chicago people mourn death of thousands in worst marine disaster in history of the world. Remarkable scenes of steamer Eastland which capsized at her pier and the work of removing the dead and caring for the grief stricken friends and relatives.

Actress Wanted

The Best Leading Lady in America

Qualifications: Youth, beauty, ability, emotion and a good picture face.

Over two years ago it became generally known among film people that Benjamin Chapin was preparing a feature picture scenario—Ann Rutledge, or Lincoln's great love. It was not at that time, however, generally known that the scenarios then in course of construction were a part of the great Lincoln Cycle of the Charter Features Corporation.

An actress to play Ann Rutledge must, in mind and heart, suggest the beauty and quality of the girl who won the everlasting love of Lincoln and whose untimely death nearly wrecked his great career. One of the most beautiful and lovable parts in all history is Ann Rutledge and this feature when released will attract international attention.

Please state in a short letter why you can and would like to play this part. Reputation is not absolutely essential. Give height and age and enclose two photographs, profile and front view, and stamped envelope for return of photos.

CHARTER FEATURES CORPORATION
110 West 40th St. New York City

WANTED

MANAGER FOR SALES DEPARTMENT

To keep pace with the rapid growth of The Lincoln Cycle, we wish to engage a general sales manager—a man big as the idea he has to deal with—a man who will help the exhibitors to get the best results. We are building this service department to the highest grade of efficiency yet attained in the picture business, and we want an additional high grade manager who knows the film business thoroughly, and in whose honesty, promptness and courtesy the exhibitors of America have high respect and confidence. We want a man who can meet the thousands of exhibitors (who are applying for the Chapin-Lincoln Cycle) and promptly and helpfully serve them (as honestly as Abraham Lincoln would have done had he known the film business.) Please apply by letter, which will be kept in strict confidence.

We have now in our directorate department, scenario department and acting department—men of the very highest quality and ability obtainable. We will soon add a few new members to these departments. Applications should be made by letter only.

CHARTER FEATURES CORPORATION
110 West 40th St. New York City

ESSANAY.

THE KISS (Aug. 2).—Reluctantly, Lady Joyce consents to allow Simeon Kenley to paint her portrait. And then, on meeting and posing for the artist, accompanied by the Duchess, she is pleased with him and snubs the Duke of Rosemount, to the horror of the Duchess. She and the Duchess have a "squabble" over the Duke. She leaves, goes to the artist's suite and asks him to marry her. He does. Two years pass, and Lady Joyce has become sick of poverty with a struggling artist. She leaves him with Arthur Kane, and five years pass. The Duchess is about to die and craves a sight of her daughter before she passes away. Believing she and Simeon are still together, she asks him to bring her. He makes an appeal to Lady Joyce, and together they go to the Duchess, where her death brings them together again.

BUSINESS RIVALS (Special—Two Parts—Aug. 3).—Upon learning that the wealthy Primrose McFarland is to give a birthday party and display the famous family jewels, Braga, an international crook, plans to attend the affair and discover the identity of the rival crook who has been spoiling all his thieving plans. Dominica is pledged to assist him and succeeds in engaging herself as a singer for the event. The night of the party Braga enters the house, disguised as a majtre d'hotel, having made love to the maid in order to get this chance. He hides in a chest in the lower hall while Dominica is singing. Dominica discovers their rival thief, LeGrand, an ex-police official, acting as a table assistant. The party is over. Braga is still hiding in the chest and LeGrand has not succeeded in procuring the jewels yet. Young McFarland, nephew of the spinister, takes the jewels under his arm, planning to deposit them in the safe deposit vault in the morning. LaGrand follows. In the meantime Dominica, disguised as an Italian street singer boy, waits for Braga. McFarland is attacked by LeGrand, but Dominica warns him in time. After a fierce struggle McFarland breaks loose and LeGrand flees, with Dominica lying wounded on the ground. McFarland takes her home in a taxicab. The next morning Braga, defeated and fearful of the police, advises fleeing for safety's sake. Dominica renounces him as a coward and orders him away from her suite.

EYES THAT SEE NOT (Aug. 7).—Through influential men who had been friends of his father before his death, Ralph Morgan obtains a position as private secretary to Adam Bell. The latter is in love with a rich widow, Mrs. Venn, but they decide to keep their engagement secret until Dorothy, Bell's daughter, is married. Bell gives his secretary a letter to one of his agents, telling him to sell three thousand shares of a certain stock. The secretary meets the beautiful Dorothy on the way to the stock exchange and all thoughts of the message pass out of his mind. He spends the afternoon with the girl and she promises to marry him. When he leaves her he remembers the letter, but finds that the stock exchange has closed. He is panic-stricken, but returns to Bell and tells him the truth. Bell laughs and informs him that his remissness has netted him $40,000 through an unexpected turn in the market. Bell, however, explodes with wrath when Ralph tells him of his engagement to his daughter. While he is upbraiding Ralph, Mrs. Venn and Dorothy walk in. Mrs. Venn gives her own engagement away. Dorothy confesses her love for Ralph. Bell smiles and offers his hand to his secretary. The four plan a double wedding.

WHEN MY LADY SMILES (Special—Three Parts—Aug. 10).—Janet, daughter of a proud, penniless old Southern colonel, employed in a fashionable millinery shop, delivers a hat one evening and is escorted home by the rich customer's son, Edward, who refuses to meet his mother's snobbish demands that he court Velda Browning. After the colonel's death, Janet and Edward elope. Edward is forbidden to return to his home. Several years later, very ill, he is taken back by his mother, on condition that Janet relinquish all, her baby and Edward. Edward's strength does not return, pining for Janet. Remorseful, the mother brings the girl back to her home, and Edward's normal mental state returns when he sees Janet's wonderful smile spreading over her face as she clasps the baby to her heart.

BRONCHO BILLY'S PROTEGE (Aug. 6).—Broncho Billy, engaged to the girl, becomes jealous of a newcomer, and in remorse, gets intoxicated. He takes back the girl's ring and frightens the tenderfoot out of a general store. Mounting his horse he pursues his frightened rival and, after many miles of galloping, overtakes him and brings him back to town, where he flings him in the girl's arms, saying: "Here's your tender foot! Try and make a man of him." Two years later, her husband dead, the wife is at the point of death, half-starved and with a small child to care for. When she dies the little girl runs and gets Broncho Billy, who takes her in his arms and says, "Come, kid, we'll lead a straight life together."

EDISON.

FOOD FOR KINGS AND RILEY (Aug. 11).—Michael Riley, wealthy contractor, does not forget the days when he carried a hod. In the midst of luxury he longs for the good old days of freedom from boiled shirts and etiquette. His wife, now a social climber, tries to make him forget his former associates, but with little avail, and his daughter Eileen is a chip of the old block, essentially democratic. Riley persists in his opinion that, although corned beef and cabbage is "bad form," it is unquestionably "good taste," and while out walking he meets with an opportunity to indulge his appetite. Running across Mrs. Moore, an old friend of his "laborer" days, she tells him that she must hurry home—she has corned beef and cabbage on cooking. The outcome of it is, that, after going to her house and feasting to his heart's content, he makes arrangements to call every Thursday, that being the day on which Riley's favorite dish will be ready for him. Meantime, Eileen Riley has fallen in love with Mrs. Moore's son, a telephone repair man. When he comes to fix the telephone she meets him dressed in her maid's cap and apron, and he, thinking she really is the maid, makes an engagement to meet her. Their love affair goes on and, finally he takes her home to see his mother. It is on this day that Mrs. Riley, her suspicions having been aroused by her husband's disappearance every Thursday, follows him to the Moore home. Eileen and Tom Moore arrive there first, and Eileen is astounded to find her father. When Mrs. Riley bursts in upon them, she finds not only her husband, but her daughter. After Riley has made his explanation, and after being persuaded to temporarily forget French cooking and go back to the days of plain but wholesome food, Mrs. Riley also sits down and gets away with a liberal share of the Irish national dish. Thereafter, Riley finds corned beef and cabbage on his home menu, and at these dinners Mrs. Moore and Eileen's future husband are frequently guests.

THE KING OF THE WIRE (Three Parts—August 13).—Patricia Beverly's love story opens when young Tom Stratton is carried from the circus tent where he has broken his leg and to the home of the village doctor. Tom is known in the business as "The King of the Wire," and after the show has left town, and he is being cared for by the doctor's wife, Patricia comes to visit him, reading to him and talking of many things of which, up to the time of his fall from the wire, he had never dreamed. It is almost a case of love at first sight, but Tom knows that he is illiterate and poor, and Patricia can do but little to show her feelings toward him. The doctor backs up Patricia when she persuades Tom to give up the circus life and work his way through college, and "The King of the Wire" becomes a student. The sudden death of Patricia's grandfather makes it necessary for her to earn her own living, she being an orphan. A former young man of the village, Bob Hunter, who has shown a great interest in her, has gone to New York and entered politics, and since he is the only one she knows in the city, Patricia writes to him asking him to try to get her a job, in spite of the fact that she has never cared for him and believes him to be entirely unworthy as a lover.

Hunter secures Patricia a position on a city paper, and tries to press his suit, but while showing her gratitude for what he has done she manages to hold him aloof. Meantime, Tom is silent concerning his love for Patricia, and she throws her whole energy into making good in the newspaper game. A reporter having failed to secure a much desired interview with Senator Strong, who is seeking to pass a Child Labor bill, Patricia applies for the assignment—and gets it. Hunter, actively engaged in city politics, is one of those who are trying to prevent the passage of the bill. He and another politician frame up a deal with a notorious crook, whereby the senator will be forced into signing a paper that will ruin him politically if it is made public. Patricia fails to get to the senator in the ordinary way, but, nothing daunted, she dresses as a little girl and manages to meet the senator's two little daughters, who are playing near the house. She ingeniously manages to get them to take her inside the house; and while there, the senator not suspecting that she is anything but what she appears, she gets a lot of facts that are just what she needs for her write-up. Hunter and the crook enter and cover the senator with a revolver. He is told that he must sign the paper, which will be shown to the world and thereby bring about his ruin if he does not promise to withdraw his Child Labor bill. Patricia and the children entering the room are also held up by Hunter and his companion, but Patricia breaks away and runs to an upper room, giving the alarm by telephone. This is the day upon which Tom has visited her in the city and, finding her out, has followed her. Seeing her at the window, calling to him for help, he climbs a nearby pole, a wire from which stretches to and enters the senator's house close to the window. Proving that he has not forgotten his old tricks, he walks this wire to the window and carries Patricia back with him to the pole, down which they both climb. Inside the house, the senator and his secretary manage to get the best of the crooks, and after they have been placed in charge of a policeman, and the senator has met Patricia in her proper person, he is instrumental in getting Tom to propose and so end both their waiting and longing for each other.

A SPRIG OF SHAMROCK (August 14).—Young Tom Murray, son of the "ould sod," has heard the call of America. An uncle in New York has told him of the chances in the land of the free. He is in love with Eileen Ryan, and gives her a sprig of shamrock, with the assurance the he will love and cherish her. Only a short while after his marriage to Eileen he gets another letter from his uncle telling him that, if he still feels like coming to New York, a good position is awaiting him. They decide to set out together. Bidding the old mother good-bye they sail away, and are soon settled in New York, with Tom filling a promising position in his uncle's office.

A year has passed, and Eileen one day gets a letter from the old village doctor in Ireland, saying that her mother is in very poor health and is yearning for her daughter. Unable to go with his wife, Tom urges her to return and comfort the old lady. Back in Ireland, Eileen finds her mother has picked up in health, but she is so glad to see her girl again that Eileen promises to remain for a while. Tom waits for several months, but he has cause to wait with love and pride in his heart. Meantime, a new stenographer is engaged by Tom's uncle. She is the type that so commonly is found in the offices of the big city—pretty and brainless, but with sufficient powers of attraction to exert an influence on a susceptible young man—which Tom proves to be. Nevertheless he is overjoyed one day when he receives a cablegram telling him that he has a son, whom Eileen has named after him. A few months later a letter comes telling him that she is coming back to him, and asking him to meet her with the baby at the pier. Tom has asked the stenographer to take dinner with him on the evening his wife's boat is due, but the letter comes that afternoon, and is carelessly tossed upon the desk when the stenographer receives it from the postman. Consequently Eileen finds no one waiting. When he gets to the house, rather late, Tom finds his wife and tells her that he has received no word. The next morning, however, Eileen goes to the office and catches Tom trying to kiss the stenographer. Eileen tells Tom that she is through with him. She goes to a boarding house. In the evening, Tom finds his wife has left him. The next day the postman hands him a small package, addressed to his wife, in her mother's handwriting. He runs across the nurse with the child. The girl tells him that his wife has been crying all through the previous night. Conscience stricken and thoroughly repentant he accompanies the nurse to where Eileen is stopping. There he begs her forgiveness and gives her the package that has come from Ireland. Opening it she finds the little sprig of shamrock tucked away in a small Bible.

VITAGRAPH.

HIS FAIRY GODMOTHER (Aug. 11).—Just as the Fair Godmother had warned him, Jones, while addressing a fashionable gathering, suddenly discovers that his dress suit has vanished, leaving him clad only in a suit of pajamas. Pandemonium breaks loose, but—he awakes, to find it was all a dream.

MR. JARR AND CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE (No. 16 of Series—Aug. 16).—"The Grass Widow," a saddle horse, a broken-down Ford, a bullfrog and a camera fiend all help to get Jarr and his boss into a peck of trouble.

HALLBERG

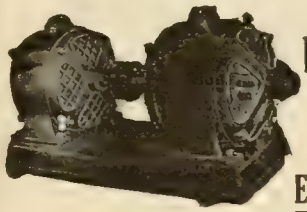
Talk No. 58

A Hallberg AC-DC Motor Generator Replaces Rotary Converter at the Orpheum Theatre, Jersey City, N. J.

WHY? Because the Hallberg AC-DC delivers 50 amperes at the arc without consuming any more current than other motor generators consume to deliver 35 amperes.

For Best Light at Lowest Cost

Install a

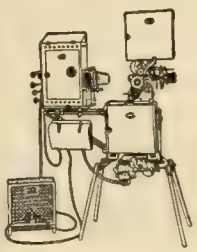


Hallberg AC-DC Economizer

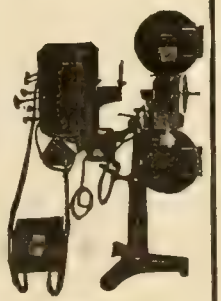
and let Hallberg equip your theater

"BAIRD"

I AM distributor of all makes moving picture machines and furnish everything complete for the theater, new and used apparatus.



POWER'S 6A



"SIMPLEX"

Send for Free Circulars and Catalogues, but for Hallberg's Big 100-page Catalogue, send 25 Cents.

I EQUIP THEATERS COMPLETE AND CARRY ALL MAKES CARBONS AND SUPPLIES.

J.H. HALLBERG SWEDISH ELECTRICAL ENGINEER

38 East 23d St. THE HOUSE OF QUALITY New York

They finally clear themselves of all suspicion and the camera fiend "gets his."

SHE TOOK A CHANCE (Aug. 18).—Mrs. Luckey takes a chance on a prize pig. She wins it and her family make it the prize goat. After many troubles, piggie's strenuous career comes to an end in the sausage factory.

IN QUEST OF THE WIDOW (Aug. 19).—In his quest for the widow's hand, Perkins finds the road anything but smooth. In the end he only gets the laugh.

CUTEY'S AWAKENING (Aug. 20).—Cutey is a little frivolous, but wide awake and his big business talks convert a business rival into his father's friend and partner. Cutey strengthens the combination by marrying the partner's daughter.

THE DAWN OF UNDERSTANDING (Special—2 Parts—Aug. 21).—Memories of happier days and knowledge that love is not dead, reunite long-separated couple. After their return to the city, Oliver Weldon and Ruth, his wife, devote so much time to business on the one hand and society on the other, they gradually drift apart. Their child dies, and each blames the other for neglect and causing its death. They separate and months later, an interested friend, realizing they are grieving for each other, brings them together again. Oliver sees his wife looking at their child's photo and mutual sorrow reunites them. "The Dawn of Understanding" has come for them in the knowledge that love is the most precious thing in the world.

MINA.

A CASE OF LIMBURGER (August 19).—Keen Hawksby, the head of the police, fancies himself a detective genius on the lines of Mons Lecoq or Sherlock Holmes—in short, he is regarded by himself and his fellow townsmen as a Napoleon in the world of detection—his two most adoring followers are Barker and Sullivan. He hears that a man who is supposed to have committed a bomb outrage—with a bomb which not only blew things up but dispersed stupefying fumes, and he resolves to catch the criminal. Farmer Flannigan receives a present of a case of Limburger cheese. He resolves to send a few pounds of it to his sister, who lives on the outskirts of the town of Mr. Hawksby. His son Tim takes it to his aunt. Hawksby sees Tim changing cars at a junction, and as his description tallies with that of the bomb thrower—and as he carries what he thinks is a suspicious looking box, he resolves to track him. He gets into conversation with Tim, but Tim takes him for a confidence man, and runs from him. He reports to Hawks and that gentleman with Barker starts on the trail. They follow Tim to his aunt's cottage. When Tim reaches it he finds a notice on the door that his Aunt Nora has gone to visit a sick neighbor and will not be home till nine. He makes himself comfortable with a pipe on the steps and falls asleep watched by the trio of detectives—who wish to take him in the act. A rain storm comes on and wakes Tim. As it still wants half an hour to his aunt's return, he resolves to try and get into the house. The detective follow. He forces a bolt of a window and enters. They follow, seize him and bind him in a chair. Tim struggles, thinking he is in the hands of thieves. When questioned he does not know what they are talking about. In the midst Nora returns, and finding the way her nephew has been treated gives Hawksby her opinion of him, and turns him and his assistants out of the house. They walk back dejectedly through the rain, while Tim and his aunt enjoy a supper of limburger, bread and ale—and talk over the events of the day.

BIOGRAPH.

MRS. RANDOLPH'S NEW SECRETARY (Aug. 16).—The girl found her duties pleasant until Mrs. Randolph's dissipated son began to persecute her with his attentions. She was glad when he went away to the country with his mother. Before going Mrs. Randolph locked her jewels in the safe. During the girl's temporary absence the jewels were stolen. Rushing to the street, she caught a glimpse of a well-dressed man hurrying away. Next day she saw him again and followed him to his rooms, where, by pretending to be ill, she obtained entrance and studied the situation. Mrs. Randolph, returning, was persuaded by her son to call the police. Just as they were taking the girl away, the "burglar" entered. He turned out to be Mrs. Randolph's nephew, who had taken the jewels away for safe keeping. Only a misunderstanding, after all—or a new trick of Cupid to bring two victims together.

ASHES OF INSPIRATION (Special—Two Parts—Aug. 17).—Adrian West, a promising young artist, is working on his great picture for the salon. His selfish and unsympathetic wife almost ruins him with her extravagance, comes near to estranging him from his child, and carries on a clandestine affair with an admirer. For lack of inspiration West's picture is rejected by the art committee, and his wife upbraids him because she has "thrown her life away on a failure." This is more than he can stand, and he tells her the truth about herself. His uncle offers him a trip abroad if he will go alone, and he accepts. In a fishing village on the Breton coast he boards under the roof of one Le Morne, who has a pretty daughter, Yvonne. Pierre, a young fisherman, loves the girl. He becomes jealous of her intimacy with West when the latter decides to use Yvonne as the subject of his next picture. Without definite proof, however, Pierre refrains from challenging Yvonne's interest in the artist. One day West acompanies Pierre on a fishing trip. A storm arises and the fishermen are given up for lost by those on shore. But next morning Yvonne sees West, Pierre and their comrade return from the sea. Her glad greeting of the artist confirms Pierre in the belief that he can never hope to win her love. A few days later, aroused to ungovernable passion by the sight of Yvonne and West together on the sands, he draws a pistol. Le Morne attempts to disarm him and is shot. Pierre, aghast at the deed, makes his escape, but is found drowned next day. Inspired by his love for the girl, West paints a masterpiece. Then out of his past life a hand reaches to draw him back—the hand of his child, who writes a piteous note telling of her loneliness without "dear daddy." Yvonne bids him go to his lonely child. His picture wins the grand prize, and his wife decides to remain with with him. West accepts the situation for his child's sake, but realizes that he can never be happy without Yvonne.

EAST LYNNE (Special—Three—Parts—Aug. 18).—The sensational murder of old Hallijohn stirred East Lynne to its depths. Bethel, the dead man's crony, had found young Richard Hare on the spot, with the gun in his hand. Richard had escaped, and was a fugitive under charge of murder. Poor Barbara, his sister, stoutly denied his guilt, and enlisted the sympathy of the rich Mr. Carlyle, who had bought Lord Mount Severn's estate and, after his death, had married his daughter. But presently people ceased to speak of the murder, and began to whisper instead that Lady Isabel was jealous of Barbara Hare. Carlyle never suspected that his intimacy with the girl, born of his desire to help her brother, was misconstrued by his wife. Least of all did he suspect that Sir Francis Levison, lately returned from abroad, was making use of the situation to poison Isabel's mind against him. So he was heartbroken when Isabel went away with Levison, leaving her two children motherless. For their sake he got a divorce and married Barbara. Isabel, waiting in France until she was free to marry Levison, discovered his true character when, on learning of Carlyle's divorce, he laughed at her. Desolate, she returned to England and, in disguise, became governess to her own children, so as to be near them. Bitter was her portion, to see Barbara in her place as Carlyle's wife, and never to dare give her babies a mother's kiss. But fate was kind to her before she died of grief, permitting her to be recognized and forgiven by her husband and children. And fate overtook Levison, her betrayer, who was dramatically recognized and convicted of old Hallijohn's murder.

HIS LAST WISH (Aug. 19).—The old farmer and the doctor are cronies, and desire nothing better than that their children should marry. But the young people are not on the best of terms, owing to the girl's discovery of the doctor's son in the company of gamblers. On the way he picks up a soiled playing card—the ace of diamonds. Confident that he will win, he plays recklessly and loses. In desperation he assaults the gambler, seizes the bankroll and escapes. Pursued by the police, he makes for his old home and secretes himself on the fire-escape. The child, finding that her aunt has moved away, returns home, sees the place bare of all that constituted her little world, and begins to cry. Detectives, breaking in, discover her. The gambler, touched by her innocence, takes her to his home. Her father follows and, impelled by love, offers to restore the money. The gambler, deeply moved, kisses the child and gives her to her father. Telling McGraw that he may keep the money to make a new start, he hands the child the ace of diamonds, assuring that it will bring her father luck this time.

DEATH'S MARATHON (Aug. 20—Biograph Reissue No. 11).—Bored with the monotony of married life, the self-centered husband becomes estranged from his wife. Gambling is his ruin; he appropriates funds of his firm and loses all. Determining to commit suicide, he calls his wife on the telephone to tell her of his intention. His partner, who, at the wife's instance, has been searching for him, answers the call, learns that his friend is at the office, and, in desperation conceives a plan. While he races with death in a swift motor car, the wife attempts to hold her husband on the wire with her own pleading and, that failing, with the lisp are no longer confined to the actors who appear exclusively in PICTURES. The field has broadened to such an extent that to-day EVERY POPULAR ACTOR AND ACTRESS OF THE STAGE, with few exceptions, is appearing in PICTURES. All these films will eventually REACH YOU.. Take advantage of the advertising value of the names and faces of these STARS and decorate your THEATRES with their pictures. WE CAN SUPPLY YOU WITH ALL OF THEM, any size you require.

Film Celebrities

Large Hand Colored Pictures
of all the leading players, size 22 x 28 inches, 80 different men and women.
75 CENTS EACH

Single Column Half-Tone Cuts of All the Players 40 Cents Each

Transparencies

Hand Colored photographs on glass of all the favorites for Day and Night display in various sizes.
(Catalogue for details)

Transparency Frame

holding Nine glass pictures with electric attachments including on and off light.
(The catalogue has illustrations)

The Silver Frame

with an 11 x 14 inch hand colored picture, 50 cents each; 500 players; pictures without frame, $2.00 per doz. (See catalogue.)

Photo Players Post Card

is ever on the increase for advertising and souvenir purposes. Five million cards always on hand of all the players in the films—wire us for your wants.
$3.00 per Thousand
Catalogue contains all the names.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all prominent players, Association and Independent, 500 different names, 20c. each.
FAC-SIMILE OIL PAINTINGS of the stars, all sizes, from $8 to $25 each, with heavy gold frames.

KRAUS MFG. CO.
220 W. 42nd Street
NEW YORK
12th Floor, CANDLER BUILDING
Send for New Catalogue of over 500 players and samples free. Write us giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

of their child. But death wins the marathon, setting the wife free from her unfortunate alliance.

THE ACE OF DIAMONDS (Aug. 21).—After gambling away his last dollar, Dan McGraw sends his motherless girl to her aunt's home, with a note imploring the woman to take care of her. Then he sells his household effects and starts back to the gambling rooms. On the way he picks up a soiled playing card—the ace of diamonds. Confident that he will win, he plays recklessly and loses. In desperation he assaults the gambler, seizes the bankroll and escapes. Pursued by the police, he makes for his old home and secretes himself on the fire escape. The child, finding that her aunt has moved away, returns home, sees the place bare of all that constituted her little world, and begins to cry. Detectives, breaking in, discover her. The gambler, touched by her innocence, takes her to his home. Her father follows, and, impelled by love, offers to restore the money. The gambler, deeply moved, kisses the child and gives her to her father. Telling McGraw that he may keep the money to make a new start, he hands the child the ace of diamonds, assuring her that it will bring her father luck this time.

LUBIN.

POLLY-OF-THE-POTS-AND-PANS (August 16).—Rodman, an author, leaves society for two weeks in order to study boarding house types for his new novel. Under an assumed name he engages a room at the boarding house of Amanda Hicks. He does not know that he has almost immediately won the heart of Polly, a waitress at the boarding house. Polly is sentimental. And when Rodman indulgently returns her smiles, she is in an ecstasy of joy. In truth, Rodman is interested in Polly because she is good material for a story. But Polly misinterprets his attentions for reciprocal love.

Then comes the Clerks' Ball. The entire boarding house is going to attend. Polly alone is to be left behind. Rodman, in sympathy, arranges to escort her to the dance. At the ball Rodman and Polly are the cynosure of all eyes. On the way home, in her first taxi ride, she sees visions of a happy married life with a man of her heart. Impulsively she asks Rodman when they are to marry. Rodman, realizing for the first time that he has unconsciously planted love in the innocent heart of the simple little girl, braces himself for the ordeal and slowly tells Polly of his identity, his purpose in staying at the boarding house, and, lastly, of his fiancee and marriage plans. He leaves her heartbroken, but, even in her sorrow, she is staunch as a friend, and gives him a rose from her bouquet to remember her by. Days later, on the night of his marriage to his society fiancee, Rodman lingers in his study, in reminiscence over a carefuly pressed rose. And Polly, in the boarding house kitchen, pauses at her work over the pots and pans long enough to read in a newspaper the account of Rodman's approaching nuptials. A tender, wistful smile at the recollection of Rodman, and she continues to scrub the kitchen sink with the newspaper containing the news of his engagement.

THE DEAD LETTER (August 17).—Mateo, an Italian ice cream vender, and Luigi, an organ grinder, are in love with Lena Pula, a prosperous Italian boarding house keeper. The two men have an altercation when Lena accepts a cone of ice cream from Mateo, but a cop settles the dispute. Flattered at Lena's acceptance of the ice cream, Mateo goes to Lena's window to get another look at her. When he sees the large sum of money she takes in from her boarders, his love burns with renewed ardor. Unfortunately Emelio, one of the boarders, observes Mateo at the window and, thinking him a blackhander, reports the fact to Lena, describing him to her. She at once gets out her fire irons and lays in wait for him.

Lugi, temporarily vanquished, writes Lena a passionate letter proposing marriage which he mails, omitting the address. Mateo calls on Lena, and Lugi in spite of the letter is afraid that Mateo may get ahead of him and calls in person. Lena has time for Mateo only and he follows her into the house. Luigi goes to the side of the house and takes a peak in the window. Lena gives the astonished Mateo a sound beating. Luigi sees this from the window, and wants his letter back. He gets to the mail box just as the postman takes the mail from the box, and asks for his letter. As there is no address on the envelope, the postman tells him it is a dead letter and he must go to the dead letter office to get it. Luigi then goes to the "morgue" but the keeper tells him to go to the post office. He gets his letter. Mateo and Luigi make a last attempt to see Lena but find her in Emelio's arms.

PERSISTENT DALTON (August 17).—This comedy shows the villainy of Persistent Dalton, who pursues the hapless heroine, binds her to a chair in truly dramatic style, kills the hero two or three times, wrecks the railroad bridge, and does other fiendish things, only to be foiled at the last moment.

THE SECOND SHOT (Special—Two Parts—August 18).—At a week-end party Alice Jason, daughter of the host, is insulted by John Anthony, a guest, who is knocked down by Phil Dunbar, a neighboring suitor. Alice writes a note to Phil asking him to meet her at their usual trysting place late that evening, and at the time appointed goes there to meet him. When he fails to put in an appearance, she leaves, deeply hurt. On the way through the gardens she finds the body of John Anthony, a revolver and her note to Phil beside him. Fearing Phil to be the murderer, she drags the body to her room with the intention of explaining that she shot him in defense of her honor. After changing the room and her personal appearance to carry out more thoroughly the idea of a struggle, she fires the revolver, not realizing that the bullet strikes the clock, stopping it at the hour of twelve.

Guests and her father rush in and are compelled to accept her explanation, but a detective who arrives shortly afterward finds the bullet that entered Anthony's heart first passed through his watch at the eleventh hour. Upon further investigation he finds the marks on the man's shoes, and across the lawn other marks showing from where the body had been dragged. After a mild third degree, Alice gives in, practically admitting that she is trying to shield her sweetheart. The detective goes to Phil's home and accuses him of the crime. Phil at first refuses, then agrees to go. Alice, left alone at home, becomes frantic for Phil's safety and follows to his house. In Phil's bedroom she finds a young girl apparently dying, tended by a doctor and the butler. The girl compels Alice to listen and then tells her that she is Phil's wayward sister, who, having had her life ruined by Anthony, confronted him that night with a demand of marriage, and upon his refusal shot him. Alice rushes to the police station and her sweetheart is soon cleared.

IT WAS TO BE (Special—Three Parts—August 19).—John Trevor leaves his village to make a name for himself as attorney and leaves Anne Winton, with whom he is in love, with out proposing to her, as a result of his bashfulness. Later, Anne marries Henry Randall, but Trevor's love for her still persists. Randall desires Trevor, who has become a noted attorney, as a legal representative in a dis-

WHY "FIRE" THE OPERATOR?

He isn't to blame! Faulty projection in the vast majority of cases is due to the WAVY, RIDGED SURFACES OF CHEAP CONDENSERS.

These VITAL DEFECTS, small and trivial appearing as they seem, spell the difference between faulty and perfect projection. Remember that a wavy or ridged surface will DIFFUSE and REFRACT your light, destroy the efficiency of lens and operator and run up "juice" bills!

Always use

Kleine White Label Condensers

Scientifically ground [illegible] GUARANTEED against defective surfaces and warranted as perfect as the hand of man can make them. THE [illegible] to the detriment of your picture. There's only one road to PERFECT PROJECTION and that's through a

KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSER

4½ in. diameter, 6½, 7½, 8½, 9½-inch focus .....$1.25 5 inch diameter, 7½, 9, 10, 12-inch focus $1.75
6 inch diameter, 9, 10, 12-inch focus $2.25,

WE EQUIP THE THEATRE COMPLETE

The Kleine Optical Company is the oldest and largest house in America devoted solely to the equipment of motion picture theatres. From under one roof you equip the theatre complete. Write for our handsome 176-page catalog. It's free—and brimful of vital information you should know and apply to your business. A valuable hand-book for the theatre-owner, operator or the man about to build. SEND FOR IT TODAY.

The Kleine Optical Co. GEO. KLEINE, President Incorporated 1897 166 N. State St., Chicago

honest financial enterprise, and accordingly makes an appointment with him. When Trevor arrives at Randall's house, he first meets Anne and finds her unhappy. She warns him not to accept the proposed offer. Randall finds them conversing. Trevor advises Randall to adopt honest methods. Later Anne meets Trevor at a reception and confides to him of her husband's mistreatment of her. Trevor and Randall meet and a fight is prevented by a detective, White. That night Randall and Anne quarrel again, and the next day Anne goes to Trevor to arrange for a separation, and White, in the waiting room, overhears Anne declare she could kill Randall for his abuse.

White receives a note from Randall saying he fears for his life, and asking him to call that evening. The same day Trevor goes to Randall's home to force better treatment of Anne by threatening to push the suggested divorce, and just after Trevor's arrival White, ascending the front steps, hears a shot in the study. He finds Anne and Trevor standing over Randall, who is mortally wounded, both grasping a revolver in horror. Randall, before his death, becomes conscious and whispers to a detective. Trevor and Anne, at Randall's death, abandon all hope. An hour later Martin, Randall's butler, is arrested as he prepares to flee to Europe with a valuable diamond taken from a jeweled dagger in Randall's study the night he was killed. He has placed an imitation gem in the clock's surface and had remained behind until he became panic-stricken at Randall's death. Anne returns to her old home, where Trevor soon follows and proposes to her in the old garden where he had planned a life of happiness with her years before.

WHEN SOULS ARE TRIED (August 20).—Jerry Long, mine boss, returning from a trip to the city, brings back as his bride Madeline. The people of the mining town she finds utterly uncongenial; the rough housework is distasteful to her, and time hangs heavy during the long hours while Jerry is at the mine. Even when he returns home he is too tired to be a very entertaining companion.

Philip Heath comes to town as agent for the newly invented oxygen helmet, with which he has no success, Jerry in particular deriding it. Madeline meets Philip, and his presence makes her life endurable. She has secretly written, asking if she may have back her old position, but while Philip remains, she forgets this. In time Philip discovers that he has fallen deeply in love with Madeline, and determines to leave at once. Madeline is not in the slightest degree in love with Philip—it is simply that he is an embodiment of the city she loves. She accompanies him to the station. While they are waiting for the train, the town bursts into wild excitement—there has been an accident at Jerry's mine, and Jerry is missing. They hurry to the shaft entrance. When told that there is little hope for Jerry, Madeline tries to rush into the shaft, furiously fighting at those who hold her back. Philip realizes that this suddenly demonstrated love for her husband is the great thing of Madeline's life, and he determines to assure, as far as possible, her happiness, by saving the missing man. Philip dons his rejected oxygen helmet and enters the mine. He finds Jerry pinned down by debris, unconscious, and nearly dead from the poisoned air, Philip removes his helmet, puts it on Jerry, takes the man in his arms, and starts for the exit. A second explosion occurs. Philip is badly injured, but grimly fights his way on, and out. He lives only long enough to see Jerry, revived by the oxygen helmet. Philip's sacrifice has not been in vain, for Madeline finds herself strangely happy in her household work and in tending the injured Jerry. A letter comes, telling her that her old place is open to her if she can come at once, but, smiling softly, she uses it to light the fire in her little kitchen stove.

THE LIFE GUARD (August 21)—Billie is no captain of industry. He is merely a low private in the ranks of the hod carriers. But on his way to work one morning he sees a life-saver bring a little girl to shore and get as much as he could earn in five hundred hours of hard work on the ladders. It doesn't seem that he is putting in his time to the best advantage. The idea crystallizes when he passes the life saver's house and sees the patrol's jersey hanging on the line. Billie gathers it in without waiting for the trousers to be hung out and down on the beach he goes into business as an independent hero. Business is a bit slack and he tries to build up a little trade by rescuing people who really do not care to be saved. The rushes are spectacular, but people grow peevish when they are saved against their wills, and Billie gets plenty of black and blue spots but not enough money to pay his fare half a block in a jitney bus.

Once he thinks he is in sight of a live one when an old gentleman gives a valet a few thousand dollars to take care of while he takes a dip in the surf. Billie gets a rock but the valet has a gun and Billie changes his mind. But there is the old man out in the surf and Billie still has the rock. He bowls the old man over, then saves him with a fine display of heroism. This should be worth a couple of hundred at the very least; but Billie doesn't know that the more money people have the tighter they hold onto it. When he suggests that he should have some money, the old gentleman suggests that the city pays him. Bill decides that there is no money in life saving and quits the job, to take a nap. Out in the surf a girl is really drowning, but Billie doesn't care. He has retired from business. A real life saver goes to the rescue and gets the money. Then Billie gets a shock when he sees the guard he stole the jersey from. Between the guard and his irate wife and the crowd angry at Bill's indifference, it looks pretty bad for him, but his native wit wins him through and he passes back to the brick pile reflecting that twenty cents an hour that you get is better than a couple of hundred that you don't.

"NEWMAN"
Brass Frames and Rails

NOW IS THE TIME to fix up your lobby. Throw out those unsightly old wood frames and invest in neat, attractive BRASS FRAMES. You will be surprised how quickly your investment will return to you.
But be sure the name "NEWMAN" appears on all frames the guarantee of satisfaction.

Write for new 1915 catalog.

The Newman Mfg. Co.

NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.

Established 1882

DOUBLE YOUR RECEIPTS WITH A
DEAGAN ELECTRIC UNAPHONE-CALLIOPE
FOR STREET - LOBBY - PIT

EASY TO BUY
EASY TO PLAY
EASY TO CARRY
ALWAYS A HIT
WRITE FOR PARTICULARS
J. C. DEAGAN
DEAGAN BUILDING
1776 BERTEAU AVENUE CHICAGO, ILL.

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

POWERS.

SAVED BY A SCENT (Aug. 5).—Lady Baffles learns over the phone that the retired capitalist will not let Tom marry his daughter, Lillian. Baffles further hears that the irritated father proposes to marry her to a member of the nobility. Now, Baffles is ever alert to take advantage of family stress to her own personal advantage. Her accomplice, the crook, is induced to disguise himself as a member of the English nobility, and offer himself as a candidate for Lillian's hand. The old gent falls at once for the imposter. Lillian rebels, but dad orders an immediate marriage. Tom, broken hearted, gets wind of the situation. He goes to the famous detective, Duck, with his troubles. Duck sympathizes and gives Tom an instrument called the "smello-graph," the properties of which send out such a strong scent that messages by its means can be sent from distant points, even penetrating the thickest steel with its smell waves. Tom pockets the instrument. He is further advised to elope with Lillian. This strikes him as a great idea and he lays his plans.

But the eloping couple are caught and Tom is locked in a huge vault. Then the exasperated father sends for a minister to marry the supposed Lord to Lillian. Tom is, seemingly, up against it. While in this terrible stress he remembers the "smello-graph." He sends out S. O. S. calls for help. Duck receives the desperate messages. He immediately disguises himself as a burglar and comes post-haste. He endeavors to open the safe. Baffles, in hiding, sees him. She thinks he is a burglar surely, and aids him in opening the safe. Tom dashes out just as the wedding is about to take place. The situation is saved, for Duck recognizes the supposed member of nobility as a crook. But the crook and Baffles, while locked in the vault, find the "smello-graph." They tamper with it, thereby causing an explosion which blows them through the roof, enabling them to foil detective Duck and escape.

BIG U.

ETHEL'S BURGLAR (August 19).—Ethel lives with her old aunt and uncle and is the pride of their hearts. One night she goes out to a party. Her old aunt gives her a key to the door so that she will not wake the old people on her return home. After the party some of the girls go with Ethel to her gate and then leave her. As she goes to open the door she finds she has lost the key, but a passing policeman manages to get the door open for her. Coming to the fire to get warm, Ethel sees a man's foot and a burglar comes out of the window holding a gun on her. The girl, instead of being frightened, reaches up and breaks the gun, showing it to be empty. Norton, the burglar, then tells her of being down on his luck and unable to get work. The girl takes pity on him and writes him a letter to her uncle asking that the burglar be put to work.

Meanwhile the policeman has stumbled across the key, which Ethel lost, and returns to give it to her. Ethel goes to the door and, while she is out of the room, the thief goes to the safe which the girl left open, and starts to rifle the cash box. His better self prevails, however, and he closes the box but picks up a locket on the table. Opening it he sees a familiar face, and puts it into his pocket just as the girl returns. She misses the locket and asks about it; he begs her to let him keep it, and then tells her how years before he was passing the uncle's house, which was on fire and how at the risk of his life he had rushed in the burning house and saved the life of their baby niece, who was Ethel. She tells him she remembers the incident, and will give him a good picture, which she goes upstairs to get. The uncle hears noises below, and, slipping down, gets a policeman and arrests the burglar. They handcuff him and are about to take him out when Ethel returns and explains to her uncle. Norton promises the girl that he will lead a straight life from then on.

L-KO.

A TALE OF TWENTY STORIES (Two Parts —August 22).—Hang got in a jam in the Hotel de Bunion with an ill-tempered husband and another two hundred pound gentleman. He pacified the fat gentleman and had almost conciliated the husband, but the latter's wife lost her skirt by accident and circumstantial evidence pointed strongly toward Hank. This caused husband to feel genuinely uncordial toward Hank, so much so that Hank had to go to bed to avoid the excitement. He forgot his hat, however, and went out in the hall to get it, but was locked out in his pajamas.

He offended several parties by intruding on the privacy of their bedrooms and was also unfortunate enough to get back into the wife's bedroom to save himself from a sharp-eyed detective. He came out immediately followed by husband and two Krupps. Husband proved to be a great follower and stuck close behind through halls and stairways to the roof of a twelve-story skyscraper. Hank became overbalanced on the edge of the roof coping and an invalid who interfered, and likewise some cops who attempted to take a hand, started to teeter twelve stories above the pavement. The invalid was the only one who fell, but he lit on some peaceful pedestrians, whereas Hank and the husband fought on the edge and gave themselves black eyes and heart failure from contemplating the depths below. Meanwhile the lady who was the cause of it all sat in a room and read a magazine.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 178 (Aug. 4).—Society's Regatta.—Yacht club's annual race brings out many of Long Island's sailing craft.—Bay Shore, L. I.

World's Baseball Record.—Jack Ness, captain of Oakland team, sets new batting mark by hitting safely in 49 consecutive games.—Oakland, Cal. Sub-title: Ness is presented with diamond ring and loving cup.

Streets for Playgrounds.—Poor kiddies in thickly-settled section of metropolis play in roped-off streets.—New York City.

The Elephant Special.—Largest quadruped needed to drag visiting Shriners from interesting sights and varied entertainment of Universal City, Cal. Sub-title: Mayor Sebastian of Los Angeles and Mayor Thompson of Chicago enjoy sights at movie city.

"Safety First" on Water.—Rigid inspection held regularly on large New York excursion steamer to safeguard people from accidents.—Atlantic Highlands, N. J. Sub-titles: Adjusting life preservers. Lowering lifeboat. The liferaft. Fire drill.

Police Zouaves Drill.—Sixty of "the finest" show skill in exercises on Municipal Play Day. —St. Louis, Mo.

"Human Porpoise."—Harry Elionsky swims 5 miles in straitjacket with legs shackled by 30 pounds of chain.—New York Bay, N. Y.

Famous Horse Show.—Annual exhibit at Monmouth County track draws throng of horse lovers.—Long Branch, N. J.

Novel Motorboat.—"Tiddley Wink," a new design of hydroplane with wings, is given trial trip at Stamford, Conn. Sub-title: The 280 H. P. engine.

World's Biggest Locomotive.—Powerful "Mat H. Shay" used to push 150 loaded freight cars up steep mountain grades.—Susquehanna, Pa.

Liberty Bell at Fair.—Cheered by thousands, Philadelphia's famous bell, which proclaimed birth of the United States, arrives after 4,000-mile journey across continent.—San Francisco. Cal.

Deal Lake Canoe Meet.—Skilled paddlers compete in exciting races to decide New Jersey canoe championship.—Asbury Park, N. J.

Developing and Printing

References: Chicago Speedway Pictures, Sarah Bernhardt at Home, etc. Prompt guaranteed work. Expert camera men furnished. Best tinting and toning.

ADVANCE MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
People's Gas Building, Chicago

The largest staff of experts in all departments makes the MOVING PICTURE WORLD the one paper in the trade that fully fills the requirements of every reader.

U. T. HUNGERFORD
BRASS & COPPER CO.
STAR ★ BRAND

Brass and Bronze Railings
Grilles, Kick a nd Push Plates

Theater Equipment a Specialty
Prompt Service

RIGHT PRICES
EVERYTHING IN BRASS AND COPPER — STAR BRAND
SUPERIOR QUALITY

HUNGERFORD BUILDING
Lafayette, White and Franklin Sts.
NEW YORK
PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, SAN FRANCISCO

Ask Your Banker

The average Banker is usually a shrewd & successful business man whose advice in business matters is worth following.

Ask your Banker what he thinks of installing an

AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER

in your Theatre and what the Great Advantages of a MONEY & LABOR SAVING MACHINE which will SYSTEMATIZE YOUR BUSINESS AND AFFORD THOROUGH PROTECTION

No one is quicker to realize these advantages.

LET HIM BE YOUR COUNSEL.
WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED BOOKLET

The Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co.
1476 BROADWAY. NEW YORK CITY.

"For the Wages of Sin Is Death."—Last public appearance of ex-Lieutenant Charles Becker, who was electrocuted for instigating gambler's murder by gunmen.—Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, N. Y. Sub-titles: Mrs. Becker, loyal wife of ex-police lieutenant, who exhausted every means in attempt to save her husband. Governor Whitman, who, as District Attorney, twice convicted Becker, and as Governor was the man to whom final clemency plea was made.

Cartoons by the world famous caricaturist Hy. Mayer of Puck.

JOKER.

HER WEDDING NIGHT (August 18)—Eddie and Margaret Davis have just been married. They are an extremely amorous pair, and every impulse of their new life is emphasized by a kiss. The future opens rosily before them, but they quickly find a thorn in the person of Mike Flynn, a well meaning and good natured burglar who has been forced to take up his predatory profession because of the stronger will of his wife, Bridget. Flynn has been out of work and his large family of children (and pigs) is starving when Mrs. Flynn reads of a successful jewel burglary and insists that Mike make his fortune along the same lines. He meets with more adventures than success, and, dressed in the clothes of the young wife to conceal his identity, he is mistaken for the wife, and receives a lot of hugs and kisses from the husband. The young wife is horrified at the sight, and after a distressing mix-up, in which Mike escapes to the cellar and is locked up for the night, the young pair decide that the house is haunted and the bride strews fly-paper about the premises to capture the ghost.

The disturbance caused by Mike in the cellar, and his efforts to escape from the fly-paper reduce the bridal couple to a state of semi-insanity.

Bridget, the cause of it all, becomes distressed at the non-return of her spouse, suffers a regeneration of soul and sallies out to save him. She accomplishes this and the story ends in a reconciliation of all parties.

BOBBY BUMPS' ADVENTURES (August 21) —This is a clever moving picture cartoon showing Bobby playing all sorts of tricks on his unsuspecting papa. Papa has an auto and Bobby helps himself to the gasoline from the tank so that when papa attempts to start the car it refuses to budge. This is the beginning of a series of amusing incidents which result in the downfall of Bobby and his companion, Chocolate.

SEEING THE FUNNY SIDE OF THE WORLD WITH HOMER CROY (On Same Reel as Foregoing)—Beautiful scenes taken in Honolulu show natives climbing the cocoanut trees and later opening the fruit in their own fashion, i. e., by pounding them on the ground and pulling the outer shell off with their teeth. Mr. Croy samples what the natives call "dis-poi," very much to his disgust. He also meets the only albino on the island and later encounters a group of natives coming from church. He also takes a ride on a cable across the water, attempts to man a canoe in the rough surf and also tries his hand at the surf board without much success.

The next series is laid in Japan. Many picturesque street scenes are shown, including the itinerant ice man and the peculiar style of Japanese advertising. Mr. Croy has a jiu jitsu fight and later picks tea.

REX.

QUITS (August 17)—John Sloan is sheriff of Long Butte. One day, while wandering about the countryside, he sees some bushes move. Thinking it is an animal, he fires and misses. Later he takes another shot and is more successful, knocking off the hat of a man in hiding. The man comes forth and tells the sheriff that he is called "Frenchy."

The sheriff leaves him and starts to cross the stream nearby where he sinks up to his armpits in quicksand. He is saved by Frenchy, who tells the sheriff that he is a fugitive from justice and begs his protection. The sheriff realizes his debt to the criminal and takes him home, where he gives him the best in the house, telling him that he will give him shelter for the night and assist him out next morning.

Years before the sheriff was in love with a French girl, but she was won over by the honeyed words of a Frenchman. Although he lost the girl, her likeness is always before him and he nightly dreams of what might have been. The Frenchman bunks in the next room of the sheriff's house, and on looking on a table nearby sees a picture of the girl of the sheriff's dreams. He recoils in superstitious horror for he sees the face of the wife he has murdered staring him in the face. The next morning the sheriff's deputies arrive, and tell him of the murder. Seeing "Frenchy," they recognize him as their man and capture him. The murderer pleads with the sheriff and so appeals to his honor that the sheriff, in order to pay his debt in full, allows him to escape, giving him five minutes' start.

(Continued on page 1214.)

Calendar of Daily Program Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending August 14 and August 21

(For Extended Table of Current Releases See Pages Pages 1238, 1240, 1242.)

General Film Company

Current Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 9, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Her Hidden Life (Drama).
ESSANAY—The Bank (Special—Two parts—Comedy).
—The Happy House (Drama).
KALEM—The Runaway Wife (Special—Four parts—Drama).
LUBIN—The Great Lone Land (Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 63, 1915 (News).
SELIG—The Face In the Mirror (Special—Two parts—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—What Did He Whisper? (Comedy).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Law of Love (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—When My Lady Smiles (Special—Three parts—Drama).
KALEM—The Winning Wash (Ham & Bud Comedy).
LUBIN—Horrible Hyde (Comedy).
—Relentless Dalton (Cartoon—Comedy).
SELIG—The Gold Dust and the Squaw (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—Life's Yesterdays (Special—Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1915.

EDISON—Food For King and Riley (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Tip and the Treasure" (Comedy).
KALEM—The Riddle of the Rings (Episode No. 4 of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel") (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Bold Emmett, Ireland's Martyr (Special—Three parts—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—His Fairy Godmother (Comedy).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Stronger Than Love (Drama).
ESSANAY—The Bell Hop (Western—Comedy).
LUBIN—The Power of Prayer (Special—Two parts—Drama).
MINA—Billy's Nurse (Comedy).
SELIG—When Love Is Mocked (Special—Three parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 64, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—His Bunkie (Melodrama).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Last Drop of Water (Drama) (Biograph-Reissue No. 10).
EDISON—The King of the Wire (Special—Three parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy Steps In (Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Country Girl (Drama) (Re-issue).
LUBIN—The Deception (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—A Keyboard Strategy (Comedy).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Little Slavey (Drama).
EDISON—A Sprig of Shamrock (Drama).
ESSANAY—The Cave on Thunder Cloud (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—The Limited's Peril (Episode No. 40 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
LUBIN—Her Romeo (Comedy).
SELIG—The Orang-Outang (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—Heavy Villains (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Comedy).

General Film Company

Advance Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Mrs. Randolph's New Secretary (Comedy-Drama).
ESSANAY—
KALEM—The Legacy of Folly (Special—Three parts—"Broadway Favorites" Drama).
LUBIN—Polly of the Pots and Pans (Drama).
SELIG—In the King's Service (Special—Two parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 65, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—Mr. Jarr and Circumstantial Evidence (No. 15 of the "Jarr Family" Series—Comedy).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Ashes of Inspiration (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Legrand's Revenge (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—Ham at the Beach (Ham & Bud Comedy).
LUBIN—The Dead Letter (Comedy).
—Persistent Dalton (Comedy).
SELIG—The Prima Donna's Mother (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—My Lost One (Broadway Star Features—Special—Three parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—East Lynne (Special—Three parts—Drama).
EDISON—Cartoons on Tour (Comedy).
ESSANAY—"Dreamy Dud" Sees Charley Chaplin (Cartoon—Comedy).
KALEM—The Sustituted Jewel (Episode No. 5 of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel,") (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES—Capital Punishment (Special Feature—Three parts—Drama).
LUBIN—The Second Shot (Special—Two parts—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—She Took a Chance (Comedy).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—His Last Wish (Comedy-Drama).
ESSANAY—Tale of a Tire (Comedy).
LUBIN—It Was To Be (Special—Three parts—Drama).
MINA—A Case of Limburger (Comedy).
SELIG—The Clause in the Constitution (Special—Three parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 66, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Quest of the Widow (Comedy).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 20, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Death's Marathon (Drama) (Biograph Reissue No. 11).
EDISON—Shadows From the Past (Special—Four parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Marriage (Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Game of Life (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—When Souls Are Tried (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—Cutey's Awakening (Comedy).
—Swedish Army and Navy (Educational).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Ace of Diamonds (Drama).
EDISON—On the Wrong Track (Dramatic—Educational).
ESSANAY—The Woman Hater (Special—Three parts—Drama).
KALEM—A Perilous Chance (Episode No. 41 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
LUBIN—The Life Guard (Comedy).
SELIG—A Lucky Deal (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Dawn of Understanding (Special—Two parts—Drama).

BOOK THE GREAT BIOGRAPH, VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, KALEM, LUBIN, SELIG and BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

WEEKLY RELEASES AT

THE GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL COMPANY

Main Office: 126 West 46th Street (Bet. Broadway and 6th Ave.), New York City

BRANCHES: NEWARK, SYRACUSE, PHILADELPHIA, SCRANTON, BALTIMORE, WASHINGTON, ATLANTA and PROVIDENCE.

SERVING THE BIGGEST VARIETY OF UP-TO-DATE PICTURES IN THE WORLD.

EAST LYNNE

An adaptation of the stage success that has proved a popular drawing card for years—is the next

Three Reel Biograph

As produced by Biograph, this great tragic story takes on a quality which has never been realized on the stage.

Released WEDNESDAY, August 18

IN THE REGULAR SERVICE

For descriptions of all Biograph releases read THE BIOGRAPH mailed free each week

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
807 EAST 175th STREET
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Calendar of Daily Program Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending August 14 and August 21

(For Extended Table of Current Releases See Pages 1238, 1240, 1242.)

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 8, 1915.

LAEMMLE—The Source of Happiness (Drama).
L-KO—Shot In a Barroom (Comedy).
REX—Betty's Bondage (Two parts—Drama).

MONDAY, AUGUST 9, 1915.

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURES—Judy Forgot (Five parts—Comedy).
NESTOR—Dan Cupid Fixer (Comedy).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1915.

BIG U—Where Happiness Dwells (Drama).
GOLD SEAL—A Cigarette, That's All (Two parts—Drama).
IMP—To Frisco, Via the Cartoon Route (Hy Mayer Comedy—Cartoon).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 179 (News).
L-KO—Hello Bill (Comedy).
VICTOR—Refuge (Two parts—Drama).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1915.

BIG U—His Beloved Violin (Two parts—Drama).
LAEMMLE—No release this week.
POWERS—The Elephant Circus (Vaudeville Act).
—Little People In Fur (Ditmars Educational).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1915.

IMP—Driven By Fate (Three parts—Drama).
NESTOR—Lost—Three Teeth (Comedy).
VICTOR—No release this week.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1915.

BISON—Chasing the Limited (Two parts—Drama).
JOKER—A Dip In the Water (Comedy).
POWERS—Haunting Winds (Drama).

SUNDAY, AUGUST 15, 1915.

LAEMMLE—In the Grasp of the Law (Drama).
L-KO—Love on an Empty Stomach (Comedy).
REX—Mountain Justice (Two parts—Drama).

MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 1915.

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURES—Just Jim (Four parts—Drama).
NESTOR—Tony, the Dago (Comedy).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1915.

GOLD SEAL—A Fiery Introduction (Two parts—Comedy—Drama).
IMP—The Country Girl (Drama.
REX—Quits (Drama).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 180, (News).
L-KO—No release replaced with No. 1 Extra Joker.
JOKER—Her Wedding Night (Comedy).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1915.

BIG U—Ethel's Burglar (Drama).
LAEMMLE—The Little Blonde in Black (Two parts— drama.)
POWERS—Lady Raffles & Detective Duck in "The Dread Society of the Sacred Sausages" (Comedy).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 20, 1915.

IMP—The Substitute Widow (Two parts—Drama).
NESTOR—Kids and Corsets (Comedy).
VICTOR—The Taming of Mary (Comedy.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1914.

BISON—The Gopher (Two parts—Drama).
JOKER—Bobby Bumps Adventures (Animated Cartoon, by Earl Hurd.
—Seing the Funny side of the world with Homer Croy. (Educational).
POWERS—A Double Deal in Pork (Comedy).
POWERS—No release Replaced with No. 2 Extra Powers.

Mutual Film Corporation.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 8, 1915.

KOMIC—Father Love (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—Big Jim's Heart (Two parts—Western—Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Revenge of the Steeplejack (Drama).

MONDAY, AUGUST 9, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Exile of "Bar-K" Ranch (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—A Rascal of Wolfish Ways (Two parts—Comedy).
RELIANCE—The Little Orphans (Melodrama).
RODEO—Aunt Matilda Outwitted (Comedy).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1915.

BEAUTY—Jimmy on the Job (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—The Right to Live (Comedy—Drama).
THANHOUSER—Cupid In the Olden Time (Split—Two parts—Drama & Fantasy).
—A Message Through Flames.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1915.

AMERICAN—Comrades Three (Drama).
BRONCHO—Shorty Inherits a Harem (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—The Noon Hour (Comedy—Drama).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1915.

DOMINO—The $100,000 Bill (Two parts—Drama)
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 32, 1915 (News).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1915.

FALSTAFF—Gussie, the Graceful Life Guard (Comedy).
KAY-BEE—Over Secret Wires (Two parts—Drama).
THANHOUSER—Weighed In the Balance (Drama).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1915.

BEAUTY—Love and Labor (Comedy).
RELIANCE—The Way of a Mother (Two parts—Drama).

SUNDAY, AUGUST 15, 1915.

KOMIC—The Fatal Finger Prints (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—The Kinship of Courage (Two parts—Romantic—Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Crogmere Ruby (Mystery—Drama).

MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Jilt (Two parts—Drama).
FALSTAFF—The Marvelous Marathoner (Comedy).
KEYSTONE—The Battle of Ambrose and Walrus (Two parts—Comedy).
RELIANCE—The Big Brother (Drama).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1915.

BEAUTY—The Honeymooners (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—Providence and the Twins (Drama).
THANHOUSER—When Hungry Hamlet Fled (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Assayer of Lone Gap (Drama).
BRONCHO—The Girl From the East (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—An Independent Woman (Drama).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1915.

CUB—The Little Hero (Comedy).
DOMINO—The Lighthouse-keeper's Son (Two parts—Drama).
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 33, 1915 (News).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 20, 1915.

FALSTAFF—Help! Help! (Comedy).
KAY-BEE—The Knight of the Trails (Two parts—Drama).
MAJESTIC—The Root of All Evil (Comedy—Drama).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1915.

BEAUTY—What's In a Name (Comedy).
RELIANCE—A Bold Impersonation (Two parts—Drama).

To our Readers: If you cannot depend on your newsstand, why not send us one dollar, ($1.00) for a four months' trial subscription? You will get your paper earlier, more Regularly and at much less cost. Send your dollar NOW. Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Avenue, New York.

Paramount

Through Its Producers

Famous Players Film Co.
Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co. and Oliver Morosco Photoplay Co.

presents for the first quarter of the second year a program absolutely without parallel.

Any exhibitor who is interested in his own future should compare what the Paramount offers with any other productions on the market—

Then, to learn how steadily Paramount Producers have advanced, compare the releases of the first quarter of our first year with the releases of the first quarter of our second year.

A year ago we took the first steps ever taken to establish a quality program and to develop high grade business. The trend of the whole industry since then has turned in our direction. The success of our methods is convincing proof of their rightness. We shall continue with these methods.

That our producers are now able to offer so magnificent a program for the coming quarter with no increase in price of service has been due to the loyal support of the exhibitor. With his continued support for the future we shall be in position to make our offerings even better from quarter to quarter—which means better business for the exhibitor.

Another Point!—

Not only have we the greatest plays, the best productions and the world famous stars of the theatrical profession, but—

Paramount

Pictures Are the Cleanest—

The Pictures That Appeal to the Desirable Class of Patrons Everywhere

Paramount Pictures

Paramount Pictures

See Last Page for Extraordinary Announcement

Paramount Pictures Corporation
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FORTIETH STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

A PERSONAL TALK TO EXHIBITORS

by

ADOLPH ZUKOR

At this time, when exhibitors are asked to consider the many extravagant claims of new feature producers, and when predictions are offered instead of productions, I would like to review with you the events of the past three years in the feature branch of the film industry, to see whether such an analysis of conditions cannot indicate to you the course to insure the prosperity and success of YOUR theatre.

When, three years ago, we created the policy of presenting the famous plays and celebrated stars of the legitimate stage on the screen, we dedicated our activities and energies to the principle of artistic achievement first, and commercial success second. To this precept we have adhered throughout the entire existence of our organization, establishing a standard of merit that was then unprecedented, and that today, in the belief of the trade, is still unsurpassed.

The wide adoption of the policy for which the Famous Players Film Co. was organized is sufficient evidence of the basic success of recognized stage favorites and dramatic successes on the screen. BUT--as is being daily proven, it requires more than a star or play to produce a meritorious feature subject. In order to remove every uncertainty from the maintenance of a consistent standard, we have for every moment since our entrance into the producing world, striven to perfect such an organization as to make lasting success a natural result.

Under the able producing management of Daniel Frohman and that genius of the screen, Edwin S. Porter, together with the dramatic mastery of Hugh Ford, and the efficient assistance of their directorial corps, we have created feature history and an uninterrupted standard that is today accepted throughout the world as the criterion of all feature merit.

Never resting content upon our past laurels, we have gathered the greatest constellation of stage and screen favorites ever assembled under one banner, including Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Hazel Dawn, Pauline Frederick, Marie Doro, and John Barrymore, players who by their charm, talents and power, have added prestige to the motion picture.

Today, when competition in the exhibiting branch of the industry is more severe than it has ever been, it is necessary not only for your success but for your continued existence to exert the greatest care in the selection of your feature program. There are many possible feature programs, but only one certain one--The Paramount Program.

After one year of Paramount Success, we are gratified that the principles of merit, service and cooperation to which that organization and its allied producers are pledged, have met with responsive appreciation from exhibitors throughout the country. Now, at the inception of the second Paramount Year, we are making diligent plans to surpass in every manner the value and distinction of last year's program.

We do not ask you to base your faith in our merit upon promises, but upon our achievements! Turn to the impressive list of our preeminent feature attractions on the next quarterly Paramount Program, and book Paramount on the certainty of absolute merit, instead of mere predictions and possibilities.

Adolph Zukor

Pres. FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.

PARAMOUNT

Attractions Released to Date That Have Created Epochs in Feature Advancement

Sarah Bernhardt in "Queen Elizabeth."
James K. Hackett in "The Prisoner of Zenda."
Mary Pickford in "In the Bishop's Carriage."
Mary Pickford in "Caprice."
Mrs. Fiske in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."
Carlotta Nilson in "Leah Kleschna."
Cecilia Loftus in "A Lady of Quality."
John Barrymore in "An American Citizen."
Cyril Scott in "The Day of Days."
Mary Pickford in "Hearts Adrift."
Charlotte Ives in "Clothes."
Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country."
William Farnum in "The Redemption of David Corson."
Malcolm Williams in "The Brute."
Arnold Daly in "The Port of Missing Men."
Bruce McRae in "The Ring and the Man."
Hazel Dawn in "One of Our Girls."
Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate."
Jane Grey in "The Little Gray Lady."
Carlyle Blackwell in "The Spitfire."
Paul McAllister in "The Scales of Justice."
William Courtleigh in "The Better Man."
H. B. Warner in "The Lost Paradise."
Henrietta Crosman in "The Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch."
Mary Pickford in "Such a Little Queen."
Mme. Kalich in "Marta of the Lowlands."
Marguerite Clark in "Wildflower."
Maclyn Arbuckle in "The County Chairman."
Mary Pickford in "Behind the Scenes."
David Higgins in "His Last Dollar."
John Barrymore in "The Man From Mexico."
Gladys Hanson in "The Straight Road."
Tyrone Power in "Aristocracy."
May Irwin in "Mrs. Black is Back."
John Emerson in "The Conspiracy."
Marguerite Clark in "The Crucible."
William Farnum in "The Sign of the Cross."
Mary Pickford in "Cinderella."
Edward Abeles in "The Million."
Florence Reed in "The Dancing Girl."
Marie Doro in "The Morals of Marcus."
Mary Pickford in "Mistress Nell."
Gaby Deslys in "Her Triumph."
John Emerson in "The Bachelor's Romance."
William H. Crane in "David Harum."
"The Love Route."
Marguerite Clark in "Gretna Green."
John Barrymore in "Are You a Mason?"
"The Commanding Officer."
William Elliott in "When We Were Twenty-one."
"May Blossom."
Hazel Dawn in "Niobe."
Mary Pickford in "Fanchon the Cricket."
"The Moth and the Flame."
Marguerite Clark in "The Pretty Sister of Jose."
John Mason in "Jim the Penman."
Mary Pickford in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow."
Hazel Dawn in "Clarissa."
John Barrymore in "The Dictator."
Mary Pickford in "Little Pal."
Marguerite Clark in "Seven Sisters."
Mary Pickford in "Rags."
Pauline Frederick in "Sold."
Marguerite Clark in "Helene of the North."
Hazel Dawn in "The Heart of Jennifer."

The experience and knowledge acquired in the production of the great series of feature successes listed above are represented in the unusual strength of our releases for September, October and November.

Turn to the opposite page and consider the great galaxy of favorite stars and plays to be released during the next Paramount quarterly. Then safe-guard yourself from destructive competition by booking the

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

FAMOUS PLAYERS

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President
DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director
EDWIN · S · PORTER, Treasurer and General Manager

Canadian Distributors—Famous Players

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

PROGRAM

For the First Brilliant Quarterly of the Second Triumphant Paramount Year

FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM COMPANY

CONTRIBUTES

Fourteen Pre-eminent Feature Attractions.

SEPTEMBER

MARY PICKFORD in "THE FOUNDLING"
A Powerful and Typical Pickford Portrayal

JOHN BARRYMORE in "THE INCORRIGIBLE DUKANE"
A Characteristic Barrymore Laugh-Success

MARIE DORO in "THE WHITE PEARL"
Miss Doro's Return to the Screen, in a Spectacular Romance

JOHN MASON and HAZEL DAWN in "THE FATAL CARD"
The Two Popular Stars in a Thrilling Photo-Production of the Great Dramatic Triumph

OCTOBER

MARY PICKFORD in "TWISTED PATHS"
A Feature that will Make an Unforgetable Impression

SAM BERNARD in "POOR SCHMALTZ"
The Celebrated Comedian's First Appearance on the Screen

PAULINE FREDERICK in "ZAZA"
The Great Emotional Artiste in the Dramatic Sensation of the Century

MARGUERITE CLARK in "MOLLY-MAKE-BELIEVE
The Dainty Star in a Quaint and Captivating Romance

NOVEMBER

MARY PICKFORD in "MADAME BUTTERFLY"
One of the Screen Events of the Year

CHARLES CHERRY in "THE MUMMY AND THE HUMMING-BIRD"
The International Stage Success

JOHN BARRYMORE in "THE THREE ELKS"
A Comedy Feature in Which the Star Equals his Success in "Are You a Mason?

HAZEL DAWN in "THE MASQUERADERS"
Henry Arthur Jones' Celebrated Dramatic Triumph

MARGUERITE CLARK in "THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER"
Mark Twain's World-Famous Masterpiece--The Great American Humorist's First Filmed Work

The Greatest Array of Stellar Talent and the Foremost Group of Celebrated Plays Ever Presented by One Producing Company Within the Same Period of Time.

FILM COMPANY

Executive Offices
213~229 WEST 26TH ST.
NEW YORK

Film Service, Ltd., Calgary—Montreal—Toronto

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

Pallas Pictures

WILL PRESENT
DURING THE COMING MONTHS

DUSTIN FARNUM IN 4 PRODUCTIONS, INCLUDING

MACLYN ARBUCKLE IN

"DAVY CROCKETT" AND "THE GENTLEMAN from INDIANA" BY BOOTH TARRINGTON

"The REFORM CANDIDATE"

RELEASED THROUGH THE PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORP.

PALLAS PICTURES
INCORPORATED

PUBLICITY OFFICE
220 WEST 42nd STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

STUDIOS
211 NORTH OCCIDENTAL B'V'D
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

CANADIAN DISTRIBUTORS FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE LTD. MONTREAL TORONTO, CALGARY

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

LASKY

ENTERING ON A NEW AND RECORD BREAKING YEAR

NINE MORE PLAYS

FIRST QUARTER
SECOND
TWELVE MONTHS
PARAMOUNT
PROGRAM

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

120 WEST 41st STREET, NEW YORK CITY

JESSE L. LASKY
PRESIDENT

SAMUEL GOLDFISH
TREAS. & GEN'L MANAGER

CECIL B. DeMILLE
DIRECTOR GENERAL

LASK

WHAT THE AUTU

SEPTEMBER

BLANCHE SWEET
IN DAVID BELASCO'S PLAY
"THE CASE OF BECKY,"
BY EDWARD LOCKE

CHARLOTTE WALKER
IN
"OUT OF DARKNESS"

LOU-TELLEGEN
IN A PICTURIZATION OF "THE EXPLORER"
BY W. SOMERSET-MAUGHAM

NOVEMBER

VICTO
IN "CHIMM
BY E.W
PRODUCED E

LASKY ALL STAR PICTU
"THE CHOF
JAM

BLANCHE SWEET IN

LASKY

SKY

JMN WILL BRING

OCTOBER

PHOTO BY AIME DUPONT

LAURA HOPE CREWS IN "BLACKBIRDS"

GERALDINE FARRAR

BY ARRANGEMENT MORRIS GEST, IN

CARMEN,

PRODUCED BY CECIL B. DE MILLE

R MOORE

IE FADDEN OUT WEST"

. TOWNSEND,

Y CECIL B. DE MILLE

RIZATION OF US LADY" BY

ES FORBES,

"THE CHEAT"

DONALD BRIAN

IN PICTURIZATION OF "THE VOICE IN THE FOG" BY HAROLD MACGRATH

BELASCO

LASKY
THEODORE ROBERTS
CARLYLE BLACKWELL
THOMAS MEIGHAN
WALLACE REID
JAMES NEILL
MAJORIE DAW
THE LASKY STOCK CO.
STARS THEMSELVES
THEY APPEAR IN SUPPORT OF LASKY STARS
CLEO RIDGLEY
CAMILLE ASTOR
FLORENCE DAGMAR
RAYMOND HATTON
WILLIAM ELMER
ANITA KING
TOM FORMAN
HORACE B. CARPENTER
MRS. LEWIS McCORD

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

BOSWORTH INCORPORATED

WILL PRESENT DURING THE NEXT QUARTER

ELSIE JANIS

THE INTERNATIONAL STAR

IN

"'TWAS EVER THUS"

BOSWORTH INCORPORATED HAS GIVEN TO THE PHOTOPLAY WORLD SOME OF ITS MOST NOTED FILM CLASSICS

"SEA WOLF", "ODYSSEY OF THE NORTH," "HYPOCRITES", Etc.

BOSWORTH INCORPORATED

PUBLICITY OFFICE
220 WEST 42ND STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

STUDIOS
211 NORTH OCCIDENTAL B'V'D
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

CANADIAN DISTRIBUTORS FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE LTD.
MONTREAL, TORONTO, CALGARY.

BOSWORTH INCORPORATED

The Oliver Morosco Photoplay Co.

WILL PRESENT

CYRIL MAUDE

STAR OF "GRUMPY"

CYRIL MAUDE

IN

IBSEN'S MASTERPIECE

The Celebrated International Favorite

"PEER GYNT"

Released Through

PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORPORATION

The Oliver Morosco Photoplay Co.

PUBLICITY OFFICE
220 WEST 42nd STREET,
NEW YORK, N.Y.

STUDIOS
211 NORTH OCCIDENTAL B'V'D.,
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

CANADIAN DISTRIBUTORS FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE Ltd. MONTREAL, TORONTO, CALGARY.

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

The Oliver Morosco Photoplay Co.

WILL PRESENT

BLANCHE RING

IN AN ELABORATE PRODUCTION
TO BE ANNOUNCED LATER.

•BLANCHE RING•

Released Through
PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORPORATION

The Oliver Morosco Photoplay Co.

PUBLICITY OFFICE
220 WEST 42nd STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

STUDIOS
211 NORTH OCCIDENTAL B'V'D
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

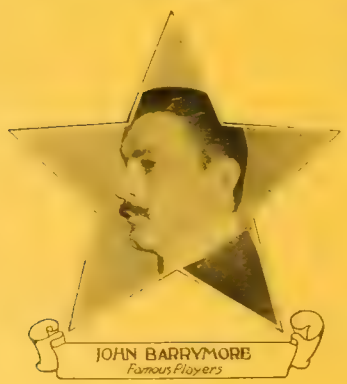
CANADIAN DISTRIBUTORS FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE, LTD. MONTREAL, TORONTO, CALGARY.

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Paramount

Releases for the first qu

Greatest announcement ever



September

PRODUCER	PLAY	STAR
Famous Players Film Co.	THE FOUNDLING	Mary Pickford
Famous Players Film Co.	THE INCORRIGIBLE DUKANE	John Barrymore
Famous Players Film Co.	THE WHITE PEARL	Marie Doro
Famous Players Film Co.	THE FATAL CARD	Hazel Dawn and John Mason
Lasky-Belasco	THE CASE OF BECKY	Blanche Sweet
Lasky	OUT OF DARKNESS	Charlotte Walker
Lasky	THE EXPLORER From the play by W. Somerset Maugham	Lou Tellegen
Morosco	PEER GYNT	Cyril Maude
Bosworth	'TWAS EVER THUS	Elsie Janis

October

Famous Players Film Co.	TWISTED PATHS	Mary Pickford
Famous Players Film Co.	ZAZA	Pauline Frederick

Read—and ponder. Then write our ne

Paramount Pictures

Paramount Pict
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST
NEW YORK.

Program

arter of the second year

made in the film industry

October (Continued)

PRODUCER	PLAY	STAR
Famous Players Film Co.	MOLLY MAKE-BELIEVE	Marguerite Clark
Lasky	THE VOICE IN THE FOG	Donald Brian
Lasky	BLACKBIRDS	Laura Hope Crews
Pallas	DAVY CROCKETT	Dustin Farnum

November

Famous Players Film Co.	MADAM BUTTERFLY	Mary Pickford
Famous Players Film Co.	THE MUMMY AND THE HUMMING BIRD	Charles Cherry
Famous Players Film Co.	THE THREE ELKS	John Barrymore
Famous Players Film Co.	DOROTHY VERNON OF HADDON HALL	Hazel Dawn
Famous Players Film Co.	THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER	Marguerite Clark
Lasky, by arrangement, Morris Gest	CARMEN	Geraldine Farrar
Lasky	CHIMMIE FADDEN OUT WEST	Victor Moore
Lasky	THE CHEAT	Blanche Sweet
Lasky	THE CHORUS LADY	All Star Cast

arest exchange about Paramount service

ures Corporation
FORTIETH STREET
CITY, N.Y.

Paramount Pictures

Paramount Pictures

These are some of the Largest Newspapers in the United States.

Beginning in September they will carry every week a Paramount advertisement.

Greatest campaign ever launched.

It will make Paramount Pictures talked of everywhere in the land.

The Paramount Exhibitor gets the benefit.

Paramount Pictures Corporation
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FORTIETH STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

A Motion Picture Magazine For You Free

Picture Progress is a bright, breezy publication devoted to motion picture players and plays. Contains attractive photographs of your favorites, answers queries, and gives the latest news of the motion picture world in general. You can get a free copy—simply fill in your name and address, and mail this coupon now.

Name .....

Address .....

S.E.P. 9

The Mutual Film Corporation presents

MARGARITA FISCHER

In Lloyd Osbourne's Drama of the Stage

INFATUATION

BOBBS-MERRILL CO., Publisher

Released September 2nd

LLOYD OSBOURNE.

A Mutual Masterpicture by a Master Craftsman of Literature — Lloyd Osbourne, the Famous Stepson of Robert Louis Stevenson.

In securing the picturization of Lloyd Osbourne's great novel, "Infatuation," the Mutual has added another distinguished name to the already long list of noted authors who have contributed to the success of Mutual Masterpictures.

Mutual Masterpictures released to date:

THE QUEST
THE LOST HOUSE
THE OUTCAST
THE DEVIL
THE OUTLAW'S REVENGE
ENOCH ARDEN
A MAN AND HIS MATE
ON THE NIGHT STAGE
MAN'S PREROGATIVE
CAPTAIN MACKLIN
THE CUP OF LIFE
A CHILD OF GOD
THE ABSENTEE
THE VICTIM
RUMPELSTILTSKIN
STRATHMORE
THE LURE OF THE MASK
GOD'S WITNESS
GHOSTS
THE FAILURE
THE DARKENING TRAIL
THE LONESOME HEART
THE PATRIOT AND THE SPY
HER SHATTERED IDOL UP FROM THE DEPTHS
THE REWARD
SECRETARY OF FRIVOLOUS AFFAIRS
THE FLYING TWINS
THE FOX WOMAN
THE MATING
MILESTONES OF LIFE
THE GIRL FROM HIS TOWN
THE TOAST OF DEATH
A YANKEE FROM THE WEST

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION 71 West 23rd St., New York City

-a better, stronger
Mutual
Program
Watch for the CUB
COMEDY
"It's a bear"
New one-reel comedy release every week on the Mutual Program, Featuring the Famous Comedian
GEORGE OVEY
Produced by David Horsley
First Release Thursday, August 19th
"The Little Hero"
A Screaming Film Farce!
Book it—on the Mutual Program
Mutual Film Corporation
JOHN R. FREULER, President
Executive Offices—71 West 23d Street, New York City
Exchanges Everywhere.

To Exhibitors:

The comedy pictures produced by David Horsley and distributed through the Mutual will be known under the brand name of

CUB COMEDY

"It's A Bear"

The first of these is a cracker-jack laugh-provoker in one reel called "The Little Hero" and will be released Thursday, August 19. It is directed by Milton H. Fahrney and features George Ovey, "the funniest man in America." Exceptionally compelling one and three sheet posters in addition.

Book this through your Mutual Exchange

(continued from page 1207.)

The deputies revile the sheriff who then tells them his debt is paid in full, and buckling on his guns and badge sets out in pursuit of the criminal. "Frenchy" is seen paddling down the river and the sheriff, after a couple of shots, sees his man topple from the canoe. The others come up in time to see what they suppose to be the death of the Frenchman. As the story ends the face of "Frenchy" is seen peering from behind a boulder, full of mocking laughter.

A SEASHORE ROMEO (August 22)—Ben and Dolly are very much in love, but Dad objects to Ben because he can boast only a row of medals won in athletic sports and has no money-making ability. Ben goes to the seaside, gets work there and writes to Dolly begging her to come down. She tells father he is ill and needs a change. Father refuses to believe this at first, but so insistent is she that finally Dad really begins to feel ill and calls in the doctor, who is in league with Dolly. Doc suggests a change—the seashore preferably. So Dolly and father go off to the shore, where she meets Ben the very first thing. Father sees Ben and is very anxious to keep Dolly away from the young man. But she slips away.

Father goes in search of her and thinks he has found her several times—only to be disappointed by several parasols of a stripe very similar to one owned by Dolly. Finally Dad, all tired out, meets the pretty belle of the hotel, and decides to let well enough alone and have a little talk with her. He is seen spooning under her striped parasol by Ben and Dolly a little later. Next day the young couple decide to show Dad that athletics have some value and, while in swimming, Dolly pretends to be drowning. She screams for help. Ben is on the beach. Dad begs him to save his child. Ben straightens up and tells the old man that if he does save her—it will be for himself. Ben then plunges in, heroically saves the laughing Dolly, and brings her nobly to shore. It only remains for Dad to mumble a "bless you my children" over their dripping heads!

MOUNTAIN JUSTICE (Two Parts—Aug. 15). Angus McDonald and Jeffry Kirke are partners in a moonshine still and are the very antithesis of each other, the former being slow of speech and action, while the latter is of the "hair trigger" variety. Kirke is married, and his wife, although above his station in life, is devotedly attached to him, even though he treats her cruelly.

Nora Davison, a typical maid of the mountains, is deeply in love with Angus, but he hardly notices her, even when she goes out of her way to meet him. His interest is centered in Mary Kirke, and he believes he is desperately in love with her. Things come to a climax one day when Nora and Angus witness Kirke strike his wife and knock her unconscious to the floor. Angus is roused to a fury and tries to kill Kirke, but Nora prevents him. Mary decides to separate from her husband.

Kirke gets a tip that the revenue officers are going to raid his still and prepares an ambush for them. When the officers arrive he shoots and kills one; the other officers take the dead man and go for assistance.

Angus has wandered about and runs across Mary. He pleads with her to accept his love and let him have the right to care for her, but she tells him she loves only her husband. He tells her that he will bring her husband to her, but it will be "feet first," and she finally makes him promise that he will not take Kirke's life. He leaves her and upon returning is met by Nora, who tells him of the raid.

Angus returns to Kirke's cabin and meets Kirke. Just as the latter speaks to him he knocks him down and finally, with a heavy blow, floors him. He ties his hands and sees an opportunity to get Kirke killed without implicating himself, so turns him over to the officers, refusing to accept any reward.

The mountaineers learn of his action, and their passions are fanned to fever heat to think that one of them would surrender his partner to the officers. His captors decide to hang him. Nora arrives at this time, and as Angus had refused to explain his action, she tells them how he has protected her. The story wins some sympathy for him and he is ordered shot instead of hanged.

Nora pleads her love for the man and finally so works on her father that he stealthily slips her a knife and tells her to cut his bonds. Just as she does so the others see the act and start forward, but "Old Man" Davison holds them back at the point of his gun and forces them to disperse, which they do unwillingly. The old man is torn between love for his daughter and resentment at Angus because he does not return his daughter's love. He leaves with the others.

Angus has come to realize that, after all, he does love her, but it needs a word to bring them together.

IMP.

THE COUNTRY GIRL (August 17)—Frances Berg, who has had a good education, lives with her parents in the country. The postman arrives with a letter from her father's friend, Robert Steele, offering her a position in New York. Meanwhile a telegram has been sent to Mr. Steele to meet her on the arrival of a specified train. Somehow the telegram goes astray and Frances, on coming out of the station, mistakes John Oliver for a chauffeur and tells him to take her to Mr. Steele's office. John does not reveal his identity and makes an appointment to meet her at a restaurant that evening. When Steele returns to his office he greets Frances cordially, installs her at her desk as his stenographer and is apparently well pleased with her. That evening Steele sees Frances with John at the restaurant, and the following morning admonishes her at the office for accepting the attentions of a strange man-around-town. Later in the day Steele announces, on leaving the office, that he'll be away until Monday. Frances gets a letter and a paper from her home town. In the newspaper she reads that the mortgage on her father's house is to be foreclosed, and then breaks down and cries.

John Oliver calls at the office and is admitted by the clerk. Ascertaining the cause of her crying spell, he gives Frances a check to pay off the mortgage in order to place her under obligation to him. Frances meets John a few nights later at a cabaret restaurant. After a while John excuses himself and goes off to have a dance with another girl of his acquaintance who is in the company of other young men at an adjoining table. This angers Frances. On his return from the dance, John is amazed at Frances' absence and goes in search of her. Frances, finding that she has been locked out of her boarding house, goes to the office to spend the night. John follows her in his auto, and, after entering the office, tries to embrace her. They have a lively struggle, and finally Frances induces him to leave by threatening to brain him with the telephone. The next morning the clerk and Mr. Steele find Frances almost in a state of collapse. Steele telephones for John, demanding his immediate presence at his office. On his arrival, Steele denounces John for his cowardly behavior and hands him a check for the amount he advanced to Frances. Frances is so grateful to Steele that she allows him to kiss her, and there are other indications that Steele is to become her lifelong protector.

THE SUBSTITUTE WIDOW (Two Parts—Aug. 20)—Joan Faraday, penniless and jobless, is about to leave the lobby of the Manhattan House, having failed to secure the position she applied for, when a veiled young woman introduces herself as Mrs. Burgess, a widow. The stranger offers Joan $100 to change places with her for a day, name, room and all. She explains that there is nothing wrong, but that she has to get away immediately and secretly under the very nose of several spies in the street who are watching her. Joan consents and takes charge of room 1660, while the real owner slips away. Joan is puzzling over the significance of a jeweled hatpin which Mrs. Burgess has given her, when she picks up a newspaper with a marked article describing the latest exploit of "Gentleman" Hawkins in connection with the Maddock diamonds. Joan sees the connection between the pair and her one thought is to escape from the hotel.

She is about to leave, when "Gentleman" Hawkins himself is announced. When Joan refuses to see him the redoubtable scoundrel engages the adjoining empty room and loses no time in making for room 1660 by way of the fire escape, while the house detective, who has observed his movements, notifies the police. The "gentleman" enters room 1660 and overpowers Joan after a struggle in which her veil drops. The thief's amazement and curses are interrupted by the police, who take charge of him and Joan, his supposed wife and confederate. As Joan is led away the jade head of her hatpin falls to the ground and reveals a letter explaining that the "widow," really Ada Hawkins, anxious to lead an honest life, has, by substituting Joan in her place, given her husband's spies the slip, thus enabling her to restore the diamonds to the Maddock family. A message from the Maddock house substantiates Joan's story and proves to the police that "Mrs. Burgess" is there with the diamonds. Joan is released with a reward.

GOLD SEAL.

A FIERY INTRODUCTION (Two Parts—August 17).—Edward Dawson, a theatrical manager, has just read and accepted a play by Kenneth Chalmers, the leading part to be played by Nora King. He makes an appointment with Nora to read over the play and also writes Chalmers a note telling of its acceptance and that Miss King will play the leading role. In his apartment Chalmers is busy on another of his plays, and while waiting for an inspiration hears the cry of "Fire!" Dressed in his pajamas, he snatches up a cigarette case and exits into the hall, which is full of excited people. As he starts down stairs he bumps into a girl coming up, dressed in a dressing gown. She tells him the fire is below and he escorts her up to the roof. The two are mutually interested in each other and are oblivious of the crowd about them. Going to the wall of the roof, they seat themselves and are enjoying a conversation when the firemen tell them they will have to move. Becoming aware of their scantiness of dress, they cross to an adjoining roof, and, wandering about, finally come down into a neighboring apartment house. They knock at a door nearby, deciding to try and get more suitable raiment.

"Silent" Harry, a night prowler, has broken into the Dawsons' apartments, and, finding husband and wife in bed, succeeds in binding and gagging them. He then proceeds to ransack the house and has a sack full of plunder when he hears a knock at the door. Putting up a bluff, he opens the door and is confronted by Chalmers and the girl, who ask for shelter. He tells them that he is the butler and that has master and mistress are out and makes them comfortable. The two make themselves at home and are so engrossed in their conversation that they are oblivious to everything else. The thief slips his sack of loot into the hall and leaves on a pretext. The Dawsons, in their cramped quarters, are trying to get free. Dawson finally works his gag loose and calls for help. In the next room Chalmers hears

Yep! It's a Fact--- More Believe It Every Day

That we turn out

PERFECT DEVELOPING AND PRINTING

The majority of them were convinced by a trial order. Some of them let us have thousands of feet of negative right off the bat. That's some confidence. We want to "show you." Let us have that trial order. Better let us have it right now.

SEND FOR FACTORY DESCRIPTION AND PRICE LIST

INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE COMPANY

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER, President 223-233 West Erie Street, Chicago, Ill.

him and goes to investigate, despite the remonstrance of his companion. He releases the victims. There is mutual recognition. Chalmers tells the Dawsons that Nora, who, unknown to him, is the leading lady of his play, is in the other room. They all enter the room and Dawson is convulsed with laughter. Chalmers demands an explanation and is introduced to his leading lady. Of course each of them is surprised, and their attraction to each other enhanced. Meanwhile the thief has made his way to the roof and is apprehended by the firemen, who search his sack, and, finding the loot, take him into custody. Next morning at the theatre the principals are all assembled and there is a happy reunion between Nora and Chalmers.

VICTOR.

LORD BARRINGTON'S ESTATE (Three Parts—August 18).—Dick Stanton, the son of an English father of noble breeding, is living in the West as a cowboy. His grandfather, an eccentric old lord, disinherited his daughter on her marriage to a commoner. On the death of her husband and self, the child born to them was sent to its grandfather, and he, in turn, sent it to a convent to be raised. The old lord dies, and his sister and her daughter, Mildred, and son, Reginald, take up their abode in his house. The will is probated and the estate goes to his younger son's son. The old solicitor of the family comes to America to find Dick Stanton—now Lord Barrington. To Violet, his disobedient daughter's child, is left her grandfather's cane, which, the will asserts, he would have used on her father. The solicitor finds Dick, and there is great sorrow at his parting from his cowboy pals.

Meanwhile in England Mildred has fallen in love with a young man, but her mother cautions her that their livelihood depends on her marrying Dick. Violet comes from school, but is coldly received by her grand aunt. The son, however, covets her in a beastial fashion. Dick arrives in England and is shown quickly that he is "impossibly western." He is picked to marry Mildred, but learns that she loves another. Violet's cousin tries to force his attentions on her. Seizing her grandfather's cane, she hits him a stunning blow. The cane breaks and inside its hollow center she finds a later will, in which she herself is named as sole heiress to her grandfather's estate. A love interest has developed between her and Dick and, as she shows him the new will, he is thankful to be rid of the burden. He goes to pack up his belongings, intending to return West. When he comes down he finds Violet with suit case ready. "Let them take the money," declares Violet. "I am going with you." In the West Dick's pals receive the news of his arrival with a bride. The cowboys clean up the house and get all in ship shape. The cook, not to be outdone, buys a barrel of dishes nicely packed in sawdust, which he unpacks, leaving the sawdust on the freshly swept floor. When the bridal couple arrives consternation reigns. The old cook weeps, having done his best, when the boys abuse him, but all finally ends happily.

THE TAMING OF MARY (August 20).—Harry Benton is engaged to Mary Schuyler. At the opening of the picture he meets his "beloved," her father and her mother at the dock and they go aboard a steamer. When Harry goes down into the cabin with the dog, Mary tells her mother that she wishes that Harry were not so "mushy." Other men of her acquaintance come up and engage her in animated conversation. Harry returns and is very much exasperated at the apparent interest Mary takes in young Hawley. Left alone with Mary, Harry reads a book to her, but this only seems to bore her, and she indulges in a flirtation with Hawley while Harry goes to get her parasol. On his return he opens her parasol and gives her a box of candy.

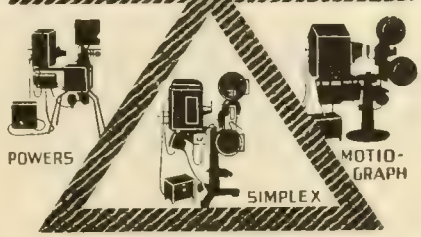
Then Harry goes off again and returns with the dog and a bouquet of flowers. Shortly afterward the dog scampers off and Mary screams for fear her dog will fall overboard. A general rush is made for the dog, but Hawley is the lucky one to capture Fido. Harry goes off with the flowers in disgust. Presently he returns and gives Mary the flowers, but when he again reproaches her for flirting with other young men they have a quarrel. Then we see Harry having an interview with Mr. Schuyler, who tells him that instead of spoiling Mary with too much attention he should learn to rule her. During the ensuing fire drill, Mr. Schuyler gets a happy idea. He tells Harry that every girl loves a hero and that he must follow his instructions in every respect. Accordingly, Harry first arouses Mary's jealousy by dancing with another girl, and then sits with her on one of the lifeboats, where Mary has a full view of their mutual flirtation. Meanwhile Mr. Schuyler arranges with the quartermaster to start a fake fire. Sailors rush on with pails and the other young men rush off to the upper deck, while Harry heroically does the rescue act and saves Mary all by himself. Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler appear and overwhelm him with thanks for his noble rescue just as Mary revives from a faint. Mary in turn is delighted to find that Harry is a real hero, and from her fond embrace it is evident that the taming of Mary has proved a success.

EVERYTHING FOR YOUR PLAYHOUSE

SAVE 63%

Use the Hommel A. C. Economizer. Cut the cost of current for your M. P. Arc (if you use a rheostat) and get a brighter, steadier light. Exhibitors everywhere enthusiastic about it. Makes 37c. worth of current do what a dollar's worth does now. A sure-fire way to save a clean 63% all year round. Exhibitors say it is the greatest triumph in current saving appliances. As good as nuggets of gold to you in the money it saves. Let Hommel give you facts and figures. Write for FREE bulletin. Liberal allowance for old rheostats.

LUDWIG HOMMEL & CO.
422-1ST AVENUE
PITTSBURGH, PA
WHERE YOU GET REAL SERVICE



GET YOUR REPAIR PARTS FROM HOMMEL'S

MAKE YOUR OWN CURRENT WITH A
Brush Electric Lighting Set
Send for 125 page catalogue with very complete information about electrical matters
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

FOR the best music obtainable for motion pictures find out about the new
SEEBURG-MOTION-PICTURE-PLAYER
Manufactured by
J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.
Republic Bldg., 209 S. State St., CHICAGO

EASTLAND DISASTER POSTERS
ONE AND THREE SHEETS
HENNEGAN & CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

POWERS.

THE DREAD SOCIETY OF THE SACRED SAUSAGE (Episode No. 7 of the "Lady Baffles and Detective Duck" Series—August 19).—The Prince of Chow-Chow arrives at the beach with his retainers and numerous pets for a much needed outing. Lately the Prince has been worried by the society of the "Sacred Sausage," who have sworn to kill him. The Prince, after numerous preliminaries, is finally shown to his room, and, while engaged in eating a delectable bird's nest, finds inside a "Sausage," the sign of the dread society. He rushes out ant down to the manager of the hotel begging for protection, and then he finds a string of sausages about his neck. The famous detective, Duck, sees the Prince's agitation and, putting on a disguise, quickly approaches him. Duck is not recognized and the manager has him thrown out. In the scuffle his disguise comes off and he is recognized. On the plea of the manager Duck agrees to take the case and protect the Prince.

Meanwhile the two members of the "Sausage" gang, Chop and Suey, have made one failure, and resolve next time to make no false move. They enlist the aid of the Mysterious Female Baffles. The Prince has expressed a desire to visit the beach, and the party set out, closely followed by the famous sleuth. Duck is renowned for his quickness in changing disguises, and on the trip he changes in such a hurry that his identity is completely lost. The Prince, while eating chop-suey, sees a swell looking "dame," who is in reality Lady Baffles, and as she flirts with him, he slips away from his crowd and joins her. She takes him to a lonely spot on the beach and awaits the coming of the members of the dread gang. The Prince's party miss him, but Detective Duck picks up his trail. Baffles tires of her charge, and is about to give up in despair when the two members slip up behind the Prince and throw a blanket over his head. They then start jabbing their daggers into the form struggling beneath the blanket.

Duck and his party have arrived at a sand-mound nearby, and he nonchalantly seats himself upon it much to the disgust of his companions. They are urging him to hurry to the aid of the Prince, but he tells them to put aside their fears as he has the case in hand. When the two assassins raise the blanket, instead of the bleeding form of the Prince they find a number of common curs. Tied to one of the canines is a sarcastic note from the famous Detective Duck. Duck suddenly rises from the sand-mound and behold! the form of the Prince arises from beneath him, and, amid the rejoicing of his retainers, he tells them of the wonderful ability of the famous Detective Duck, while the two would-be assassins and the baffled Lady Baffles sneak off in disgust.

STRANGE MAMMALS AT HOME (July 29).—A series of pictures prepared at the studio of Curator Raymond L. Ditmas, of the New York Zoological Park. First comes a scene showing the strange woolly monkey brought by the Roosevelt Expedition from South America. This is followed by scenes showing a South American owl monkey, an animal which moves about in the tree-tops at night, hunting grubs among the orchids; a scene showing a Bornean galago, a lowly type of night monkey; then a flesh-eating tiger cat from Brazil, a raid on the chicken yard by a hungry fox, a mother porcupine leading her family out on a bough, the dormouse, a jumping rat of the Sahara Desert and infant rabbits at home.

A DOUBLE DEAL IN PORK (August 21).—John Packer, who has made his money in pork, wishes to invade society. He meets Mrs. De Knickerbocker, who has a son, Tom. Mrs. De Knickerbocker is aristocratic but poor. Needing money, she conceives the idea of marrying Tom to Nellie, the packer's daughter. Packer is delighted and a day is set for the young people to meet. Tom is romantic, and so is Nellie. They write notes to their respective parents refusing absolutely to be tied up. The pork deal is apparently off, but each youngster has suggested sarcastically that the parents marry. The suggestion is taken up, for Mrs. De Knickerbocker is sadly in need of funds and Packer is determined to get into society.

Meanwhile Tom and Nellie have accidentally arrived at the same beach resort and each registers under a fictitious name. Tom is impressed with Nellie and she likes his looks. The afternoon of his arrival he helps some kiddies on the beach build a tall sand man. They leave it. That night Nellie goes for a walk in the moonlight. Being romantically inclined, Tom follows her at a respectful distance. Black

(Continued on page 1223.)

"THE JUGGERNAUT"

Is the climax of stupendous sensationalism.

"THE ISLAND OF REGENERATION"

Is the acme of artistic perfection.

"THE SINS OF THE MOTHERS"

Is the pinnacle of powerful dramatic effort.

BUT—

"The CHALICE OF COURAGE"

IS THE CLIMAX OF SENSATIONALISM IS THE PERFECTION OF ARTISTRY AND
IS THE PINNACLE
OF DRAMATIC EFFORT.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA
EXECUTIVE OFFICES
EAST 15TH ST. & LOCUST AVE., BROOKLYN, N.Y.
NEW YORK CHICAGO LONDON PARIS

THE CLIMBERS

Photoplay in 5 Acts based upon the famous Comedy Drama by Clyde Fitch

WITH GLADYS HANSON
GEORGE SOULE SPENCER
&
WALTER HITCHCOCK

Released AUGUST 2nd

OTHER LUBIN RELEASES

·THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY·
FROM THE FAMOUS PLAY OF THE SAME NAME, BY CHARLES KLEIN, FEATURING—DOROTHY BERNARD & GEORGE SOULE SPENCER

·THE EAGLE'S NEST·
FEATURING EDWIN ARDEN & ROMAINE FIELDING.
A THRILLING PHOTOPLAY OF WESTERN LIFE...MADE IN THE FAMOUS "GARDEN OF THE GODS" IN THE COLORADO ROCKIES.....6 ACTS

·THE COLLEGE WIDOW·
GEORGE ADE'S FAMOUS COMEDY FEATURING
ETHEL CLAYTON & GEORGE SOULE SPENCER

·THE SPORTING DUCHESS·
FROM THE NOTED PLAY OF THE SAME NAME
FEATURING ROSE COGHLAN & ETHEL CLAYTON

LUBIN

ANNOUNCES

THE DEBUT IN PHOTOPLAY
OF THE FAMOUS COMEDIAN

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK

SUPPORTED
BY
FLORA ZABELLE
HERBERT FORTIER
RAYMOND HACKETT
EDWARD METCALFE
IDA WATERMAN
ARTHUR MATTHEWS
& WILLIAM BOYD

Siegmund Lubin

RELEASED AUGUST 16TH

LUBIN

"IN THE

RINGTAILED RHINOCEROS"

A FANCIFUL COMEDY IN FOUR ACTS

"ALICE IN WONDERLAND" OUT DONE

FOR GROWN UPS
FOR CHILDREN
FOR PESSIMISTS
FOR OPTIMISTS
FOR EVERYBODY
WHO LIKES TO LAUGH

Siegmund Lubin

THROUGH V.L.S.E. OFFICES

SELIG
PRESENTS
The Rosary
A RED SEAL PLAY
IN SEVEN SOUL-STIRRING REELS
FEATURING KATHLYN
WILLIAMS
AFTER THE PLAY
BY EDWARD E. ROSE

"A Bunch of Keys" Unlocks the Chest of Jovian Laughter

The ancients believed that when the great God Jove was pleased with mortals he unlocked a chest and loosed the spirit of laughter on the world.

This myth has a strong basis of fact. The world is full of laughter, although it is too often suppressed. But it is present in every human heart, ready to bubble out spontaneously and irresistibly when some one applies the key.

Charles Hoyt was one of the few men who possessed this key. In fact he had a "bunch" of them. "A Bunch of Keys," Essanay's five-act photoplay, written by Hoyt, unlocks the heart and looses a perfect gale of laughter.

Nothing is so productive of good will and good feeling as a hearty laugh. Give your spectators a chance to laugh by booking this comedy through the V. L. S. E., Inc.

June Keith, William Burress and John Slavin, three inimitable comedians, lead in an all star cast. Produced by Richard Foster Baker.

Trademark Reg.
U. S. Pat. 1907

ESSANAY

"FIRST TO STANDARDIZE PHOTOPLAYS"

1333 ARGYLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

ALL THE ADVERTISING IN THE WORLD WILL NOT MAKE A POOR FEATURE
SUCCESSFUL.
A GOOD FEATURE
WILL SUCCEED
REGARDLESS OF ADVERTISING.
UNIQUE, HIGH-CLASS, EXCEPTIONAL ADVERTISING WILL MAKE
A GOOD FEATURE
MORE THAN SUCCESSFUL
V.L.S.E. ADVERTISING IS UNIQUE
HIGH-CLASS
EXCEPTIONAL.
V.L.S.E. FEATURES ARE EXCEPTIONAL
HIGH-CLASS
UNIQUE.
BOOK THEM.

V.L.S.E. INC.
1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, N.Y.

(Continued from page 1215.)

Joe and Nifty Kid have come to the beach to look for "business." They see the glitter of gems on Nellie's hands and follow her. She goes to the beach where she has seen Tom helping the kiddies. The thugs are attacking her when Tom comes up. He sends The Kid to the sand with a sharp blow and tackles Joe. The girl is freed. Horrified, she sees The Kid recover and draw a gun to shoot Tom. Nellie topples the sand man over on The Kid. Spectators run up and the villains are captured. Nellie and Tom are now acquainted and the romance blooms rapidly. Fearing a mere summer flirtation, each decides to test the other. Nellie announces to Tom that she is not rich, but merely a cloak model taking her vacation as a swell. He then tells her that he is a plumber and poor as can be. Each, being truly in love, thinks of the delightful surprise they will have when the other discovers the truth. Then Mr. and Mrs. John Packer arrive. Recognition, consternation, forgiveness and then delight ensue. The old folks needn't have married after all, but the double deal in pork has been put through nevertheless.

BISON.

THE GOPHER (Two Parts—August 21)—While Dr. Widtsoe has been carrying on his experimental work in mine gases and the possibilities of living under ground, his wife, Vada, has been carrying on a mild flirtation with a friend. Dr. Widtsoe returns one night to find the "friend" dead on his doorstep. Vada, coming from the house and seeing the gun in his hand, believes her husband guilty of the killing, and Widtsoe learns for the first time of his wife's affair and believes the worst of her. Widtsoe departs in haste for the West. Time passes. Widtsoe conceives and executes the plan of living under ground and he is dubbed "The Gopher." Several bold holdups have occurred in the neighborhood and suspicion rests upon Widtsoe. Widtsoe, however, has been peacefully carrying on his work, one part of which is the invention of an instrument which is meant to read the findings of the subconscious mind of its victim. Widtsoe has witnessed the holdups from a distance, and learns that he is being suspected.

Meanwhile the wife has fared badly so far as her health is concerned. Then the doctor tells her she must find a new climate, and with her maid, she makes her way West, determined to live for a time in one of the health colonies. She with others in the auto-stage, is made the victim of a fresh hold-up, and among the property she loses is an odd knife which her husband gave her years before and a duplicate of one which he holds. The robbery is reported. As it happens Widtsoe, from his point in the hills, has witnessed the play and is curious to know who the criminal is. He was shot at while he was witnessing the hold-up by some hidden enemy. Once in the village he meets the sheriff and his deputy in the saloon. The sheriff pushes Widtsoe's money to one side and throws down a bill with the remark, "Let honest money pay for the drink." Widtsoe, with the open knife he has in hand, spears the bill and pays and drinks. The sheriff grabs up the knife and secretly compares it with one he has in his own pocket. Replacing one of the knives, he turns to those gathered, displaying the article as sure proof that Widtsoe is the man they are looking for. Widtsoe escapes. The sheriff visits the office and among some old notices, finds one with Widtsoe's picture, offering a reward for his arrest as one suspected of a murder in the East. The sheriff carries the notice to the wife and also the knife. The wife, Vada, identifies the knife, and then is shown the notice by the sheriff, who is infatuated with her.

Vada holds her peace, and when the sheriff, at the head of the posse, rides away into the hills, Vada mounts her horse and starts out in a wild attempt to find her husband and warn him. Once in the wilderness, the posse has separated, the sheriff riding on alone. Vada, wandering alone, comes upon him, and the sheriff, forgetting for the moment his mission, tries to make advances. Widtsoe interrupts, and with the sheriff his captive, recognizes his wife. Widtsoe takes the two people to his home underground, steeling himself the while against the wife whom he still loves. He puts the sheriff under the control of his new invention as the first subject, and on the desk we see enacted, first the robbery and the unmasking, showing that it was the sheriff, and then the earlier crime of murder in the East. The sheriff and his pal, after the crime, fled west, and after a time gained the confidence of the villagers and was made sheriff and deputy. Vada asks her husband to put her to the test to establish her own innocence. Widtsoe is convinced by her desire and refuses; but he does forgive her. In the end the sheriff and his deputy are apprehended by the proper authorities and Widtsoe and his wife are happily reconciled.

LAEMMLE.

THE LITTLE BLONDE IN BLACK (Two Parts—August 19)—Bob has been out with the boys and wakes up the next morning with a big head and a dry throat. Bill, his prize terrier, comes in to pay his morning respects. Bob is still somewhat "stewed," and puts Bill through his tricks, finally allowing him to sit alongside of him on the bed. That night Bob has a vision of kissing a girl, and in his dreaming, finds that he is kissing Bill. He decides to take a morning ride, but the horse is not equipped with shock absorbers, so he and Bill return home in disgust. Mrs. Norchester and her daughter are stopping at the Beverly Hills Hotel. Mrs. Norchester is the possessor of a very valuable diamond cross. On the night of a big dance she puts aside her fear of losing it and resolves to wear it to the dance at the hotel. At a distant seaport a "little blonde in black" disembarks from the steamer and reads over a message she has telling her that the diamond necklace must be secured. She takes a train for sunny California.

Several days later Bob is again at the club and comes out with a "jag" on him. He goes to his car at the curb, where Bill sits at the wheel, and crawls in. He gets in the other seat and falls asleep, after telling the dog to drive on home. The boys at the club see Bob's condi-

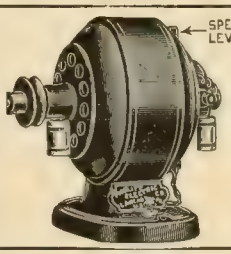
(Continued on page 1226.)

PORTER EQUIPS THEATRES COMPLETE

Solves all projection problems, furnishes and installs the very BEST MOTION PICTURE MACHINES and ACCESSORIES THAT MONEY CAN BUY. Perfect Projection Guaranteed. EVERYTHING OF FIRST QUALITY FOR MOTION PICTURE THEATRES.

B. F. PORTER, 1482 BROADWAY, Bet. 42nd and 43rd Sts., NEW YORK

CHAPLIN COMEDIES
WE HAVE THEM IN BOTH
KEYSTONE'S and ESSANAY'S
Get our list and let us book you up.
Our Keystone Chaplins are All Brand New Prints.
The Real Box Office Winners. Book them.
Send for our List of CLASSY FEATURES.
Commercial Reels, One Print Lusitania and Lithographs for sale.
Get List.
WYANDOTTE FILM SUPPLY CO.
274½ North High Street Columbus, Ohio



HERE IT IS
Motors for moving picture machines.
110-60 Alternating Current, $14.00
110 Volts Direct Current, 12.00
Furnished complete with speed lever giving a speed range of 50%.
Immediate delivery for cash with order.
These motors you can attach yourself.
We manufacture Motor-Generator Sets.
FIDELITY ELECTRIC CO.
LANCASTER, PA.

FRUDE FILM CIRCUIT CLOSER
For motor driven picture machines
SAVES MONEY AND WORRY
MOTION PICTURE FIRE PREVENTION DEVICES COMPANY
1601 Indiana Avenue, Chicago

DUTCH EAST INDIES
Netherlands
DE KINEMATOGRAAF
Leading Organ of the Cinematograph Trade. With Correspondents all over the World.
AMSTERDAM HOLLAND
Annual Subscription ..... fl. Dutch 7.50
Sample Copies ..... fl. Dutch 0.20
Advertisements, each line ..... fl. Dutch 0.20
Belgium
DUTCH WEST INDIES

THE BIOSCOPE
IS THE ENGLISH TRADE JOURNAL
OF THE MOVING PICTURE INDUSTRY
Annual Subscription (post free) 14s. (Dollars, 3.50)
85 SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

EXPERT PRINTING and DEVELOPING
Fireproof throughout. Your negatives are safe here. Lowest prices
Most convenient location in the city. 23d St. cars pass our doors.
Prompt deliveries
NEW YORK FILM LABORATORIES
521-523 West 23d St., N. Y.

Quality means EVANS means Perfection
We do PARTICULAR Work for PARTICULAR People
Developing and Printing ONLY
EVANS FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Telephone 6881 Audubon
416-418-420-422 West 216th Street, New York City

TIMID, GENTLE, PATHETIC

JENNY GAY

THE WORK OF

Miss

Irene Fenwick

IN

George Kleine's

FILM RENDITION OF OWEN DAVIS'

The Woman Next Door

Is the rarest and most beautiful example of character portrayal we have ever seen—

IT IS MISS FENWICK'S MASTERPIECE—THE PLAINLY-CLAD, SLENDER LITTLE FIGURE—APPEALING IN ITS YOUTHFULNESS—THE PERSONIFICATION OF GENTLENESS AND SWEET WOMANLY DIGNITY—A ROLE THAT'S SIMPLY MADE TO ORDER FOR MISS FENWICK.

The little vine-clad cottage and the dainty soul it houses and the rough-and-tumble out-of-doors of Mexico contrast vividly yet blend delightfully into a dramatic romance of tremendous human interest.

AND THE CAST? It includes some of Broadway's best—F. Lawson Butt—Richie Ling—Ben L. Taggart—Della Connor!

"THE WOMAN NEXT DOOR" takes rank as one of the really great film masterpieces. It will be released

September 1st

THROUGH THE

Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service

NEW YORK
226 W. 42nd St.

CHICAGO
166 N. State St.

ATLANTA
71 Walton St.

BOSTON
597 Washington St.

DALLAS
238 Saner Bldg.

DENVER
405 Railroad Bldg.

MINNEAPOLIS
708 First Ave., N.

PITTSBURGH
123 Fourth Ave.

PHILADELPHIA
1309 Vine St.

SEATTLE
204 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.

SAN FRANCISCO
234 Eddy Street

KANSAS CITY
209 Ozark Bldg.

LOS ANGELES
514 W. 8th St.

TORONTO
96 Bay Street

GEORGE KLEINE

11 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK

MR. EXHIBITOR: If you are in need of any SUPPLIES for your SHOW HOUSE and you feel that you are not getting good value for your money from your Supply House, send us a postal informing us of what you are in the market for and you will surely be remunerated for the trouble you have taken.

We can supply you with anything you need at a saving in price that will surprise you. We have a special method of doing business and can prove it to you. We can arrange a safe return of your money if goods are not absolutely perfect, and as we represent them or if dissatisfied with your purchase for reason of your own.

We are 16 years in business and are worthy of your confidence. Try us. We have a large stock of Bio and Electra Carbons.

STERN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 109 N. 10th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

(Continued from page 1223.)

tion and for a joke buy the sign from a rent car and place it on Bob's car. The little blonde in black arrives at her destination, and, looking for a taxicab, sees Bob's car with the sign "For Hire." She wakes him and they drive to Beverly Hills. One of the leading detective offices gets a line from headquarters to be on the lookout for a "little blonde in black," who is thought to be the tool of a notorious band of crooks. The little blonde has made herself at home and finally makes the acquaintance of Mrs. Norchester. She sees the detective and at once realizes that she is watched. After Bob's arrival at the hotel it doesn't take long for the two to get to be friendly, and she writes him that she is in trouble. She tells him she has run away from home to keep from marrying a hated nobleman and is being watched by a man who wishes to take her back to New York. She requests Bob to have his car ready at the tennis court on the night of the dance.

The time arrives. Bob has several dances with the blonde. His car has already been placed at the appointed place and he only awaits her word. Suddenly an alarm is sounded that Mrs. Norchester lost her diamond cross and the detective takes charge, ordering everyone searched. The men and women are separated and searched, but in vain; the cross cannot be located. That night at midnight Bob is impatiently waiting with Bill for the blonde. Bob leaves and goes in search of her. Just as they meet the detective appears and after a fight, Bob gets her in the car and they escape. The girl tells him to leave her at some hotel and that they will be married in the morning. The next morning as Bob is dressing, the butler enters with a paper telling of a diamond thief being aided to escape by a prominent club man. The police arrive and put him under arrest. Bob is taken to the station, and while there, the little blonde comes in and is introduced as a member of the Scotland Yard force. On inquiring about the diamond, she lifts the jacket of the dog and finds the missing jewel, which convinces all of her cleverness. As the pictures fades, she makes good her promise to marry Bob.

DR. MASON'S TEMPTATION (August 22)—Dr. Mason and his young wife live in a small fishing village and are expecting a visit from the stork shortly. It is Mrs. Mason's dearest wish that she be with her mother at this time and her husband has been straining every effort to get located at her home town. He has been corresponding with Dr. Crosby at his wife's home town relative to a partnership with him there, and, although the doctor is anxious to have him as a partner, he is unable to raise the necessary funds to get the couple moved. Abner Stebbins, owner of the village fishing fleet, is the richest man in town and one day Mason decides to call on him as a last resort to try and raise the money. Coming into the office, he sees the old man receiving quite a pile of money, but is informed that it is impossible for him to get a loan. He sees the old man put the money in an antiquated safe, and, as the old man is suffering from some ailment, he makes an examination, giving him a sleeping potion which will keep him asleep all night. He returns home, and his wife notices his pre-occupation, but says nothing.

At 9 o'clock, the time Stebbins was to take the potion, approaches, Mason gets more and more restless, and his wife comments on his actions. A professional call comes in at this time to attend a baby who is very sick. At first, he positively refuses to go, but his wife insists so strongly on it, that he is afraid to disappoint her and reluctantly consents. He finds a serious case and, after a hard fight, lasting all night, dawn finds him successful and the baby is saved. The mother and father are overcome with gratitude, but he wearily returns home. His wife meets him at the gate with a telegram from Dr. Crosby, telling him that he is in receipt of an unexpectedly large fee and that he will send him the necessary funds at an early date. While husband and wife are rejoicing over this good news Abner Stebbins comes on and tells him that he is feeling very much better, and has had his first peaceful night in many a day. At the same time he tenders him a handsome fee and the picture fades on a happy scene.

NESTOR.

TONY, THE WOP (August 16).—Tony, the Wop, has invested all his possessions in a monkey and organ and makes his living going around the city furnishing amusement. One day Eddie and his wife Victoria, are coming along the street and meet the monkey and his master. Victoria immediately falls in love with the monkey and Eddie has a hard time getting her away. The next day Tony happens to stop in front of Eddie's home, and Victoria, seeing the cute little monkey, invites Tony in, and has the monkey perform for her. While she is enjoying his antics lunch time arrives and she invites Tony to remain for lunch. He does so and the monkey succeeds in hiding himself behind the curtains, so when Tony is ready to leave the monk cannot be found. Tony leaves broken-hearted, and, going home, bewails his loss to his wife.

Victoria leaves the house for a visit, leaving the nurse in charge of their baby. The nurse puts the baby in the cradle and, on looking out the window, sees two evil looking faces peering in, and immediately thinks of kidnappers. Snatching the baby up, she runs out in search of a policeman. The two men are in reality countrymen of Tony's wife, whom she has enlisted in an effort to locate the monkey. Victoria returns, and, seeing the suspicious men prowling about, runs out for help. The two leave and report that they are unable to find the monkey. Tony decides to take a last look about the house and enters through one of the windows. The monkey meanwhile has wandered about until tired, and, seeing the cradle, takes refuge in it. Tony finds it there, and, overcome with joy, wraps it in his coat and goes out the front door. Eddie comes up just in time to see him leaving with a bundle in his arms, and, rushing into the house, finds the cradle empty and everyone gone. He immediately thinks the baby is kidnapped and reports the loss to the police, giving a description of Tony. They go to Tony's house and accuse him of the child's abduction, but he vehemently asserts his innocence and shows them the monk, which he had brought home in his coat. Eddie returns home disconsolate, but his spirits quickly rise when the wife, baby and nurse are found safe at home. Victoria has had her fling and resolves "no more monkeys for her."

KIDS AND CORSETS (August 20).—Wifey has such a lovely husband that she is jealous of him. Needing him to do an important errand for her, she calls the office, but finds that

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc. 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

RELEASING
CHAPLIN FEATURES
JOE BLOOM
Pacific Coast Agent FEATURE FILMS
Main Office: 1214 Third Ave., Seattle, Wash.
For States of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, and Utah.

HIGHEST GRADE
Developing and Printing
FILM TITLES
We guarantee all work, give prompt delivery, at lowest prices.
Can furnish Expert Camera Man on short notice.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
R. 1620, 5 S. Wabash Ave. Chicago
Phone Randolph 6692

Uncle Sam at Work
For Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska
The Melting Pot
For Iowa and Nebraska
PEERLESS FILM EXCHANGE
Family Theatre Bldg., Des Moines, Iowa
36 W. Randolph St., Chicago

FOR SALE
3 and 4 Reel Features
Original Lobby
$25.00 and up
Wisconsin-Illinois Feature Release Co.
314 Mallers Bldg., Chicago

There Is No Program So Good That One of Our Features Cannot Improve
Pasquali, Terriss Feature Film and Interstate Feature Film
MASTERPIECES
Picture Playhouse Film Co.
71 W. 23rd St. New York City

ATTENTION EXHIBITORS. We have 396 Opera Chairs 18". At the present time they are in rows of nine, but they can be made in any size row desirable. These chairs have been used for three weeks only. The regular price of these chairs is $1.65 each and we will guarantee these to be absolutely new, with the exception of the usage mentioned above.

We will sell the lot for $385.00 F. O. B. Philadelphia. The chairs have hat racks and a photograph of same can be furnished upon request. A bargain very seldom offered. Will hold these chairs on a deposit of $100.00 and the balance bill of lading attached to sight draft if desired.

STERN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 109 N. 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

COOL & VENTILATE BY TYPHOONS
Send for Catalogue "W"
TYPHOONS COOL YOUR SHOW
Tel. 8134 Bryant.
TYPHOON FAN CO.
1544 Broadway, N.Y.

he is gone. Hubby has started for home, and on the way meets Mrs. Smith, his next door neighbor. Mrs. Smith has quite a variety of bundles and hubby offers to assist her by carrying some of them. Wifey sees him, and gives him a tongue lashing when he gets home. Meanwhile, Mrs. Smith has opened her bundles and finds among them some things she has bought for wifey, and going out the back way, sees hubby next door. She calls to him and hands him the bundle just as Billie sticks her head out the door. She at once jumps to the conclusion that hubby is again flirting with Mrs. Smith. Wifey again "pans" him, and in the midst of the festivities a message comes requesting wifey to come at once, as her mother is ill.

Each family has a little girl and the children are great chums. After wifey leaves, making hubby promise to be good, the children get together and in their play find one of Mrs. Smith's corsets. Baby Smith takes the corset and accompanies hubby's child home to play. The corset is left on the floor. Hubby is trying to shave when Mrs. Smith calls her daughter, and, unable to get the child to leave, hubby tells her to come and get the kid. In the melee Mrs. Smith gets some of the lather on her face and wifey returns at this point, having forgotten her purse. She immediately accuses them of kissing and then notices the forgotten corset. There is quite a row then, and Mrs. Smith leaves under wifey's unjust accusations.

She returns home and tells her husband about the matter. He resolves to take matters in his own hands and leaves with a gun looking for hubby. Hubby has gone to a saloon nearby to drown his troubles. The two men meet and hubby offers to fight a duel. The offer is spurned and hubby's card drops at the feet of a messenger boy standing nearby. This boy has been given a package of flowers to deliver and the card is left on the outside. Mr. Smith starts shooting and the boy is knocked down. Hubby escapes and the boy picks up hubby's card in error and takes the flowers to wifey. She thinks they are a peace offering from hubby and resolves to forgive him when he returns. When hubby returns home, expecting to get a beating, he is much surprised to have wifey meet him with open arms and learns of the flowers. He resolves to say nothing of the deception and there is a happy reconciliation. Mr. Smith has returned home and learned that his child carried the corset next door, and after apologizing to his wife promises to make up with Jack.

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURE.

JUST JIM (Four Parts—Aug. 16).—Jim has just served a term for smuggling. He goes to a club of which he is a member, but all of the members make first one excuse and then another to get away from him. Disgusted, he goes to a Chinese "hop" joint, where he is welcomed. He orders the regulation dose and lies on the bunk talking with a couple of the inmates. An agent of a rich Chinese mandarin approaches him with a chance to make big money smuggling in Chinese. Jim refuses and leaves amid the jeers of the others.

In a different part of the town lives an old woman. Near her is her nephew, who even in the presence of death is trying to force the old lady to reveal the hiding place of a packet belonging to her nameless daughter, whose whereabouts are unknown. The old lady's strength is failing fast and Tom, her nephew, runs for the doctor. Jim is passing the house, and, hearing a call for help, steps in at the open window. The old lady believes he is Tom and tells him where to get the package. While they are talking Tom and the doctor return. Jim hides and slips out, leaving his hat behind. Jim makes his way to the town where the girl was last heard of and enters a saloon. He orders a cigar, and while watching the animated scene about him hears the men jesting with one of the girls, whom they call Rose. He inquires regarding the girl, and the barkeeper tells him the girl's parentage is unknown, but that she "is straight." Tom fails to learn the hiding place of his aunt's documents, and, finding the hat, surmises that some one got them and escaped. He takes the hat to the police. It is finally identified as one given to Jim when he left the prison. Tom and a detective come to the town where the girl is. Jim hears them talking and hides the package in the walls of the abode. They arrest him.

The coach in which the prisoner is under guard is lumbering along the road when a slide occurs and it is thrown into the river. The driver is killed, Tom and the detective maimed, and Jim is the only one uninjured. He is handcuffed, but the detective releases him so he can go for a doctor. He goes back to the town and gets aid for them. He finds that Rose is the girl whom he is seeking, and, taking the package from its hiding place, he gives it to her. She opens it and finds a costly necklace and the papers which show her parentage. In the city the Governor sits alone in his study reviewing his early and unhappy marriage. He sees again his girl wife being taken away from him by her cruel parent. Meanwhile, Jim has left the girl. He takes the package with him. Rose plans to meet him later, when Jim has promised to take her to her father. When Tom recovers he is wild with rage that the prisoner has escaped and a man hunt is started for him. Jim later takes Rose to her father. He sees the reconciliation is complete, and, believing there is no chance for him, silently slips away.

Meanwhile, while wandering about the docks, Jim is "shanghaied" aboard a craft engaged in smuggling Chinese. Against his will he is back again in the old game. The cargo is loaded and the return trip begun. Nearing the shore, they see a revenue cutter lying in wait. The skipper is so confident of success, however, that he resolves to run close by the boat. Jim secrets a boatswain's torch signal, and as they approach the government cutter gives the signal of distress. The enraged skipper tries to kill Jim, but is prevented by the mate. They try to elude the cutter, but a shot puts a hole through the hull of the craft and she begins to sink. Jim is thrown into the water and drawn aboard the cutter, where he tells his story. Jim is rewarded for helping to capture the smugglers. Next day, while he is in the park, a policeman approaches him and tells him to come along. He is taken to the Governor's mansion and left with the Governor. The Governor makes a proposition to him to engage again in smuggling, tells him that he, the Governor, is on the verge of ruin and that Jim alone can save him, but that by using the Governor's name detection will be impossible. Jim looks at him and then, overcome with rage, turns to go. As he goes to open the door he is met by a Jap servant, who hands him a sealed letter. He opens the letter angrily and sees that this was only the last test of the Governor, who wishes to try out his mettle. He is told to return to the library. Still angry at the trick played on him, Jim strides in, but, instead of meeting the Governor, finds Rose waiting for him. And then, at last, Jim comes into his richly deserved reward.

"The Spoilers"

Over and over again

The picture that has played back in houses four and five times.

Read what an Ohio Exhibitor says, which is only one of hundreds we have received:

Ohio's Pioneer Exhibitor
W. C. Quimby, Owning and Operating
QUIMBY AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISES
Largest and Finest Theatres in Ohio and Indiana
NEW QUIMBY THEATRE
"Home of the pipe organ"
Zanesville, Ohio, September 8th, 1914.

F. O. Nielsen,
Schiller Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir: We have finished a most successful engagement of your feature, "The Spoilers," in my theatres and in my estimation this is the very biggest thing that it has ever been my pleasure to handle. The business was phenomenal at higher prices than I have ever before charged; in fact, it was so good that we have placed our signature to contracts for return engagements of the same number of days as the original booking. Wishing you success and thanking you for the courtesy shown me during my business relations, I beg to remain,

Most truly yours,
(Signed) W. C. QUIMBY.

For bookings in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois (except Cook County), wire or write

F. O. NIELSEN
609-611 SCHILLER BLDG.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Mutual Film Corp.

RELIANCE.

THE BIG BROTHER (August 16).—Lillian Watkins, a girl of good family, works among the poor in the tenement district. Her sweetheart, Frank Allen's escapades often bring upon him stern lectures from Lillian, as well as place his job in danger.

Lillian becomes acquainted with Scraps, a boy of twelve, known as the greatest trouble maker in that section. When he does attend school, he terrorizes the teachers and incites rebellion among the other scholars. Scraps knows all the crooks and often renders them small services. Lillian, greatly interested in the boy, hits upon a plan to reform him. She takes Frank with her to see Scraps and tells the boy that Frank is going to be his big brother. It is arranged that the boy shall report once a week at Frank's office and give an account of himself.

In acting as Scraps' big brother, Frank finds that he must give up some of his own bad habits. Frank secures Scraps a position in the office as messenger boy. Scraps goes astray on several occasions, which arouses the wrath of his employers, but Frank saves his job for him. Toward the close of summer an expert accountant goes over the books and finds Frank $500 short. He declares his innocence, but is unable to prove it. Lillian is horrified, but stands by him. Scraps tells them to wait. He returns shortly with a criminal named Joe Egan, and with the aid of Joe, he gets George Steel to confess that he altered Frank's books.

AN INDEPENDENT WOMAN (August 18).—Jane Andrews, a middle-aged woman, takes up her government claim. Jim, her next neighbor, who lives with his invalid mother, proffers aid, but Jane, in her independence, refuses. Later, while she is attending his sick mother, all the money she posesses is stolen by the man whom she hired to help her. Against her will she is obliged to receive financial aid from Jim. It makes her feel beholden to him, and later, when he proposes marriage, her pride rebels on this account. She leaves a note explaining to him that while she loves him, she could not consent to a one-sided contract and is going away to suffer her failure alone, but half-way down the hot, dusty mountain road she meets the parson in his gig.

She thinks of Jim's kindness to his mother and his tenderness with her. Her pride is broken and she returns with the parson. Meantime Jim has found her note and ridden post-haste to the station. The workman who stole Jane's money is joined by one of Jim's ranch hands. The two plot to gain possession of the money Jim has just received from a cattle deal. They arrive at the house just after Jane and the parson, and having overpowered Jane, the mother and the parson, are about to make their getaway, when Jim appears and by a skillful ruse frustrates their design. They are witnesses to his wedding.

(Stories continued on page 1231.)

THE LATEST RECRUIT!

FLORENCE ROCKWELL

ONE OF THE MOST WIDELY KNOWN AND VERSATILE PLAYERS ON THE AMERICAN STAGE. MISS ROCKWELL COMES DIRECT FROM HER SUCCESSFUL ENGAGEMENT AT THE PALACE THEATRE, NEW YORK CITY., IN THE SKETCH, "HER AWAKENING". SHE WILL APPEAR IN AN EARLY RELEASE.

AUGUST 4TH

MARY NASH

IN

"THE TIDES OF TIME"

"WE ARE GIVEN A SERIES OF REMARKABLE THRILLS SHOWING THE SINKING OF A BOAT. ON THE WHOLE, THE GENERAL PROGRAM HAS SELDOM POSSESSED SUCH A NOVEL RELEASE. IT WILL WITHOUT DOUBT CREATE MUCH TALK"
M. P NEWS, ISSUE AUG. 7, PAGE 77

PREVIOUS RELEASES

ALICE BRADY

DAUGHTER OF WM. A. BRADY

IN

"THE CUP OF CHANCE"

"THE PICTURE IS A PAGE OUT OF REAL LIFE AND ALICE BRADY PORTRAYS AND DEVELOPS THE THEME WITH ALL THE NERVE AND EMOTION THAT HER PART CALLS FOR" DRAMATIC MIRROR, ISSUE JULY 25.

Sir. J. FORBES ROBERTSON

IN

"HAMLET"

RALPH STUART

IN

"THE KICK-OUT"

"YOU CAN'T BEAT IT"

STAR THREE

EVERY OTHER

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

Knickerbocker NEW

AUGUST 18TH

LENORE ULRICH

IN

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

A TENSE AND THRILLING DRAMA BY THE REV. C. J. HARRIS — PRODUCED BY JOSEPH LEVERING

MISS ULRICH CREATED THE ROLE OF "LUANA" IN "THE BIRD OF PARADISE" IN WHICH SHE PLAYED FOR THREE SEASONS FROM COAST TO COAST. SHE IS THE YOUNG LADY WHO WAS PRONOUNCED AN ABSOLUTELY PERFECT MODEL OF WOMANHOOD RECENTLY BY LEONARDO BORATELLIN, THE MILWAUKEE SCULPTOR. ——

REELERS

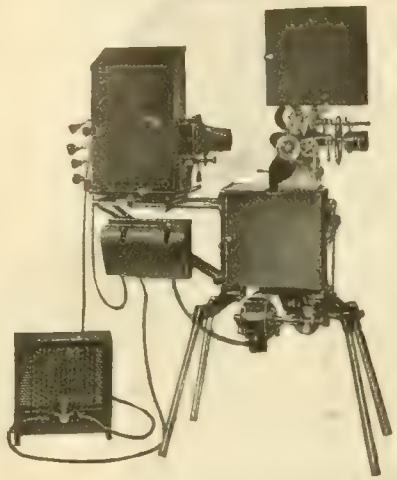
WEDNESDAY ON REGULAR PROGRAM

SPECIAL ARTISTIC ONES, THREES AND SIXES

Star Features

YORK

MAKE A NEW MACHINE PAY ITS WAY
BY INSTALLING IT ON THE EASY PAYMENT PLAN



WOULD YOU be interested in a proposition whereby you could get a new machine on payments of less than $1.00 per day and GUARANTEED against repair expense for one year?

WE CAN submit to you such a proposition and will be pleased to give you full particulars upon request.
We handle everything for the Picture Theatre, except the films and posters. Write for Complete Catalog today.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
6th Floor, Cambridge Bldg., Northwest Cor. 5th and Randolph
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Distributors of the Power's, Motiograph, Edison and Simplex Machines and Genuine Parts

First Class Features
Being booked in
IOWA, INDIANA, ILLINOIS, WISCONSIN, MICHIGAN and MISSOURI
Apply
Central Film Company
110 South State St. CHICAGO

EASTLAND DISASTER
15 slides from original negatives, description on each slide; also description lecture and 4 posters, $5.00.
MOORE, HUBBELL & CO. 713 Masonic Temple, Chicago

A-1 House Manager at Liberty
18 Years' Experience
SALARY OR COMMISSION OR BOTH
Pictures Vaudeville—Stock Press Work. Now managing two of Buffalo's leading Vaudeville and Picture Houses. Any territory. A-1 References and Bonds.
Address G. B., MOVING PICTURE WORLD, N. Y. CITY

If your Panoramic and Tilting Tripod are not as good as this one—YOU ARE WORKING AT A DISADVANTAGE. If your Tripod and head are not like this—It is not as good. SHALL WE PROVE IT?

UNIVERSAL TILTING AND PANORAMIC TRIPOD
Wide spread top legs give truss strength and rigidity. Segmental slide prevents twitching.
Panoramic table quickly changed to any position. Position locking devices. Snap handles cannot fall off. Deep cut worms and gears insure long wear.
THE UNIVERSAL CAMERA CO., 25 E. Washington St., Chicago, U. S. A.
Demonstrational Catalogue on request
Represented by ATLAS EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.
821 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

Order Now
The Complete List of Educational Film Releases
FOR 1914
Compiled by Dr. Stockton, of the staff of the Moving Picture World, as published in our issues of February 6th and 13th. Published in pamphlet form together with an article on the method of cataloging.
Bound in paper covers and selling at 20c each, they will form a ready and handy reference list.
Only a limited number have been printed.
Orders and remittances should be addressed
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Avenue, New York
Two cent postage stamps most convenient form of remittance

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE DAWN OF FREEDOM (Victory—Three Parts—Aug. 14).—In their native mountain homes, the Swiss peasants decide to revolt from the galling yoke of their French conquerors. Joanna, daughter of a mountain inn-keeper, leader of the revolutionists, is pledged to become the wife of Peter, a young Swiss patriot. She grieves sorely that she must bide at home whilst Peter fares forth to risk his life. Waiting becomes insupportable, so, taking up an old gun, she goes out to the mountain pass where her kinsmen engage the French.

On a small bypath she finds Peter, his gun raised to despatch a fallen enemy. Joanna intercedes for the man, and with Peter's help carries him to her father's house, where he is paroled on his solemn promise not to escape. Joanna feels irresistably drawn to her father's captive. Together, they enjoy many secret meetings. And then, one night, the prisoner overhears his captors' plans against his country, and dishonoring his vow, makes his escape.

Joanna's former suitor, Peter, finds traces of Joanna's intimacy with the escaped prisoner, and, mad with jealousy, hastens to her father with his knowledge; but her father gives no credit to the tale. Comes a night when, unable longer to bear separation from his love, the escaped prisoner comes back and clandestinely meets her.

Peter discovers them, and hastens to Joanna's father with his story. Together they come upon the lovers. They are seated on a rustic bench on a bluff overlooking a deep ravine. Joanna turns to meet her father's denouncement, and sees in her apprehension the end of a love life will be meaningless without. Turning, she leaps over the cliff. Her lover follows; and who can say but that the death of their bodies is, for their souls, "The Dawn of Freedom!"

THE ROMANCE OF ELAINE (No. 34—"The Flash"—Two parts—Aug. 16).—Prof. Arnold, disguised as a fisherman, receives a note from Lieut. Woodward, informing him that J. Smith, a clerk in the War Department, has disappeared with a copy of the Sandy Hook defense plans. Arnold is asked to keep an eye out for him. The only mark of identity is that Smith walks with a slight limp. Prof. Arnold disguises as a chauffeur, and meets the incoming train that night, spots a woman who walks with a slight limp, and secures her as his fare. She gives Del Mar's house as her destination. Arnold sees Del Mar get the stolen plans. He sees Elaine and Jameson driving along in Elaine's car. Stepping out in front of their car, he is knocked down and has to be carried into Del Mar's house, where he manages to secure the plans. He stuffs them into Elaine's purse, which she takes with her, and which, when found are given to Jameson for safe keeping. Del Mar, in examining the injured chauffeur, discovers he is disguised. A great fight follows, resulting in Arnold's escape. Del Mar, however, crawls onto the rear of Arnold's car, and, while running full speed, attacks him. He is repulsed, but fires, severely wounding Prof. Arnold. That night, Jameson arranges a flashlight to get the picture of whoever might tamper with his desk. Del Mar comes, masked, and goes to Jameson's desk to get the coveted plans. Then comes the blinding flash, and with it Del Mar's hands up before his eyes. Jameson, hearing the explosion, chases Del Mar, but the latter gets away. When the picture is developed, however, a peculiar ring is shown on the hand covering the thief's face. Elaine recognizes it as belonging to Del Mar. The next episode is called "The Disappearing Helmets."

PATHE NEWS NO. 61 (July 31).—Beverly, Mass.—Forgetting business cares for the day, members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce mobilize here in a mock army for their annual outing.

Stamford, Conn.—The Tiddle-de-wink, a freak racing boat, which, although only 19 feet long, has a beam of 12 feet, and carries a 250-horse power engine, makes the remarkable speed of 60 miles an hour on her first trial. Mr. Chesebrough, owner of the boat, and her designer, A. E. Luders.

Long Branch, N. J.—Saddle horses, entered in the twenty-second annual show of the Monmouth County Horse Show Association, are paraded around the ring for judging. These are some of the crack entries in the pony class. Master Luther Tucker, a winner in the pony class.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Alas! A ban has fallen on the abbreviated bathing suits that used to ornament the beach here. Now the skirts must reach within 3 inches of the knee. See the short skirt squad at work. The job is done thoroughly. Notice the tape measure.

Quincy, Mass.—A submarine for the British government is launched at the Fore River Ship Yards.

With the French Moorish Zouaves.—On account of the impossibility of constructing trenches on the sea beach, the Zouaves have made their defenses of sand bags. The trench periscope is just as useful behind sand bag ramparts as in the ordinary trenches. Although only a mile from the enemy and with the danger constantly at hand, the natural gayety of the Moorish troops must find its outlet. Led by their chief, the African soldiers frequently call upon Allah to bless the allied armies.

Paris, France.—This great German shell fell in the French trenches near Verdun. It failed to explode, so it has been taken to the Invalides in this city to be placed on exhibition.

London, England.—Queen Alexandra presents to the Royal Flying Corps four aeroplanes which were subscribed for by members of the Overseas Club.

London, England.—Lord Kitchener visits the Guildhall where the Lord Mayor has organized a monster meeting to further recruiting, and in a memorable address urges all young unmarried men to join the army. Following his address Lord Kitchener, with the Lord Mayor, inspects the crack regiments which line the streets near the Guildhall.

Berlin, Germany.—James W. Gerard, U. S. Ambassador to Germany, who is handling the difficult situation now existing between this country and U. S. is shown here at his desk in the American Embassy. The Ambassador receives a representative of the German foreign office.

An Animated Cartoon by W. G. Morris, "The Pilot of Peace."

AN INTIMATE STUDY OF BIRDS (Globe—August 2).—On same reel with "Col. Heza Liar Fools the Enemy." Synopsis published in Moving Picture World July 31, page 904. Here are shown pictures of featherless fledglings, clamoring for food with mouths gaping comically. The mother tomtit, realizing the demand is kept busy digging up the supply, but manages to feed them till they're feathery enough to fly.

THE KANGAROO (Globe—August 2, on same reel).—Did you know that the Australian eagle is the worst enemy of the kangaroo? This educational shows an attack by a huge bird on a poor defenseless animal. Other phases of the life of this peculiar animal are portrayed—how the young are held in the pouch, the manner of eating, and their daily existence.

IN PEKALONGAN (Picturesque Java—Globe—August 2, on same reel). Scenes in this part of the world are interesting to our occidental eyes. The quaintness of the towns and the peculiar customs of the people are good subjects for an entertaining film. In beautiful Java the contrast between the homes of the European residents and those of the natives are most marked and gives us an idea of the primitiveness of the island of years ago. The town of Pekalongan is especially interesting for its quaint buildings and street scenes, and the peculiar native customs are vividly portrayed.

BOLD, BAD BOYS (Starlight—August 7).—Heinie and Louie are giving vent to their famous thought that the world owes them a living when Mabel bursts into view, and Heinie "lands" her. She suggests to him it might be a good plan for them to insure Louie against accident and then "beat up" the poor fellow. That appeals to Heinie, and the victim is tested as to his qualifications for the policy.

He finally gets "the papers" and is reclining in bed, thinking sweet nothings, when Louie lands on his leg with a sledge hammer. Even the toughest limb would respond to this sort of treatment, and Louie gets three or four kinds of a compound fracture.

Now to get the money! They go to the office of an insurance company and after a brief examination are handed the kale. A clerk, however, learns that the company has been buncoed by "two Dutch touts," and Heinie and Louie are the center of the police department's attention, but manage to escape from guardians of the law. Then they conclude that it's better to keep away from the swindling game, saying, "As swindler guys ve sures are nix; ve nefer tries no more such tricks."

Miscellaneous Feature Films

METRO PICTURE CORP.

GREATER LOVE HATH NO MAN (Popular Plays and Players—July 5).—Doctor Morton is killed by his son Harold, who persuades Varge, the adopted son, to assume the blame. For his foster mother's sake, whose grief would be twofold, Varge consents, and is convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment.

During his imprisonment an attempt is made by a number of convicts to kill the guard and make their escape, and Varge, with his superhuman strength, aids the guard until help arrives, for which he is made the warden's gardener. At a fire in the warden's house, Varge saves the life of Janet, the warden's daughter, when he first realizes that he loves her. Afraid of his love, he makes his escape, and reaching a coast town, joins a crew bound for the fishing banks.

The schooner on which Varge is working is wrecked and Varge is brought to shore, where he meets Janet, who was visiting friends there. Although warned by Janet, Varge is caught by the warden and put in the town lock-up. Breaking jail, Varge again makes his escape and after some time makes his way back to the warden's house to catch a glimpse of Janet, who persuades him to take her with him. To save her from himself, Varge goes back to the prison and gives himself up.

Mrs. Merton, on her deathbed, asks to see Varge, and after her death Harold confesses and kills himself, thus freeing Varge, who marries Janet.

MARSE COVINGTON (Rolfe—July 12).—The story begins with the boyhood of Covington up to the age of thirty when he entered the war. The faithful companion of his youth is a negro boy, Dan, follows him through all his trials.

After the war, Covington becomes a race-track gambler and falling into the hands of swindlers, mortgages and loses his entire inheritance. Eventually he finds his way to New York, accompanied by his granddaughter, Miss Carol, and by Dan. His experiences in New York are painful to this southern gentleman of leisure, without any business knowledge or trade. Financial distress forces Dan to leave him and Dan finds a position in a gambling house. Covington and his granddaughter are reduced to poverty. She obtains an eight dollar a week position. Assistance comes to them through a young lawyer named Arthur Lewis, but Colonel Covington's pride is so great, he refuses his assistance, especially from a Yankee, even when Miss Carol loses her position and they are reduced to dire poverty. To appease the actual pains of hunger they are obliged to stand among the many in the bread line.

However, events transpire whereby Colonel Covington is placed again in possession of his old southern home and property, out of which he was swindled during his gambling days. Upon recovering his estate, Covington and Miss Carol return to their southern home and young Lewis becomes engaged to Miss Carol and the story ends happily.

THE RIGHT OF WAY (Rolfe—July 19).—Charles Steele, known to his friends as Beauty Steele, is much disliked because of his foppish, disdainful manner. However, his prowess as a criminal lawyer commands respect. He secures the acquittal of one Joseph Portugaise, who is charged with murder. Kathleen Wantage, overcome by emotion, comes to him and he ignores her. Steele knows he does not love her and that Kathleen does not love him, yet he presents his offer and is accepted. Five years pass and Steele is an habitual drunkard. He becomes estranged from Kathleen, when Kathleen's brother, by association, takes to drink. Later in a fight in a nearby saloon, Steele is knocked unconscious and is cast into the river. Joe Portugaise discovers Steele's body floating in the river, drags it to shore, takes it to his hut and there nurses him back to health. Steele completely loses his memory and becomes a working partner of Portugaise.

STUDIO WANTED

New York or vicinity. Exclusive use of large single Feature Company. Give full particulars.

Thomas Dixon

Telephone Gramercy 259 122 E. 23d Street

THERE NEVER WAS

AN AMUSEMENT PAPER

That covered its field more thoroughly than

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD

EXHIBITORS GUIDE AND FRIEND

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

An operation restores Steele's memory and after reviewing the events decides to abandon the name of Steele. He accepts employment at a local tailor shop and falls in love with Rosalie, but the townspeople do not trust him because he does not attend church.

Several days later a gang of thieves endeavors to rob the church fund and in saving it, Steele is mortally wounded. As he is dying he sees a vision of Rosalie, as the angel of happiness, and he dies with the thoughts in his mind of what might have been.

THE SECOND IN COMMAND (Quality Pictures Corp—July 26).—Miles Anstruther, a wealthy officer in the British Army, a bachelor, and popular, is made Lieutenant Colonel of the Tenth Dragoon Guards, and is first in command of one of the finest regiments in the service, while his friend, Major Chris. Bingham, who had expected the promotion himself, still remains second in command. Bingham's only consolation is his love for Muriel Mannering, orphan protege of Lady Harburgh's, a blustering old noblewoman whose estate is near the regimental quarters. Coerced by Lady Harburgh, the humiliated young girl accepts Bingham, although she tells him that she does not love him but will try to learn. In a gallery in London Muriel has seen a picture which has captivated her fancy and of which she often dreams. The picture was entitled "Portrait of an Officer."

Miles Anstruther arrives to take command of the regiment, and Muriel finds him even more fascinating than the face on the canvas that had attracted her. Anstruther has not yet been told of her engagement to his friend. At the Officers' Ball, sometime later, Anstruther proposes to Muriel. Muriel tells him of her engagement to Bingham. Anstruther leaves her without a word. Bingham going into the conservatory to Muriel finds her sad and silent. She tells him that the engagement is impossible —she cannot marry without love. Word comes that his regiment has been detailed for service in South Africa. Muriel tells Anstruther that she is now free to listen to his love and the happy young officer makes good use of this permission. Bingham sees them as they seal their betrothal with a kiss and his friendship for Anstruther is momentarily swallowed up by a jealous hatred.

Muriel's brother, Walter, has been gambling, and has begged her to marry Anstruther for his money. He tells this to Bingham, who tells the same to Anstruther, just before Anstruther leaves, and thinking that Muriel really loves Bingham, Anstruther writes her a letter, freeing her, without further explanation. Muriel is broken-hearted, though proud, and when Bingham, who stays behind a few weeks after Anstruther is gone, again proposes, she tells him that, unworthy as Anstruther is, she cannot love another. Bingham leaves, sending her a letter explaining the plot that separated her from Anstruther, but which she does not read. Bingham arrives at the front in time to save Anstruther and his regiment from annihilation and in turn Anstruther on the field of battle saves Bingham's life at the risk of his own, and the penitent and changed Bingham confesses the wrong he has done his friend. At first Anstruther is hurt and angry at the injury done by one he has trusted, but seeing the grief of the weak and wounded man, he nobly forgives him and later when Anstruther is told he will receive the Victoria Cross for his heroic action in saving Bingham under fire, he begs that the cross be given Bingham instead for his aid to Anstruther's regiment, and succeeds in having the decoration bestowed upon Bingham. Muriel is made twice happy at their meeting, for she learns that not only is her lover alive, but that he has always loved her and been loyal.

SEALED VALLEY (Metro Producing Co—August 2).—Nahnya Crossfox with her family and relatives lives in a hidden valley in the north country. In this hidden valley there is untold virgin gold. The Indians have little use for gold, but Nahnya, educated at a convent, is well advanced.

She starts for a nearby settlement to procure the services of a doctor and meets young Ralph Cowdray. The doctor, demanding payment in advance, is surprised when Nahnya displays a large bag of gold. He accompanies her. They journey to where Nahnya's brother is waiting and during a seven days trip through the rapids, the doctor and the Indian girl are drawn closely together.

The doctor accidentally stumbles across the entrance to a sealed valley. Nahnya discovers Doctor Cowdray in her secret cavern. He proposes to her but she rejects him, fearing the usual unhappy union of whites and red. Doctor Cowdray later returns to Sealed Valley, followed by two scoundrels, named Stack and Mixer.

While going through the rapids, Cowdray loses his outfit, and suffers painful injury. He is at the point of death, when Kitty Sholto, the pretty blond daughter of a gold miner, rescues him. It is the first white man she has seen other than her father and believes him a mate sent to her by Providence. Later, Kitty is rescued from the rapids by Nahnya.

Mixer and Stack capture Cowdray and torture him into disclosing the whereabouts of Nahnya's treasure. Nahnya and her people defend the treasure by rolling stones and boulders down upon Mixer's den. Nahnya sacrifices her love for Cowdray, who marries Kitty, while Nahnya, the resolute, determines to stand alone.

THE VAMPIRE (Popular Plays and Players—August 9).—Jeanne is accidentally injured while touring in an automobile. In her convalescence she meets a married man who realizes he can only win her by offering marriage. An illegal marriage ceremony is performed and later the man abandons Jeanne.

Seeking refuge in Europe, Jeanne meets on the steamer two men oucasts. Jeanne becomes notorious as a scheming and heartless woman, called the "Vampire." She enmeshes a young attache of the American legation and after securing valuable documents from him, she finds she is in love with him. One of her co-conspirators, whom she met on the steamer, comes into possession of these secret papers, and when trying to get the papers back to return them to the attache, Jeanne discovers that the young attache is the son of the man responsible for her ruin. Her old hate is awakened again.

Events bring all back to New York. Complications involve Jeanne with both the father and son and the young man's fiancee. The young man breaks his engagement, declares his love for Jeanne and his father is forced to give his consent to their marriage. A dramatic scene is introduced when the father discovers that Jeanne is none other than the woman he married illegally and deserted. The father accuses Jeanne of being an adventuress. She wrings from him a confession before his son that he had deceived her. The son decides to marry Jeanne, but he is prevented by the woman herself, who is threatened with exposure of the part she played in securing the state documents. Jeane brings about a reconciliation between the young attache and his fiancee, realizing that a happy marriage could never have resulted if she had married him herself while he had full knowledge of the history of her past.

WORLD FILM CORP.

THE STOLEN VOICE (Brady—Five Parts—Aug. 9).—Gerald Dorville, a singer, receives a salary of $5,000 a week. He meets Belle Borden, who has an attentive admirer, a physician named Dr. Van Gahl. When she sees Dorville on the stage, she no longer cares for the doctor. This makes Van Gahl jealous and he hates Dorville. Dorville has an admirer in Marguerite Lawson, a shop girl, who watches for him at the stage door, after one of his matinee performances, as he is leaving to have dinner with Belle Borden, and presents him with a daisy. He puts it in his buttonhole. When he meets Belle she takes the daisy from his coat and throws it to the street. He finds it when he again descends to the street, puts it in his wallet and says that it must bring him luck. On his arrival at the theatre that night an old actor friend named Leslie, degraded through drink, asks Dorville for money, but as Dorville has no small change handy, he tells Leslie to wait. Dorville has "gone on" to sing, and while his valet is preparing coffee for Leslie, Leslie goes to Dorville's wallet and extracts a bill. In his hurry to replace the wallet, he drops the daisy on the floor. Dorville coming back sees the daisy, suspects Leslie and counts his money. He lets Leslie have the stolen money and tells him to get out. Leslie, repentant, swears that he will turn over a new leaf.

Because of his jealousy, Dr. Van Gahl decides to use his hypnotic powers to make Dorville believe he has lost his voice. Dorville comes on the stage to sing and loses his voice in the middle of the song. He consults Van Gahl, who tells him that he should go abroad for his health. His friends come to say good-bye to him, and among them is Marguerite. Belle Borden does not even say good-bye to him, but he sees her on the steamer saying good-bye to other people. When he attempts to greet her she snubs him. After two years abroad, Dorville returns to America. All his funds are gone and he has not regained his voice. He is unable to speak, and can only communicate by means of pad and pencil. He goes to a cheap rooming house. He tries to find work, but nobody wants a man who cannot speak. Finally he goes to a motion picture studio, where he meets Leslie, who has reformed and is now a prosperous motion picture director. He at once engages Dorville because of his gratitude for what Dorville did for him in the past. Dorville meets Marguerite at the studio, where she is now a motion picture actress.

Dorville makes a hit in the silent drama as does Marguerite. He falls in love with her, and is the means of saving her life as she almost goes over a cataract in a canoe while taking a scene. One day Dorville is shown on the screen in a picture called "Sevengalleys, the Hypnotist," a burlesque on "Trilby." Belle

Send in your Subscription
TO-DAY
THE BIGGEST VALUE and the GREATEST HELP to EXHIBITORS EVERYWHERE
Less than the price of a single admission weekly. The only paper you really need is the
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Avenue, New York

SIMPSON SOLAR SCREEN
The Original Daylight Screen
SEAMLESS SEAMLESS
THE PERFECT PROJECTION SURFACE
Write us for particulars.
ALFRED L. SIMPSON
113 West 132nd Street, N. Y. City
Patented June, 1908

Motion Picture Machines
FROM
The Largest Supply House in the East
We are Distributors for
Minusa Gold Fibre Screens
The Acme of Screen Perfection.
Power, Simplex and Baird machines and all supplies
Catalogs for the asking
LEWIS M. SWAAB
1327 Vine Street, PHILADELPHIA

Borden is passing the theater with Van Gahl, and she insists on him going in to see it. The picture has such an effect on Van Gahl that he has a stroke and dies, and thus his power over Dorville is released. Dorville happens to be at a ball game at the time, and during an exciting moment, he finds he can talk. He leaves the game and brings the glad news to Marguerite, who is overjoyed. Now being able to speak, he asks Marguerite to marry him.

PARAMOUNT.

THE PUPPET CROWN (Lasky-Five Parts – July 29). "The Puppet Crown" is the crown of Oasia—and all the events of the drama transpire there except some of the opening scenes in America, where the Princess Alexia is attending school. It must be understood that the old King of Oasia is an invalid, and that his chancellor has been deliberately undermining his authority with the purpose of crowning the Duchess Sylvia, a member of the royal family. The king has sent his daughter to America incognito in order that she may learn something of freedom, and in this country she has fallen in love with rich Bob Carewe.

When Alexia is summoned home by her father, Bob for the first time learns that she is a princess and that his love is therefore hopeless. Nevertheless, when he hears that uprisings are threatened, he goes to Oasia to help if he can. Before he can obtain from home the money necessary to reinstate the authority of the rightful king and the princess, the uprising is brought to a head by the duchess. Brave though he is, Bob cannot defeat the enemies of the king, who dies in the turmoil, but he does succeeding in preventing the imprisonment of the Princess and in carrying her off to be his bride.

RAGS (Famous Players—Five Parts –Aug. 2). —"Rags" is the daughter of a drunkard, who abuses and mistreats her, but whom she loves with all the ardor of her strong young soul. Her mother was loved by a wealthy man, to whom, however, she preferred the worthless man she married, dying after the birth of her daughter. How "Rags" becomes so enmeshed in the web of fate that she meets the nephew of the man whom her mother rejected, and falls in love with him, though realizing that his social position is too far above hers to ever permit a marriage between them, and how eventually her mother's lover learns of her unhappiness and takes her to his palatial home to live with him, where his nephew again meets her, and in the new surroundings renews his love, are related in the photoplay.

FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

JUST OUT OF COLLEGE (Aug.).—Edward Worthington Swinger, by his own nerve and his Aunt Julia's money, has managed to get through his college course. As a final finishing step he has fallen in love with Caroline Pickering, the only daughter of Septimus Pickering, the pickle king.

With his tennis racquet and his college clothes as his sole possessions he seeks the pickle king in the factory. Mrs. Pickering, the high-brow of the family, has met the celebrated lecturer Professor Bliss, who makes a specialty of the Persian poet "Mahala," whose precept is "Be Calm," "All Is Peace." This man Mrs. Pickering brings to the office at the same time that Edward arrives to make his plea. Pickering looks them both over and decides that the college boy is the lesser of the two evils. He drives Bliss out and asks Ed what his prospects are. Ed says he thinks Pickering should start him in business and asks for a loan of $100,000. When Pickering recovers he asks Ed what brand of nerve food he uses, but finishes by letting him have $20,000 to invest with the promise that if he doubles it in a few months he can have Caroline as a wife.

When Pickering goes out, Mrs. Jones, a former boarding housekeeper of Ed's, comes in the office to try to get Pickering to make up her special brand of pickles. Ed meets her and sees a way to use the money he has just received by going into the pickle business as a rival pickle king. He starts, with Jonesey, the Bingo Pickle Company. At the Pure Food Exposition they have parades and costumed saleslades to sell their brand.

Ed, who is a silent partner, points out to Pickering the success of the Bingo booth in contrast to the deserted Pickering booth and suggests that Pickering buy out the Bingo company. This makes a hit with Pickering, who thinks to down a dangerous rival and he asks Ed to get a price from Jonesey. Ed makes the price and demands $50,000. Pickering won't pay it. Finally Jonesey suggests to Ed that they start a bargain sale of stock over the counter and offer it to the people at large. They draw their remaining money out of the bank and when the sale begins they have their own people buy the stock. This starts the others and soon everybody is buying Bingo shares. Pickering gets scared and agrees to pay the $50,000, but Jonesey, at Ed's hint, raises the price to $100,000, which Pickering finally pays. Ed now demands Caroline and Pickering, realizing that he has been stung, says he thinks he had better have Ed in the family and gives his consent.

Free! for 30 days and — — to EXHIBITORS ONLY

A Beautiful Felt Pennant 11½x30" size

THIS offer is limited to 30 days only from the date of this issue of the Moving Picture World and to exhibitors only. No strings to this offer. Simply fill out the coupon below and mail it in. No pennants will be sent unless you USE THE COUPON. No attention paid to letters with requests for pennants unless you enclose the coupon below properly filled out. The pennants are handsome, made of fine felt and have the Universal imprint in design on them in two colors. See the cut. Send no money. These pennants are given to you FREE—but, you must fill out and send in the coupon. That's all there's to it.

Write for One Given Free to Exhibitors

Write for One Given Free to Exhibitors

Coupon Good for One Felt Pennant

Supply Dept., Universal Film Mfg. Co
1600 Broadway, New York City
Gentlemen:
I would like to have one of the Free Universal pennants you advertised in Moving Picture World.

Theatre .....

City..... State.....

SUPPLY DEPT.
Universal Film Manufacturing Co.
CARL LAEMMLE, President
"The Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"
1600 Broadway New York

NORTH AMERICAN FILM CORP.

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY ("For Love and Money" No. 14—Two Parts August 2). Out from the rickety old mansion, long gone to slattern shabbiness as a lodging house, came Detective Tom Blake in disguise. He led the dazed and bewildered Esther by the wrist, and after her came Quabba.

Meanwhile, Blair had escaped and driven to Mrs. Randolph's. As Esther and Quabba drove up in the taxi, Blair was the first person to greet them. Drawing Quabba aside, the girl bade him leave at once for Los Angeles. Then she added in a whisper: "I will follow you."

In Los Angeles she and the faithful Italian met. Quabba was dispatched to the offices of the Good Hope Oil Company—only to learn that Arthur Stanley had gone for off to acquire some mines. This same information was vouchsafed to Blair, when he called at the Good Hope offices later in the afternoon. He had been sent thither by Vivian Marston, whom he had joined that day.

Blair desired to possess Vivian. Let him get the diamond for her and she was his. "And we two," said the adventuress, "must, first of everything, get the upper hand with this fabulously wealthy cousin of yours, masquerading under the name of 'John Powell.' Now you go and find him. I shall inject myself into his affairs in some other way, and we will work together."

That same hour, Blair departed for the mines. The organ-grinder lost no time in 'phoning to Esther, who took the first train to the mountains. She was determined to reach Arthur before Blair did. And Quabba followed her by a later express. Esther found herself one of two travellers. The other was Marmaduke Smythe.

Meanwhile, Blair's roadster had met with an accident. Stopping for repairs at a blacksmith shop, he had encountered Luke Lovell and learned that Arthur had left Veronica and gone to another range. Just then the stage coach halted at the door. Blair distinctly saw Esther within. A few minutes later the stage continued on its way. The linshpin, which the gypsy had removed to mend had been cleverly replaced in the same treacherous condition. The broken pin did its word. Esther and the English lawyer were hurled down the precipice.

Many miles below, at the coast town where he had missed the stage, Quabba sat, hauling in a fishing-line. At the end of the line tugged a great, quivering fish. And in its gills was an antique chain, suporting The Diamond from the Sky.

V.-L.-S.-E. INC.

THE CHALICE OF COURAGE (Vitagraph—Six Parts Aug. 9). Louise Newbold, fearing a former suitor, James Armstrong, begs her husband to take her with him on a prospecting trip to the mountains. While on a mountain trail, Louise's horse makes a misstep and horse and rider plunge over a high cliff. Louise is killed. Newbold's pack mule wanders into camp and Kirkby, a former friend of Louise's, suspecting something wrong, organizes a searching party. They find the place in the trail where the horse slipped and a search reveals Newbold lying across the newly made grave of his wife. Kirkby, on his way down the side of the cliff, finds letters written by Armstrong to Louise after she was married, and on returning with Newbold to camp advises Armstrong to clear out. He suspects and leaves. Newbold slowly recovers and one night evading his guard, escapes, carrying with him a locket found on his wife's body containing Armstrong's picture.

Five years later, Robert Maitland, a wealthy miner, is called East on a business trip and while there visits his brother Stephen, who has one motherless daughter, Enid. Taking a decided liking to his niece, he prevails upon her father to let Enid accompany him West on a visit. James Armstrong meets Miss Maitland at her uncle's house and falls in love with her. A camping trip to the mountains is proposed and the entire party start out under the guidance of Kirkby. He determines to do what he can to break up the growing intimacy between Enid and Armstrong, and one evening, after Armstrong has left, called East on a business trip, he relates the story of the death of Louise Newbold. Later, he gives Enid the letters he found, but does not mention Armstrong's connection with the affair. Enid Maitland goes on long fishing trips and one day announces her intention of going down the canyon for trout. After leaving camp, she changes her mind and goes up the canyon. Coming to an inviting pool, she takes a plunge in its clear water. A bear attracted by the proximity of a human being, investigates and squats on her clothes. Enid screams.

William Newbold, a recluse of the mountain, hears the scream, shoots the bear and retires unobserved. Hastily dressing, Enid starts for the camp only to find that she is lost. A violent rain storm breaks over the mountain and Enid, hanging on to a sapling near the side of a stream, is blown in, spraining her ankle as she falls. Her screams again attract Newbold and he is compelled to carry Enid to his cabin. The rain turns to snow in the higher altitude of Newbold's home. When the storm subsides, Newbold makes his way to Enid's camp to find it deserted, but leaves a note in a bottle, telling where Enid may be found. The day of the storm, when Enid did not return to camp, Robert Maitland and Kirkby, searching down the canyon can find no trace of her and, believing she has perished, give her up as lost and wire her father. Armstrong, calling on Stephen Maitland, to request his daughter's hand in marriage, hears the news. Unbelieving, he resolves to immediately return West and search for her. Mr. Maitland hurriedly decides to accompany him.

Up in the mountains, Enid, alone with Newbold, hears the story of his imposed isolation and, recognizing Armstrong's picture in the locket Newbold shows her, learns the true nature of the man, who professes regard for her. When the snow begins to melt, Armstrong, Maitland and Kirkby leave for the mountain with their old camp as the objective point. They find the bottle containing Newbold's message and Armstrong, unable to wait, leaves for the cabin ahead of the others. He finds Enid alone, Newbold having left for the settlement, that he might telegraph her people, but finding her adverse to his advances, tries to take her in his arms. Newbold, coming across Armstrong's trail in the snow, becomes suspicious and returns just in time to save Enid this humiliation. The men recognize each other, and Newbold, furious at the thought of the wrongs done him, attacks Armstrong, and is slowly getting the better of his antagonist when Maitland and Kirkby enter and separate them. Armstrong denies all Newbold's accusations, until Kirkby confronts him with the truth, and he is forced to confess, owing to the evidence against him. Armstrong shoots himself. Enid and the rest return to the city, where she and Newbold are married, later returning to the mountains, where, through many adventures and privations, they found and learned to love each other.

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES (Selig Six Parts August 23).—"The House of a Thousand Candles" is an unusual dwelling house. It serves the purpose of an eccentric, whimsical and lovable old man, with its secret passageways, gloomy vaults and hidden panels. It becomes a place for hidden treasures, and around the old-fashioned domicile there is woven a web of intrigue, of plot, of revenge, of violence, and against it is also centered the hate of a jealous woman.

John Marshall Glenarm, lovingly known as "Squire" Glenarm, lives in luxury with only his faithful man, Bates, as a companion. The Squire has an abiding love for his grandson, Jack Glenarm. Adjacent to "The House of a Thousand Candles" there lives Theresa Evans and her beautiful daughters, Marian and Olivia. Mrs. Evans and the Squire hope that Jack and Marian will wed.

Squire Glenarm receives a letter that Jack will arrive. The hundreds of candles are lighted and they twinkle merriy as Mrs. Evans and her daughter Marian arrive at Glenarm House to hear the good news.

"My grandson Jack loves you. Marry him and make me happy," Squire Glenarm tells Marian, who blushes rosily as she eyes Jack's portrait.

But Jack prefers city life. With his pal, Larry Donovan, he is a frequent visitor at cabarets where Carmen and her lover, Don Jose, dance. Jack admires Carmen and Carmen loves Jack. Don Jose hates Jack as only a jealous lover can hate.

Jack Glenarm suddenly decides that he cannot leave the bright lights of the city and he telegraphs: "Plan changed. Will remain in city for the summer." Then the candles in Glenarm House are snuffed out until one feeble light remains, which flickers and dances in Squire Glenarm's bed-chamber where the aged millionaire ponders.

Before Squire Glenarm leaves for Italy, he employs Arthur Pickering, his lawyer, who secretly loves Marian Evans, to draw up his will. He gives Pickering the combination to the wall safe and takes therefrom a huge key. With the expectant lawyer the Squire repairs to the cellar, where pressing a secret spring, the wall swings open. Within Pickering is shown a strong box containing a million in securities for the one named in my will."

Before the Squire leaves Glenarm House he writes on two visiting cards, one of which he places in a book dealing with architecture and the second card is put into the hollow stem of a certain distinctive candlestick.

Two months pass and then Bates, the faithful servant, returns alone from Italy. He says that Squire Glenarm met death in an Italian earthquake. Pickering as executor of the Glenarm will summons Jack. Together with Theresa Evans and her daughters, Jack and his companion assemble in the library while Pickering reads the will.

It is a most unusual will, which states: "I leave my entire estate to my grandson provided that he lives for one year at my country manor grounds. He must live quietly and in seclusion with no more than one male companion, otherwise the estate shall become the property of Marian Evans." Jack accepts the terms of the will, and telephones Carmen that she must forget him.

Pickering leads the way to the stone vault in the cellar. There the secret door is found standing open. The box that contained the million dollars in securities is empty. Pickering peers into the recess and brings forth a visiting card which reads: "To find the million study architecture."

Weeks later Carmen secures an engagement at the Road Inn near Glenarm Manor. Pickering, who has discovered her love for Jack, entices her to Glenarm House.

Carmen realizes the love of Jack and Marian. She plots revenge. Pickering finds in a candlestick a card which reads: "The million is in a hidden safe in the library."

Marian and Olivia Evans have issued invitations to a masquerade ball. In a spirit of mischief they invite Jack. Pickering discovers the invitation and writes on one side the words, "I dare you." Jack, thinking the dare comes from Marian, accepts it and goes, garbed in a suit of mail. Pickering informs Carmen of Jack's seeking Marian. Carmen enters through a window, tears off Jack's disguise, crying, "You have forfeited the Glenarm estate."

Pickering in Jack's absence, creeps into Glenarm House. He overcomes Bates and opens the hidden safe. He stares spellbound, for the large satchel it contained is empty.

Jack, Larry, his friend, Marian and Olivia Evans repair to Glenarm House. They discover the cowering Pickering. As they do so a secret panel in the side of the chimney opens and Squire Glenarm sets forth.

A BUNCH OF KEYS (Essanay—Five Parts—Aug. 16).—Three Keys girls quarrel over a hotel left by their uncle, each claiming the property. Rose and May are very prim and put on all the airs of country belles, while Teddy is a harum-scarum tomboy, full of mischief and fun. Snaggs, a designing old lawyer, has the will of the uncle, and he has just jilted Matilda Jenkins, a wealthy widow, because she lost her fortune, and now plots to win the hand of one of the Keys girls, and get the hotel. He tells the girls their uncle has left all his property to the one who shall be declared the homliest by the first drummer who stops at the hotel. They all refuse to enter the contest, Snaggs therefore makes love to Teddy, trying to get her to consent to pose as the ugliest of the daughters. Grimes, Teddy's suitor, suspects Snaggs and urges the girls to get hold of the will. Rose and May disguise themselves as foreign women and go to the hotel in the hopes of discovering it. The widow is already there in man's attire, hoping to get a chance to get revenge on Snaggs. Teddy dresses as a drummer and also takes a room at the hotel, in order to put one over on Snaggs. Snaggs falls into her trap and bribes her to pick out the homliest. In the meantime the two suitors of Rose and May have hired anarchists to blow up the safe and get the will. They put a bomb under the safe just when all the principals are arguing in the lobby. They get the will but Teddy grabs it and reads a clause which says the sisters can divide the property if they wish. Then ensues a battle in which all are more or less damaged, disguises are torn off and the identities of all revealed.

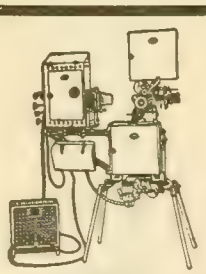
A BARGAIN

THE BIGGEST VALUE TO MANUFACTURERS, EXHIBITORS, EXCHANGE MEN AND OPERATORS IS THE

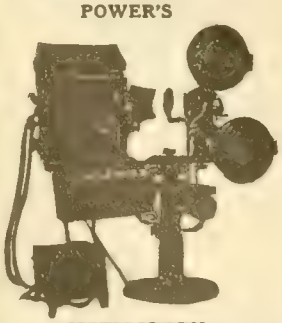
MOVING PICTURE WORLD

SEND YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS TO-DAY DIRECT TO 17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

DOMESTIC - - $3.00 PER YEAR
CANADA - - $3.50 PER YEAR
FOREIGN - - $4.00 PER YEAR



POWER'S



MOTIOGRAPH

SUPPLYING THE EXHIBITOR

With the Best of Everything for the Modern Photoplay Theatre at Reasonable Prices With a Guarantee Behind Each Article You Purchase.

That's Our Method. So, Let's Co-Operate

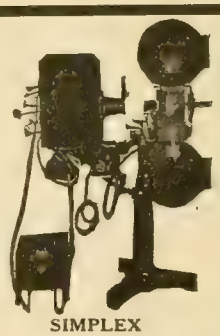
Write, Wire or Phone Our Nearest Branch for Your Wants
Prompt Shipments Guaranteed

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

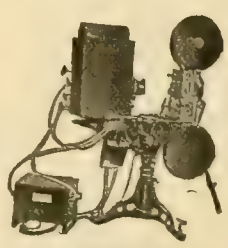
19 West 23rd Street New York City

Did You Send for Our Catalog?

158 Pearl St. Buffalo, N. Y.



SIMPLEX



STANDARD

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

MANAGER—Motion picture theatre, thoroughly experienced, desires situation. Best reference. Henry E. Silk, 1310 So. 4th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

AN EXCEPTIONAL EMPLOYEE At liberty Sept. 1st. Competent operator. Expert sign painter, possesses ingenious advertising ideas of exceptional magnetism. What experienced picture men say:—Exchange Manager:—He can do anything around a show house. Exhibitor:—He is worth $50 a week to me in the booth. Exhibitor:—Every finger he has can do something else. Recently built up a six hundred seat house that was regarded as a lemon of the juiciest sort. From an average of $25 a day to the record days' receipts, that averaged over $40 a minute for ten hours. In less than three months' time, with a feature that had been shown by two opposition houses. State all in first letter. Live Man, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

OPERATOR—Desires to change position, am in same place since 1908; am in Harlem and would like to work nearer home. Wm. Lorence, 518 Freedom Ave., Richmond Hill, L. I., N. Y.

RELIABLE OPERATOR—Long experience; can produce results. Desires position in Penn. Salary reasonable. Unquestionable references. Reliable, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

MANAGER—Picture theater. A-1 press agent; eight years' theatrical experience. Clean-cut; age 32. References. A. Todd, 6305 Sierra St., Station M., Cincinnati, O.

COMPETENT OPERATOR—Electrician; sober reliable. Sign painter. Orchestra. Wife plays piano. No boomer, join now. State salary and all. Box 71, Geneseo, Ill

OPERATOR—Long experience in all branches. Any machine, motor generators, insulated plans, electrician, gasoline engines. Best projection, good recommendations. David Redniss, 14 West 135th St., N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN—With five years practical experience in all details of film manufacturing. Desires permanent position with reliable concern. W. B., care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

PIANIST—Six years experience in playing for the pictures alone, and conducting orchestras. With knowledge of pipe organ. Union man, capable and reliable. Would like position in large picture house, where artistic reading of the pictures will be appreciated. Reasonable salary for good work. Best of references. Address Nat E. Solomon, Box 3294, Station E, Washington, D. C.

OPERATOR—I would like to locate in a town of 5,000 to 15,000 in Penn. or New Jersey. Operator with seven years' experience, sober, reliable. Handle Simplex, Power's or Edison. My present engagement will close Sept. 10. State all in first letter. Best of references if you want them. Address W. H. M., care Strand Theater, Ocean City, N. J.

EXPERIENCED CAMERAMAN—Desires position travel anywhere. Sober, reliable. Best results, care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN—European American. High-grade worker with six years' experience, at present with the largest M. P. concern. Wishes to secure position with another producing company. Address Artistic, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

WANTED—Position as house or circuit manager. By man of broad experience. Willing to prove ability to any responsible party. C. E. K., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

OPERATOR—Long experience, work any machine. Wishes position city or country. Bellin, 289 Smith St., Brooklyn, N. Y. Tel. 711 Hamilton.

AT LIBERTY—First-class operator. Eight years' experience. Strictly sober, reliable. Mass. license. Go anywhere. References. E. A. Hall, 50 Columbia St., Swampscott, Mass.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Cameramen with own outfit to submit scenic, educational, travel and topical film. Full details on application to E. V. Howell, 89 N. 14th St., Flushing, N. Y.

WANTED MANAGER—State experience, salary. Educational town of fifteen thousand in Oregon. Fine theater, seats 800. Address Oregon, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

OFFERS INVITED—From all first-class concerns who will produce historical, religious, comedy, etc. films. Especially for South American trade. P. O. Box 26, San Francisco, Cal.

WANT PARTNER—To take interest in moving picture exchange established three years, doing good business. Must be able to take charge of office. $900 buys half interest which is actual half invoice value of stock and equipment. Frank P. Read, 6 Lewis Block, Detroit, Mich.

THEATERS WANTED.

CASH FOR YOUR MOVIE—I am a practical, successful moving picture broker. Seventeen years of continuous success. Selling upwards of one million dollars worth annually, sales, exchanges and leases. Lewis, the Moving Picture Broker, Established 1896. Offices 578-80 Ellicott Sq., Buffalo, N. Y.

MR. THEATER OWNER—List your theater with me for quick action. I handle theaters exclusively. Cusack, 220 West 42d St., Room 1205, N. Y. City.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

ATTRACTIVE—Moving picture theater for rent in suburb of Atlantic City, capacity 900; local population about 6,000. Completely equipped. Brick building. Very reasonable to good tenants. Braunstein's Department Store, 1412 Atlantic Ave., Atlantic City, N. J.

FOR SALE—Picture theater, long lease, seating 170, fully equipped, only show in town. Population 1,800, own light plant. Box 35, Waddington, N. Y.

FOR RENT—In Youngstown, Ohio, 1,500 seat house to be built in the best possible location with all the latest improvements. Would not this be an addition to your chain? Write or wire for further details. The Realty Trust Co., Youngstown, Ohio.

FOR SALE OR RENT—New modern equipped moving picture house. 327 seats, nearest seat 30 feet from screen; four years' lease, $100.00 rent; splendid location; population, 25,000. The Empire, Danville, Va.

TO RENT—Laird Opera House, in excellent repair, Main Street location, for moving pictures. Seats 900. Industrial conditions good. For further information address M. Henlein, Greenville, Pa.

MOVIE—On one of the main streets in Buffalo, playing to its fullest capacity even in this season. In full season could stand 500 more seats. Handsome front; lobby to accommodate at least 50 baby carriages. Simplex and 6A Power's machine. Fireproof booth. No vaudeville, strictly high-class photoplays. Capacity about 800. Actually worth $25,000; will sacrifice for $12,000. $5,000-$6,000 will swing the deal. Lewis, 580 Ellicott Sq., Buffalo, N. Y.

$3,500—Takes one of the best movies in live town. Admission five and ten cents. Actual weekly expenses $90.20; receipts $130-225 week. Playing to capacity houses right now every night. The owner has banked $6,000 in last three years. You can do the same. Best reasons for selling. Lewis, 580 Ellicott Sq., Buffalo, N. Y.

MOVIE—Main St., in town of 450,000. Receipts $190 week; in winter should run $250. Expenses about $100 week. Modern machinery and equipment. Rent only $36 week. Long and favorable lease. Price, $5,500; will accept any reasonable payment down. Disagreement of partnership. Lewis, 580 Ellicott Sq., Buffalo, N. Y.

EMPIRE THEATER—For rent, 900 seats, best section Montreal. Ten and twenty cents admission. Rent $400 monthly. Rare opportunity for party with capital. L. Stern, 51 McGill College Ave., Montreal, Can.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater, seating 600. With five year lease. Located on best business corner on the main street, in center of the theater district. Now running at five cents but can easily enlarge to a ten cent house as the ground space is 50 x 120. Present building is one story with two good store fronts, renting for $200 per month. Colonial Theater, Fort Wayne, Ind.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

POWER'S 6A—Or Simplex machine in first-class order. Also curtain and four hundred opera chairs. Give full particulars and best price. Must be first-class, state slope per foot. E. G. Hower, 1101 Arizona Ave., Trinidad, Colo.

TENT 20 x 40 or larger. Black or white canvas. Edison or Power's picture machine. Screen 12 x 12 or larger. Electric light plant 35 to 50 amp. Film "Dantes Inferno" by Milano, Superior Feature Film Co., four parts. Prices must be cheap. L. H. Riling, P. O. Box 427, Altoona, Pa.

WE INVITE—Your attention to this moving picture theater. Modern in every respect complying with every demand for the harmonious combination of beauty and comfort. Seats seven hundred. Central location in a western York state city, of twelve thousand. Long lease. Price five thousand. Parties who might be interested in the sale of this theater, may write for further particulars to Leo L. L., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

3,000—Used opera chairs some as good as new. I can save you money on new or used chairs, steel and cast patterns, standard asbestos booths at cut prices. J. P. Redington, Scranton, Pa.

FOR SALE—Three Edison Model B. M. P. Machines $75.00 each. Four No. 6 Power's M. P. Machines, $100.00 each. Two No. 6A Power's M. P. machines, $125.00 each. One No. 5 Power's M. P. Machine, $65.00. One Royal M. P. Machine, $50.00. Second hand machines but in first class running order, all worn parts supplied with new. First come first served. Tampa Photo and Art Supply Co., Tampa, Fla.

WRITE OR WIRE—The Lears Theater Supply Co., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo., the largest exclusive theater equipment concern in the West, for seats, all leading makes of moving picture machines, operating booths, curtains and all other theater accessories. Folding chairs, 40c each up. Opera chairs, 60c each up. Moving picture machines, $50 each up. Send them an exact list of your wants and see why they sell everyone.

NEW SIMPLEX MACHINE—Used six months, guaranteed, $200. New 220v. Ft. Wayne compensarc. 250 opera chairs. R. E. Moore, Mauston, Wis.

FOR SALE—One new Power's 6 machine with 14-in. magazines, used only six months. One Power's 5 machine in splendid condition. Best offer takes them. Box 323, Newport, Pa.

FOR SALE—Two Power's 6A machines nearly new. Cheap for cash. Also carry large stock of carbons all makes. Webster Electric Co., 717 9th St., Washington, D. C.

A BARGAIN—For sale one Standard machine No. 2. In good condition, motor, lenses, rewind, complete. Price $45. Store, 496 Bushwick Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ATLAS SEATING CO.—501 Fifth Ave., N. Y. Largest theater chair bargains ever offered on new opera and folding chairs. Write for bargain prices.

1,000—Upholstered red plush theater chairs, perfect condition $1.25 each. Large assortment used veneer opera 65 cents. Folding 45 cents. Atlas Seating Co., 501 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City.

6A MACHINES—$185. 110 volt compensarcs $42, 220v compensarcs $52. Never used. In original boxes. Alden, 812 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

1,000—Imitation leather opera chairs and many others, closed out factory patterns. Empire Exchange, Corning, N. Y.

FOR SALE—New or second hand opera chairs for moving picture theaters at a bargain. Crescent Film Exchange, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—New and second hand moving picture machines, all leading makes, at reduced prices. Crescent Film Exchange, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A WAGNER ROTARY CONVERTER, 220 volt, single phase, 35 ampere capacity, slightly used, guaranteed in A1 condition, $175.00. General Electric Mercury Arc Rectifier, 30 ampere capacity, complete with tube, guaranteed A1 condition, $150.00. Exhaust Fan, 24 inch, 220 volt D. C., with speed regulator and reverse, never used, $60.00. Used Fans, G. E. 12-inch, 110 or 220 volt D. C., $5.00.

J. H. HALLBERG, 38 East 23d St., N. Y. C.

CAMERAS WANTED.

WANTED—Moy camera with or without lens, give full particulars and price. H. C., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

WANTED—To buy Pathe motion picture cameras. Good prices paid for second-hand Pathes. Los Angeles Mot. Pict. Co., 215 E. Washington St., Los Angeles, Cal.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

NEW MODEL No. 4 Pittman Prof. camera now ready. Automatic dissolve, automatic take-up, both directions, 400 ft. magazine. The most up-to-date camera proposition ever placed upon the market. Tripods, Lenses, etc. Send for particulars. We also specialize in repairs and improvements in all makes of cameras. R. W. Pittman Co., 394 Canal St., New York City. Phone 5961 Franklin.

LATEST professional junior and senior cameras, flexible shafts, printers, perforators winders, measurers, trays, racks, tripods, tilts, cardanopods, companion projectors, dissolvers, lenses optielectromechanical work, filming, title,s America's greatest display, reasonable prices. Pioneer Manufacturer, Patentee. Eberhard Schneider, 219 Second Ave., N. Y. City.

PITTMAN JR.—200 foot, F. 3.5 lens, one picture movement. Good as new. $90. Ray, 326 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—$100. Vista, 150 foot, F. 3.5 lens, tripod, tilt and panoram, five magazines, 200 negatives. Used two months. Heishberger, 60 Washington Ave., Schenectady, N. Y.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE—Big line of features and single reels. All have posters and in good condition. Afco Film Service, Saginaw, Mich.

(Continued on page 1237)

INDEX

TO CONTENTS

Advertising for Exhibitors 1150
"American Game Trails" (F. M. Buckland)..1176
Among Denver Picture Men 1167
At Leading Picture Theaters 1170
Auctioning Films. 1185

Baker, George Duane..... 1138
"Battle of Przemysl, The" (Am. Correspondence Film Co)..... 1175
Beck, A. F., with Mutual. 1137
Blackton, J. Stuart, Arming His Craft....1141
Bloom, Sol, in Town..... 1172
British Notes 1148
Business Quiet on Coast 1195

Calendar of Daily Program Releases..1208, 1210
Censor Backs and Fills..... 1190
Censors Seize Picture... 1196
Chicago Letter. 1142
Circulation Plus Confidence.. 1132
Coming Biographs. 1175
Comments on the Films..... 1160
Craig, Nell. 1135
"Cub and the Daisy Chain, The" (Vitagraph) 1177

Demos India is Backward.. 1168

"Extravagance" (Universal). 1178

Facts and Comments..... 1131
Famous Players' President Speaks..... 1166
Feature, Has a Future, The..... 1166
Feature in Small Towns, The..... 1171
Fenwick, Irene. 1171
Fuller, Mary 1146

Genuine War Films..... 1134
Gilday Talks to Ad Men 1172
"Girl and Her Trust, The" (Biograph)....1175
"Governor's Boss, The" (Governors Boss Photoplay Co.). 1146

Haines, Robert T..... 1148
High Class Paper for V-L-S-E Subject....1137
"His Fairy Godmother" (Vitagraph)..... 1177
Hodkinson Loquitur 1139
Horsley Off of General Program..... 1169
"Human Cargoes" Promises Thrills..... 1138

Illinois Approves. 1200
"Ingrate, The" (Pathe)..... 1177
Irrepressible Reichenbach, The..... 1136

"Judy Forgot" (Universal)..... 1176

Knickerbocker Stays in General..... 1141

Lasky, Jesse L., in New York..... 1164
League Censors a Film..... 1193
List of Current Film Release Dates. 1238, 1240, 1242
Long, Samuel. 1132
Los Angeles Letter..... 1144

Mack, Hayward. 1162
Manufacturers' Advance Notes..... 1179
Metro's Coming Productions..... 1165
MinA Comedies Continue on General Program. 1135
"Mister Paganini" (Biograph)..... 1175
Morosco Announces New Captures..... 1140
Motion Picture Photography 1159
Moving Picture Educator..... 1149
Mushroom Film Concerns..... 1187
Mutual Program is Complete..... 1136
"Mystery of the Tapestry Room, The" (Universal). 1177

New House in Oakland, Pa..... 1188
New Kriterion Company 1170
New Rule for Transporting Films 1137
New Studio in Pennsylvania..... 1141
Notes of the Trade..... 1183

Observations by Man About Town..... 1163
"Oil and Water" (Biograph)..... 1175

Pennsylvania Minor Law..... 1195
Photoplaywright, The. 1152
Picture Theaters Projected..... 1184
Projection Department. 1154

"Rags" (Famous Players)..... 1177
Real Stories from Reel Studios..... 1173
Reviews of Current Productions..... 1174
Robin, J. E., Joins C. A. Baird..... 1164
Rockwell, Miss, with Knickerbocker..... 1171

South African Letter..... 1173
"Stolen Voice, The" (World Film)..... 1176
Stories of the Films..... 1201
"Substituted Jewel, The" (Kalem)..... 1174
Summer in New Orleans..... 1191

Tackling Credit Problem 1189
Tennessee Indictments. 1186
Tennyson's "Dora" in Three Reels..... 1138
Trade Holiday Appeals to Vitagraph..... 1170
Tragedy to Those Who Feel, A 1133

United's Affairs Aired in Court..... 1140

V-L-S-E Comedies for August..... 1136
"Victorine" (Majestic) 1174
Vitagraph Comedies, Two..... 1177

"Wanderer, The" (Biograph)..... 1175
"When Love is Mocked" (Selig)..... 1174
Wilk Starts Author's Agency..... 1169
Writing for the Screen..... 1147

Zigzag Censorship. 1192

TO ADVERTISERS

CARBONS AND CARBON ACCESSORIES.
Davis, Henry W..... 249
Kiewert, Chas. L..... 1248
Reisinger, Hugo 1245

CHAIR & SEATING MANUFACTURERS.
American Seating Co..... 1249
Andrews, A. H., Co..... 1249
Peabody School Furniture Co..... 1249
Steel Furniture Co 1249
Wisconsin Seating Co..... 1249

ELECTRICAL & MECH. EQUIPMENT.
Amusement Supply Co..... 1230
Erker Bros 1246
Fidelity Electric Co... 1223
Foos Gas Engine Co 1246
Fort Wayne Electric Works..... 1249
Fulton, E. E..... 1249
General Electric Co..... 1247
Hallberg, J. H..... 1203
Hommel, Ludwig, & Co..... 1215
Kleine Optical Co 1205
Moore-Hubbel Co. 1249
Picture Theater Equip. Co..... 1234
Porter, B. F..... 1223
Strelinger, Chas. A..... 1215
Stern Mfg. Co (2) 1226
Speed Controller Co..... 1246
Swaab, Lewis M 1232
Typhoon Fan Co..... 1226

FILM EXCHANGES.
Bloom, Joe. 1226
Bradenburgh, G. W..... 1246
Central Film Co.. 1230
Film Exchange, The 1247
Greater N. Y. Film Rental Co.....1208, 1242
Nielsen, E. O. 1227
Peerless Film Exchange 1226
Wisconsin Illinois Feature Release Co.. 1226
Wyandotte Film & Supply Co.. 1223

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.. 1245

MFRS. OF MOVING PICTURES.
American Film Co., Inc. 1110
American Film Correspondent Film Co Inc 1246
Biograph Co. 1209
Bosworth Inc ..... 1118, Insert
Charter Features Corp.. 1108
Edison, Thos. A., Inc.... 1119
Essanay Film Mfg. Co.....1104-05, 1221
Equitable Motion Picture Corp.....1121
Famous Players Film Co.....Insert
Frohman Amusement Co.....1241
General Film Co.....1126
Great Northern Film Co 1112
Gotham Program, Inc.....1244
Horsley, David. 1213
Kalem Co. 1124-25, 1130
Kleine, George. 1224-25
Knickerbocker Star Features.....1109, 1228-29
Lasky, Jesse L., Feature Play Co.....Insert
Lubin Mfg. Co.....1120, 1217-19
Majestic Motion Picture Co 1117
Metro Pictures Corp.....1106-07
MinA Films. 1243
Morosco, Oliver, Photoplay Co.....Insert
Mutual Film Corp.....1212
Neff, M. A.....1237
New York Motion Picture Corp.. 1099
North American Film Corp.....1111
Pallas Pictures, Inc.....Insert
Paramount Pictures Corp.....Insert
Pathe Exchange, Inc.....1114-15
Picture Playhouse Film Co., Inc.....1226
Selig Polyscope Co.....1220, 1251
Standard Program 1116
Sterling Camera & Film Co.....1113
Thanhouser Film Corp.....1098
Universal Film Mfg. Co.....1100-03
V-L-S-E, Inc. 1222
Vitagraph Co. of America.....1127-29, 1216
World Film Corp.....1122-23

MISCELLANEOUS.
Advance Motion Picture Co 1207
American Film Laboratories 1237
Arkin, Simon 1249
Artiste, care M. P. World.. 1245
Automatic T. S. & C. R. Co.....1207
Bioscope, The 1223
Bound Volumes, M. P. World.. 1248
Buck Cement Co 1249
Charter Features Corp.....1202
Classified Advertisements 1235
Circulation Coupon, M. P. World 1247
Corcoran, A. J.....1226
C. H. K., care M. P. World.....1248
De Kinematograaf 1223
Dixon, Thomas. .....—
Duhem Motion Picture Co.....1246
Eastman Kodak Co.....1237
Educational Film Releases.....1230
Erbograph Co. 1247
Evans Film Mfg. Co.....1223
Gunby Bros. 1247
G. B., care M. P. World.....1230
Industrial Moving Picture Co.. 1214
Kraus Mfg. Co.....1204
Lundeen Publishing Co.....1184
Moore, William N.....1249
Motion Picture Fire Prevention Devices Co..1223
M. P. Directory Co.....1246
M. P. Electricity.....1248
National Badge & Pennant Co.....1247
National Ticket Co.....1238
New York Film Laboratories.....1223
Originality, care M. P. World.....1184
Publicity Clock Co.....1246
Rigot, Max, Co.....1246
Standard Motion Picture Co.....1226
United Film Service For Sale.....1250
Universal Film Mfg. Co.....1233

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.
Universal Camera Co.....1230

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
Deagan, J. C.....1206
Harmo Electric Co.....1241
Seeburg, J. P., Piano Co.....1215
Sinn, Clarence E.....1249
Wurlitzer, Rudolph Co.....1244

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
Goes Lithographing Co.....1249
Hennegan & Co.....1215
Hungerford, U. T.....1207
Jensen, Al. 1249
Menger & Ring.. 1247
Newman Mfg. Co.. 1206

PROJECTION MACHINE MFRS.
Enterprise Optical Co.....1245
Power, Nicholas Co.....1251
Precision Machine Co.....1239

PROJECTION SCREEN MFRS.
Genter, J. H., Inc.....1248
Radium Gold Fibre Screens, Inc.. 1241
Simpson, Alfred L.....1232

STEREOPTICON SLIDES.
Moore-Hubbel Co. 1230
Utility Transparency Co.....1245

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
Decorators' Supply Co.....1247

THE BATTLE OF BALLOTS

(Copyrighted) In Six Parts

A battle between the WET and DRY FORCES. True to life and of vital interest everywhere.

A Live Wire Big Money Maker

STATE RIGHTS FOR SALE, except Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky. Interesting prices. For particulars wire or write

M. A. NEFF SCHULTZ BUILDING COLUMBUS, OHIO

A clear picture

is as essential as a good scenario. Because the basic product is right the clearest pictures are on Eastman Film. Identifiable by the stencil mark in the margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

PRINTING AND DEVELOPING

American Film Laboratories, Inc.

"The Tiffany of the Film Trade"

THE FINEST FILM LABORATORIES AND STUDIO IN THE WORLD

"When you want anything done well, go to a busy man"—a true saying.

If you want your developing and printing done well, come to us, for we are busy doing good work for others.

LOUIS B. JENNINGS
Pres. & Gen. Mgr.

EDWIN S. PORTER
Vice-President

69-71 West 90th St., New York City
Telephone Riverside 1410

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS---Continued from page 1235

FOR SALE OR LEASE—State rights—Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Minn., North & South Dakota, Wyoming, Utah for Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt's, Carnegie Alaska Siberia Expedition. Two sets of films four reels each. Booked solid until Oct. 1st. Small per cent. of territory played. Special paper. Bond required. Asbestos booth like new, cheap. Address Alaska Box 402, Kemmerer, Wyo.

FOR SALE—"Eastland Disaster," 500 foot reel. Showing all details of this awful wreck. Price $60. Also 3 sheet posters, 10c. per sheet. Acme Feature Film Co., 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

TWENTY-FIVE FEATURES—With good paper. "Money and Women" Itala, three reels $50. "Stolen Treaty" four reels (Great Northern) European War production $65. "Ben Hur" (Italian) three reels $50. "Mexican Revolution and Spanish Bull Fight" four reels $60. "Drink" Pathe three reels $40. "Cell No. 13" $40. Write for our complete list. Big Four Feature Co., Room 6, 92 Griswold St., Detroit, Mich.

FOR SALE—Two prints Chaplin comedies, "Those Love Pangs," as new, $40 each. "Adventures of Miss Tomboy," three-reel Vitagraph comedy, as new. Plenty paper, 1, 3, 6, $125. "The Round Up," four parts (State Illinois), new copy and paper, $150. "Over Niagara Falls," four reels (State Illinois), A-1 paper, 1, 3, 9 sheets, $125. Write or wire me your wants. H. L. Wallick, 608 Schiller Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Niagara Violiphone orchestra and eighteen rolls of music. All in A-1 condition. Cheap. J. E. Dorey, Jersey Shore, Pa.

FOR SALE—One Seeburg combination pipe organ and orchestra style "M". Brand new. C. C. Haddox, Kenton, Ohio.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHTS—Send your biography and latest autographed photo for our "Who's Who in Scenarioland." Excelsior Publishing Co., W. W., 213 Columbia Trust Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

MAKE YOUR own slides with Photopaque. 50c and $1.25, complete outfit with either size. At all Chicago jobbers. Manufactured by D. C. Schupp & Co., Peoria, Ill.

PHOTOPAQUE—Makes slides. Sold by Kleine Optical Co., Chicago, Ill.

WE BUY -And sell new and second hand moving picture machines, opera chairs and films. Crescent Film Exc., 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

List of Current Film Release Dates

(For Daily Calendar of Program Releases See Pages 1208, 1210.)

General Film Company

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Knickerbocker, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Aug. 4—Jane Eyre (Special—Three parts—Drama)
Aug. 5—The Fixer (Comedy—Drama).
Aug. 6—Her Mother's Oath (Drama) (Biograph Re-issue No. 9).
Aug. 7—Frederick Holmes' Ward (Comedy—Drama).
Aug. 9—Her Hidden Life (Drama).
Aug. 10—The Law of Love (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—Stronger Than Love (Drama).
Aug. 13—The Last Drop of Water (Drama). (Biograph Re-issue No. 10.)
Aug. 14—The Little Slavey (Drama).
Aug. 16—Mrs. Randolph's New Secretary (Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 17—Ashes of Inspiration (Special Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—East Lynne (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 19—His Last Wish (Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 20—Death's Marathon (Biograph Reissue No. 11—Drama)
Aug. 21—The Ace of Diamonds (Drama).

EDISON.

July 24—The Secret of the Cellar (Drama).
July 28—Poor Baby (Comedy).
July 30—The Girl of the Gypsy Camp (Special Three parts—Drama)
July 31—The Bedouin's Sacrifice (Drama).
Aug. 4—Not Much Force (Comedy).
Aug. 6—June Friday (Special—Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 7—Not Wanted (Child Story).
Aug. 11—Food for King and Riley (Comedy).
Aug. 13—The King of the Wire (Special Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 14—A Sprig of Shamrock (Drama).
Aug. 18—Cartoons on Tour (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Shadows from the Past (Special Four parts Drama).
Aug. 21—On the Wrong Track (Dramatic-Educational).

ESSANAY.

July 27—Boys Will Be Boys (Special—Three parts—Comedy—Drama).
July 28—"Dreamy Dud" Goes Bear Hunting—A Scenic on the same Reel (Living Cartoon).
July 29—Snakeville's Twins (Comedy).
July 30—Broncho Billy's Surrender (West-Dr.).
July 31—A Man Afraid (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 2—The Kiss (Drama).
Aug. 3—Business Rivals (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 4—Dreamy Dud in a Visit to His Uncle Dudley's Farm (Living Cartoon). —A Scenic Subject on the same reel.
Aug. 5—Street Fakers (Comedy).
Aug. 6—Broncho Billy's Protege (Western—Drama).
Aug. 7—Eyes That See Not (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—The Bank (Special Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 9—The Happy House (Drama).
Aug. 10—When My Lady Smiles (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 11—The Fables of "The Tip and the Treasure (Comedy).
Aug. 12—The Bell Hop (Western Comedy).
Aug. 13—Broncho Billy Steps In (Western—Drama).
Aug. 14—A Cave on Thunder Cloud (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Market Price of Love (Drama).
Aug. 17—Legrand's Revenge (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—"Dreamy Dud" Sees Charlie Chaplin (Cartoon—Comedy).
Aug. 19—Tale of a Tire (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Broncho Billy's Marriage (Western Drama).
Aug. 21—The Woman Hater (Special—Three parts—Drama).

KALEM.

July 30—A Business Buccaneer (An Alice Joyce Re-issue—Drama).
July 31—The Fate of Number 1 (Episode No. 38 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
Aug. 2—The Maker of Dreams (Special—Three parts—"Broadway Favorites"—Dr.).
Aug. 3—The Hypnotic Monkey ("Ham & Bud" Comedy).
Aug. 4—Mysteries of the Grand Hotel—"The Secret Code"—Installment No. 3 (Special Two parts Drama).
Aug. 6—For High Stakes (Special—Two parts—Comedy—Drama).
Aug. 7—The Substitute Fireman (Episode No. 39 of "The Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
Aug. 9—The Runaway Wife (Special—Four parts—"Broadway Favorites"—Dr.)
Aug. 10—The Winning Wash (Ham & Bud Comedy).
Aug. 11—The Riddle of the Rings (Episode No. 4 of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel"—Special Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 13—The Country Girl (Drama) (Re-issue).
Aug. 14—The Limited's Peril (Episode No. 40 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Legacy of Folly (Special—Three parts—"Broadway Favorites"—Dr.).
Aug. 17—Ham at the Beach (Ham and Bud—Comedy).
Aug. 18—The Substituted Jewel (Episode No. 5 of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel"—Special—Two parts—Dr.)
Aug. 20—The Game of Life (Special Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 21—A Perilous Chance (Episode No. 41 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).

LUBIN.

July 30—The Call of Motherhood (Drama)
July 31—Billie's Heiress (Comedy).
Aug. 2—The Taunt (Drama).
Aug. 3—The Rakoon Hose Company (Comedy). —A One Reel Feature (Comedy).
Aug. 4—Country Blood (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 5—The Witness (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 6—A Day of Havoc (Drama).
Aug. 7—Billie's Debut (Comedy).
Aug. 9—The Great Lone Land (Drama).
Aug. 10—Horrible Hyde (Comedy). —Relentless Dalton (Comedy).
Aug. 11—Bold Emmett, Ireland's Martyr (Special—Three Parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—The Power of Prayer (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 13—The Deception (Drama).
Aug. 14—Her Romeo (Comedy).
Aug. 16—Polly of the Pots and Pans (Drama).
Aug. 17—The Dead Letter (Comedy). —Persistent Dalton (Comedy).
Aug. 18—The Second Shot (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 19—It Was to Be (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 20—When Souls are Tried (Drama).
Aug. 21—The Lite Guard (Comedy).

MINA.

July 15—The Fighting Kid (Comedy).
July 22—On the Job (Comedy).
July 29—He's In Again (Comedy).
Aug. 5—Waking Up Father (Comedy)
Aug. 12—Billy's Nurse (Comedy).

SELIG.

Aug. 2—The Melody of Doom (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 2—Hearst-Selig News Picture, No. 61, 1915 (News).
Aug. 3—The Taking of Mustang Pete (Western-Drama).
Aug. 4—The Prima Donna's Mother (Drama).
Aug. 5—The Scarlet Lady (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 5—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 62, 1915 (News).
Aug. 7—The Black Leopard (Jungle Zoo—Dr.)
Aug. 9—The Face in the Mirror (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 63, 1915 (News).
Aug. 10—The Gold Dust and the Squaw (Western Drama).
Aug. 12—When Love Is Mocked (Special—Three Parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 64, 1915 (News).
Aug. 14—The Orang-Outang (Jungle-Zoo—Wild Animal—Drama).
Aug. 16—In the King's Service (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 65, 1915 (News).
Aug. 17—The Prima Donna's Mother (Drama).
Aug. 19—The Clause in the Constitution (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 19—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 66, 1915 (News).
Aug. 21—A Lucky Deal (Drama)

VITAGRAPH.

July 31—The Mystery of Mary (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 2—The Serpent's Tooth (Comedy).
Aug. 3—The Scar (Broadway Star Features—Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 4—The Repentance of Dr. Blinn (Drama).
Aug. 5—A Disciple of Plato (Comedy).
Aug. 6—Dimples and the Ring (Comedy).
Aug. 7—Pat Hogan, Deceased (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—What Did He Whisper? (Comedy).
Aug. 10—Life's Yesterdays (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 11—His Fairy Godmother (Comedy)
Aug. 12—His Bunkie (Melo-Drama).
Aug. 13—A Keyboard Strategy (Comedy).
Aug. 14—Heavy Villains (Broadway Star Feature Special Three parts Com.).
Aug. 16—Mr. Jarr and Circumstantial Evidence (No. 15 of the "Jarr Family" Series—Comedy).
Aug. 17—My Lost One (Broadway Star Features Special—Three parts—Dr.).
Aug. 18—She Took a Chance (Comedy).
Aug. 19—The Quest of the Widow (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Cutey's Awakening (Comedy). —Swedish Army and Navy (Educ.).
Aug. 21—The Dawn of Understanding (Special—Two parts—Drama).

General Film Company Features

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES.

July 6—The Man from the Desert (Special—Three parts—Drama).
July 17—The Confession of Madame Barastoff (Special—Three parts—Drama).
July 20—The Lorelei Madonna (Special—Three parts—Drama).
July 31—The Mystery of Mary (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 3—The Scar (Special—Three parts—Dr.).
Aug. 14—Heavy Villains (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 17—My Lost One (Broadway Star Features Special—Three parts—Drama).

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES.

Aug. 4—Tides of Time (Special Feature—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—Capital Punishment (Special Feature Three parts—Drama).

SELIG, LUBIN, BIOGRAPH, VITAGRAPH, ESSANAY, KALEM, EDISON—Supplied in regular service, one, two, three reels—from our exchange nearest you.

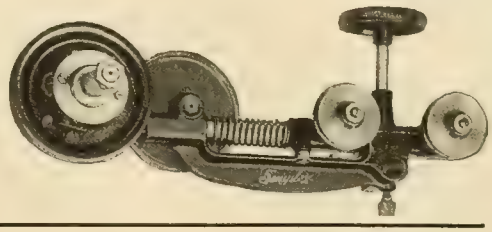
Greater New York Film Rental Co., 126-132 W. 46th Street, New York

1915 Simplex Equipment

Means Many Improvements
No Increase in Price

Speed Control for Motor Drive

A Governor of Speed gives Exhibitor any variation in speed desired instantly.



Lamp House

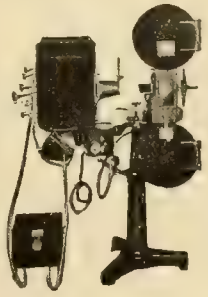
TWO Large Double Doors, Heavier gauge sheet metal. THIRTY-TWO extra holes for Ventilation, reducing the Temperature and increasing the comfort of the Operator who handles the lamp.

Arc Lamp

SEVEN adjustments. All on the OUTSIDE, including TOP CARBON ADJUSTMENT.

Light Shield

That can be inserted into the film trap shield, directly opposite the lamp on the mechanism. Protects the Operator's eyes in operating the machine.



Optical System

YOUR option—No. 1 Gundlach or Crown Special Motion Picture objective. Achromatic Double lens, single combination and set of (high grade) optical glass condensers.

Magazines

New Standard Magazines drawn from No. 18 gauge steel in two pieces, inside diameter 16 inches, accommodating any size reels. Improved malleable iron strap hinges 7½ inches wide, equipped with spiral spring and a substantial spring latch. (Underwriter's requirements for motor driven machines.) Wire glass window in both upper and lower magazines, showing film without opening the door.

Special Simplex Reels

Nickel Plated carries 2,000 feet of film, 5 inch Hub, diameter 14¾ inches.

Ask for Catalogue "A."

Simplex
TRADE MARK REG'D

THE PROJECTOR THAT RECEIVED THE UNANIMOUS APPROVAL OF THE U. S. GOVERNMENT WAR DEPARTMENT.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St··· New York

List of Current Film Release Dates

(For Daily Calendar of Program Releases See Pages 1208, 1210.)

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Big "U," Laemmle, L-KO.
Monday—Broadway Universal Features, Imp, Nestor.
Tuesday—Gold Seal, Imp, Rex.
Wednesday—Animated Weekly, L-KO, Victor.
Thursday—Big "U," Laemmle, Powers.
Friday—Imp, Nestor, Victor.
Saturday—Big "U," Bison, Joker.

ANIMATED WEEKLY.

July 28—Number 177 (News).
Aug. 4—Number 178 (News).
Aug. 11—Number 179 (News.
Aug. 18—Number 180 (News).

BIG U.

July 22—The Burden Bearer (Drama).
July 29—No release this week.
July 31—Mein Friendt Schneider (Drama).
Aug. 5—Out of the Flames (Two parts—Modern Drama).
Aug. 10—Where Happiness Dwells (Drama).
Aug. 12—His Beloved Violin (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 19—Ethel's Burglar (Drama).

BISON.

July 24—The Mad Maid of the Forest (Two parts—Drama of the Woods).
July 31—A Daughter of the Jungles (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 7—Gene of the Northland (Two parts—Northwest Drama).
Aug. 14—Chasing the Limited (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 21—The Gopher (Two parts—Drama).

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURES.

Aug. 2—The Scarlet Sin (Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—Judy Forgot (Five parts—Comedy).
Aug. 16—Just Jim (Four parts—Drama).

GOLD SEAL.

July 27—The Flight of a Night Bird (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 3—The Great Ruby Mystery (Two parts—Detective Drama).
Aug. 10—A Cigarette, That's All (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 17—A Fiery Introduction (Two parts—Comedy-Drama).

IMP.

July 22—Thou Shalt Not Lie (Two parts—Drama).
July 23—No release this week.
July 27—The New Jitney in Town (Comedy).
July 30—The Hunchback's Romance (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 3.—Her Wonderful Day (Drama).
Aug. 6—Leah the Forsaken (Three parts—Dr). (Imp Re-issue).
Aug. 10—To Frisco, Via the Cartoon Route (By Hy Mayer—Comedy—Cartoon).
Aug. 13—Driven by Fate (Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 17—The Country Girl (Drama).
Aug. 20—The Substitute Widow (Two parts—Drama).

JOKER.

Aug. 7—Their Bewitched Elopement Comedy).
Aug. 14—A Dip in the Water (Comedy).
Aug. 18—Her Wedding Night (Comedy).
Aug 21 Bobby Bumps Adventures (Animated Cartoon by Earl Hurd.
Seeing the Funny Side of the World with Homer Croy (Educ.).

LAEMMLE.

July 29—Heritage (Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 1—Paternal Love (Drama).
Aug. 5—No release this week.
Aug. 8—The Source of Happiness (Drama).
Aug. 12—No Release This Week.
Aug. 15—In the Grasp of the Law (Drama).
Aug. 19—The Little Blonde in Black (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 22—Dr. Mason's Temptation (Drama).

L-KO.

July 18—A Doomed Hero (Two parts—Com.).
July 21—The Curse of a Name (Comedy).
July 25—No release this week.
July 28—Life and Moving Pictures (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 1—No release this week.
Aug. 4—In the Claw of the Law (Comedy).
Aug. 8—Shot in a Bar-room (Comedy).
Aug. 11—Hello Bill (Comedy).
Aug. 15—Love on an Empty Stomach (Comedy).
Aug. 18—No release. Replaced with No. 1 extra Joker.
Aug. 22—A Tale of Twenty Stories (Two parts—Comedy).

NESTOR.

July 23—Behind the Screen (Two parts—Comedy).
July 26—The Tale of His Pants (Comedy).
July 30—The Rise and Fall of Officer 13 (Comedy).
Aug. 2—It Happened While He Fished (Cmdy).
Aug. 6—Little Egypt Malone (Comedy).
Aug. 9—Dan Cupid Fixer (Comedy).
Aug. 13—Lost—Three Teeth (Comedy).
Aug. 16—Tony the Wop (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Kids and Corsets (Comedy).

POWERS.

July 24—The Honor of Kenneth McGrath (Drama).
July 29—"The Jap Phenoms" in Famous Acrobatic Feat.
—Strange Mammals at Home (Ditmar's Educational).
Aug. 5—Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "Saved by a Scent" (Comedy).
Aug. 7—Around the Corner (Drama).
Aug. 12—The Elephant Circus (Vaudeville Act).
—Little People in Fur (Ditmars Educational).
Aug. 14—Haunting Winds (Drama).
Aug. 19—Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "The Dread Society of Sacred Sausages" (Comedy).
Aug. 21—No release. Replaced with extra Powers.
Aug. 21—A Double Deal in Pork (Comedy).

REX.

July 20—A Happy Pair (Comedy).
July 25—Bound on the Wheel (Three parts—Drama).
July 27—One on Mother (Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 1—Jealousy, What Art Thou (Two parts—Comedy—Drama).
Aug. 3—The Proof (Comedy).
Aug. 8—Betty's Bondage (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 15—Mountain Justice (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 17—Quits (Drama).
Aug. 22—A Sea Shore Romeo (Comedy).

VICTOR.

July 23—Jeanne of the Woods (Drama).
July 28—The Double Standard (Drama).
July 30—No release this week.
Aug. 4—My Tomboy Girl (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 6—No release this week.
Aug. 11—Refuge (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 13—No Release This Week.
Aug. 18—Lord Barrington's Estate (Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 20—The Taming of Mary (Comedy).

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE.

July 26—The Broken Coin, Episode No. 6, "A Startling Discovery" (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 2—The Broken Coin (Episode No. 7, "Between Two Fires") (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—The Broken Coin (Episode No. 8, "The Prison in the Palace"—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Broken Coin (Episode No. 9 "Room 22,"—Two parts—Drama).

Mutual Film Corporation

RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Komic, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Monday—American, Keystone, Reliance.
Tuesday—Beauty, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Wednesday—American, Broncho, Reliance.
Thursday—Domino, Keystone, Mutual Weekly.
Friday—American, Falstaff, Kay-Bee, Majestic or Thanhouser, Reliance.
Saturday—Keystone, Reliance, Royal

AMERICAN.

July 5—Mountain Mary (Two parts—Drama).
July 7—The High Cost of Flirting Comedy).
July 12—Zaca Lake Mystery (Two parts—Dr.).
July 14—To Melody a Soul Responds (Drama).
July 19—The Honor of the District Attorney (Two parts—Drama).
July 21—Wait and See (Drama).
July 26—The Newer Way (Two parts—Dr.).
July 28—The Deception (Drama).
July 30—After the Storm (Drama).
Aug. 2—Detective Blinn (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 4—The Mighty Hold (Drama).
Aug. 9—The Exile of "Bar-K" Ranch (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 11—Comrades Three (Drama).
Aug. 16—The Jilt (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—The Assayer of Lone Gap (Drama).

BEAUTY.

July 27—Betty's First Sponge Cake (Comedy).
Aug. 3—Cupid Takes a Taxi (Comedy).
Aug. 10—Jimmy on the Job (Comedy).
Aug. 17—The Honeymooners (Comedy).
Aug. 21—What's in a Name? (Comedy).

BRONCHO.

July 21—Cash Parrish's Pal (Two parts—Drama).
July 28—The Phantom Extra (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 4—The Golden Trail (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 11—Shorty Inherits a Harem (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—The Girl from the East (Two parts—Drama).

CUB.

Aug. 19—The Little Hero (Comedy).

DOMINO.

July 29—When Love Leads (Two parts—Drama)
Aug. 5—The Promoters (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—The $100.000 Bill (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 19—The Lighthousekeeper's Son (Two parts—Drama).

(Mutual Releases continued on page 1242.)

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES
Five Thousand.....$1.25
Ten Thousand.....$2.50
Twenty-five Thousand.....$3.50
Fifty Thousand.....$5.00
One Hundred Thousand.....$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c. per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
Shamokin, Pa.

THE FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORPORATION

Producing successful dramas re-enacted before the recording eye of the camera by actors and under directors who have created artistic and box office successes in the "legitimate."

EIGHTEEN EAST FORTY-FIRST STREET, NEW YORK — WILLIAM L. SHERRILL, President

Have You Noticed—

That quietly, but as surely as night follows day, RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS are being installed as standard equipment in the leading photoplay theatres throughout the country?

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS GIVE COMPLETE SATISFACTION

—and the company manufacturing, selling and installing them is a business organization doing business on a strict business basis.

The new sales plan makes it possible for anyone who really wants this perfect projection surface have it. Write for Sample, Prices and Terms.

Radium Gold Fibre Screens, Inc.

Two Hundred Twenty West Forty-second St., New York City

A PERFECT POWERFUL CATHEDRAL PIPE ORGAN
PLAYED FROM THE PIANO KEY BOARD

"THE HARMO"

Three in one—
Organ alone—Piano alone—or both together

Fills the needs of the modern theatre. Has the refined orchestral effects, such as Drums, Cymbals, Chimes, etc. 5 models—to fit any size house with capacity of 300 to 5,000

PRICE—WELL. WE CAN ASTONISH YOU

The Harmo Electric Co., 1423 McCormick Building, Chicago, Ill.

List of Current Film Release Dates

(For Daily Calendar of Program Releases See Pages 1208, 1210.)

(Mutual Releases continued from page 1240.)

FALSTAFF.
July 30—Getting the Gardener's Goat (Com.).
Aug. 6—A Plugged Nickel (Comedy).
Aug. 13—Gussie, the Grateful Life Guard (Comedy).
Aug. 16—The Marvelous Marathoner (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Help! Help! (Comedy).

KAY BEE.
July 30—When the Tide Came In (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 6—The Heart of Jabez Flint (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 13—Over Secret Wires (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 20—A Knight of the Trails (Two parts—Drama).

KEYSTONE.
July 19—Dirty Work in a Laundry (Two parts—Drama.
July 26—Fido's Tin Type Tangle (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 2—Lovers Lost Control (Two parts—Comedy).

KOMIC.
Aug. 1—The Deacon's Whiskers (Comedy).
Aug. 8—Father Love (Comedy).
Aug. 15—The Fatal Finger Prints (Comedy).
Aug. 22—Faithful to the Finish (Comedy).

MAJESTIC.
Aug. 1—Victorine (Two parts—Com.-Dr.).
Aug. 3—Billie's Goat (Comedy).
Aug. 8—Big Jim's Heart (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 10—The Right to Live (Com.-Dr.)
Aug. 15—The Kinship of Courage (Two parts—Melodrama).
Aug. 17—Providence and the Twins (Drama).
Aug. 20—The Root of All Evil (Com.-Dr.).
Aug. 22—The Fatal Hour (Two parts—Drama).

MUTUAL WEEKLY.
July 29—Number 30, 1915 (News).
Aug. 5—Number 31, 1915 (News).
Aug. 12—Number 32, 1915 (News).
Aug. 19—Number 33, 1915 (News).

RELIANCE.
July 21—Old Mother Grey (Drama).
July 24—The Pretender (Two parts—Drama).
July 26—Her Fairy Prince (Drama).
July 28—Billie's Rescue (Drama).
July 31—Fate Takes a Hand (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 2—The Bride of the Sea (Drama).
Ang. 4—The Little Boy That Once Was He (Comedy).
Aug. 6—A Woman of Nerve (Drama).
Aug. 7—The Ceremonial Turquoise (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—The Little Orphans (Melodrama).
Aug. 11—The Noon Hour (Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 14—The Way of a Mother (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Big Brother (Drama).
Aug. 18—An Independent Woman (Drama).
Aug. 21—A Bold Impersonation (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—Farewell to Thee (Drama).

RODEO.
Aug. 9—Aunt Matilda Outwitted (Comedy).

ROYAL.
July 24—Making Over Grandpa (Comedy).

THANHOUSER.
July 25—A Message Through Flames (Drama).
July 27—Outcasts of Society (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 1—The Game (Drama).
Aug. 3—When the Fleet Sailed (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 8—The Revenge of the Steeplejack (Dr.).
Aug. 10—A Message Through Flames (Two parts—Drama).
Cupid in the Olden Time (Drama).
Aug. 13—Weighed in the Balance (Drama).
Aug. 15—The Grosmere Ruby (Drama).

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES.
July 22—The Mating (N. Y. M. P. Corp.—Five parts—Drama).
July 29—Milestones of Life (Thanhouser—Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 5—The Girl from His Town (American—Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—The Toast of Death (N. Y. M. P. Corp.—Four parts—Drama—Masterpicture No. 33).

NORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION.
July 19—The Diamond from the Sky (Episode No. 12, "To the Highest Bidder" (Two parts—Drama).
July 26—The Diamond from the Sky, No. 13, "The Man in the Mask" (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 2—The Diamond from the Sky (No. 14, "For Love and Money"—Two parts—Drama).

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

RELEASE DAYS.
Monday—Balboa, Globe, Pathe, Photocolor.
Wednesday—Pathecolor, Pathe News.
Saturday—Balboa, Pathe News, Phunphilms.

BALBOA.
July 17—The Mesh of the Net (Three parts—Drama).
July 26—Ima Simp on the Job (Comedy).

GLOBE.
July 26—Eggs and Some Tests (Educational) (Split Reel).
Aug. 2—The Kangaroo (Educational).
—In Pekalongan (Picturesque Java—Scenic—Split Reel).
Aug. 9—Native Venders, Calcutta, Inda (Split Reel—Industrial).

JUMBO.
July 19—Where the Trail Led (Two parts—Drama).

PATHE.
July 26—The Romance of Elaine No. 31, "The Death Cloud" (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 2—The Romance of Elaine, No. 32, "The Searchlight Gun" (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 2—Col. Heeza Liar at the Bat (Cartoon—Comedy).
—An Animated Study of Birds (Part 4—Educational—Split Reel).
Aug. 9—The Romance of Elaine No. 33 (Two parts—Drama).

PATHECOLOR.
July 26—The House Divided (Two parts—Dr.).
July 31—Pro Patria (Six parts—Drama).

PATHE NEWS.
Aug. 4—Number 62, 1915 (News.
Aug. 7—Number 63, 1915 (News).
Aug. 11—News No. 64, 1915 (News).
Aug. 14—News No. 65, 1915 (News).

PHOTOCOLOR.
July 19—The Mongoose (Educational).
Aug. 9—In Old "Ile de France" (Colored—Scenic—Split Reel).

PUNCH.
Aug. 2—Whiffles at the Front (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 9—Max and His Mother-in-Law (Two parts—Comedy).

PHUNPHILMS.
July 31—Spit-Ball Sadie (Comedy).
Aug. 9—Soaking the Clothes (Comedy).

STARLIGHT.
Aug. 7—Bold Bad Boys (Comedy).
Aug. 14—Amateur Night (Comedy).

VICTORY.
Aug. 7—The Righted Wrong (Three parts—Drama—Foreign).
Aug. 14—The Dawn of Freedom (Three parts—Drama).

Miscellaneous Feature Releases.

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN FILM COM.
July—The New Evangeline (Drama).

AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT FILM CO., INC.
July—The Battle and Fall of Przemysl (Four parts—Topical).

CENTRAL FILM COMPANY.
August—The Eastland Disaster (Topical).

COSMOFOTOFILM CO.
July—Liberty Hall (London—Four parts—Drama).

DRA-KO FILM COMPANY, INC.
August—York State Folks (Four parts—Dr.).

FOX FILM CORPORATION.
July—The Devil's Daughter (Drama).

FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CO.
August—Just Out of College (Comedy).

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.
July—The Heart of Lady Alaine (Four parts—Drama).

K. & R. FILM CO., INC.
July—Silver Threads Among the Gold (Drama).

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION.
July 12—Marse Covington (Rolfe-Drama).
July 19—The Right of Way (Rolfe-Drama).
July 26—The Second in Command (Quality Dr.).
Aug. 2—Sealed Valley (Drama).

MIRROGRAPH CORPORATION.
July—All for a Girl (Five parts—Drama).

N. C. M. P. INC.
July—With the Fighting Forces of Europe (Topical).

PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORPORATION.
July 26—Society Pilot (Morosco—Drama).
July 29—Puppet Crown (Lasky, Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 2—Rags (Famous Players, Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 5—Sold (Famous Players—Dr.).
Aug. 9—Secret Orchard (Lasky—Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—Nearly a Lady (Morosco—Bosworth—Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—Marriage of Kitty (Lasky—Five parts Drama).
Aug. 19—The Helene of the North (Famous Players—Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—The Heart of Jennifer (Famous Players—Five parts—Drama).

PARAMOUNT TRAVEL SERIES.
The Panama Canal of Today.
Tropical Birds and Animals.
Motoring, Cuba and Jamaica.
Capturing the Lordly Tarpon.
Banana and Pineapple Growing.
Water Sports at the Equator.
Capitol of S. A., At Washington.
The Snow Capped Andes Mountains.
Santiago's Famous Fire Department.

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM COMPANY.
July 15—The Pursuing Shadow (Five parts—Drama).

RANDOLPH FILM CO.
July—Where the Shriner Meets the Cowboy (Drama).

RING LARDNER SERIES.
July 12—"You Know Me, Al" Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 1 (Comedy).
July 19—Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 2 (Cdy.).
July 26—Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 3 (Cdy.).
Aug. 2—Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 4 (Cdy.).
Aug. 9—Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 5 (Cdy.).

SING SING FILM CO.
July—Forty Years in Sing Sing (Three parts—Drama).

SUN PHOTOPLAY CO.
July—The Princess of Judia (Five parts—Drama).

THE GOTHAM FILM CO., INC.
June 1—The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan (Four parts—Drama).

THE PHOTOPLAY RELEASING CO.
July —Sarah Bernhardt at Home (Two parts—Topical).

UNITED PHOTO PLAYS CO.
June—Series A—"Japan" (Six parts—Educ.).

WORLD COMEDY STAR FILM CORPS.
July 26—Pokes and Jabs in a Quiet Game (Wizard—Comedy).
Aug. 2—Pokes and Jabs in Mashers and Splashers (Wizard Comedy).
Aug. 9—Pokes and Jabs in "Juggling the Truth" (Wizard—Comedy).

WORLD FILM CORPORATION.
Aug. 2—Sunday (Lederer Drama).
Aug. 9—The Stolen Voice (Brady Drama).
Aug. 16—The Little Dutch Girl (Shubert Dr.).
Aug. 23—The Master Hand (Premo—Drama).
Aug. 30—The Renegade (Armstrong—Drama).

V-L-S-E, INC.
Aug. 2—The Climbers (Lubin, Five parts—Dr.).
Aug. 9—Chalice of Courage (Vitagraph, Six parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Ring Tailed Rhinoceros (Lubin—Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—House of a Thousand Candles (Selig—Six parts—Drama).

GEORGE KLEINE.
June 21—The Spendthrift (Six parts—Drama).
June—The Commuters (Five parts—Drama).

Announcement

Owing to a little uncertainty which has arisen in the minds of Exhibitors because of recent announcements by an independent program, the licensed manufacturer owning the M-in-A BRAND of comedies released EVERY THURSDAY on the GENERAL FILM PROGRAM, desires to announce that this brand of comedies will continue to be released as usual every Thursday on the Licensed Program.

The nature of these comedies has been, and will continue to be such as will give the most that is possible in a one-reel production—clean interesting comedies without a foot of padding.

The owners of this brand further desire to state that it was never their intention to discontinue this release on the GENERAL FILM PROGRAM.

MINA
FILMS
MADE IN AMERICA

"1,500 People Turned Away Nightly

This illustration shows Console (or Keyboard) of Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra.

Since We Installed

WURLITZER Hope-Jones

Unit Orchestra

In Broadway-Strand Theatre, Detroit"

"Wire" just received from Detroit says:—"Wurlitzer Instrument an overwhelming success. Broadway-Strand turning away 1,500 to 2,000 people daily since Sunday. Compelled to OPEN GALLERY. Mr. Garson, the proprietor, delighted."

Wurlitzer instruments installed in the largest theatres in the country. Write for catalogue and convenient payment proposition.

When in New York, hear a "Wurlitzer Unit" at the Vitagraph Theatre.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

Cincinnati: 121 East 4th St. New York: 118 West 41st St. Chicago: 329-331 So. Wabash Ave.
Philadelphia: 912 Chestnut St. San Francisco: 985 Market St.

Film Business On Business Basis

ASSOCIATED SERVICE

FIRST RELEASES

THE WOMAN HE MARRIED	2R Drama	Ramona
CURING BILL	1R Comedy	Banner
THE VAMPIRE'S VICTIM	1R Drama	Alhambra
BORROWING HOGAN	2R Comedy	Santa Barbara
A KENTUCKY GIRL	2R Drama (Mountain)	Navajo
DON'T BE A DONKEY	1R Comedy	Banner
HER DEVOTED SON	3R Drama	Liberty
NOTHING BUT LOVE	1R Comedy	Federal
A SHATTERED ROMANCE	2R Drama	Deer
ONLY JAKE	1R Comedy	Bee Bee
THE SHERIFF and THE BANDIT	2R Drama (Western)	Empire

GOTHAM PROGRAM, INC.

New York ARTHUR BARD General Manager Los Angeles

You Owe It To Your Spectators

You are not giving full value, no matter how good your film, unless your pictures are clear cut to each corner of the screen.

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses give the film full value and spectators their money's worth.

Patrons appreciate this attention to sharp definition and even illumination, and show it by coming again and again.

From any film exchange you can obtain these lenses. The same as are regularly furnished for Edison and Nicholas Power Machines.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.
566 ST. PAUL STREET, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Largest Manufacturers of Photographic Lenses, Microscopes, Projection Apparatus, Ophthalmic Lenses, Binoculars and other high-grade Optical Products in America.

ELECTRA

PINK LABEL

CARBONS

are a guarantee of perfect projection

A Limited Stock of

5/8 x 12 Cored Double Pointed and 5/8 x 6 Cored Still on Hand

To be had of all first-class dealers

SOLE IMPORTER

HUGO REISINGER
11 Broadway New York

At Liberty

Successful Actress in heavy, emotional and character parts. Distinguished appearance. Previous engagements with leading film companies and first class theatres. Will consider opportunity with established firm only. Address "Artiste," c/o Moving Picture World, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., New York.

MAKE'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

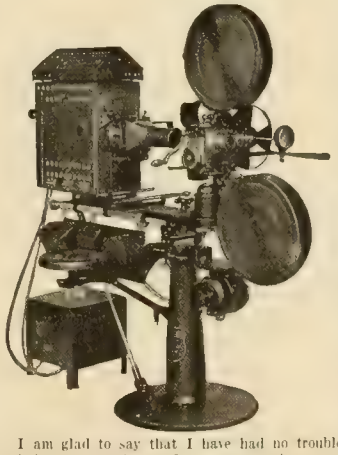
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

The 1916 Model Motiograph
is Giving Wonderful Results

You should give your patrons what they demand.

(Read the unsolicited letter)



St. Petersburg, Fla., 7-22-15.

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen

I want to call your attention to the fact that the proprietor of the Rex Theatre purchased through the Tampa Photo & Art Supply Co., two MOTIOGRAPHS, and am glad to say that the machines are the best I ever saw and they are doing the best work that a machine of any kind can do.

After the first night's run with these machines the patrons came to the manager and wanted to know what had been done to make such a sudden change in the pictures, as they had been improved one hundred per cent. and the manager informed them that he had just put in two brand new machines of the very best make "Well," replied one of the patrons, "they must be the best, for the change they have made in the pictures."

I am glad to say that I have had no trouble in any way with the new machines and they are running as fine as any machine can be made to run. Am delighted with the improvements that have been made.

Yours truly,
BOB GILLOOLEY, Opr.,
The Rex Theatre.

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.
574 W. Randolph St., Chicago

Eastern Office
19 West 23rd St., New York City

Western Office
833 Market St., San Francisco

F. H. Richardson Says:

The Arc Controller

—"HAS PROVEN ITS THOROUGH PRACTICABILITY AND CARRIES WITH IT THE ENDORSEMENT OF THE PROJECTION DEPARTMENT OF THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD."

—"THE CONTROLLER MAINTAINS A PERFECTLY STEADY ARC VOLTAGE, HENCE A PERFECTLY STEADY ARC AMPERAGE AND EVEN LIGHT DENSITY."

Speed Controller Company, Inc.
257-259 William Street New York

The Great Eastland Disaster

PANORAMIC PICTURE, size 5½ x 22, showing four prominent views of this catastrophe. Per 100, $5.00; per 1000 pictures, $40.00.

Post Cards of Eastland Disaster

10 of the most prominent views in post cards. Per 1000 cards, assorted, $5.00

MAX RIGOT CO., Powers Bldg., Chicago

THE LARGEST CAST in the WORLD
Austro-Hungarian, German and Russian Armies are the REAL LIFE actors in

THE BATTLE OF PRZEMYSL

A Four Part Feature Now Ready to Be Shown

This feature was prepared by A C F Staff Correspondents and photographers on the scene of action.

COMING

GERMANY IN WAR TIME—Another remarkable feature. For distribution details write

THE AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT FILM CO., Inc.
Makers of A C F Real Life Features
220 West 42d Street NEW YORK

MOTION PICTURE MAILING LIST SERVICE TALKS

"Theatrical conditions do not warrant publication of a new issue of the Theatrical Directory until 1916. Nine-tenths of the theatres in the United States are changing hands, making it impossible to secure correct information.

(Signed) "GUS HILL."

The above letter emphasizes the value of our service. Are you using it? If not, why not? Its use means a saving to you of from $3 to $5 in postage per thousand theatres circularized.

Write me for details.

W20 FRED HAWLEY.

MOTION PICTURE DIRECTORY CO., 80 Fifth Ave., New York Phone Chelsea 3227

Western agency A. LINCOLN ROTHBLUM, 425 Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.
Phones, Randolph 2003 Auto 41-612

Advance Information Theatres Exchanges Multigraphing Card Index Lists Producers Printing Addressing and Mailing Foreign and Domestic Typewriting

G. W. BRADENBURGH

802 VINE STREET
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Name	Length	Make	Price	Advertising
St. George and the Dragon	3000 ft.	Milano	$75	1-3-8
Hari Kari	3000 ft.	Apex	75	1-3-6
House of Mystery	4000 ft.	Pathe	60	1-3-6
The Invaders (Indian)	3000 ft.	Kay Bee	75	1-3-6
In the Stretch	4000 ft.	Ramo	75	1-3-6
In the Eagle's Claws	3000 ft.	Ambrosio	60	1-3-6
Jack Sheppard	4000 ft.	Hepworth	75	1-3-6
Jess	4000 ft.	Kennedy	75	1-3-6
Life's Temptations	4000 ft.	Imperator	75	1-3-6
Man in the Cellar	3000 ft.	I S P	75	1-3-6
Mexico	4000 ft.	Mex.	75	1-3-6
Mystery of the Death Head	3000 ft.	Monarch	60	1-3-6
'Neath the Lion's Paw	4000 ft.	Gaumont	125	1-3-6
A Victim of War	4000 ft.	Benned	100	1-3-6
Baptism of Fire	3700 ft.	Itala	75	1-3-6
Fall of Constantinople	3000 ft.	(Col.) Gaumont	75	1-3-8
Outlawed	3000 ft.	Ammex	75	1-3-6
Evils of Divorce	4000 ft.	Schiller	100	1-3-6
Into the Depths	3000 ft.	Asta Nielsen	75	1-3-6
Taxicab 1098	3000 ft.	Pennant	45	1-3-6
Devil Within	3000 ft.	Ramo	60	1-3-6
Brother Against Brother	3000 ft.	Apex	75	1-3-6
Lay Down Your Arms	3000 ft.	Apex	75	1-3-6

Duhem Motion Picture Mfg. Co.

RAW STOCK SUPPLIED
EXPERT LABORATORY —FINISHING—
DEVELOPING—PRINTING

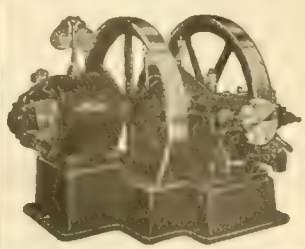
700 HAYES STREET
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THE FOOS

ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANTS

3 to 400 H.P.

Make current for 2 cents per K.W.



Special Electric Engines 3 to 75 H.P., make current as cheap as a 5000 H.P. steam plant. Your central station bills will pay for an outfit in your theatre in 3 or 4 years.

Send for Catalog 98

WARNING

The Publicity Clock Co., 1777 Broadway, New York, are the sole patentees and owners of the Automatic Advertising Clock, (U. S. Letters Patent 1,146,839). Exhibitors and others are hereby cautioned against the use of devices infringing our patent rights.

THE PUBLICITY CLOCK CO.

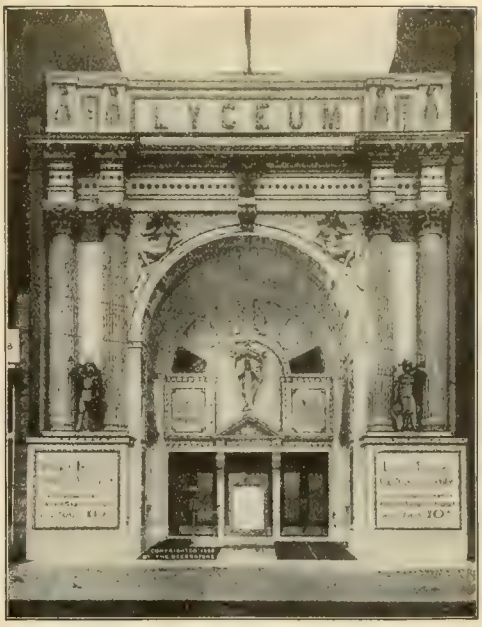
QUALITY FIRST!!
YOUR NEGATIVE DEVELOPED, PRINTED, TITLED and SHIPPED within 12 hours.
5c. per foot complete
Local work given preference over all other.
6c. TITLES per foot
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th Street, New York City

TYPE W FLAME ARC
Powerful LAMPS Economical
For brilliantly illuminating the outside of your theatre
General Electric Company
4987 General Office, Schenectady, N. Y

MENGER & RING, Inc.
MANUFACTURERS OF
Poster and Lobby Display Frames
384-6 W. 42d ST., NEW YORK
Phone Bryant 6621-22

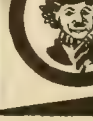
Get acquainted with the
ERBOGRAPH WAY
of Developing and Printing
ERBOGRAPH COMPANY
203-11 West 146th St., New York City

FILMS
Of every description For Sale at remarkably low prices.
FEATURES OUR SPECIALTY
Write for List
THE FILM EXCHANGE
35-37 W. 39th Street, New York, N. Y.



Ornamental Theatres
PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.
THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St., CHICAGO, ILL.

BUSINESS BOOSTERS
SIZE, 15x36"
$1.20 PER 100
SAMPLE
20¢ ------ PREPAID



CHARLIE CHAPLIN
NATIONAL BADGE & PENNANT Co.
105 W. MADISON ST.
CHICAGO ILL.
MANUFACTURERS of PENNANTS and BADGES

KNOWLEDGE BRINGS SUCCESS

Messrs. Exhibitor, Exchangeman, Operator, and Film Men Everywhere:—The moving picture business is one of the youngest but one of the leading industries of the world to-day. We may well be proud to be connected with it. Are you keeping up? Do you know all about it? It will yield larger returns for an equal amount of work to the men who know. Each weekly issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD contains more up-to-date information than you can get from all other sources. Subscribe now if not already on our mailing list. You will get your paper hours earlier than from the newsstand and it costs less.

ONE YEAR.....$3.00
SIX MONTHS.....$1.50
See title page for rates Canada and Foreign
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Avenue, New York.

.....
.....
.....
Cut out and mail today. Theatre.....

READ! READ! READ! READ! READ! READ!

METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE CO. SANATORIUM.
Mt. McGregor, Saratoga County, N. Y.

J. H. GENTER CO., Inc., Newburgh, N. Y. July 9, 1915.

Gentlemen:—

"In regard to Mirroroid screen I wish to say that after having properly mounted same, we are more than pleased with the excellent results obtained with it."

Respectfully yours,
ARTHUR B. NEEB, Pathologist.

Why don't you install a Mirroroid screen now, and enjoy perfect projection contentment? You can make the start by sending for large free samples for competitive tests.

J. H. GENTER CO., Inc.
Newburgh, N. Y.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

BOUND VOLUMES
Second Quarter 1915
April—May—June
Also Complete Sets for 1912—1913—1914

These volumes include every issue of this publication, bound quarterly in a substantial and attractive dark green cloth cover.
Price $1.50 each F. O. B. New York

17 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK

Yearly Subscription Rate:
Domestic, $3.00 Canada, $3.50 Foreign, $4.00

A Reel Bright Spot

Produced Only With

BIO RECOGNIZED BIO CARBONS STANDARD CARBONS

ORDER FROM YOUR DEALER OR EXCHANGE OR FROM

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK
MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St. 165 Greenwich Street SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.

MANAGERS and OPERATORS
You Positively Need

Motion Picture Electricity

A Compilation of "Hallberg's Talks"
By J. H. HALLBERG

Almost 300 pages of meaty facts and information which every motion picture man ought to have at his fingers' ends

PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE AT $2.50 PER COPY, POSTAGE PAID, BY

Chalmers Publishing Co.
17 Madison Avenue, New York

ACTOR

with over twelve years' European and American legitimate and picture experience desires permanent engagement with established company. Expert in make-up and character work. Address C. H. K., c/o Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Avenue, New York.

MONEYMAKING Exhibitors of MOVING PICTURES

RELY UPON FULCO FOR EVERYTHING

MACHINES—ACCESSORIES—SUPPLIES
Catalog No. 5—The "Fulco" Book—Covers the Line from A to Z
E. E. FULTON CO., 152 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO

HAVE YOU TRIED the new FILM CEMENT?
1,000 ft. of film mended every two feet and not a stop or break. Eventually every film exchange and exhibitor will be using this cement, so order now.
Six Bottles for $1.00
One Quart Bottle, $2.50
BUCK CEMENT CO. Pittsfield, Mass.

PATENTS
Manufacturers want me to send them patents on useful inventions. Send me at once drawing and description of your invention and I will give you an honest report as to securing a patent and whether I can assist you in selling the patent. Highest references. Established 25 years. Personal attention in all cases. WM. N. MOORE, Loan and Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

SIMON ARKIN
CONSULTING ENGINEER
Theatre Construction, Projection, Illumination, Lenses and Optometry
346 EAST 173RD STREET
NEW YORK CITY

For POSTERS
Goes Lithographing Co.
Chicago

FILM POSTERS
OVER 5,000 SUBJECTS (ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEETS) IN STOCK.
A LIST AND PRICES WILL BE MAILED UPON APPLICATION
AL JENSEN 110 Fourth Ave. New York City

CARBONS
All standard grades carried in stock. Prompt shipments made.
Write for my prices
Henry W. Davis, Salisbury, N. C.
The South's Exclusive Carbon House

Are You Tired
of playing waltzes and popular songs for all your pictures? Try "bringing out" the dramatic scenes with dramatic music. The Orpheum Collection
contains the best music of this kind published. Issued in Three Series:
No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3
Piano (24 pages each), 58 cts. for each series; $1.15 for any two; $1.70 for all three. Violin, 40 cts. each; 75 cts. for any two; $1.05 for all three. Cornet, 35 cts. each; 65 cts. any two; 95 cts. all three. First and second series have parts for Cello, Flute, Clarinet, Trombone and Drums. Practical for piano alone or in combination with any above instruments. Discounts on orders for four or more parts. Send for free sample pages. Note new address.
CLARENCE E. SINN
1842 West 21st St. Chicago, Ill.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31
The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office
728 Mission Street

REAL QUALITY CHAIRS
FOR
QUALITY REEL SHOWS
Ask for FREE booklet V-2 upholstered Veneer Seating V-3
If you are interested in Motion Picture Theatre Seating
send ground sketch and we will draft for you FREE seating plan, showing the most economical arrangement of seating for your theatre.
American Seating Company
Display Rooms and Installation Service
14 E. Jackson Blvd., CHICAGO 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK
Boston, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Forty Other Large Cities

See the New "1915" Models. After Jan. 1st
"UNLIKE THE ORDINARY CHAIRS"
ADDRESS:
THEATRE CHAIR SALES DEPT.
NEW LONDON,
U. S. A. WISC.
CASTEEL THEATRE CHAIRS
MADE ONLY BY
WISCONSIN SEATING FACTORIES
FACTORIES IN NEW LONDON
PT. WASHINGTON
SHEBOYGAN
U. S. A. GRAFTON

COMPENSARC
That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our BOOKLET 15018
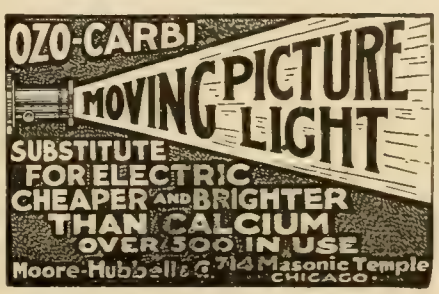
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
of General Electric Company
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA
738

THE PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester, Ind.

Opera Chairs
Folding Chairs
Complete Line
Prompt Shipments
Write for Catalogue
With Direct Factory Prices

OZO-CARBI MOVING PICTURE LIGHT


SUBSTITUTE FOR ELECTRIC
CHEAPER AND BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM
OVER 500 IN USE
Moore-Hubbell Co. 714 Masonic Temple CHICAGO.

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON
HIGH Quality
LOW Price

Opera Chairs
immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.
STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.

FOR SALE

United Film Service Exchanges

By order of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York.

As Receivers in Bankruptcy of the United Film Service, Inc., we offer for immediate sale, the exchanges located in the following cities:

NEW YORK CITY	KANSAS CITY, MO.
CHICAGO, ILL.	BUFFALO, N. Y.
CINCINNATI, OHIO	ST. LOUIS, MO.
CLEVELAND, OHIO	SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
DENVER, COLO.	LOS ANGELES, CAL.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.	SEATTLE, WASH.
WASHINGTON, D. C.	PORTLAND, OREGON

TORONTO, MONTREAL AND CALGARY, CANADA

These exchanges are all in operation and have on hand approximately seven hundred (700) reels of pictures, in one, two and three reel productions, as well as a complete line of paper, photographs, lobby displays and other advertising matter and also approved and up-to-date booking and bookkeeping system for motion picture exchanges. Immediate action is necessary. Wire or have your representative in New York call on receivers prepared and authorized to do business promptly.

Leo. C. Stern, Langdon P. Marvin } Receivers in Bankruptcy

15 William Street
New York City, N. Y.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

SELIG PRESENTS

IN "THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES"

FIVE PARTS

REGULAR PROGRAM

"The Strange Case of Talmai Lind"

A Selig Diamond Special in three reels written by and featuring Miss Kathlyn Williams.

"In The King's Service"

A Selig Special in two exciting reels featuring Thomas Santschi.

RELEASED MONDAY, AUGUST 16th

"The Prima Donna's Mother"

A Selig one reel drama of true heart interest.

RELEASED TUESDAY, AUGUST 17th

"A Jungle-Zoo Wild Animal Pictureplay"

A Selig one reel story with wild animals.

RELEASED SATURDAY, AUGUST 21st

MANUFACTURERS
RAILROADS HOSPITALS
LECTURERS
Y.M.C.A-s PRISONS SCHOOLS
FILM STUDIOS
THEATRES CHURCHES
NAVY
ARMY
AS THE HUB IS TO THE WHEEL
SO IS
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH Nº6A
TO MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION
NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
NINETY GOLD STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Vol. 25, No. 8 August 21, 1915 Price 10 Cents

H E HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "A Knight of the Trails" (Kay-Bee).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

THEY TREATED MEH SHAMEFULLY!

I, SIR, AM LANCELOT FORTESQUE, TRAGIC ACTOR! MEH VERY NAME SYNONYMIZES DRAMATIC ART!

FOR TWENTY LONG YEARS HAVE I FACED UNFLINCHINGLY EVERY FORM OF FRUIT AND VEGETABLE THIS BROAD DOMAIN CAN PRODUCE!

BUT CEDARVILLE! AH, CEDARVILLE! THEIR AIM WAS AS TRUE AS THEIR EGGS WERE STALE—THE WRETCHES! FOUL VIPERS, WHOSE ART IS CONFINED IN TOMATO-CANS!

'TWAS BITTAH—BITTAH! BUT MY REVENGE WILL BE SWEET—FOR I SHALL NEVAH PLAY CEDARVILLE AGAIN!

THE STORY OF THIS THESPIAN'S SORROWS WILL BE TRUTHFULLY RELATED IN A TWO-REEL COMEDY ON TUESDAY, AUGUST 17TH, WHEN

EDWIN THANHOUSER PRESENTS

"WHEN HUNGRY HAMLET FLED"

For Sunday, August 22nd, a walloping drama of romantic Nippon. Real Japanese actors and settings

"IN A JAPANESE GARDEN"

FALSTAFF COMEDIES

2 A Week "THE MIRTH OF A NATION" 2 A Week

"A MARVELOUS MARATHONER"

Boyd Marshall runs a Marathon, wins by a mile, then keeps right on running. If you saw the face of the dame in pursuit, you'd do the same.

RELEASED IN ONE REEL MONDAY, AUGUST 16TH

"HELP! HELP!"

It solves the servant problem—also the grouch problem. Riley Chamberlin heads the big company of funmakers.

RELEASED IN ONE REEL FRIDAY, AUGUST 20TH

THANHOUSER FILM CORP.
New Rochelle, N. Y.

TRADE MARK

FALSTAFF FILMS
FALSTAFF
TRADE MARK

CANADIAN BOOKINGS Now Available

FOR D'ANNUNZIO'S WONDROUS

CABIRIA

Direct from Its World-Triumphal Tours at Standard Admission Prices.

AMERICA'S ABSOLUTE FIRST $2.00 PICTURE.

With a Broadway Record of a Solid Year, Now Being Offered the Better Class Photoplay Houses in the Dominion

FOR TIME AND TERMS ADDRESS:

J. A. DARNABY

BAY TREE HOTEL, TORONTO, CANADA

FOR AMERICAN BOOKINGS ADDRESS

W. B. ISAAC
110 West 40th St.
New York City, N. Y.

METROPOLITAN BOOKING OFFICES
1316 Vine St.
Philadelphia, Pa.

E-L-K FILM CO.
508 Mallers Bldg.
Chicago, Ill.

WICHITA FILM & SUPPLY CO.
117 N. Topeka St.
Wichita, Kansas

HERMAN FICHTENBERG
Plaza Theatre Bldg.
New Orleans, La.

FRANCIS J. GILBERT
1929½ Main St.
Dallas, Texas

AMERICAN FEATURE FILM CO.
162 Tremont St.
Boston, Mass.

METRO PICTURES SERVICE
212 Fourth Ave.
Pittsburgh, Pa.

HARRY I. GARSON
Broadway Strand Theatre Bldg.
Detroit, Mich.

FAMOUS PLAYERS STAR F. F. SER.
Produce Exchange Bldg.
Minneapolis, Minn.

ALL STAR FEATURES DISTRIBUTORS
234 Eddy Street
San Francisco, Cal.

SOUTHERN PARAMOUNT PICTURES CO.
Atlanta, Ga.

SOLE RIGHTS CONTROLLED BY

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA, 110 W. 40th St., New York, N.Y.

Coming! Another Big Success!

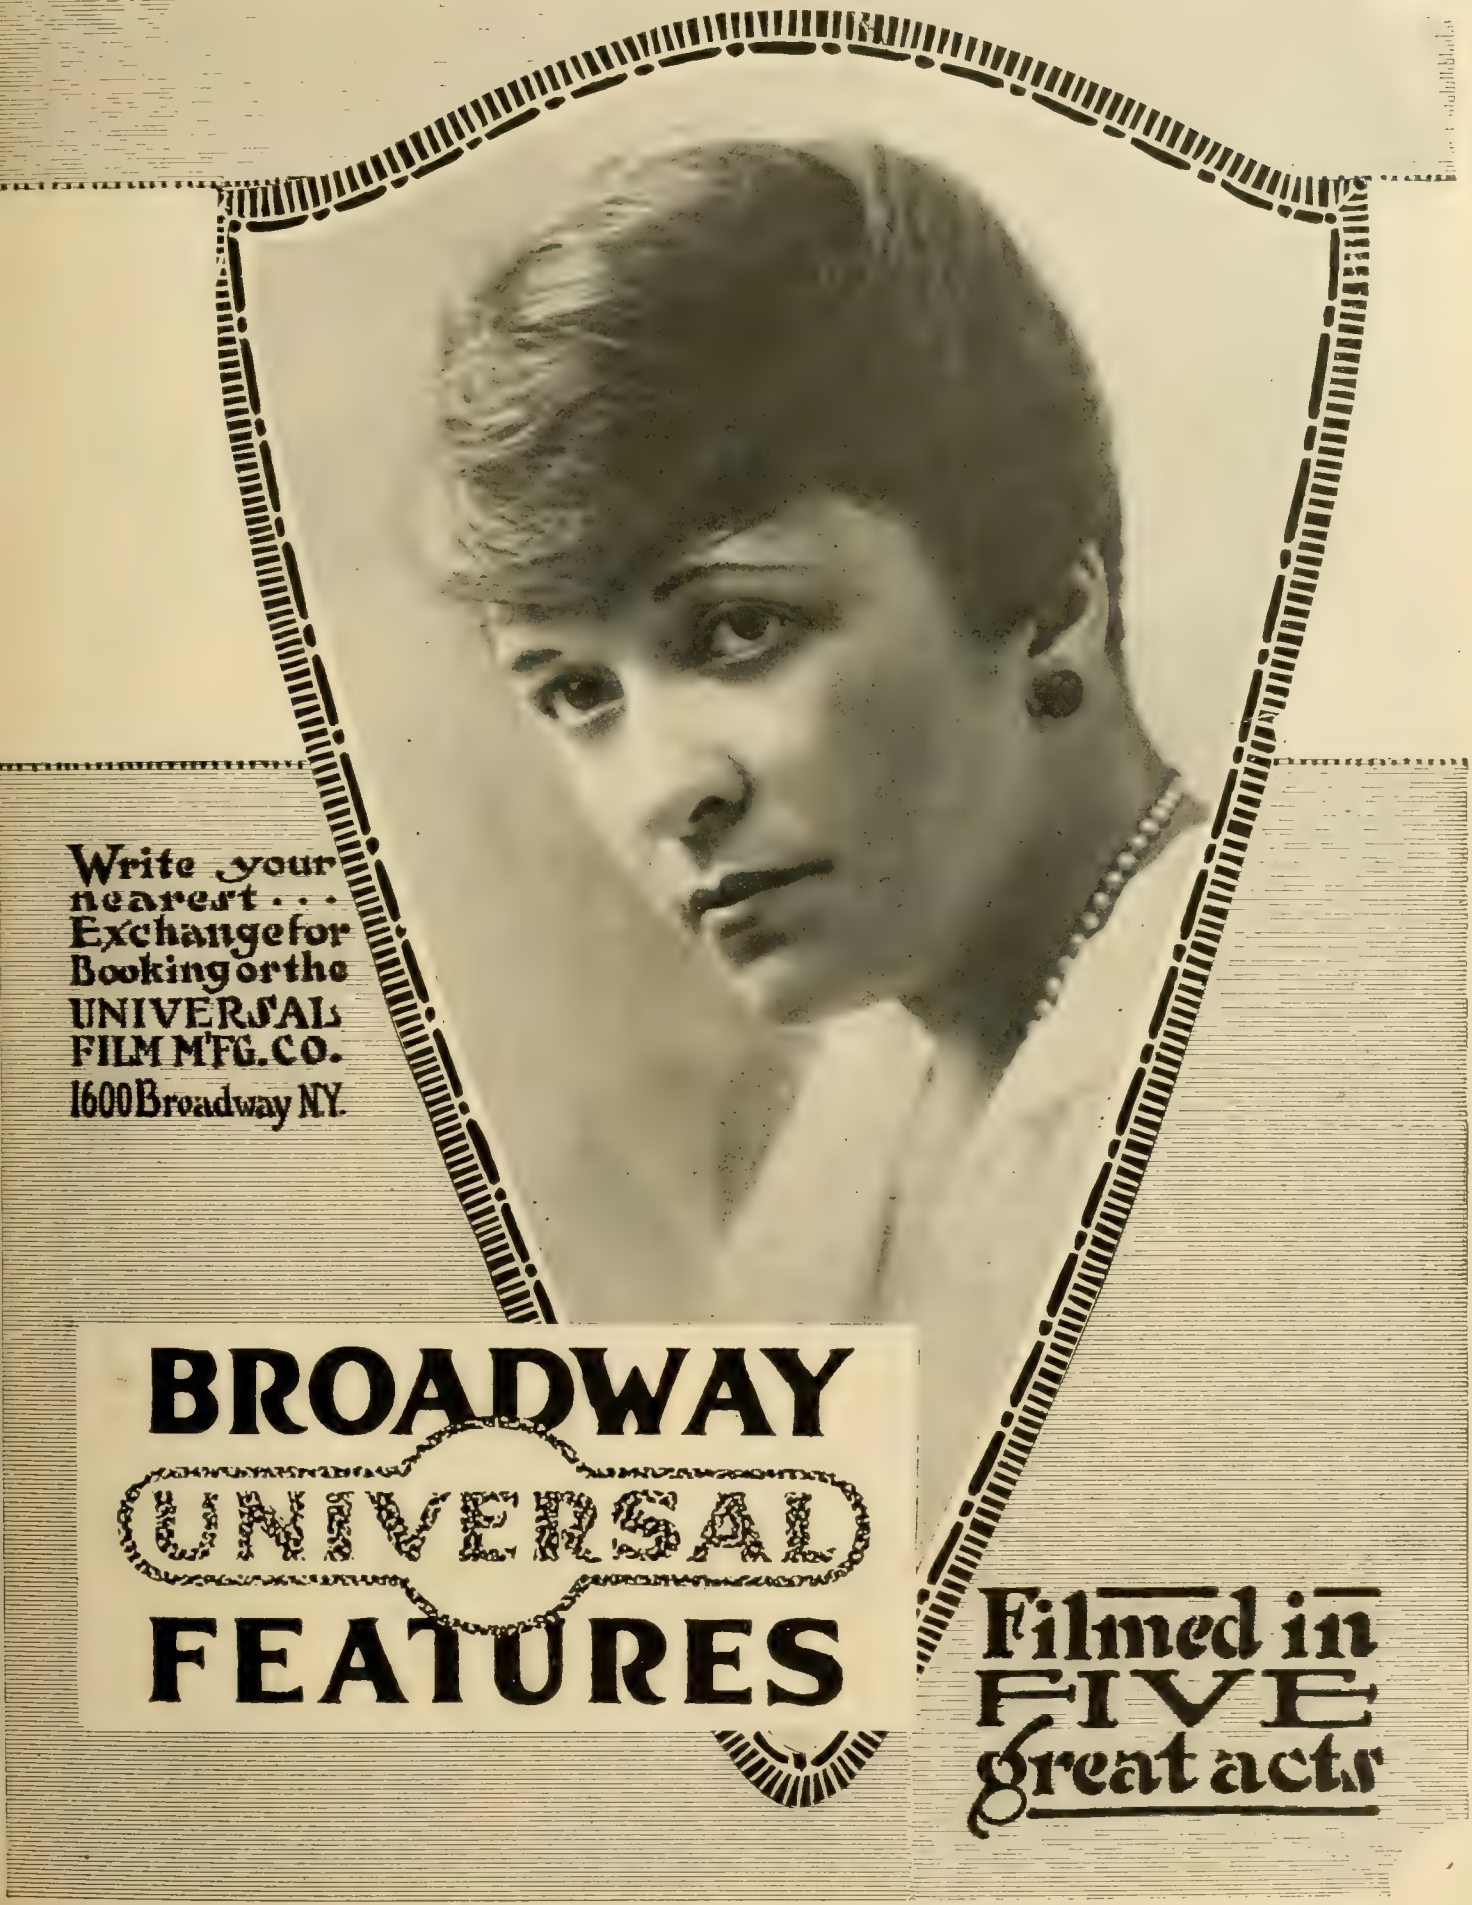
The UNIVERSAL presents
That great Broadway Favorite

Julia Dean

in that gripping and inspiring drama

Story by Peter B. Kyne

"RENUNCIATION"



Write your nearest . . . Exchange for Booking or the UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO. 1600 Broadway N.Y.
BROADWAY
UNIVERSAL
FEATURES
Filmed in FIVE great acts

The UNIVERSAL presents
The Beloved Idol of the Screen

Mary Fuller

In a great Broadway Feature

"Under Southern Skies"

That Beautiful Drama of Love and Romance during Ante-Bellum days in the South.

Filmed in 5 Wonderful Acts

With
Paul Panzer
Milton Sills
Chas. Ogle and other screen stars

A Brilliant Photo-Play Acted by a brilliant Company in and around Savannah, Ga.

Replete with the Charming Atmosphere of the Sunny South, in the Period of 1860

A Play for Everybody, Sweet-Wholesome-Refreshing

Wire Your Exchange For Booking

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURES

The UNIVERSAL presents

Ella Hall

The Darling of the Films

The Beautiful Story "JEWEL"—from the pen of CLARA LOUISE BURNHAM

IN

"Jewel"

Adapted for the Screen by Lois Weber
Direction of Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley

DID you ever cry from sheer happiness? Did you ever laugh with a lump in your throat, while little thrills of joy swept over you? Did you ever see a photo-play so sweet and wholesome that the effect was that of a mental bath?

Were you ever so lifted out of yourself that you forgot to think of your thoughts and feel of your feelings? Can you imagine a play so strong as to make you oblivious to your surroundings, and yet so tender as to be comparable only to the daintily fragile things of life?

Did you ever see a play so satisfying that you wanted to get away by yourself and think about it; to live its scenes over again in memory? A picture so "altogether lovely" you would rather leave the theatre than to have your inward vision destroyed by the next play on the program?

That's "JEWEL." Book this photoplay marvel and you will have the fans talking about it and your theatre for months and months. Pronounced by leading film critics "The Perfect Photo-play." Wire or write your Exchange for particulars of all Broadway Universal Features. Released at a slight advance on the regular Universal Program.

UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.

Carl Laemmle, President

"The Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURES

Edna Mayo

Book Photoplays Stamped With Public Approval

Bryant Washburn

"THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE"

In 6 acts
By Cosmo Hamilton
Featuring
EDNA MAYO
and
BRYANT WASHBURN

★ ★ ★ ★

VIOLA ALLEN

and
RICHARD C. TRAVERS
are presented in

"The White Sister"

In 6 acts
By F. Marion Crawford
Produced by Fred E. Wright

★ ★ ★ ★

Viola Allen

Richard C. Travers

"THE SLIM PRINCESS"

In 4 acts
By George Ade
Featuring
Ruth Stonehouse

★ ★ ★ ★

"GRAUSTARK"

In 6 acts
By George Barr McCutcheon
Produced by Fred E. Wright

Book these features through the
V. L. S. E., Inc.

Trademark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

ESSANAY
"FIRST TO STANDARDIZE PHOTOPLAYS"
1333 ARGYLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Ruth Stonehouse

WORDS MEAN NOTHING

to the exhibitor who is trying to find a program for his theatre

BUT

EXPERIENCE PROVES

That Essanay photoplays solve this problem. They are of steady and consistent worth; tried and proved.

Henry B. Walthall

Edna Mayo

and

Bryant Washburn

are presented in

The fascinating comedy-drama

"THE WOMAN HATER"

(In 3 acts)

By H. C. Chatfield-Taylor

Produced by Charles J. Brabin

Released August 21.

CHARLES CHAPLIN

is seen at his funniest in the latest

ESSANAY-CHAPLIN COMEDY

"THE BANK"

in 2 acts

G. M. ANDERSON

and MARGUERITE CLAYTON

are thrilling millions by their latest western dramas

"BRONCHO BILLY'S MARRIAGE"

Released Aug. 20

"HER RETURN"

Released Aug. 27.

"The Market Price of Love"

A romance produced in conjunction with the Indiana Daily Times.

Released Aug. 16

"Does the Woman Forget?"

A drama that will bring tears to every eye.

Released Aug. 23

"Hearts and Roses"

In 3 Acts

Featuring Darwin Karr

Released Aug. 24

"The Fable of the Roystering Blades"

By George Ade

Produced by Richard Foster Baker

Released Aug. 25

"The Drug Clerk"

A breezy western comedy full of fun and humor.

Released Aug. 26

"Rule Sixty Three"

In 2 Acts

By P. G. Wodehouse

Featuring Bryant Washburn. Produced by Richard Foster Baker

Released Aug. 28

Released through the General Film Co.

A 50-foot scene strip of "A Bunch of Keys," "The Blindness of Virtue," "The White Sister," "The Slim Princess," or "Graustark," is the best way to advertise these photoplays in your theatre. $2.50. Essanay Publicity Dept., or at the V. L. S. E. branch offices.

Special 6-sheet muslin Chaplin Posters.....$1.75 | Essanay
25-foot strips of Essanay stars..... 1.50 | Publicity Dept.
Life sized Chaplin cut-outs for lobby stands, $2.50. At the General Film Co. offices.

Essanay

"FIRST TO STANDARDIZE PHOTOPLAYS"

1333 ARGYLE STREET, CHICAGO

PARAMOUNT

DANIEL FROHMAN
Presents
The Artiste Beautiful,

HAZEL DAWN

In

"THE HEART of JENNIFER"

BY EDITH BARNARD DELANO.

A Drama of Sacrifice,

In Five Parts Released August 30th

PRODUCED BY THE

FAMOUS PLAYERS

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President
DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director
EDWIN · S · PORTER, Technical Director

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

PROGRAM

Some Feature Organizations Produce Talk About Their Subjects!

Others Produce Subjects That Are Talked About!

The difference between both types of subjects is represented in such productions as

MARY PICKFORD

in her latest triumph

"RAGS"

which the trade critics eulogized in the following enthusiastic manner:

"A performance of great appeal—the likable traits of Mary Pickford's personality revealed in all their variety—attractive production."
—Lynde Denig in MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

"Miss Pickford's acting in this subject is so fine, it may be said without exaggeration that the episodes would be wholly intelligible if no sub-titles had been employed."
—William Ressman Andrews in "Motion Picture News."

"As 'Rags,' Mary Pickford takes possession of the heart of the hero, and of the audience as well. The combination of humor and sentiment is very effective. The cast chosen to support Mary Pickford was one of the customary Famous Players strength."
—Tracy Lewis in "N. Y. Telegraph."

If you prefer productions to conversation, book "Rags," and the rest of the unparalleled Paramount Program!

FILM COMPANY

Executive Offices
213~229 WEST 26TH ST.
NEW YORK

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

PARAMOUNT

JESSE L.

PR

THE INTERNATIONALLY FAMOUS COMEDIENNE IN

FANNIE WARD

MISS WARD HAS MADE ROYALTY LAUGH; YOU CANNOT RESIST HER FUN

THE STORY OF A PENNILESS BUT BEAUTIFUL AMERICA

RELEASED THROUGH PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORP. AUGUST 16th

CANADIAN DISTRIBUTORS
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE LTD.
MONTREAL, TORONTO, CALGARY

LASKY

JESSE L. LASKY

120 WEST 41 ST STREET

JESSE L. LASKY Pres. SAMUEL GOLDFISH

PROGRAM

LASKY

SENTS

THE INTERNATIONAL COMEDY SUCCESS

THE MARRIAGE OF KITTY

BY F. DE CROISSET AND FRED DE GRESAC

THOUSANDS WERE DELIGHTED WITH THE FRENCH ORIGINAL
HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS ENJOYED THE AMERICAN VERSION
MILLIONS WILL APPLAUD THE LASKY PICTURIZATION

GIRL WHO WINS A TITLE AND A FORTUNE

FEATURE PLAY CO.

NEW YORK CITY

Treas. and Gen. Mgr. CECIL B. DE MILLE Dir. Gen.

LASKY

Paramount

National Advertising Campaign

Early in September we shall launch the greatest advertising campaign ever attempted in the film industry.

Once each week a goodly sized Paramount advertisement will appear in each of the following newspapers:

Boston Post	Seattle Times
New York Times	Detroit Free Press
Washington Star	Minneapolis Journal
Atlanta Constitution	Salt Lake City Telegram
New Orleans Item	Kansas City Star
Pittsburg Gazette-Times	St. Paul Dispatch & Pioneer Press
Cleveland Plain Dealer	Baltimore American
Chicago Tribune	Providence Bulletin
St. Louis Post-Dispatch	Buffalo News
Denver Post	Omaha World-Herald
Los Angeles Times	Philadelphia Bulletin
San Francisco Chronicle	Memphis Commercial Appeal
Portland Oregonian

Note carefully these dailies—the biggest in the country—they will carry exclusively the announcement of Paramount.

None of these papers will exploit in any manner the plans of any other motion picture concern, notwithstanding statements to the contrary that have been circulated.

Besides these mediums we shall use each month

Saturday Evening Post	Woman's Home Companion
Ladies' Home Journal	Ladies' World

American Sunday Monthly Magazine

An aggregate of many millions of readers daily!

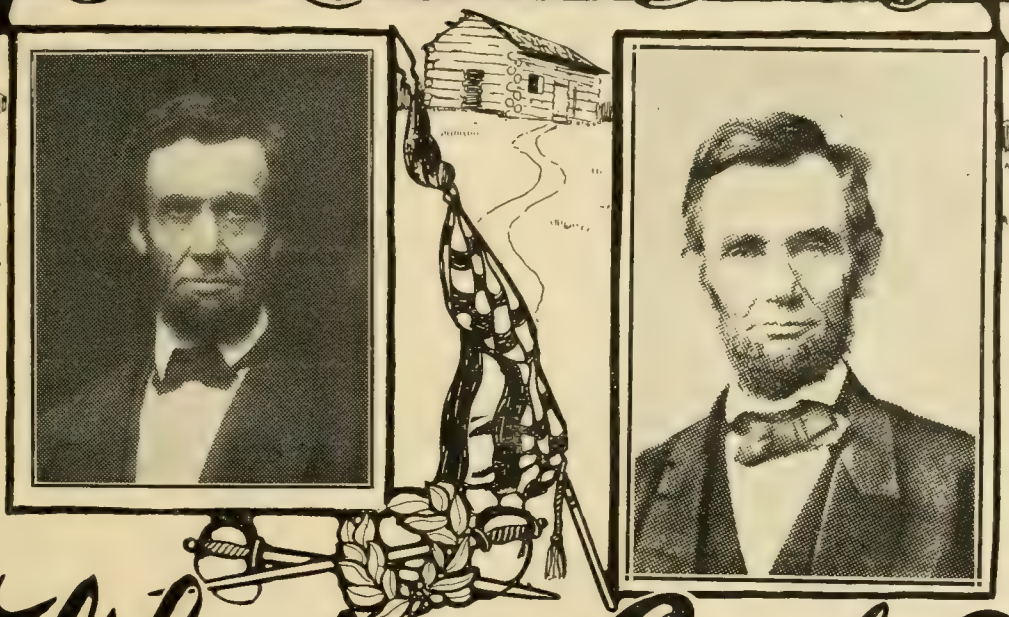
No Paramount exhibitor should fail to connect his theatre with this campaign and so derive the greatest benefit from it.

Paramount Pictures Corporation
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FORTIETH STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

Paramount Pictures

Paramount Pictures

CHARTER FEATURES CORP.



Which is Lincoln?

STUDY these portraits. One is taken from a photograph of Abraham Lincoln, taken by Brady (the war photographer) in 1864, and the other is from a photograph of the famous world-beloved Lincoln man:

Benjamin Chapin

IN THE CYCLE OF
PHOTO DRAMAS BASED ON

LINCOLN

The greatest and most stupendous offering in all the annals.

NEVER was a character so made to live again and revisit his power for good as Lincoln is here permitted to do for all America.

Just as Lincoln was—as a boy, a youth, a rail splitter, a storekeeper, a lawyer, a man, a President—so you see him here in all his power. Just as he was as a son, a friend, a lover, a husband, a father, so you see him in all his sweetness and affection. Just as he was a judge, a pardoner, a general, so you see him here in all his humor, his humility, his humanity.

WATCH FOR THE OPENING DAY AT

(Name of theatre)

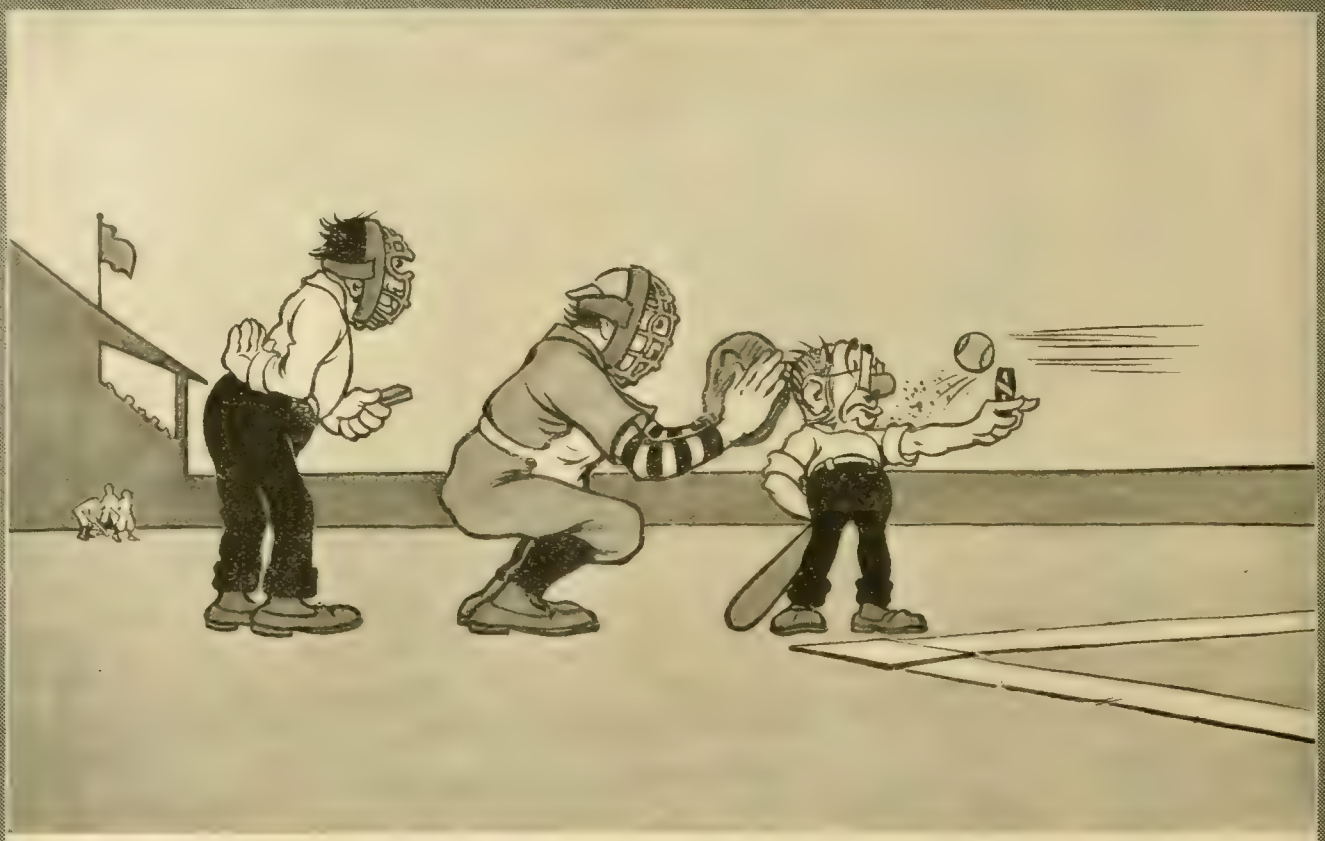
The above is a sample newspaper advertisement reproduced from the much-discussed Portfolio outlining the activities of the CHARTER FEATURES CORPORATION.

If by chance your name has been omitted from the prominent theatre operators who are getting this important document, by all means ask us for a copy.

The Lincoln Cycle has been spoken for by many of the best-known exhibitors in various parts of the country, and already a distribution is assured which will be phenomenal.

CHARTER FEATURES CORPORATION
Makers of Features in Series
110 West 40th Street - New York, N. Y.



In the last inning, with two out, the bases full and the score tied, the Colonel shows his nerve by letting the second strike knock the ash from his cigar!

A HIT IN A PINCH

is "COLONEL HEEZA LIAR AT THE BAT," a new BRAY Comedy, for it will bolster up any program. The Colonel's a scream as a baseball player.

PATHÉ-BRAY cartoon comedies are the last word in clean humor.

Be wise!—Benefit by their popularity and show them!

The PATHÉ EXCHANGE inc.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES

25 WEST 45th ST. NEW YORK

THE TOPIC OF THE TIMES

is the Navy. In the great serial by William Hamilton Osborne, produced by Balboa, and released by the career of a young man is traced from his enlistment as a sailor in the American Navy to his promotion as a commissioned officer. Woven into his adventurous life is a love affair with a beautiful girl. The scenes of navy life are taken with the approval and by the sanction of the Secretary of the Navy.

PATHÉ

Complete in 14 chapters and released September 2d.

Book it now and benefit by the extensive advertising in hundreds of the best newspapers.

The PATHÉ EXCHANGE inc.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES

25 WEST 45th ST. NEW YORK

American Film Company, Inc.
Presents

DRAWING THE LINE

A two part "Flying A" drama, rich in pathos and the kind of action that marks great sacrifice and loving devotion—A girl goes blind—A lover errs—An underworld man effects a re-union.

Featuring

Vivian Rich—Walter Spencer—Jack Richardson
Release Date — August 23rd — Directed by Reaves Eason

HIS MYSTERIOUS PROFESSION

An American "Beauty" comedy-drama—a mixture of romance and baseball. Because he wears spiked shoes, Tom Blake is called a porch-climber.

Featuring

Neva Gerber—Webster Campbell—Lucille Warde
Release Date—August 24th—Directed by Archer MacMackin

MIXED WIRES

A single-reel "Flying A" drama — a tangle of Smiths and telegrams.

Featuring

Winifred Greenwood—Edward Coxen—George Field
Release Date August 25th — Directed by Henry Otto

A QUESTION OF HONOR

A single-reel "Flying A" drama — a father's sacrifice to save his daughter's husband.

Featuring

Vivian Rich — Walter Spencer — Jack Richardson
Release Date—August 27th
Directed by Reaves Eason

A Special Beauty Release!
WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A "Beauty" comedy-drama — a cracker jack!

Featuring

Beatrice Van — John Sheehan — John Steppling
Release Date—August 21st
Directed by John Steppling

Book American Films
Watch Your Profits Grow

Distributed throughout the United States exclusively by Mutual Film Corporation.

American Film Company, Inc.
S. S. HUTCHINSON, President
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

CRASH!

The swift and graceful pleasure yacht strikes the tiny sail boat. The small craft is crushed like an egg-shell. Its only occupant—a woman—is thrown into the deep, cold waters of the bay! In a flash the gallant owner of the yacht plunges to the rescue! A life is snatched from a watery grave.

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY

A Picturized Romantic Novel

By Roy L. McCardell | Directed by William D. Taylor

This is a breath-taking thrill from chapter 16 of "The Diamond From the Sky." Chapter 16—"The Path of Peril"—is now appearing. A new, two-act chapter is released each week. You exhibitors who haven't booked "The Diamond From the Sky"—you are missing the greatest money-maker the film business ever produced. ACT NOW! Get in on this stupendous box-office success.

For booking information write, wire or see at once the North American Film Corporation representative at your nearest Mutual Exchange—or write or wire the

North American Film Corporation

JOHN R. FREULER, President

71 West 23rd Street
New York City

North American Representatives at Every Mutual Exchange in America

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION

B. A. ROLFE offers

EMMY WEHLEN

The exquisite Viennese Actress IN An original story of unusual heart interest

WHEN A WOMAN LOVES

A tale that plays a tune on your heart strings

RELEASED AUGUST 25th ON METRO PROGRAM

BRANCHES GIRDLING AMERICA

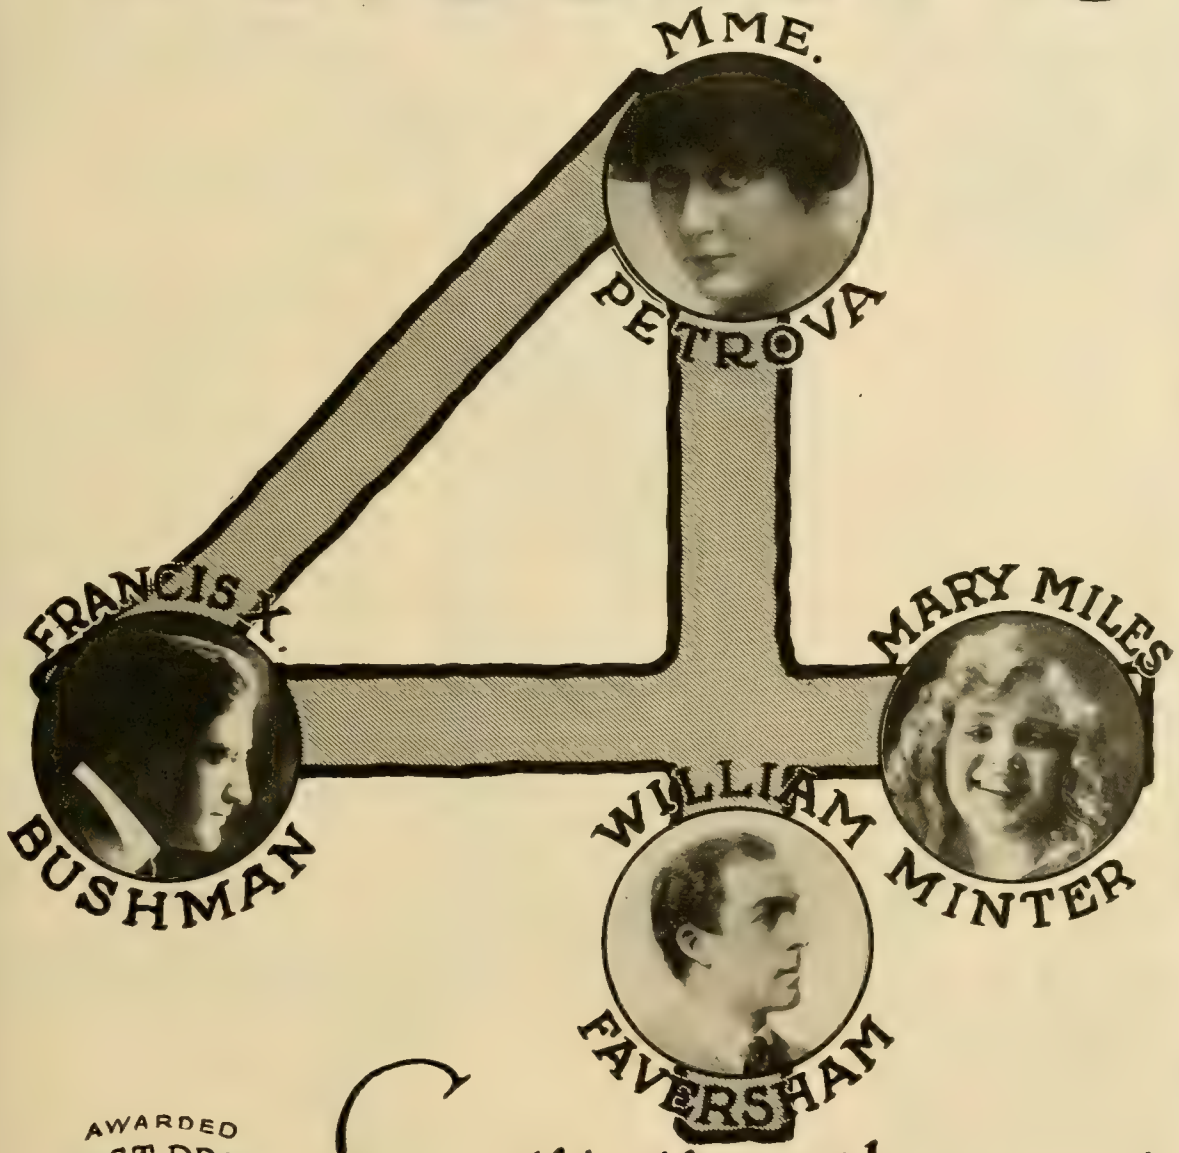
METRO PICTURES CORPORATION

1465 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION

PRESENTS

THE BIGGEST 4



AWARDED FIRST PRIZE

PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION

Constituting the most formidable quartet of stars ever offered as permanent attractions on any program.

BRANCHES GIRDLING AMERICA

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION

1465 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

Guarding

Lindley M. Garrison
Secretary of War

H. L. Scott
Major General
Chief of Staff

These letters from the BIG and NAVY and comments ical judges of pictures

STATE RIGHT BUYERS through wondered WHAT HAD BECOME I had only sold a few states and then

The reason was YOU DIDN'T BELIE feature; therefore these letters of ind it is a feature that every house in the will satisfy and please all audiences ment Officials.

FIVE reels of REAL ACTION— on Land, in the Air, on and Under the

Some States and

F. O. NIELSEN

Mr. F. O. Nielson
Chicago, Illinois

Dear Sir

I have just seen your series of motion pictures entitled "Guarding Old Glory." They are faithful and accurate representations of the various branches of the land and sea forces in the service. They are extremely interesting and instructive; and I wish that every citizen could see them and thereby be induced to feel the personal interest and pride in the Army and the Navy which they so richly deserve

Very truly yours.

Lindley M. Garrison
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF STAFF
WASHINGTON D.C.

July 15, 1915.

Dear Mr. Nielsen:

I witnessed with the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of War the exhibition of films on military subjects entitled "Guarding Old Glory" yesterday in the War Department. I congratulate you for the fidelity of the pictures shown and think this should be an education to many who never see our Army or Navy. It should be especially welcome for this reason in the middle west. I think you are doing a patriotic duty in showing these pictures throughout the country.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

H. L. Scott
Major General,
Chief of Staff.

Mr. F. O. Nielson,
Chicago, Illinois.

IN REPLY ADDRESS
THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY
AND REFER TO NO.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON,

July 19, 1915.

Dear Sir:

It gave me great pleasure to witness the exhibition today by your representatives of the Moving Picture "Guarding Old Glory".

The scenes are selected with remarkably good judgement showing as they do scenes from real service by the men who are kept ready at all times to guard the flag. One particularly good feature of these scenes is that they show the real stern nature of the duty these men are performing in every day training and preparation, and therefore give the public the true character of the lives they are leading.

Every patriotic American who has the opportunity to see these pictures will undoubtedly be benefited by the experience.

Sincerely yours.

Rear Admiral and Chief of Naval Operations, U.S.N.

Mr. F. O. Nielson,
Chicago, Ill.

Old Glory

GEST MEN in the ARMY from one of the most crit-speak for themselves.

out the UNITED STATES no doubt OF "GUARDING OLD GLORY," as pulled it off the market.

VE ME when I told you I had a good orsement JUST TO SHOW YOU that country can show with PRIDE as it just as it pleased our highest Govern-

UNCLE SAM'S FIGHTING MEN Sea.

territory still open

64 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

Josephus Daniels
Secretary of the Navy

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY
WASHINGTON

July 16th, 1915

My dear Mr. Nielsen:

I witnessed with pleasure a private exhibition of your moving picture film entitled "Guarding Old Glory". It is a splendidly realistic exhibition of various phases of Army and Navy life which can not fail to interest the public. I trust that thousands will see these pictures, for I am sure they will increase the pride and interest which people already have in our Army and Navy.

Cordially yours,

Josephus Daniels
Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. F. O. Nielsen,
Chicago, Ill.

Extract from Review in Moving Picture World, by James S. McQuade.

"I viewed five reels of moving pictures the other day, wholly devoted to the United States army and navy, and became so absorbed that, when 'Old Glory' faded out in the final scene, I could scracely realize that I had been watching the screen for nearly one hour and a half."

"The leaders have been most happily chosen and cannot fail to arouse patriotic ardor, and the subtitles are fully explanatory of the scenes."

See June 12th, 1915, issue for complete review

HEADQUARTERS EASTERN DEPARTMENT
GOVERNORS ISLAND N Y

July 20, 1915.

Mr. F. O.Neilsen,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. O.Neilsen:-

I have twice had the opportunity to see the remarkably good moving picture representing Army life in various phases, designated "Guarding Old Glory."

I wish to congratulate you on getting up a particularly good piece of work, one which should be of real educational value, especially with the supplementary explanatory remarks, which you inform me you are going to put in, to give all who see it an idea of what we are especially short of. Your interest has been such as to enable you to produce a particularly good piece of work, and all of us who are interested in the education of the people on the subject of military preparedness, appreciate the effects of your efforts in this direction.

Trusting that you will have a large measure of success, I am,

Very sincerely,

General Leonard Wood
U.S. Army

Thomas A Edison presents

The Little Broadway Star

Viola Dana

3-Act Feature Comedy-Drama

"The Slavey Student"

Written especially for this charming artist
by the celebrated playwright, Lee Arthur

In this play, vibrant with the sweet, wholesome life and love of school days, Viola Dana's own winsome personality and ability were never better evidenced. It is such a play that lingers like a pleasant memory, delightfully refreshing to your patrons who have wearied of this procession of morbid and "blood and thunder" stuff.

The slavey student is none other than the gentle artist, Viola Dana, and if we may believe what a great many Exhibitors are telling us of their own accord, that "little" is a lot. Yet there is plenty of plot heart interest to bind the attention, ably supported by the popular Pat O'Malley. Directed by John H. Collins who directs so well the drama of the home. Friday, August 27th.

Raymond McKee in the funny comedy, "Clothes Make the Man." 1000 feet. Direction, Will Louis. Desperate deeds to regain some missing pants.

Jessie Stevens and Raymond McKee in the comedy-drama, "Matilda's Fling." 1000 feet. Direction, Will Louis.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S REGULAR SERVICE

EQUITABLE

FIRST RELEASE DATE

SEPTEMBER TWENTIETH

TIME YOU GOT ACQUAINTED!

EQUITABLE MOTION PICTURES CORPORATION

Executive Offices: 130 West 46th Street, New York City

Equitable Productions Released Exclusively Through the Branches of World Film Corporation LEWIS J. SELZNICK Vice Pres. & Gen'l Mgr.

WORLD FILM

LEWIS J. SELZNICK

PRESENTS

NAT. GOODWIN AS JOHN BIGELOW

NAT GOODWIN

AMERICA'S BEST KNOWN AND BEST LOVED ACTOR

IN

THE MASTER HAND

PRODUCED BY PREMO FEATURE FILM CORPORATION

DIRECTED BY HARLEY KNOLES

A 5 PART PHOTODRAMA COMBINING PATHOS, COMEDY AND THRILL

THE MOST EXCITING STOCK-MARKET BATTLE YET PRODUCED

MR. GOODWIN'S IMPERSONATION OF HIS OWN BUTLER IS A BIT OF CHARACTER ACTING THAT HAS RARELY, IF EVER, BEEN SURPASSED

WONDERFUL STORY – WONDERFULLY FILMED

HOME OFFICE 130 West 46th Street New York

CORPORATION

Vice Pres. & Gen. Mgr.

PRESENTS

Filmdom's Daintiest Star

VIVIAN MARTIN

The Perfect Ingenue

IN

The LITTLE DUTCH GIRL

A Picture Version of Ouida's Novel of Compelling Charm

Two Little Wooden Shoes

A Story of Real Sentiment Delightfully Enacted

Phone BRYANT 4020 BRANCHES EVERYWHERE

Were you ever numbered among the "Pajama Thief's" victims?
For years this man robbed guests of the country's best hotels, entering their rooms in the dead of night and clad only in pajamas.

This criminal, the most elusive that ever engaged the attention of hotel authorities, was finally captured by E. J. Noonan, of the Hotel Jefferson, St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Noonan's story of the thief's career was so extraordinary that we made it the basis of

A DOUBLE IDENTITY

Released in Regular Service, Wednesday, August 25th

One of the Twelve Weekly Two-Act

MYSTERIES of the GRAND HOTEL

Some of the most prominent hotels in the country helped us create the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel." Among them are, the McAlpin and Buckingham, of New York City; Auditorium Hotel, Chicago; Hotel Mason, Jacksonville; Hotel Savoy, Kansas City; Hotel St. Francis, San Francisco, etc. Tell your nearest rental exchange to put you down for every one of the twelve episodes!

Special 1, 3 and 6-sheet 4-Color Lithographs

This Series obtainable at all General Film Branch Offices and Greater New York Film Rental Company

KALEM COMPANY

235-39 West Twenty-Third Street New York City

Myrtle Tannehill

The Actress Who Scored on Two Continents

In the Four-Act BROADWAY FAVORITES Feature Production

THE BARNSTORMERS

A Story of Theatrical Life

Released in Regular Service, Monday, August 23rd

Miss Tannehill is one of the few American actresses whose fame is international. As the result of her work in "Broadway Jones," at George M. Cohan's Theatre, this star was sent to London, where she repeated her American success when the play was presented at the Theatre Royal. Her other London vehicles included "The Fortune Hunter," at the Queen's Theatre, and "Sealed Orders," at the Drury Lane. Returning to this country, Miss Tannehill scored in "Snobs," presented at the Hudson Theatre, and in "A Pair of Sixes," the play which nightly filled the Longacre Theatre, last season. The charming star enacts the role of Nell Lavelle, a soubrette, in this powerful drama of the stage.

Special 1, 3 and 6-Sheet, 4-Color Lithographs

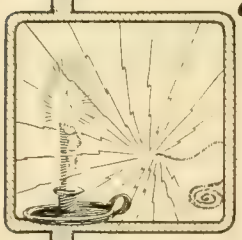
This Picture obtainable at all General Film Company Branch Offices and Greater New York Film Rental Company

KALEM COMPANY

235-39 West 23d Street, New York City, N. Y.

Lubin

COMING RELEASES



"The SPARK & THE FLAME"

A ONE ACT-COMEDY DRAMA WITH GEORGE ROUTH & DOROTHY BARRETT

RELEASED AUGUST 23d

"DOGGONE LUCK" AND "THE VICTORIOUS JOCKEY"

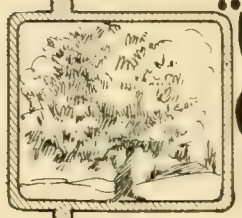
THE LATTER A CARTOON COMEDY

RELEASED AUGUST 24th

"A SPECIES of MEXICAN MAN"

A THREE-ACT DRAMA, FEATURING ROMAINE FIELDING & VINNIE BURNS

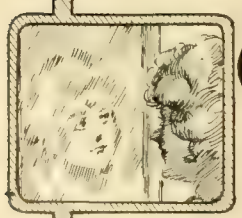
RELEASED AUGUST 25th



"UNDER THE FIDDLER'S ELM"

DRAMA IN ONE ACT, WITH EDGAR JONES JUSTINA HUFF

RELEASED AUGUST 26th



"THE MIRROR"

DRAMA IN ONE ACT, FEATURING ETHEL CLAYTON, CRANE WILBUR, & THURSTON HALL, LATE STAR OF THE ONLY GIRL CO.

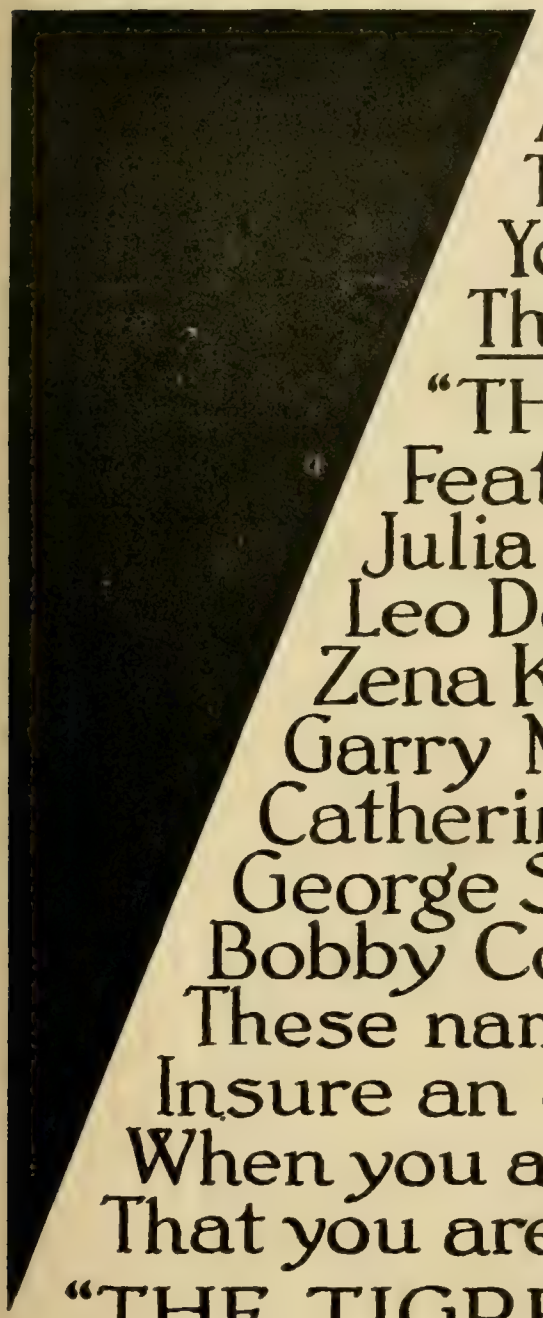
RELEASED AUGUST 27th

"BILLIE JOINS THE NAVY"

AN UPROARIOUS FARCE IN 1 ACT, FEATURING BILLIE REEVES AND THE OFFICERS AND CREW OF THE UNITED STATES BATTLESHIP ALABAMA, TAKEN AT LEAGUE IS. NAVY YARD, PHILA.

RELEASED AUGUST 28th

"There are more stars used in one Vitagraph feature than in most other producing companies' entire programs."....Critic.



Broadway Star Features
Are the best
Three reel pictures
You can procure.
They are consistently good.
"THE TIGRESS"
Features
Julia Swayne Gordon
Leo Delaney
Zena Keefe
Garry McGarry
Catherine Franek
George Stevens and
Bobby Connelly.
These names themselves
Insure an excellent attendance
When you advertise
That you are showing
"THE TIGRESS".
Book through the General Film Company.
Released August 28th.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA
EXECUTIVE OFFICES
EAST 15TH ST. & LOCUST AVE., BROOKLYN, N.Y.
NEW YORK CHICAGO LONDON PARIS

THE GODDESS

Will outlive
Any continued photoplay
In the minds of your patrons,
BECAUSE .....
From the standpoint of literature
It may be classified
With the works of CHARLES DICKENS.
From the standpoint of artistry
It may be compared
With the works of SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS.
From the standpoint of continued photoplays
IT IS IN A CLASS BY ITSELF.
Written by the best of authors,
Enacted by the cleverest people,
Produced by the brainiest director,
Released by The Vitagraph Company of America
Through The General Film Company.

VITAGRAPH

"Mr. Jarr and Circumstantial Evidence"

Comedy .....MONDAY, AUGUST 16

"The Grass Widow," a saddle horse, a broken-down Ford, a bullfrog and a camera fiend, all help to get Jarr and his boss into trouble. When things straighten out, the camera fiend "gets his." HARRY DAVENPORT and ROSE TAPLEY are the principals.

"My Lost One"

Three-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature
TUESDAY, AUGUST 17

Unable to resist the Opera Director's vivid promises of a brilliant operatic career, a former chorus girl leaves her husband. Months later he finds her starring in a beautiful opera which had been stolen from him. Presenting DOROTHY KELLY and WILLIAM DUNN.

"She Took a Chance"

Comedy .....WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18

Mrs. Luckey takes a chance on a prize pig. She wins it and her family makes it the prize goat. Piggie's strenuous career ends up in the sausage factory. KATE PRICE and WILLIAM SHEA in the leads.

"The Quest of the Widow"

Comedy .....THURSDAY, AUGUST 19

In his quest for the widow's hand, Perkins finds the road anything but smooth. In the end he only gets the laugh. An all-star cast of Western Vitagraph Players.

"Cutey's Awakening"

Comedy .....FRIDAY, AUGUST 20

Cutey is frivolous, but wideawake, and his Big Business Talks convert a business rival into his father's friend and partner. Cutey strengthens the combination by marrying the partner's daughter. WALLY VAN, NITRA FRAZER, ALBERT ROCCARDI and TEMPLER SAXE are the cast.

"The Dawn of Understanding"

Two-Part Drama.....SATURDAY, AUGUST 21

Memories of happier days, awakened by a baby's photo, and the knowledge that Love is not dead, reunite long-separated couple. MAURICE COSTELLO and LEAH BAIRD are the leads.

Six a Week, Including a Three-Part Broadway Star Feature

"THE CUB AND THE DAISY CHAIN"
Comedy .....Monday, August 23

"FROM THE DREGS"
Two-Part Drama .....Tuesday, August 24

"A CITY RUBE"
Comedy .....
and
"PEARLS OF THE BALTIC"
Educational .....
Wednesday, August 25

"THE GOOD IN THE WORST OF US"
Drama .....Thursday, August 26

"THE WARDROBE WOMAN"
Drama .....Friday, August 27

"THE TIGRESS"
Three-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature
Saturday, August 28

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX-SHEET POSTERS

Always Consistently Good

Try Them

The VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA
East 15th St. and Locust Ave.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

ANNA ORR

In the Powerful Three-Act "BROADWAY FAVORITES" Feature

THE MASKED DANCER

So great was the success scored by Miss Orr when she appeared with Raymond Hitchcock in "The Beauty Shop," at the Astor Theatre, that she remained in this production for two years. The dainty danseuse also scored with Richard Carle in "Mary's Lamb," and with Mizzi Hajos in "Springmaid." Miss Orr appears at her best in this powerful story of an Oriental maid's quest for vengeance.

Released Monday, August 30th. Unusually striking 1, 3 and 6-sheet, 4-color Lithographs.

MIXING IT UP!

An inquisitive porter, an irate husband and a love-smitten tailor get into a mix-up which provides a laugh a minute. Bud Duncan is the tailor.

Released Tuesday, August 31st. 1 and 3-sheet, 4-color Lithographs for this comedy.

GANGSTERS OF THE HILLS

A Modern Two-Act Drama

Released from prison, the counterfeiter discovers that his wife and daughter are victims of his gang's activities. His revenge results in a startling climax.

Released Friday, September 3d. Attractive 1, 3 and 6-sheet, 4-color Lithographs.

THE FALSE CLUE

One of the Twelve Weekly Two-Act

Mysteries of the Grand Hotel

The incidents upon which this remarkable episode is based, were furnished by the officials of the Hotel St. Francis, San Francisco.

Released Wednesday, September 1st. Special 1, 3 and 6-sheet, 4-color Lithographs.

THE BROKEN RAIL

An Episode of the

Hazards of Helen Railroad Series

Helen's heroism in snatching a man from the very jaws of death, is just one of the daring feats she performs.

Released Saturday, September 4th. Strong 1 and 3-sheet, 4-color Lithographs.

These pictures obtainable at all General Film Company branch offices and Greater New York Film Rental Company

Kalem Company

235-239 West 23rd Street New York City, N. Y.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published Weekly by the

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY

17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
J. F. Chalmers.....Vice-President
E. J. Chalmers.....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.....General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

CHICAGO OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.
PACIFIC COAST OFFICE—Haas Building, Seventh St. and Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal. Telephone, Broadway 4649.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada.....3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid).....4.00 per year

All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written, and require two weeks.

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTE—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 1400.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter

Saturday, August 21, 1915

Facts and Comments

IN COMPLIMENTING THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD on its recent article about the effect of motion pictures on the eyes one of our readers remarks in a letter to the editor that "there is a brand of films which flashes all its leaders in a tint of dark pink and often in fancy letters, making them difficult to read." "I believe," continues our correspondent, "this brand is the one exception among all other films—it is harmful to the eye. The practice should be discouraged." Of course we agree with the writer.

* * *

GENERAL JOFFRE, the great leader of the French armies, in a recent interview published in the Petit Journal, in Paris, pays a most intelligent tribute to the motion picture. He expresses his belief that the motion picture industry "is doing its full duty, especially in the days of this terrible war." "There are," he continued, "now lying upon my table several reels of pictures made by our official cameramen. These pictures show our brave 'poilus' in their trenches close to the enemy. I have received some films from Russia showing our allies facing the Germans in battle. What a wonderful invention is the motion picture! What tremendous value these few films will have one day—I hope they will be shown in Australia, in Canada, in Japan and all over the world."

* * *

WE have been asked to awaken General Apathy from his comatose condition. The particular General Apathy in question seems to have invaded the ranks of the exhibitors in Alabama. An officer of the state organization writes to us of the hard fight on the Sunday question. He tells us that a bill was proposed in the state senate to close the picture shows on Sunday. "We have had a hard fight to beat this bill," writes our friend, "with no one to help but the local (Montgomery) exhibitors, as the Mobile people don't seem to take much interest in it, though the provisions of the bill affect them as well as us. * * * If the exhibitors of Alabama were organized properly there would be no trouble at all in defeating such legislation." The facts speak for themselves. If exhibitors cannot see the benefits of state organization how can they be expected to recognize the advantages of national organization.

* * *

PERTINENT to this question is the state of affairs in this state. With the Court of Appeals squarely sustaining the legality of the Sunday exhibition within the State of New York we may be very sure that the enemies of the motion picture theater will make tremendous efforts at the coming session of the legislature to amend the law by expressly forbidding exhibition of motion pictures on Sundays. If such an amendment passes even the exhibitors in New York and Buffalo will suffer, no matter how liberal and sensible their local administrations might be. It will then be in the power of the fanatics to start "crusades" and cause untold losses to the exhibitors, to say nothing of the plight of the public, which will then be deprived of its favorite amusement on the one day when they have ample time to enjoy it. Now is the time for the exhibitors of this state to get busy.

* * *

A FRIEND and reader from Michigan writes to us of the change in the attitude of the press toward the motion picture. Quoting from an editorial which denounces censorship our correspondent says: "The press now have their finger on the pulse of the people on the censorship question, and with the possible exception of a few fanatical editors I do not believe that the motion picture industry has much to fear from the press." All of which is true, and the best of it is that the industry has fully deserved this tribute from the daily press of the country.

* * *

THOSE producers and distributors are wise who recognize the immense possibilities which the European market offers to American films after the end of the present war. In the belligerent countries production has come practically to a standstill. Even now, with the war at its worst, business has increased in England. The central empires and Russia have a very limited supply. France and Italy may not suffer very long from a lack of films, but the market for Germany and Austria, supplying a population equal to our own, offers wonderful chances to the American producer.

Coming Events

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

MOST elusive quantity in a story is that which is so carefully suggestive at the outset that no strain shall be put upon credulity in either development or crisis, yet which mystifies while it suggests and augments curiosity as to the outcome. It has been entitled "foreshadowing," and that term may do for lack of a better one, though the shadow of coming events should only be clearly enough defined to account for strange happenings without making it known what they are to be. It is a perilous thing to "foreshadow" events in a story, especially where there is a condition of suspense to be maintained, and, on this account, it is rarely successful except when used by experienced writers. A well-known critic declares, however, that a story bears the mark of an amateur, or of a bungler, when it lacks this very quality, so essential is it to that completeness of form and structure which characterizes the work of professionals.

Plenty of true stories, if told exactly as they happened, would arouse skepticism, if not derision. On the other hand, a pure figment of fancy may be so cleverly handled as to give an impression, if not of absolute truth, of satisfactory rationality. Even the rational is not necessary if some beautiful truth is symbolized in purest romance, for the power of that truth completely overshadows the method of its telling—its guidance is the more eagerly sought that we are enveloped in mist—but it is made particularly effective by aroused anticipation that there exists a way out of the mystery in which we are involved, if a means of escape is made possible by delicate intimation during the early scenes. The value of foreshadowing lies not wholly in the aid it affords to realism and in its contribution to the fine art of arousing and sustaining interest, but also in the fact that its clever employment lends material force to characterization.

An impression of realism is rarely given by a crude presentation of the actual truth. It is almost purely a question of psychology. Breaches of veracity may be committed over and over again if the people in front are led to consider the possibility of certain events and become associated in a sort of compact between author and audience which is entirely satisfactory in the end. No better illustration is needed than the casus belli of European nations engaged in destroying human life on an enormous scale. From this distant and fairly unprejudiced point of view many of us may be able to penetrate the cause of so much horrible slaughter, but the men on one side have become convinced that they are fighting for a just cause, and the men opposing them that they only are in the right. We know that the truth is hidden from both.

Why should an enormous number of individuals be so deeply convinced that they are contending for splendid principles, when it is obvious to cool-headed critics that one or the other or both are wrong? There is a question of pure psychology involved. How simple the art of influencing minds in a mixed crowd at the picture theater becomes in comparison with the art of influencing men eminent in all walks of life to destroy one another. The greatest of world wars has been so constantly foreshadowed that it is taken as a matter of course.

Not only during the early stages, but just before there is a catastrophe in the visualized story may the events to come be foreshadowed with effect. It is done by Nature. We feel that the atmosphere is pregnant with change. There is a nervous flight of birds; there is a sudden rush of fitful gusts of wind; the door slams unexpectedly; the light flutters; dark masses of cloud pile up in the sky; the action of invisible forces is promised, forces over which we can exert no control. A cumulative period of preparation immediately precedes a tragedy. We shudder in anticipation when we might not be deeply affected by realization. Forebodings are aroused that characters in the visualized play are about to enter upon a struggle with Fate, and we are disquieted from sympathy with them, aware of the gradual approach of disaster, profoundly interested in the outcome.

Even the novice knows enough to have a weapon shown during the early stages of a story, if it is to be used with murderous results later on, but he does not give due recognition to the fact that a very large majority of men lack criminal intent, that very few have murderous weapons lying around loose, and that they must be shown as having periods of moral decadence to account for their committing a capital crime. Nearly all crimes are committed in the pursuit of self-gratification at the expense of society in general, and the intelligent man has many means of retaliation against a supposed enemy not so opposed by his finer self as murder; hence there is a lot to show besides the weapon itself in foreshadowing the deliberate murder of a fellow-being. Influences must be indicated which overcome natural repugnance and fear of harsh punishment for the deed. Advance characterization also becomes extremely necessary in such cases.

It is not to be inferred that a noble end may always excuse ignoble means. In simple illustration is the all-too-common story of a man hard-pressed by misfortune and up against the unexpected requirement of a sum of money to save a dear one's life. Temptation is placed in his way by chance, and he yields to it on impulse. It is more in accord with experience and with human nature that he should avoid injuring others in the pursuit of a noble end. The very compassion he feels indicates aversion to a criminal course. His underlying motive good, it is hard to believe that he will not make prodigious efforts of the right kind to save his dear one rather than burden that dear one with a humiliating sense of receiving benefits all out of harmony with the means employed to obtain them.

Consistency imposes a limitation of any foreshadowing of coming events, as, indeed, it does upon all kinds and phases of dramatic structure. To make that structure harmonious in all its parts neither the shadow nor the events must offer contradiction to what is commonly known of human nature and human conduct. The shadow may be nebulous, but it must stand in agreement with what is to come, for the excellent reason that it is worse than useless, a positive detriment, when satisfaction does not result. The psychology involved is that we all enjoy having formulated a possible end to the story, though we may feel decidedly insecure about it during intermediate development. Part of the scheme of suspense devised to hold an audience on edge during the presentation is that of keeping the end a secret, but it is quite as essential that we hint at that end in a mysterious way to set that audience guessing at the earliest possible moment.

*Copyright, 1915, Louis Reeves Harrison.

"Killing the Business"

By W. Stephen Bush.

IN these days when so many film men are advocating a raise in the price of admission, it seems strange that three-cent shows and unfair competition are still of rather frequent occurrence.

A recent trip through some cities in Northern New York has revealed a deplorable condition. If such conditions were purely geographical and confined to these cities the matter might be dismissed as a minor evil, but from letters and from conversations with exhibitors and exchangemen it seems but too certain that we are confronted with no local evil merely, but that the state of affairs in Northern New York is paralleled elsewhere.

Having never seen a three-cent show and having never known of the advertisement of a three-cent show it was difficult for me to believe that such a thing was other than a myth. "Seeing, however, is believing," and now I know that in one place at least there is an exhibitor showing six and seven reels for three cents and admitting two children for five cents. It is true that the place is ill-ventilated, wretchedly lighted; that the floor is strewn thick with peanut-shells and that a musty, nasty smell pervades the whole place. It is also true that according to all appearances the "theater" will not last long and its proprietor will soon be adorning some other line of business. Who, however, can estimate the damage done by this man to the decent exhibitors of the town, who are endeavoring to run a clean and honest show, who pay their film bills promptly and who are aware of their responsibilities? In this same city I found exhibitors who take a just pride in their calling, who strive to give the public fair value and who are anxious for the good name of the business. Not only are these decent exhibitors harmed and outraged, but the prestige and the reputation of the whole industry suffers. The enemies of the motion picture dearly love to have such a "horrible example." What matters it to them if the majority conduct a clean and reputable business? In their mistaken zeal or their partisan hostility they ignore the hundred good places to harp on the one misfit.

How is this evil to be remedied? Are the exhibitors themselves at fault? Is it in the power of the exhibitors to organize and to prevent such outrages? It is only fair to say that the blame for these conditions must be laid at the doors of the exchange and the producer. The exhibitor, no matter how good his intentions, can do nothing whatever without the active aid and co-operation of the exchange and the producer.

Take the one case I have mentioned. The first question which suggests itself is this: Where does this purveyor of the three penny entertainment obtain his film service? Is it reasonable to assume that the exchange which serves him does not know of his three-cent scheme? In a small community such an assumption is simply too ridiculous to be entertained. Of course the film exchange knows. This particular "exhibitor" is well but not favorably known to his exchange. His payments have been irregular, to say the least, and they have of course been small. Why, then, does the exchange persist in serving this sort of man? Why, indeed? Are the managers afraid that his valuable patronage might go to some hated rival? Has competition thrown common sense from its throne? It is a puzzle which I for one will not attempt to solve. An exchange which keeps on supplying films to such a customer is committing suicide.

On the head of unfair competition I submit the following exhibit:

I suppose the next thing will be to offer the most

TOURING CAR

To Be Given Away Absolutely

FREE

valuable business corners on the same plan. The exhibitor who gives away "this touring car" as part of his entertainment advertises that "the best eight-reel censored films of the famous ——— Film Company will be shown daily" and again in another portion of the advertisement he says: "Eight Reels of the ——— Film Company's STRONGEST FEATURES." We wonder whether the film company whose name is so prominently displayed in connection with this unfair competition appreciates this sort of advertising. We hope that the film company in question will at least object to the use of its name in connection with a scheme which can hardly be classed as anything but unfair competition. If the films of the company in which the promoter of the touring car plan professes such great confidence are really "famous" and a good drawing card why must they be supported by the offer of a chance for an automobile? Why is not their intrinsic merit quite sufficient to insure a profitable patronage?

We have had a similar orgie of premiums and coupons but recently in one of the large cities on the Atlantic coast, with the result that for a month or so the motion picture business in that city was at its lowest ebb. The promoter of the premium schemes failed after a flash of artificial prosperity.

Did any of the exchanges that let this ruinous competition go on without even a word of kindly warning reap any benefits? The reaction which followed meant less business to the exchanges. Two or three of the exhibitors who had been badly hurt by the insane competition found themselves compelled later to cheapen their film service in an attempt to recoup their losses.

As one of the exhibitors in the three-cent town said to me: "What inducements to better things can we find in such a situation? It almost seems as if the exchanges catered by preference to these cheap men."

With all the uplift of the last twelve months it is passing strange that the exchanges and producers have not unanimously adopted a rule absolutely denying service to any man who gives a three-cent entertainment (two for five), offering five and six reels for such a price. Wherever the exhibitors are fairly well organized they ought to take such a question right into the office of the exchange. It seems inconceivable that the manager of an exchange can be eternally blind to the interests of his employers. Let the headquarters speak in plain terms and this most dangerous nuisance of three-cent shows and unfair competition will not last.

Censors Beaten in Court

Common Pleas Allows Exhibition of "The Secret Orchard" Despite Objections of Censors—Ruling by Judge Patterson Throws Light on Their Powers and Their Limitations.

By W. Stephen Bush.

THE value of the amended censorship law in Pennsylvania was plainly demonstrated on Monday, August 9, when the Lasky Feature Play Company appealed from a decision of the Board of Censors to the Court of Common Pleas and carried off a sweeping victory.

The appeal was taken from the action of the Censor Board in relation to the Lasky feature "The Secret Orchard." The board simply ordered the entire suppression of the film. A second appeal to the board was made as provided by law—a sort of appeal from Philip asleep to Philip awake. As was to be expected this appeal brought no change in the hostile attitude of the board, but it had to be made to comply with the formality of the law before the court itself could be invoked.

Argument on the appeal was on the calendar before Justice John Patterson in the Common Pleas. Morris Wolff, a well-known Philadelphia attorney, represented the Paramount Pictures Corporation, Arthur Friend looked after the interests of the Lasky Company, while David J. Smyth acted as the attorney for the censors. There was a good deal of legal skirmishing when the case was called. Channing Pollock, the author of the play, which had been based upon the novel by Agnes and Egerton Castle, took the witness stand and declared that in his opinion there was but one lesson to be drawn from the play: "The wages of sin is death." He certainly could see nothing objectionable in the film.

Film Story Based on Popular Novel.

John Ashhurst, assistant librarian of the Free Library, was called as the next witness, and he testified that the book entitled "The Secret Orchard" is on the shelves of the Free Library, which has a circulation of a quarter of a million. There are five copies of the book in the library, four of which are in circulation at the present time. A most amusing witness (amusing in spite of himself) was His Censorship, Ellis P. Overholtzer. He was asked what his objections to the picture were, whereupon he characterized the entire story as "unwholesome." He said that seduction has been a too frequent theme of motion pictures within recent times and the censors thought that seduction in films should be more closely censored. While it was conceded that moral lessons similar to the one taught in this picture were contained in such popular and well-known literary productions as "Faust," "David Copperfield," "The Scarlet Letter," "Madam Butterfly," etc., it was a question just what moral effect such pictures would have on the immature mind. To some young girls they might be a temptation and an encouragement, as no great punishment was seen to fall upon the female. The fact that the man was driven to commit suicide was in itself a crime and pointed no moral lesson.

"Let Us Look At the Picture."

The Judge here expressed the opinion that the picture itself was the best evidence, and after some further discussion of the subject the counsel in the case expressed their willingness to have the court render an immediate decision as drawn from the exhibition of the picture. When preparations were made to arrange for the showing of the film in the court room it became evident that the facilities were poor and that the audience would be rather large. Orders were therefore given to fit up the meeting room of the Common Council. Gathered in front of the screen were censors J. Louis Breitinger, Dr. Ellis Overholtzer, Mrs. Edward F. Nivers, and a large contingent of film men and lawyers, beside the usual quota of spectators and court habitues. It took about an hour and a half to show the picture. At the end of the exhibition Justice Paterson said he thought the theme itself was entirely wholesome. The censors pointed to a scene in the early part of the film in which a child is seen rushing unexpectedly into a room where her mother and some women friends were drinking with men. The matter is managed with infinite tact in the film, and while for the moment it might shock the spectator the incident was soon connected with the main purpose of the story and merely emphasized in a forceful and dramatic manner a strange duality of soul in the mother and a heredity tendency in the child. The judge thought that this particular scene might be eliminated with profit and to that extent agreed with the censors. He made it very plain, however, that he regarded the picture as a whole not only unobjectionable, but highly useful as moral. He informally defined the powers of the censors by limiting their rights to interfere to the cutting out of individual scenes. Because there might be one or more objectionable scenes the censors had no right to suppress the entire picture. "It would be manifestly unfair," he said, "to condemn a basket of peaches just because one peach was rotten. So it is with this film. I see nothing objectionable in the theme which is identical with that of 'Faust'."

The Censors Are Overruled.

Judge Patterson, who later will probably write a formal opinion, overruled the finding of the censors, who wanted to suppress the entire picture, and will sign an order restraining the censors from further interfering with the picture as soon as the one scene which he had thought objectionable is removed. Stanley V. Mastbaum, the well-known Philadelphia exhibitor, commenting on the decision of Judge Patterson said: "It has been shown by the court that the Board of Censors clearly overstep their powers when they condemn a film because they think the story is harmful. The censors have no right to base their condemnation on that point. Judge Patterson has brought that point out clearly enough at the hearing today. It is not fair to condemn an entire photoplay because the trend of the story displeases the censors."

Exhibitors in Pennsylvania are well pleased with the decision, which shows that under the new law they have a chance to find redress against the ridiculous, stupid and arbitrary rulings of the censors. The censors condemned "The Secret Orchard" under one of their celebrated rules and regulations for the conduct of film producers. They thought that "The Secret Orchard" ran counter to Rule 6, which bans all scenes "showing infidelity and sex problems and making light of indiscretions."

Harry Reichenbach Entertains

Luncheon at Hotel Knickerbocker Is Attended by Friends of the Equitable Corporation's Advertising Manager.

OFFICERS of the Equitable Picture Producing Corporation, Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of World Film, and representatives from all of the motion picture journals attended a luncheon given by Harry Reichenbach at the Hotel Knickerbocker, New York, on August 10. The affair marked the termination of Mr. Reichenbach's connection with Metro Pictures Corporation and the beginning of his career as advertising and publicity manager for Equitable.

Mr. Selznick sat at one end of the table, Mr. Reichenbach at the other, and midway between them was a large wreath presented by Arthur Leslie and bearing a message of high esteem forcefully expressed. It was an informal gathering, pleasantly free from speechmaking, a happy circumstance for which Mr. Reichenbach suggested that he be given credit.

The surprise of the afternoon was furnished by A. MacArthur, when he handed the publicity manager a magnificent gold cigarette case, the gift of Richard A. Rowland and Joseph Engle of Metro, who regretted they could not be present at the luncheon. Even with this very good excuse at hand, Mr. Reichenbach refrained from comment, bevond declaring that during all his business conections he had never been associated with men of finer caliber than Messrs. Rowland and Engel, and that he experienced keen personal regret at terminating relations in all respects so congenial.

Present at the luncheon were Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of World Film; Arthur H. Spiegel, president; Felix Feist, general manager, and E. J. Rosenthal, treasurer of the Equitable Corporation; Robert Welsh, Dramatic Mirror; Lesley Mason, Motion Picture News; John Semler, Morning Telegraph; Wid Gunning, Evening Mail; A. MacArthur and Lynde Denig, Moving Picture World; Charles Condon, Motography, and Arthur Leslie, Leslie Syndicate.

"Regeneration" Goes Strong in St. Louis

New Central Theater Gets Permanent Injunction Restraining Police from Interfering with V-L-S-E Subject.

HAVING successfully jumped several censorious hurdles, "The Island of Regeneration" is attracting overwhelming crowds to the New Central theater in St. Louis. The censor board in that city ordered several of the beautiful bathing scenes eliminated and the police threatened to stop its exhibition, when it was decided to run the feature without making the elimination. Application was made to Judge Rassieur of the Circuit Court for an injunction restraining the police. This injunction was granted and made permanent after His Honor had witnessed an exhibition of the film.

Judging from the tone of the press and the applause of the audience at its showing, all sympathies were on the side of the production. Judge Rassieur's decision will undoubtedly have considerable effect on the censorship situation in Missouri. This is rapidly becoming intolerable. The picture patrons in the Kansas City territory also are becoming aroused to a full realization of the implication that they are not competent to be their own judges of what they should and what they should not see.

"The Battle Cry of Peace."

J. Stuart Blackton and Albert E. Smith Give Invitation Showing of Powerful Picture Urging Preparedness for War—Inspired by Maxim's "Defenseless America."

By Lynde Denig.

"THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE," a powerful photoplay, written and produced by J. Stuart Blackton of the Vitagraph Company, was shown for the first time before an invited audience in the Vitagraph Theater on the morning of Aug. 6. Judging from the enthusiasm with which the picture was received it bids fair to be the sensation of the season, as "Quo Vadis?" "Cabiria," and "The Birth of a Nation," in turn, were sensations. But it must strike deeper than any one of these, because it is more significant than an artistic masterpiece, more vital than a gigantic spectacle, more a thing of the moment than a skilled revival of a dead issue. "The Battle Cry of Peace" is as personal as an alarm of fire shouted through the night. The time is now, the place America, the alarm sounds for every American irrespective of race, creed, or political allegiance. That is why the picture is as big as it is personal, and in the importance of its subject matter is for the time being, at least, supreme.

Not long before the European war an Englishman wrote a play that disturbed British confidence in unassailable superiority. He delivered his message through the stage. American dramatists have remained silent. Discussions of our unpreparedness for war have filled magazines and newspapers; for a full year it has been the talk of the man on the street, yet the issue remained without dramatic expression until Commodore Blackton read Hudson Maxim's "Defenseless America," and determined to make the facts a part of the emotional experience of the public.

In a brief address delivered after the showing of the picture, Commodore Blackton gave due credit to Mr. Maxim for inspiring the idea. He said that his first thought when he had read the last of the illuminating chapters was of the need for bringing the facts within the scope of millions of people, instead of the one hundred thousand or so that might be reached by the book. During the next six weeks the film will be presented at the White House, before the Governors of States and before representative societies throughout the country, after which it will be released on the V-L-S-E program.

This is no place for a discussion of the desirability of our becoming a semi-militaristic nation. Authoritative students of the subject who favor a much larger army and navy seem to outnumber those who don't, and at all events it is to the lasting credit of Commodore Blackton and significant of the power of motion pictures that the first popular expression of this national issue should come, not through a novel, or the stage, as it did in England, but through a photoplay produced by one of our oldest companies. We have had previous works dealing effectively with social problems—not a few of them from the Vitagraph Studio—but none on so ambitious a scale, none that took a subject dealing with the lives of so many millions of people and treated it in terms of pulsing drama.

When released for public exhibition "The Battle Cry of Peace" will be in nine reels, which naturally assume three divisions, the first, amply sub-titled, illustrating excerpts from Mr. Maxim's book. Mr. Maxim himself appears in the picture, and as point by point he builds up his contention that this country is virtually unprotected we see on the screen just what the defenses of New York amount to, how our guns are outclassed, how feeble are our army and navy when compared with those of European powers. The first division is essential in that the pictures, supported by figures of unquestionable authenticity, give a basis of fact on which to rear the drama. At the close of Mr. Maxim's lecture an audience is convinced that New York would fall an easy prey to the invader.

The picture is so graphic, the explanation so lucid that the spectator is a bit excited over the prospects of an invasion. Most New Yorkers have at one time or another contemplated the skyscrapers and tried to imagine the consequences of a bombardment; but imaginations have balked. The appalling horror of it all stupefies imagination. Here we are shown how a bombardment may occur and then, in division second, we pass from impending dangers to the most frightful of actualities. We are in the midst of New York shelled and captured by the enemy. The producers are always careful to avoid indicating any existing nation as the foe.

In focusing the attention on a group of characters, Commodore Blackton did well in making them typical of American life—families stirred by talk of war but divided on the question of national policy. A leader of the peace movement is depicted as the acme of negative smugness, unconsciously allied with a foreign emissary encouraging pacific legislation that the attack of his country may be simplified. There is humor in the peace meeting in Harmony Hall, which ends in a riot, and grim irony in the alternating of scenes showing the approach of the enemy's fleet while the pacifists urge the danger of becoming a militaristic nation. A shell through the wall of the room disperses the gathering in a panic, and the capture of New York has begun.

The bombardment of the city is a marvelous piece of photoplay workmanship in which the tragic personal note is never lost. The catastrophe is general in its effect on the entire population and intimate in following the fate of the characters met a short while before in the happiness of their homes. One by one they are sacrificed while shells burst over Times Square and the streets are filled with a wild throng fleeing for shelter. On the Park Row bulletin boards we read announcements of the advance of the enemy and they appear horribly real. Roads leading out of New York are choked with every conceivable type of vehicle, men fall dead, or, falsely accused of shooting from windows, are lined against a wall and mowed down with a machine gun—the peace advocate among them. Tragedy is piled on tragedy, culminating in the most poignant scene of all—the mother's shooting of her daughters to save them from drunken soldiers. With the close of the story an audience has witnessed what it may well have failed to imagine, the conquest of New York, and it is horrible beyond compare.

Scene from "The Battle Cry of Peace" (Vitagraph).

The technical excellence of difficult scenes introducing night effects and studio construction representing such familiar locations as Times Square, is high. Frequently the illusion is perfect, and equally fine are some of the passages in the third division, an allegory contrasting Columbia trampled on by a triumphant foe and living in honorable peace because adequately guarded. Double exposures are used with artistic results. The allegory ends on an optimistic note, for the gospel of preparedness has swept over the land and brought all men to the defense of Columbia. Being prepared for war means that there will be no war, or so the argument runs.

As shown at the Vitagraph theater it may be presumed that the picture was not in its final form. In re-editing with a view to eliminating 1,000 feet, it is probable that some of the death agonies will be curtailed, that a few scenes out of focus will be removed and that the arrangement of events in the allegory will be altered to prevent a series of anti-climaxes. With the conclusion of the story proper, the dramatic suspense necessarily ends, and there is danger of weakening rather than strengthening the argument by a repetition of incidents, which may vary in detail and still point a lesson that already has been emphasized. Judicious editing, no doubt, will eliminate this danger.

Charles Richman, heading a large company of Vitagraph actors, is ably seconded in emotional scenes by Norma Talmadge, L. Roger Lytton, James Morrison, Mary Maurice and many others. The power of the story is in a large measure due to the performances of these players and to Wilfred North, who assisted Commodore Blackton in making a picture that is bound to cause much discussion.

Denies Injunction Against Fox

Judge Hand Says Film Manufacturer Has Complied with Terms of Contract in "A Fool There Was."

ROBERT HILLIARD, Klaw & Erlanger and Porter Emerson Browne have lost the preliminary skirmish in their litigation with the William Fox Vaudeville Company over the moving picture production of Browne's play, "A Fool There Was." Judge Augustus N. Hand, of the United States District Court, held last week that no injuction pending the suit should be granted to the plaintiffs, that the plaintiffs had not shown facts sufficient to bring about the cancellation of contracts with the defendant company, and that a sufficient accounting of royalties had been made up to and including the time of bringing the suit to satisfy the just claims of the plaintiffs. He denied the motion of plaintiff, but gave them the privilege of coming into court at any time in the future to demand any subsequent accounting the facts may justify.

Suit in equity was brought early last month in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York by Hilliard and the other plaintiffs. Jurisdiction was obtained because of the interstate business of the defendant in its contracts for the rental and exploitation of the films of the play. In the bill the plaintiffs set up that nearly two years ago they entered into a contract with the Fox Vaudeville company for the production of the play in film form, the defendant agreeing to pay royalties of 10 per cent. gross on all rentals received therefrom.

Judge Hand's decision is very brief. He merely cites the statement of the certified accountants, the exhibits filed and the affidavits as showing sufficient details of the receipts of the Fox Vaudeville company from the Box Office Attraction Film Rental and Fox Film companies with whom the defendant had contracts. Then he says:

"This complies with the contract with the plaintiffs and any cause for ending the contract for past violations seems ended. The motion to this extent is denied, but the plaintiffs may have similar accountings in the future and may come into court to enforce such accountings in case of failure or refusal. They may also have copies of rental contracts hereafter made."

NO REASON FOR CENSORING PICTURES.

The Selig Polyscope Company is calling the attention of the people to an interesting editorial which was printed in a recent edition of The Saturday Evening Post, which said:

"The instinct to look after your neighbor's morals—however unsuccessful you may be in looking after your own—is ineradicable in human nature. If printing were a new art—invented, say, in the nineteenth century—it would undoubtedly be under a comprehensive censorship. There would be a college of censors in the postal department to scrutinize every printed sheet that went through the mails. There would be state censors whose political activities had been of such nature as to inspire the government with great faith in their general discretion.

"Motion pictures are a new art, and a complicated system of censorship is growing up around them. There is no particular reason for censoring motion pictures more than anything else, except that they are new and their unsettled status gives the censorious instinct a chance to assert itself. Crime of all sorts is constantly described in print that is within the reach of any illiterate child possessed of a penny. It is constantly shown on the stage, the illusion of which is more powerful than that of the motion picture. Motion picture men themselves set up and supported the National Board of Censors, because they wished the public to be assured that the entertainments were such as the public's wives and children could see without offense. A lot of city censors, each with his own notion of what is advisable for his neighbor to see, cannot fail in the end to become an impertinent nuisance."

RUSSELL TO REPRESENT HORSLEY IN LONDON.

D. W. Russell has been appointed representative in the British Isles for David Horsley and left August 14, accompanied by Mrs. Russell, for London, where he will make his headquarters. Mr. Russell will handle all Horsley pictures under whatever brand names as well as the Cub Comedies, which Mr. Horsley is now releasing through the Mutual.

The office, which will be located at 193 Wardour street, London, W., will be opened the latter part of August.

CURT H. REISINGER JOINS HUGO REISINGER.

The firm of Hugo Reisinger, through C. A. DuBosch and Frederick Dessin, makes formal announcement that Curt H. Reisinger has become a member of that concern.

Lillian Tucker

MISS LILLIAN TUCKER, who is well known to New York audiences for her excellent work as "Lucille," the manager of Tony Miller in "Nobody Home," now playing at the Maxine Elliot theater, and for her attractive personality which has brightened up many a Broadway show since she first appeared on the stage in "The Yankee Prince," is playing the leading role with Edwin August in "Evidence," the English play which Mr. August is producing for the F. Ray Comstock Company.

Miss Tucker is tall and fair, and of a perfect English type. She also sings, and has appeared in many of the popular musical comedies. She played in "Madame Sherry." Last season she appeared in "The "Show Shop" with Kitty Gordon, and with Fritzi Scheff in "Pretty Mrs. Smith." Miss Tucker was in the west for two years playing in stock with Oliver Morosco. Before entering the cast of "Nobody Home," Miss Tucker played at the Palace and on the road for a short engagement with Emmett Corrigan in "The Red Hate," in which she scored a distinct triumph.

Lillian Tucker.

In "Evidence," the young actress plays the role of "Lady Una Wimbourne," a young English noblewoman, which part Miss Tucker is admirably adapted to, both by appearance and temperament. In the big emotional scene, when the Lady Una is cast aside by her husband because he refuses to be reconciled or right a misunderstanding, Miss Tucker displays remarkable emotional and dramatic ability.

It is her ambition to play a part similar to "Trilby," in which singing is introduced into the play.

COMEDY'S SERIOUS SIDE.

In the Edison revival of the comedy, "The Silent Tongue," Jean Dumar is subjected to a well-known medical theory of "like curing like," by having her speech restored through falling overboard in the water. When the time came for Raymond McKee to rock the boat to throw her into the water, Miss Dumar struggled against it out of fear, she not knowing how to swim. By the time McKee succeeded in overturning the boat they had drifted into deeper water and as a result Miss Dumar came very close to drowning before he could rescue her. That part of the comedy was not a silent tongue, needless to say.

WALTHALL SPEAKS AT EASTLAND BENEFIT.

Henry B. Walthall, leading man with Essanay, made his first appearance in person before the public, since his advent in photoplay work, when he appeared on the stage at the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Chicago Tribune's benefit performance for the victims of the Eastland disaster. Mr. Walthall made a short speech at the intermission in which he expressed his gratification at being able to contribute in any way toward alleviating the sufferings of those bereft by the terrible tragedy.

EDWARD EARLE SURPRISED.

Edward Earle, the popular Edison player, was very pleasantly surprised upon his birthday recently in the receipt of a handsome gold watch fob in which his initials were ingeniously worked. It came as an appreciation subscription gift, started by a coterie of his admirers in New Orleans, "aided and abetted" by others all over the country. Of course, he will wear it in his next picture so that his admirers can see how much he appreciates their approbation of his work.

MESSRS. GOODFELLOW AND FROBEL IN TOWN.

Willard H. Goodfellow and August Froebel of the Artone Film Company of Detroit, are in New York on a business trip. They are stopping at the Astor.

Essanay to Increase Program Releases

After September 1 Chicago Manufacturer Will Produce Eleven Reels Weekly Exclusive of Chaplin and V-L-S-E Subjects.

ESSANAY has again boosted its program by adding another three-reel drama each week. Beginning with September 1 it discontinues its one-act drama, released on Monday, and substitutes the three-reel photoplay. The weekly program thus consists of two three-reel dramas, a two-reel drama, a George Ade fable alternating with an animated cartoon and scenic release, a one-reel Western drama, featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton, and a one-reel Western comedy. This makes a total of eleven reels each week, exclusive of Chaplin comedies and the multiple reel features on the V-L-S-E program.

Essanay has steadily been growing away from the one-reel photoplay in its Eastern productions, it being President George K. Spoor's aim, in this class of play, to get more finished productions and better dramatic works; plays with a well-rounded plot, which it has been found are difficult to present in one reel.

"While we are increasing the number of reels," said Mr. Spoor, "it is because the kind of plays we now are producing demand it. I am absolutely opposed to any padding and would not for a moment permit the presentation of a play in two or more reels that could be presented in one. I have found that in line with our policy of buying only stories and books of well-known authors there is an intrinsic worth in these works that makes more than one reel necessary. We are making a specialty of producing works of high literary merit, plays with a vital issue at stake, with more intricate action and well-rounded plots.

"We are continuing our Western dramas in one reel because these plays are in a distinct class of themselves and original with G. M. Anderson. They contain the breezy style of the great out-of-doors with rapid and thrilling action. They have been found especially adapted to the present footage as Mr. Anderson created them, and are so satisfactory that no change is contemplated. We are striving for a well-balanced and varied program, and in the Eastern plays there is another characteristic that enters into the productions. In these we are presenting problems of vital issues of a complicated life. I do not mean they are all problem plays in the common use of the term, but plays that carry issues that human beings are constantly called upon to face.

"The public now is demanding better photoplays, plays that while highly entertaining have a truly artistic value, and it is our aim to keep in step with the advanced demands."

INCEVILLE'S NEW GLASS STUDIO.

What is believed to be one of the most perfectly equipped glass studios in America has just been completed at Inceville, near Santa Monica, Cal., for use in the big features now under way and contemplated by Thomas H. Ince. The stage measures 120 by 120 feet—being, therefore, nearly as large as the old main stage, and is so conveniently situated that the sun is in a commanding position at all times during the day.

Inceville's New Glass Studio.

CUNNINGHAM TO ASSIST BERNSTEIN.

James B. Cunningham, who has been associated with the motion picture industry for years, most recently with Frank Crane at the Peerless studio, has been engaged by the Equitable as first assistant director to Isadore Bernstein, who is the general director of the company.

Hilda Spong

MISS HILDA SPONG, whose quickly won success as "Candida" was a feature of last season's theatrical record, is busily engaged with her first experience before the moving picture camera in the part of Leonore Fenwick, the star of "Divorce," at the Studio of the Crystal Film Company. Miss Spong has had a wide and varied stage experience, and made her return trip to this country after a successful season in "Everywoman" and other dramas, on a long tour which ended in Australia. She arrived here on the last westward trip of the Lusitania, and lost a number of friends when the ship was sunk on its return to England. Her part as "Candida" was taken at only four days' notice on the insistent urging of Arnold Daly, when she succeeded Dorothy Donnelly at the Park Theater, finishing the season and rounding it out as a financial and artistic success.

Hilda Spong.

Her work in "Divorced" is under the direction of Edward Warren and Charles Hutchinson, and if her enthusiasm in her new field is any criterion of its results, she will score as heavily and as successfully on the films as she did on the stage. This feature will be released at an early date by the Triumph Film Corporation, on the Equitable program.

PATHE PLANS NOVEL SERIES.

It is announced that Pathe is contemplating a novel series to be called "Who Is Guilty?" or "The Struggle for Life," which will be along lines somewhat similar to the very successful "Who Pays?" series recently released.

"Who Pays?" a series of twelve three-part dramas founded on social crimes and problems of every-day existence, enjoyed country-wide publicity and there was an insistent demand for another feature along these lines. The new series will deal with actual problems of modern life, presenting them in a forcible and graphic way. Each chapter will be complete in itself, and the Pathe name is assurance of the quality of the pictures.

Louis J. Gasnier, general manager of the Pathe Exchange, is now making the necessary arrangements for this great series, and it is probable that the pictures will be released in the fall. They will be put out in conjunction with a strong chain of newspapers which will carry the story simultaneously with the showing of the pictures. Balboa is being considered as the producer because of the success with the "Who Pays?" pictures.

A PAINFUL MAKE-UP.

In the Edison feature, "Shadows from the Past," Marc MacDermott, in the course of the play, is supposed to have his eye put out. To effect this, Mr. McDermott succeeded with a remarkable make-up which, however, was very painful to wear. If he closed the eye and placed something over it he knew he could not have the control of the open eye to give it the expression he uses so effectively in the big situations. So he left the eye open, placed over the eyeball sufficient cotton to round it out and over this glued on a cloth painted flesh color. To make it even more unpleasant, he had to wear this make-up for days during the hottest weather while the eye would water again and again so as to dissolve the glue. Even in the searching "close-up" view, the illusion is perfect.

DOUGHTY TO WRITE FOR HORSLEY.

Francis Worcester Doughty, writer of light fiction, has been secured by David Horsley to write the scenarios for the two reel animal pictures, featuring the Bostock collection of performing beasts, which Mr. Horsley will produce and release on the Mutual program beginning about the middle of September. He left New York last week for the Horsley studios in Los Angeles.

World Film Will Control Paragon Studio

Description of the New Buildings in Which Will Be Produced Features for World Program.

THE World Film Corporation will operate the New Paragon studio at Fort Lee. World Film's control of the Paragon will be as absolute as that at present exercised in the direction of the Peerless Company, whose acting and administrative policies are formulated at World Film headquarters, says a statement issued from the office of the latter company. But there will be no other direct connection between the Peerless and Paragon companies. The Peerless will continue to employ the directors, stars and supporting companies whose efforts have helped to establish its success. The Paragon staff—directors, actors and studio employees—will be exclusively engaged in the new studio.

After dissipating the atmosphere of mystery which had begun to envelope the Paragon studio, Mr. Selznick definitely set at rest the rumors which have been circulated, predicting a possible break in the relations of the World Film and other organizations with which it is now allied. He announced that the World Film owns the entire capital stock of the Shubert Film Corporation and of the Peerless Feature Picture Company, which in turn owns 50 per cent. of William A. Brady Picture Plays, Incorporated. Instead of facing a limiting of its resources and a restriction of its activities, the World Film, by reason of its control of the Paragon Company and its alliance with the newly organized Equitable Corporation, is preparing to enlarge its scope. Three feature releases per week will now be the number on the World Film program, with an excellent prospect of increasing this output in the near future.

The Paragon studio, at Fort Lee, N. J., will when completed be the largest motion picture studio in the East, it is stated. The superficial dimensions are 160 feet. This building will enable spectacles of magnitude to be staged in it. The most modern ideas of motion picture studio construction are embodied; one of these will be an enormous revolving stage. External to the main building will be an extension, giving an extra twenty feet of available space on which seats may be erected. The camera being operated in the studio, exterior sets may be photographed outside, all around the building. Something like a space of 200 feet square will be available for these purposes.

Facilities for camera work of the most diverse character will be provided inside the studio. Cameramen will be able to operate at any height or angle, and panoramic effects may be easily obtained, the lateral and horizontal motions of the cameras also giving stereoscopic relief, as well as panoramas, when so desired.

Attached to the Paragon studio will be a positive printing plant of one million and a half feet capacity per week. Another important feature will be the installation of a special plant for the production of motion picture positives in natural colors, by a process which has been successfully established by practice to give the best and most pleasing results.

In respect of photographic quality the Paragon studio has been designed and equipped to give the most perfect, artistic and technical results.

The accommodations provided for the directors, the acting and photographic forces, scene painters, carpenters and others will be complete and most convenient, thus constituting the Paragon studio one of the most efficient studios in the East.

TURNING DAYTIME INTO NIGHT.

It is quite the common thing to "turn nighttime into day," but only infrequently is the order reversed. The Tom Terriss Producing Company turned the trick, however, at Rector's, New York City, the other day when it found it necessary to make a big banquet scene for its forthcoming production entitled "The Woman of the World," which the Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., is to release in the early fall.

It was in mid-afternoon that the scene was taken and, despite the fact that the sun was shining brightly, those surrounding the gorgeously bedecked banquet table appeared in evening clothes. Tom Terriss, Elaine Terriss, Mrs. Allen Walker, Alfred Hemming, and the celebrated juvenile actor, Adrian Jacobi, were among the principal members of the company who took part in the big scene.

CHANGES IN V-L-S-E PROGRAM.

A change of importance in its calendar of releases for the month of August has just been reported by the V-L-S-E. Marie Dressler, in "Tillie's Tomato Surprise," originally scheduled for release on August 30, has been postponed to the week of September 27. "The Great Ruby" has been moved forward as the Lubin release for August 30.

Edmund Breese Going to Alaska

In the Northern Winter He Will Be Starred in Two Productions for Popular Plays and Players.

IT has been definitely decided by the Popular Plays and Players Company to stage the next two Edmund Breese productions at Fairbanks, Alaska, in the exact locale of the two vehicles Mr. Breese will use for screen purposes, namely—"The Spell of the Yukon" and "The Song of the Wage-Slave." "The Spell of the Yukon" and "The Song of the Wage-Slave" are from the poems by Robert W. Service, and appeared in a recent volume published by Barse and Hopkins. Mr. Breese made such a tremendous success of his first Popular Plays and Players-Metro production, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," that L. Lawrence Weber purchased the entire screen rights to all of Mr. Service's poems, and Mr. Breese, accompanied by fourteen principals, will leave New York for Seattle, Washington, on September 5, and from thence they will sail for Alaska, to be gone three months, during which time the winter scenes called for by the original scrips will be staged. The sailing date from Seattle will be September 11 and they will arrive at Nome at the beginning of the winter season.

Edmund Breese.

It is hoped by Mr. Breese and Mr. Weber to obtain in Alaska the types of men so graphically and faithfully portrayed in the Service poems. Mr. Breese will take with him two camera men and his own director.

The Metro Company, before the party sails, will procure the issuance of insurance policies covering sickness, accident or death for the players while in Alaska to cover the compensation commission's recent ruling on contractable obligations of concerns who send performers on dangerous missions.

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN KLEINE ORGANIZATION.

A number of important changes in the personnel of the selling organization of the Kleine forces occurred last week. In the New York teritory two additions to the traveling staff, in Edgar Healy and Edward F. Guzman were made. Mr. Guzman comes from George Kleine's Boston office to New York. Foster Moore, who was associated with the Kleine selling force during the organization of its offices two years ago, has returned to the fold, taking the vacancy in the New York office made by the promotion of H. A. Bugie, who will assume charge of the Philadelphia office. E. J. Moskowitz, of the Seattle office, is promoted to the management of the Dallas office.

MOTION PICTURES IN LEEDS.

(Consul Homer M. Byington, Leeds, England.)

It is estimated that $1,216,625 is invested in the motion picture business in Leeds. In proportion to population the city is said to have more picture houses than any other in the United Kingdom. Although about seventy such theaters are in operation, others are contemplated. It is estimated that 60,000 persons daily visit these picture houses, which have suffered little from the war. There are a dozen film exchanges in the city, and three of these maintain theaters where private shows are given for the benefit of prospective renters.

FAMILY THEATER REMODELED.

The Family Theater, Davenport, Ia., is being remodeled into a first-class picture house. The seating capacity will be increased to over 700, and the cost of rejuvenating the structure will reach $10,000. The theater will be ready for business some time during this month.

JOE GILDAY VISITS METROPOLIS.

Joseph H. Gilday, manager of the Willis Wood Theater of Kansas City, was in town for a couple of days this week on business connected with his house.

Paramount's Mutual Policy

Frank D. Sniffen, General Sales Manager, Impresses Salesmen with the Need for Co-operation with Exhibitors.

FRANK D. SNIFFEN, general sales manager for Paramount Pictures Corporation, personal representative of W. W. Hodkinson and an associate editor of Paramount Progress, the corporation's house organ, entered the moving picture business because it appeared to him to offer unparalleled opportunities for a man thoroughly grounded in commercial methods. Without having had any previous experience in the film market, he was selected for the responsible position he now holds because his record in the advertising and selling departments of Harper & Brothers, New York, indicated that he was an ideal man for the promotion of an efficient policy in the distribution of Paramount pictures. Mr. Sniffen has displayed much executive ability in combination with keen business judgment.

In speaking of the plan adopted for the spread of the Paramount program, the general sales manager said that it was essentially a mutual policy—a policy that must benefit exhibitors as well as producers, otherwise he would regard it as a failure. Having looked the field over pretty thoroughly, Mr. Sniffen thinks he is warranted in believing that the Paramount output maintains a higher average than that of any other concern. Every salesman on the force is expected to share this enthusiasm over the worth of the pictures he is handling, and to do all in his power toward making them bring results for the exhibitor.

Contrasted with the far-sighted selling methods insisted upon in other well organized industries, Mr. Sniffen holds that efficiency in the sale of photoplays is not high. As he sees it, a sort of take-it-or-leave-it independence has been considered good enough, whereas there is no business in which expert salesmanship is more needed for the securing of permanent customers. Paramount salesmen are being impressed with the fact that in securing a contract from an exhibitor their work is only half done, the other half consisting of expert advice that will assist the exhibitor in clearing a reasonable profit. A salesman is expected to become, to all intents and purposes, the partner of the house manager with whom he deals.

"Too many salesmen work on the assumption," said Mr. Sniffen, "that a good day's business results from visiting three or four towns, making hurried calls on the exhibitors and perhaps returning a couple of short-time contracts. The figures on their reports may appear impressive, but as likely as not the work will have to be done all over again on the expiration of the contracts, whereas if the salesman had covered only one town properly his efforts would have been far more beneficial in the long run.

"Even the finest pictures cannot be expected to make money unless they are properly handled. Roughly speaking, the picture may be counted on for 60 per cent. of the drawing power and the other 40 per cent. must be supplied by the exhibitor in giving his house an inviting atmosphere, suitable music, effective advertising and a judiciously arranged program. The helpful salesman not only convinces an exhibitor that Paramount pictures are what he wants, he goes farther than that and studies conditions in a town in order to assist the exhibitor in making Paramount pictures profitable. He may spend half a day in merely sizing the place up, finding out something about the character of the population, learning, if possible, the style of films that have been most popular and acquainting himself with the theaters and what opposition must be met.

"With this information at his command, the salesman may figure the matter out just as though he were going to run the house himself, and his talk with the prospective buyer should cover every point, even to the details of theater management—the ushers, the girl at the box office window, every element, in fact, that contributes to the attractiveness of a theater. When these things have been adequately attended to there is no need to worry about the pictures we supply doing their share. Every salesman on the force is made to understand that Paramount is vitally interested in the welfare of the exhibitors on its books."

UNIVERSAL TO REISSUE "JEKYLL AND HYDE."

The Universal Company has decided to reissue "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," the two-part subject released under the Imp brand on March 6, 1913. King Baggot played the name parts, and his work in the two roles ranked as the equal of the best he has done. Others in the cast were Jane Gale, Howard Crampton, Matt Snyder and William Sorell. It was a strong picture.

Morosco Enlarges Plant

New Storehouse and Shop, Together With Laboratory Additions, Under Way at the Los Angeles Studio.

OWING to the increased activity of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company the studio facilities have had to be enlarged, and Master Mechanic Earl Olin has a force of men at work on a new storehouse and shop which will give over 10,000 square feet of additional floor space. The structure will be of corrugated iron, and of the latest type of construction throughout.

The laboratory is also undergoing many important extensions, notably the installation of two powerful Sirocco blowers of the most improved type, which will provide an entire new ventilating system equal to anything known to laboratory hygiene today. By this system the air the laboratory employes breathe will be completely changed every thirty seconds, and will insure wholesome working conditions even with the night and day work which the increased output of the plant has made necessary.

Another improvement is the installation of a large washer and drier. The new unit is about five times the size of the old, and effects a motor-driven air purification whereby heated air is blown through dripping water into the drying room for drying the film after it comes from the developing baths.

Last week the printing room was augmented by the arrival of four new printers. They are equipped with several important improvements, one being a new and better style of light changes, and another a higher rate of speed whereby their capacity is increased.

FRANK BACON JOINS QUALITY.

Frank Bacon, one of the best-known and most versatile actors on the American stage, became a member of the Quality Pictures Corporation last week when he began work in "The Silent Voice" in the support of Francis X. Bushman. Mr. Bacon was last seen on Broadway in George M. Cohan's "The Miracle Man," in which he played the part of the innkeeper.

In addition to Mr. Bacon supporting Mr. Bushman the Quality Pictures Corporation boasts of many principals. Among them is Katherine Henry, last seen in New York in Lew Field's production of "The Midnight Sun."

V-L-S-E EXPANDING.

The photographs recently taken of the executive officers of the V-L-S-E have already gone into archives of that company, as records of the past, for with the varnish hardly dry on the office partitions it has already been necessary to start the work of tearing them down to enlarge the quarters.

The business of the Big Four has gone forward with such strides that almost the entire seventh floor of the big Mecca Building, New York, is insufficient to accommodate the working forces of the main office, and the re-arrangement now being made is designed to give temporary relief.

The "Rosary" Float, Joint Entry of the Selig Company and Clune's Auditorium, and Winner of First Prize in the Los Angeles Floral Pageant.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Stars of the Screen Getting Ready for the Big Outing

Photoplayers to Do Stunts

Nearly 400 Entries in the Exhibitors' Carnival and Field Day Events at Brighton Beach, August 21.

With Saturday, August 21, a holiday in the film trade, photoplayers are planning great fun for themselves and the public at the outing given by the New York Exhibitors at Brighton Beach. It is expected many actors will be there, including all the stars in the eastern field. Practically every player of note is scheduled for some one of the great variety of stunt events.

The film producing companies are taking an active interest and several will elaborately decorate huge floats representing feature pictures. These floats will be used in the grand parade from Coney Island to Brighton Beach Race Track. There are nearly forty events in all, and Joe Humphreys, the master of ceremonies, is busy putting a fantastic and farcical touch on each one.

Among the entries of well-known players are Lillian Walker, Anita Stewart, Anna Q. Nilson, Mary Pickford, Lottie Briscoe, Mary Fuller, Beverly Bayne, Edith Storey, Wilton Lackaye, William Faversham, Robert Warwick, King Baggot, William Farnum, Robert Edeson, Earle Williams, Guy Coombs, Maurice Costello, William Garwood, Ben Wilson, Herbert Prior, Flora Finch, Rose Tapley, Harry Morey, Hughie Mack, Violet Merserau, Rosemary Theby, Harry Meyers, Dorothy Phillips, Wally Van, Leah Baird and Kate Price.

In the evening there will be dancing, dancing contests and exhibition dancing.

Notes of the Carnival.

The judges of the field sports under Thomas Howard, who is chairman of the field committee, will be Commodore Blackton, H. H. Breunner, Percy Waters, Louis J. Selznick, A. Carlos, Louis Gasnier, Marcus Loew, Al Kaufman, Chester Beecroft, A. S. Beck, Lou Rogers, Leon Rubinstein, H. H. Poppe, John Grey, Vic Smith, Dick Leslie, Ed Saunders, Nathan Hirsh, Joe Unger, B. S. Moss, Joe Brandt, M. H. Hoffman and Louis Rosenbluh.

Vic Smith has instructed Dick Leslie to devote his entire time in getting up two large floats for the parade. Nothing else is to be done until Saturday, August 21, so as to make this a success.

Walter Ackerman has promised to procure aeroplanes for the aeroplane races and has also suggested an emergency tent in case of accident.

The Spirit of '76 will be represented by the Vitagraph in costume; presidents also will be represented in costume.

A comedy scenario suggested by Joe Brandt will be successful. Already there have been offers from a dozen directors who wish to participate.

Wally Van will write his own scenario and direct it. Van Dyke Brooke has promised to do likewise.

The Universal will give a great surprise.

There will be a Ford flivver race for women. Already there are twelve entries.

Cups have been given by Commodore Blackton, Maurice Costello, Ralph Ince, Al Kaufman, Jule Burnstein, Costello theater, Sam Trigger, Lee Ochs, Joe Unger, Joe Brandt, M. H. Hoffman, Lou Rogers and others.

EARLE WILLIAMS APPEARS AT VICTORIA.

John J. Farren, of the Victoria theater, Rochester, N. Y., has engaged Earle C. Williams, the Vitagraph star, for a personal appearance at his house on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 12, 13 and 14. The members of the Rochester Branch of the Exhibitors' League, the Victoria Branch of the Inquest Club, headed by Mrs. Nettie Armstrong and a committee of over 250 of Rochester's prettiest young women have banded themselves together in a giant reception committee. Booking Manager Farren, who is a member of the Screen Club, has entire charge of the arrangements for his fellow-screeners' engagement. It is expected that this will be one of the great events in the summer moving picture season in Rochester. Francis X. Bushman, Crane Wilbur, Bill Bailey, Morrison and Powers (Vitagraph Company), Miss Edith Storey, Florence Turner and several other photoplayers have already appeared at the Victoria.

SUBWAY FILM CARRIERS GET SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

In the cases of fifty exhibitors arrested for carrying film in the New York subway Magistrate Krotel on Friday, August 6, suspended sentences following the plea of guilty by the showmen. Herman Hoffman, attorney for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, appeared for the accused men.

New Leader Gratified at Outlook.

President Fred J. Herrington of National Exhibitors' Organization Expects Affiliation of All Independent Groups.

Editor of Moving Picture World, New York City:

Please afford me space in your valuable journal to answer the numerous notes of congratulations received by me from exhibitors and friends throughout the States, as otherwise it would be impossible for me to reply personally to such a magnitude of letters.

It is, I can assure you, beyond my power to find words to express my deep appreciation of the honor conferred upon me by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

I wish to thank one and all, and the Moving Picture World in particular, for their hearty co-operation and assistance, rendered in the past to our organization. It is gratifying to know that the exhibitors are in accord with the actions taken by the convention at San Francisco, and assured that in the very near future all branches of organized exhibitors will be under the banner of the M. P. E. L. of America, particularly so, I am pleased to state, the Northwestern Exhibitors' Association.

I shall in the future, as I have in the past, use all the ability I possess to the advancement and betterment of conditions of the motion picture interests, and with the assistance of the exhibitors there is no doubt whatever that great success will result from our efforts.

Thanking you again, I am respectfully,

F. J. HERRINGTON,
President M. P. E. L. of America.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 10, 1915.

Pike's Peak Engages Miss Bondhill

Western Company, Which Will Release on Standard Program, Also Adds Other Players.

THE Pike's Peak Photoplay Company, whose output will be released on the Standard Program, has engaged Gertrude Bondhill, a popular member of many prominent stage stock companies, to play leading roles in forthcoming productions, directed by Otis B. Thayer, producing manager of the Lariat brand. Randolph Gray, another recruit from the legitimate, will play opposite Miss Bondhill, and others in the company will be Clark Comstock, E. F. Power and A. Kellner.

Miss Bondhill is an attractive ingenue type and an actress of broad experience. She starred in "A Cosy Corner," following Adelaide Thurston, who first used the play, and also may be remembered as Lois in "Sweet Clover," a role in which she toured the country for three years. At various times she has played leads with the B. F. Keith companies in Portland and Boston, the Orpheum in Cincinnati, Vaughan-Glaser in Detroit and Poli's in Washington. She enjoys the distinction of having received a letter from President Wilson commending her performance of Salomy Jane.

The studio in which Director Thayer and his players work is situated in the picturesque country at the foot of Pike's Peak, where beautiful locations are within easy reach.

EXHIBITORS TO MEET IN WILMINGTON, N. C.

Exhibitors from all sections of North Carolina have signified their intention of attending the convention of the North Carolina Moving Picture Exhibitors' League at Wrightsville Beach, Wilmington, August 15-17. A program calling for the consideration of important legislation has been prepared and those in charge of the arrangements intend to make the convention a representative gathering of picture men and beneficial in results accomplished.

At a recent meeting of the city council of Wilmington an appropriation of $200 was asked to in part cover the expense of taking motion pictures of that city during the convention. These pictures are to be made under the supervision of the National Film Corporation of Baltimore, Md., and it is planned to use them in advertising Wilmington. Many exhibitors in North and South Carolina and in Virginia are prepared to show the films.

ROBERT WARWICK IN "THE FLASH OF AN EMERALD."

At the World Film Fort Lee studios Director Albert Capellani is assembling the cast which will support Robert Warwick in "The Flash of an Emerald." The story is one that was recently published in the Smart Set and whose attractive possibilities in film form immediately appealed to about a dozen directors at once. The fact that the principal part is one which should fit Mr. Warwick with an emphatic nicety makes its acquisition by World Film a particularly happy one.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

The Place of the Photoplay in Literature.

I was particularly impressed by an article in the Chicago Examiner, of August 7th, in the column under the name of James Warren Currie, photplay editor of that paper. The article is devoted chiefly to the views of a literary man on the place that will be occupied some day by the photoplay in the world's greatest literature. The reader, as well as myself, cannot help regretting that the name of this "writer of fiction" has not been divulged by Mr. Currie, who has doubtless suppressed it on his request, for obvious reasons.

After listening to the remarkable words of this man of letters, who prefers to be nameless, Mr. Currie exclaims in his article:

"If this was sprung on you suddenly you would have a hard time grasping it, wouldn't you? I did—I gasped; then I laughed, and then I began to think it over and realize who the speaker is and began to believe.

"He is a writer of fiction whose articles appear regularly in the best magazines. Regarding magazine literature, he is cynical. But in the moving picture he sees a ray of hope."

Here are the words of the nameless speaker, as given in print by Mr. Currie:

The photoplay and the moving picture contain the germ of the greatest world literature that will ever be achieved in the history of letters.

Just now, literature is passing through the worst stage in history. This is especially true of the United States. Anybody who can string words together, if he is persistent, can foist any book of doubtful value on the market. And he can make money at it, too.

This condition of affairs began just after the Civil War, and it has been getting worse every day. With the coming of the moving picture as a factor in the art world there is bound to be a change. The moving picture already has educated people to perceive the absence of logic in any plot. Go and watch a picture some time that offends logic or that lacks continuity and you will have this fact proven to you. That is the reason some books that have ranked as "best sellers" fail dismally on the screen.

The moving picture therefore educates the people to appreciate a well-woven plot and to deride a story in which a plot is poor. Literature is altogether a matter of weaving, weaving of words and weaving plot circumstances into a logical whole. But the written word, if well wielded, hides a multitude of sins and poor construction. The moving picture throws these flaws into the light. You will find its influence decidedly striking from now on.

I believe the moving picture will do for the cheap magazine what it has done for the cheap theatrical company. It will force tawdry literature into the scrap heap. The residue will be the best of which modern writers and builders are capable, and that best will be as great or greater than the historic masters of literature.

This article should act as a spur not only on the writers of scenarios, but on the editors who glean the wheat from the chaff. Every man of intelligence in the moving picture business must ere now have become strongly convinced that public opinion of the moving picture is growing more critical every day. It is a question of the survival of the fittest, and of the weeding out of the unfit day by day.

No Room for Novices in Photoplay Ranks.

The swindler of foolish girls and young women who are obsessed with the desire to become photoplay actresses is still at work. The Selig Polyscope Company has set detectives on the track of one of these fellows, who recently operated in Pittsburgh. The action was taken on the receipt of a letter from a near victim, addressed to the Chicago office of the company mentioned. The letter is appended:

Just a few lines to obtain your answer to a couple of my questions. On Wednesday, July 28, I saw an ad where a young girl was wanted to play in movies. I answered the ad and to my surprise received a telephone call the next day.

In the afternoon the party came up to see me and told me I would do fine, that I was just the girl to play with him. I asked him what company he was playing with and he said Selig. Now, what I want to know is, are there some Selig players in Pittsburgh and, if so, are they looking for a young girl? If there is a Selig player in Pittsburgh looking for a partner will you kindly tell me his name?

The reason I answered the ad was simply because I am getting so interested in "movies" that I watch my every chance. Now, if there are no Selig players in Pittsburgh, and this ad is only a fake, kindly let me know how I can become a movie actress.

Hoping this will be no trouble to you in answering a few questions. Kindly write and let me know about the player who is supposed to be in Pittsburgh.

The Selig Polyscope Company at once communicated with the young woman, advising her that it maintained no stock company east of Chicago and that the "Selig player" in Pittsburgh was an impostor. She was further advised that there is little opportunity for an amateur to become a moving picture actor: also that there are hundreds of experienced actors and actresses on the waiting lists of every dependable film manufacturer, and that there is little, if any, opportunity for the ambitious novice to compete with actors and actresses of talent and experience.

Open Air Pictures Amid Brilliant Illumination.

"Popular Mechanics," of August, has devoted one page and a half to an illustrated article on new achievements in the projection of moving pictures. The ingenuity of Frank L. Hough, manager of the Kleine Optical Company, in designing a screen at White City for the purpose of giving "open air" moving pictures, which was referred to at the time in my Chicago brevities, has occasioned the following paragraph in the article referred to, and a three-quarter page illustration:

A plan has been worked out at one of the Chicago amusement parks which enables the film drama to be shown at night in the open, without being interfered with by the powerful arcs and thousands of colored incandescent lamps illuminating the grounds. The light from these sources is shielded from the screen by means of a large shadow box which intercepts the rays and absorbs and deflects them, preventing their reaching the curtain. The screen, which is 20 feet in width and 16 feet high, stands approximately 25 feet from the front of the stage. Extending diagonally from each side of this and reaching probably 15 feet outwardly, are multi-angle shadow curtains made of black cloth fitted over a framework. A large number of black drop curtains are hung forward above the screen, while an incline extends out from it at the bottom. The projector is supplied with a special 10-inch lens, through which the light is focused on the screen, 186 feet away; a remarkably long throw and one known to be exceeded only in a single instance in this country, and in that case through darkness. All of the space between the lantern and the screen is roofed with colored lights, beneath which the "spot" has to be projected. On all sides the grounds are also brightly illuminated. The pictures presented are clear.

Chicago Film Brevities.

M. E. Smith, who for some time past has been the successful branch manager of George Kleine's exchange service, in Chicago, left for New York City Saturday, August 7, where he will act as general manager of all the George Kleine's branch offices in the United States. William H. Jenner has been appointed branch manager of the Chicago office. Mr. Jenner is well known in exhibiting circles in Chicago, having for the past six years been manager respectively of the Vista, Shakespeare, Marlow, Langley, Monroe and Windsor Park theaters. Inquiries are pouring into the Chicago branch office from exhibitors in the Middle West regarding the Kleine-Edison feature releases.

* * *

D. W. Chamberlain, general manager of the American Amusement Company, Minneapolis, Minn., called at this office, Wednesday, August 4, while on his way to New York City, where he will remain for a week. The moving picture theater interests of Mr. Chamberlain's company are among the most substantial in the northwest. The company owns the American and Empress in Minneapolis, the Grand and the Unique in Mankato, Minn.; the Grand in Faribault, Minn., and the Garrick in Fargo, North Dakota. Mr. Chamberlain reported excellent business in all his houses and throughout his territory.

* * *

Marshall Neilan, director of Bloom Center, in the Selig Zoo, Los Angeles, stopped over in the city Saturday, August 7, on his way to New York City to spend a vacation with his family.

* * *

Jones, Linick & Schaefer closed their La Salle Opera House as a picture theater on Monday, August 9. This has been done in order to rehearse the new comedy, "Molly and I," which will open about September 1.

* * *

Watterson R. Rothacker, general manager of the Industrial Film Co., with his wife and baby, was in Manitou, Col., on his way home, when last heard from.

* * *

Harry MacRae Webster, who has been for some time past managing director of the United Photoplays Company, has resigned, and it is understood has accepted a position as feature director with the Universal. He will be in New York for about two months and will then most likely go out to the coast.

* * *

Director Baker, of the Essanay, with Miss Ruth Stonehouse and a company of Essanay photoplayers, took several scenes of "The Fable of Hazel's Two Husbands" in the Great Northern Hotel last week. Advantage was taken of the fact that about seventy-two high school girls had their "frat" dance and banquet in the ballroom of the hotel, and these scenes were happily utilized by Director Baker.

* * *

The Smalleys had extraordinary difficulties to contend with in this city, while taking several big scenes of "The Dumb Girl of Portici," out at San Souci park. From July 5 to July 29 only ten working days were possible owing to heavy rains and beclouded skys. They left for Los Angeles Saturday evening, July 31, where they will complete their work on the Pavlowa films. Over 300 players and supernumeraries participated in the scenes taken here.

* * *

The Saturday morning programs offered by the Strand Theater Company at Orchestra Hall are increasing in popularity weekly. Great care is taken in the selection of the subjects so that childlife may have its own atmosphere of ultra-imagination and fairy-lore. On Saturday, August 7, the program was especially delightful from the children's standpoint. "Hansel and Gretel," "The Rivals," and "The Kangaroo" were all seen on the screen, and the music of childlaughter rose to a crescendo. The daily programs offered are just as popular with grown-ups, and Mary Pickford in "Rags" drew crowded houses all last week. Orchestra Hall, under Mr. Cordner's management, has grown to become known as the high-class home of moving pictures in Chicago. The presentations are marked not only by the careful selection of subjects, but also by artistic stage-settings, talented musical accompaniment and fine projection.

* * *

Alfred Hamburger has extended his lease on the Ziegfeld theater for a period of five years. Notwithstanding the dismal forebodings of some of his friends on the success of this house Mr. Hamburger has succeeded in making it popular. He has recently added the Easterly theater, on Racine, Lincoln and Diversey avenues, and the Ravenswood, at Lawrence and Kedzie avenues, to his already long string of moving picture houses. Each of the newly acquired houses has a seating capacity of 1000. Mr. Hamburger has moved his headquarters from the Schiller building to the Chicago Business College building, Wabash avenue and Adams street.

* * *

E. A. Videt, one of the operators at the Alcazar theater of this city, paid us a visit Monday, August 9. In addition to his operating work Mr. Videt is now interested with several associates in printing titles for moving pictures and in making advertising slides. He is on the day shift at the Alcazar with George Gehring, and Bert J. Monroe works on the night shift. The Alcazar is a popular night picture theater, the Star theater, nearly opposite it, on Madison street, being another. Two Simplex machines, with motor drives, are used at the Alcazar. Good steady business, with General Film Company's programs, prevails at the Alcazar.

* * *

George Bowles, manager of "The Birth of a Nation," has made the following statement regarding the leasing of the Colonial theater by the Epoch Producing Corporation: "The Colonial theater has been leased for a year. It has been taken over for the purpose of presenting Griffith attractions, including 'The Birth of a Nation,' owned and presented by the Epoch Producing Corporation, and also the future releases of that company, the general manager of which is J. J. McCarthy. I shall manage the Colonial and all the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy and their associates. As for arrangements with other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out." It is said that "The Birth of a Nation" will close its run at the Illinois theater Saturday night, August 21, and that the first presentation will be given at the Colonial the following Sunday afternoon.

* * *

About three weeks ago, at a meeting held by Chicago Moving Picture Machine Operators, Local No. 10, A. T. S. E., and Chicago Moving Picture Operators, Local 134 (Electrical Union), it was agreed that another meeting will be held at the time of the convention of the A. F. of L. in this city, sometime in September. The object of the latter meeting will be to secure a settlement of any grievances now prevailing, and to bring about harmony between the rival factions.

* * *

At the regular meeting of the International Motion Picture Association, held Friday, August 6, in Masonic Temple, this city, a resolution was unanimously passed, thanking the General Film Company for its co-operation with Chicago exhibitors in donating a full day's film rental to those who desired to give their entire receipts for the Eastland Benefit performance.

* * *

My friend Tom Mix, producer-actor of the Selig Polyscope Company, has become quite the rage in Las Vegas, N. M., where his company is now working. He has joined the Commercial, Elks and Fishing Clubs of that burgh, and has also been appointed Deputy Sheriff of San Miguel, the county in which Las Vegas is located. Tom has informed the sheriff that if, at any time, a bold, bad man gets away in real life his cowboys are just as willing to pursue and catch him as they would a screen villain.

* * *

I had begun to wonder what had become of my old friend, M. A. Neff, when a letter came in from Columbus, O., showing that he was still at the old stand there as general manager of the Star Film Company. He states that "The Battle of Ballots," now being handled by him, has had a week's run at the Columbus theater to fine business.

* * *

John E. McAuley, formerly traveling representative for the Amusement Supply Co., is now acting in that capacity for the Enterprise Optical Co. He left for Cleveland, Monday night, August 9, and thence proceeded to Toledo and Detroit. He is demonstrating the 1916 model of the Motiograph.

John R. Freuler Speaks

President of the Mutual Film Corporation Addresses Exhibitors on the Subject of Fair Play.

JOHN R. FREULER, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, made the following statement on present competition methods during the present week:

"I want to begin with a reference to a subject that I would not refer to at all if it were not of the very greatest importance to exhibitors. I am a great believer in competition, in the open fair struggle for the prizes of success and for the rewards of honest business. Through this real red blooded active competition the great business with which we are all intensely concerned will grow into a bigger, better business, with a finer product and greater honor for the art as well as for the business of it. I welcome a competitor who bends every nerve and energy and every ounce of ability that's in him to do better than I do. This is sportsmanship in its best sense, and it is showmanship in its highest realm.

"But I have no use whatever for the man who doesn't play fair. I will not knowingly tolerate any unfair tactics from any Mutual employe from the top all the way down the line to the smallest and youngest boy in a film exchange. I will not tolerate unfairness from the Mutual Film Corporation to the exhibitor or to the general public because aside from the moral of it it is bad business. No more will I permit unfairness in a competitor to go unnoticed or unproclaimed.

"It has come to me from Mutual exhibitors that agents or employes of competitive selling organizations have endeavored to deceive them by misrepresentation regarding the future quality of the Mutual program, thereby hoping to win them away from a profitable business relationship. As far as the Mutual program is concerned, I have no fears whatever.

"I do not for one moment believe that the great competing firms are responsible for the overeagerness of some of their employes or representations. I know them as honorable and fair men. But the actual announcements of the great things coming on the regular Mutual program have made some of the underlings afraid, and, being afraid, they have resorted to misrepresentation in order to tie exhibitors hard and fast before they could get a chance at the new benefits of the regular Mutual program. I feel sure that this frank talk will be sufficient to defeat any further efforts along this line."

Fielding Builds Movable Power Plant

Lubin Arizona Director Will Use It First in Making "The Great Divide."

FOR the first time in history an independent traveling power plant complete has been built, for the purpose of taking moving pictures at night. It is without precedent and will without a doubt be a model for other companies to follow in the near future, as it is invaluable for field work where it is impracticable to run wires for miles in order to get the night photography.

Romaine Fielding of the Lubin company's Phoenix (Arizona) studio has erected a plant mounted on a big motor car which makes it possible to take his entire lighting system anywhere that an automobile can travel, with a cable of two thousand feet, so that he may get into places which have heretofore been considered impossible. The generator has a special switchboard on which the different lines or circuits can be run. The plant is also equipped with a thirteen-inch navy searchlight, projector type, which can be used in connection with the other lights when necessary. This searchlight is mounted at the right of the driver.

The entire outfit weighs approximately 8,000 pounds. Compactness and simplicity was the principle aim in designing the unit. By the application of the auto type engine in this work, the weight is greatly reduced, which is proven by the fact that a light plant of the same capacity which can be purchased from the eastern manufacturer weighs three times as much as Mr. Fielding's installation.

LOS ANGELES LETTER

Schumann-Heink Visits Universal City.

Madame Schumann-Heink, the world-famous grand opera star, in response to a personal invitation by Carl Laemmle visited Universal City this week. The diva was accompanied by her four sons and one daughter and their party of friends. It is said that this was the first time the celebrated singer had ever been inside of a moving picture plant, and she expressed her delight in this novel experience.

Madame Schumann-Heink, after seeing several companies at work and shown everything else of interest in the big place, was conducted to the Universal Zoo. Here she had the courage to enter the cage of Princess, an untamed Sumatra tiger, and posed for a picture while Paul Bourgeois, the trainer, kept a watchful eye on the snarling beast. Then Charlie, the big elephant, was brought out by his trainer,

Mme. Schumann-Heink at Universal City.

and the pachyderm lifted Madame Schumann-Heink to his back.

A luncheon was given to the diva and her party at the Universal restaurant, and before leaving Madame Schumann-Heink sang, in front of the Administration Building, "The Rosary" to an appreciative audience of 1,500 Universal employes.

Film Artists Draw Society at Benefit.

At the public acceptance of the $2,500 prize California song the photoplayers of the film capital furnished amusement to the throng. The "California" song, written by Dr. John S. Zamecnik, of Cleveland, was one out of nine hundred submitted from every part of America. The program was an all-star one, featuring representative film players, such as Raymond Hitchcock, who acted as chairman of the arrangement committee; Charles Murray, who managed the stage, and many others equally as famous. Practically the entire Keystone Company stars took part. Mack Sennett received a personal letter of thanks from Mayor Sebastian. Each artist who appeared was publicly thanked by the highest city official. Eddie Foy was funny, even without the little Foys. "Rotund Roscoe" Arbuckle did not need to coax the vast audience, for when he bobbed onto the stage he started the fun ball rolling. Of course, Mabel Normand graced the stage and made a hit with the assemblage.

Among the 7,000 who gathered at Shrine auditorium were many leaders of the Los Angeles smart set. The fashionable box parties made the great theater resemble an elite social function rather than a theatrical benefit to launch a new song.

Film Player Loses Foot in Accident.

William Rayfield, a young actor who works on a guarantee at the Mutual studios, lost one of his feet and came near being killed when he fell beneath the wheels of a moving street car. He jumped for the step and missed. The young man is married and has a family depending upon his work for support. He was not working at the time of the accident. The Mutual players, ever willing to do good where good is needed, immediately made up a purse of $500 and sent it to the injured man. One of Rayfield's feet was crushed, necessitating amputation. He is still in the hospital, but luckily on the road to recovery.

Harold Lockwood Stabbed.

When they say, "Oh, for the life of a photoplayer; how soft," they should know that this life is harder than it seems. Not only death, but injuries come from acting in pictures. Harold Lockwood, at the American, was stabbed by a fellow actor. The wound was two inches deep and needed hospital attention. Of course the cutting was an accident, but accidents will happen.

Schwartz and Williams to Write for Keystone.

A novel feature of the coming Triangle productions will be a perfect music score especially written for each picture. Jean Schwartz, the well-known composer, and Harry Williams, who wrote the worst to "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" and "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," have been engaged by the Keystone studios to head the musical staff under direction of Hampton Del Ruth.

Raymond Hitchcock in Shipwreck.

Raymond Hitchcock, Flora Zabelle and a few other Keystone players made a fishing trip to Catalina Islands this week. A freight steamer came too close to their small launch, capsizing it and throwing everybody in the water. Somebody might have drowned if a Japanese fisherman had not come to the scene of the disaster and fortunately rescued Mr. Hitchcock and his friends.

Film Brevities.

Oscar Dempsey, one of the Universal players who was injured in the battle scene at Venice, July 25, died on August 3 at St. Catherine Hospital. Several hundred persons took part in this battle, which is an episode in the "Broken Coin" Series produced by the Francis Ford company.

* * *

One advantage of having a studio in Coronado is the nearness to the military bases of the United States. It is the intention of the Lubin company to produce a number of multiple reel photoplays featuring the different branches of the army and navy. The studio, situated on the hillside overlooking the bay, is well placed for the production of these pictures. Captain Wilbert Melville, head of the western Lubin, has engaged Captain Richard P. Rifenberick, Jr., who will be in charge of the military work on forthcoming pictures. He is at present military aide to the exposition officials. Captain Melville intends using every vehicle of war from a torpedo to an armored train.

* * *

Julia Dean, the well-known actress, who has been starred by the Universal in "Renunciation," a coming five-reel feature production, had to rush back to New York to open at one of the big theaters. Director Leonard, the producer of this picture had to work his company all night on August 2 and 3 in order to finish the production and enable Miss Dean to leave for the east on the 4th.

* * *

The Smalley company, which spent a month in Chicago producing "The Dumb Girl of Portici," returned on August 3, and were mighty glad to get back into the land of sunshine, as the weather in Chicago has been most trying, raining almost every day. Madame Anna Pavlowa, the Russian dancer who starred in this picture, will follow in a few days when she finishes her successful engagement at the "Midway Gardens." Thirty-five trunks belonging to the celebrated dancer have already arrived at Universal City.

* * *

Al Christie, the well-known Universal director, has established a record by producing "Mrs. Plum's Pudding," a five-reel comedy drama, featuring Marie Tempest, in the remarkably short time of eleven days.

* * *

Nat C. Goodwin has finished his work in "Business Is Business," the first Universal feature in which he has been starred.

* * *

Harry Lyons, brother of Ed Lyons, while with the Nestor company in San Diego last week, saved the sister of Lee Moran from drowning.

* * *

Frank Ormston has been appointed to the position of technical director at the Universal City studios. Mr. Ormston has been associated with the Universal for some time and is regarded by the officials as an exceptionally good man for the place.

* * *

Prominent visitors this week at Universal City were members of the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the House of Representatives, who have been in Los Angeles for two days on harbor and river inspection. Another distinguished visitor was Governor Arthur Capper of Kansas, who stopped over a day while en route to the San Francisco exposition.

The offices occupied by the Keystone scenario department are being completely renovated and refurnished. Soft carpets, easy chairs, subdued colors and every little detail of comfort and restfulness have been resorted to with the idea that the staff of writers will do better in the improved surroundings. A library of reference books, individual stenographers for each writer, dictating machines and other conveniences are combined in the most up-to-date scenario department in the west.

* * *

Otto Lederer, of the Vitagraph, has a collection of Indian makeups. Every one is separate and cataloged by the tribal name. Mr. Lederer is an authority on makeup anyhow, and recently used seven in one day. Mr. Sturgeon was pleased with his versatility and used him in five different parts in the same picture, all bits, in addition to his playing one of the leading characters. This occurred during the filming of "The Chalice of Courage" at Bear Valley.

* * *

For the opium den scenes in the new Lasky production in which Blanche Sweet is to appear it was necessary for the Lasky company to get permission from the State Board of Pharmacy to use the layout and pipes with which the dens are identified. The articles were sent out in the custody of one of the inspectors and are valued at $2,000. For these articles the state has collected over $9,000, and the former owners have done over five years in prison.

* * *

Recently the merchants of Venice through their city government endeavored to keep moving picture companies from working on the city streets and in the canals. Somehow the law was never passed. Their reason was that the players caused crowds to gather to see the pictures made, thus keeping visitors from spending money in the stores. Some time ago the same city, by the company that owns it, is said to have paid $500 to a certain company to come on a Sunday afternoon and pull off a great battle scene. As Sunday is the best day of the week in this amusement resort it is rather amusing that they paid to have done what once they tried to eliminate.

* * *

The American players from Santa Barbara—Director William D. Taylor, Irving Cummings, Lottie Pickford, George Periolat, William Russell, Charlotte Burton and others—are spending the week-end in Los Angeles, making scenes for the latest "diamond chip" from the sky. We saw them work in the Bostock arena with the animals, and this little chip will be a mighty big chip from the great "Diamond from the Sky." Irving Cummings drove his fearless racer in record time.

* * *

Don Meaney, who was assistant to the director general at Universal City, is now with Metro at the Quality Pictures studio in Hollywood, where he is acting as manager of productions. Director William J. Bowman, who completed "The Silent Voice," needed some one to take part of the load from his shoulders so Fred Balshofer engaged Mr. Meaney.

* * *

For the Lasky production of "The Explorers" in which Lou Tellegen, the noted star and former leading man for Sarah Bernhardt, is to star, a number of negroes are required, as the scene is laid in African jungles. The first day out on location the negroes, who wear but little more than a smile, all came back to the studio complaining of sunburn.

* * *

Now that the Lubin Company has built and opened a new studio in Coronado, Captain Wilbert Melville is preparing to start construction of the great new concrete studio in this city. As soon as it is finished there will be installed two new companies.

* * *

Bruce Mitchell is directing the first dramatic feature to be released by the National Film Corporation, "Captivating Mary Carstairs," adapted to the screen by A. W. Coldewey from the book of that name by Henry Sydnor Harrison, author of "Queed." In this story of five reels Miss Norma Talmadge, who recently arrived in Los Angeles from New York to enter on a two-year contract with the National, is being featured along with Mr. Mitchell. Other prominent photoplayers in the cast are Allen Forrest and Jack Livingston, both of whom have been retained permanently by the National.

* * *

Determined to have a studio equipment absolutely independent of weather conditions, Director-General Thomas H. Ince has installed a new big power plant at Inceville. The system includes two three-cylinder engines, each of 125 horsepower, two thirty-five-kilowatt direct-connected Westinghouse generators, and a four-panel marble switchboard, together with all the numerous smaller accessories. The engines are started by compressed air and are capable of lighting 2,000 twenty-five-watt incandescent lamps, 940 sixty-watt lamps and the 20 twenty-five-amp. Winfield-Kerner lamps, which are now a part of the old equipment.

* * *

Manager Loper, of the Pathe Exchange, showed us a telegram which requested booking of "Neal of the Navy." Letters, 'phone messages, and more wires show that the theater men have confidence that "Neal" will win the people for them.

* * *

Crane Wilbur, who has been signed by the New York Motion Picture Corporation to appear as leading man in coming Triangle productions under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, will leave the east within a few days of this writing and immediately take up his new duties at Inceville. Producer Ince has not announced as yet just what play has been chosen for Mr. Wilbur.

* * *

Melville Ellis, designer and fashion expert of international reputation, has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince to supervise costuming of forthcoming Ince productions.

* * *

When the Biograph left here several players remained, among the California lovers being Al Ernest Garcia, who has a strong cast and story for his first production for the National Film Corporation. In the character leads are Gene Pallette, portrayer of crook roles, who plays a crippled Italian, and Jill Woodward, who plays a poor Italian woman, Mr. Pallette's sister. The straight leads are in the hands of Constance Johnson and Page Peters, while Frank Bonn, who recently arrived from New York, plays an important role. The title of the story is "The Scar," a tale of delayed rewards.

* * *

Rollin S. Sturgeon, producing manager of the Vitagraph, is again at work on a two-reel subject while preparations are going forward for the V-L-S-E feature "Sir Henry Morgan, Buccaneer." His present production is "The Yellow Streak," by the Rev. Clarence J. Harris. Anne Schaefer and George Holt sustain the leads, supported by George Kunkel, George Stanley and Otto Lederer.

* * *

Beginning August 2 the World Film Corporation will issue a weekly news pictorial consisting of 500 feet of general and national news and 500 feet of local San Francisco news. Each branch of the World Film Corporation will have a like service. In other words, out of the thirty offices which will produce a total of 15,000 feet, only 500 feet of the most interesting news will be displayed, together with the usual local output.

* * *

After finishing several big features Charles Ray has departed from Inceville minus make-up and costumes, and is enjoying a vacation in Southern California. He is touring leisurely in his automobile.

* * *

Henry MacMahon, representative of the newly-organized Triangle Film Company, arrived in Los Angeles from New York this week and is inspecting the studios of the Sennett-Griffith-Ince companies at Edendale, Hollywood, and Santa Monica. While in Los Angeles Mr. MacMahon is the guest of Mack Sennett.

* * *

Myrtle Gonzales recently had as guests Mr. and Mrs. Shelton, owners of the Ashland theater at Kansas City, Mo. Manager Smith, of the local Vitagraph branch, had a cameraman run off about twenty feet of the visitors being greeted by Miss Gonzales and himself, and it will be shown at the Kansas City house from time to time.

* * *

Mary Anderson, a charming young ingenue, arrived this week from the eastern studios. Her work in "The Goddess" and the regular Vitagraph releases drew her to Rollin Sturgeon's attention—and he made up his mind to secure her for this studio. She begins work here next week.

* * *

George Stout, business manager of the Keystone, spent a short vacation in San Francisco this week combining business with a visit to the Exposition.

* * *

At the Vitagraph Ulysses Davis is putting on a one-reel subject, "A Cripple Creek Cinderella," by Daisy Eloise Smith. The cast includes Alfred Vosburgh, Estelle Allen, William Duncan, Carleton Weatherby, and George Stanley. Some exceptional settings will be seen in this picture.

* * *

At the conclusion of the Farrar picture Cecil B. De Mille, director general of the Lasky plant, will take his first vacation since the company has been organized. He expects to go to New York for a couple of weeks.

* * *

Lasky property and construction men are this week working out under the sunny skies building a great and typical African village of over two hundred grass huts on the Lasky ranch for use in the Lou Tellegen production of "The Explorers," in which Dorothy Davenport, a niece of the late Fanny Davenport, is playing the feminine lead opposite Lou Tellegen.

* * *

Sam Spedon was the guest of honor this week at a delightful supper-dance tendered him by prominent Vitagraph players in a beach cafe. The evening was enjoyed by the directors and stars, with Otto Lederer as toastmaster.

* * *

Managing Director Bruce Mitchell, of the National, is completing plans for a large new studio in Hollywood. The present quarters are too small for the large number now at work. No location has yet been decided upon, but the new plant will likely be placed along Film row. The present location was made by the old Oz Company.

* * *

The Balboa Amusement Producing Company, we are informed, has entered into a second contract with Pathe Freres for the delivery of eleven more photoplays a week. This covers a period of two years and supplements the five-year agreement made some time ago. The sales on this contract amounts approximately to $800,000 a year.

* * *

The city water in Long Beach is not cold enough for the developing of films in the Balboa laboratories. To solve this problem a refrigerating tank of 16,000 gallons' capacity has been erected.

* * *

Balboa players were invited to a picnic last Sunday by Tom Doyle, the big California cattleman. A hundred responded and were brought in automobiles, furnished by president Horkheimer for the occasion, to the ranch, forty miles from Long Beach. Among those present were Lillian Lorraine, Paul Gilmore, Lewis Cody, Bertram Bracken, Corenne Grant and the newly-wedded William Courtleigh, Jr., and his bride, formerly Miss Ethel Flemming. A fine barbecue in tiptop Spanish style was served and the players enjoyed themselves thoroughly.

* * *

Leon D. Netter, business manager, and E. M. Asher, publicity and sales manager of the All Star Feature Distributors of San Francisco, are in the city for a week or ten days. They are making their headquarters at the Golden Gate office, while local manager Emmick is taking a short and well-earned vacation.

* * *

M. H. Lewis, manager for the Los Angeles office of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, has joined the ranks of the benedicts. He was married in Salt Lake City, his home town, to Miss Enid Gleason, a Salt Lake City girl. The young couple went to San Francisco to spend their honeymoon at the Fair.

EMMICK BUILDING BIG HOUSE.

E. F. Emmick, manager of the Star theater in Pullman, Wash., has contracted for the construction of a $12,000 moving picture theater in that town. The building, which will be 33½ by 100 feet in dimensions and one story in height, is scheduled to be ready for business on October 1. It will be fitted with a Gold Fibre screen 12 by 16 feet in size, and will have a throw of 86 feet. There will be a stage 15 by 32 feet with a proscenium arch 14 by 18 feet. The auditorium will accommodate 448 chairs, and the indirect lighting system will be used. A Power and a Simplex machine are to be used. The theater is situated in the business center of Pullman, which has a population of 4,500, and that number is increased by 1,600 students of the Washington State College when that institution opens.

NEW THEATER FOR TRINIDAD.

E. G. Hower, of Trinidad, Colo., who was the first man to present motion pictures in that city, some twelve years ago, is building there a moving picture theater to cost $10,000. The new structure is to have 800 seats and will be quite different from other picture theaters in Trinidad, all of which are of the storeroom variety. Mr. Hower's new theater will be the first structure in that city to be built for the purpose of presenting motion pictures. Mr. Hower has disposed of his Crystal Theater at 205 West Main street, Trinidad, which he successfully conducted for over three years.

Editor Becomes Vice-President

Phil Lang Is Promoted to High Office in Kalem Company—Has Handled Scripts for Four Years.

At the recent election of Kalem officers, following the death of Samuel Long, the late president, Phil Lang, chief scenario editor for Kalem since 1911, was made vice-president. This unusual promotion, from a place demanding literary and artistic attainments, to one requiring executive ability of the first order, probably is without precedent in the shifting records of producing companies. It is the reward of four years of faithful work, during which Mr. Lang handled more than the tasks that customarily are within the sphere of a scenario editor. He has done that, to be sure, but in addition he has been active in shaping both the artistic and business policies of the company. When the office of vice-president was vacated by the election of Wm. Wright as secretary-treasurer, Mr. Lang became the logical choice for the position.

Phil Lang.

For a man who has played so active a part in the affairs of a large manufacturing concern, Kalem's scenario editor has succeeded surprisingly well in avoiding publicity. His name and his work are known to photoplaywrights throughout the country, but this reputation is due to laudable accomplishments and not in any way to self advertising.

Mr. Lang has done much to develop amateur writers that indicated talent. Many men and women who today are earning comfortable incomes as photoplay authors will readily admit that the encouragement and advice of the Kalem editor was an important factor in their success. For the last four years he passed on the merits of every script that entered the office and has made a practice of keeping in touch with authors whose contributions showed promise. By a consistent adherence to this policy he has trained writers into an appreciation of the Kalem policy.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Lang took up scenario writing because it appealed to him more strongly than any other line of work. Born and educated in Ohio, he prepared to be a lawyer but changed his mind and became an actor; then press representative for various traveling theatrical companies. Pictures were just coming into vogue at this time and Mr. Lang spent his spare hours in studying the output of the different producers, contrasting their methods and trying to learn the style of stories each demanded.

Kalem photoplays seemed most in accord with his own ideas of what the screen should present and he wrote directly with a view of selling to the company that soon engaged him as scenario editor. In the early days, besides writing much of the Kalem advertising, he devoted considerable energy to evolving stories out of impossible scripts—scripts that contained one good idea worth purchasing and nothing else. Also he found time to write original stories and supervise many of the details connected with the executive branches of the rapidly growing business.

When the Kalem Company decided to present feature adaptations of famous books and plays Mr. Lang himself prepared the more important of the scenarios. As vice-president he will continue to direct the scenario department.

Mr. Lang feels that the day of the amateur writer, capable of producing only one situation that may be developed into a singe-reel picture, has passed. The demand now is for men qualified to handle a full-fledged plot such as is needed in photoplays of two or three reels. He feels that for authors of this caliber, the prospects never were more inviting.

George Universal Stevenson Back

Resting After Strenuous Publicity Campaign in London—Will Remain on This Side Several Months.

THAT genial Stevenson, once head of the publicity of the Universal Company, and now in charge of publicity and advertising for the British concern, the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Ltd., gave the staff of the Moving Picture World a pleasant surprise this week by appearing in the door and holding out his friendly hand for a shake all around. It was on September 17 of last year that he went to England to take up his new work. It seems that things were not moving very speedily there when he arrived. Yet from this remark that a personage in the picture field in the British Empire made—"The resolute optimism of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company and its determination to do aggresive things in the face of a panic-stricken market doubtless saved the day for the kinema business in Great Britain"—one can readily presume that he made his presence felt. When we asked him about this, he said the trade was in the doldrums. The war had taken all life out of the kinema market. Everyone was waiting for the other man to do something, and in consequence nothing was being done. Advertising had dropped off.

But this state of affairs fitted into his plans first rate. Mr. Laemmle had admonished him on his departure: "Begin to advertise when the other fellow leaves off advertising; it pays to advertise." He found them leaving off and he began. Mr. Stevenson's account was most interesting. In the first place, the publicity expert is a trained man who knows instinctively what is of importance and what is merely personal. With only an office boy and a stenographer to work with him he had to get the Trans-Atlantic Review again on the job. It had been a fortnightly publication, but had skipped its last issue. Since then he has put it on a weekly basis, and whereas it had been sold on the stands for a penny (at a loss of two pence the copy) he raised the price of it to three pence. It went to the trade free. Besides this he had to reorganize his trade exhibitions. The company has one big theater where the whole trade comes to view the T.-A. program of Universal films and two smaller houses where the pictures can be viewed again, as many times as is needed and at more leisure. In London, the "whole trade" is a fairly comprehensive term; for it is the headquarters for all the British Empire and buyers from Canada are also on hand, while all the entente nations are logically reached from there. John D. Tippett, managing director of the Trans-Atlantic, has a splendid sales organization.

It was a most unlikely time for an American to bring new ideas. Even the office force with which he was to work walked out when it was known that an American was to take charge. No Yankee methods would have had any effect at all. "Neptune's Daughter" and the serial, "Trey o' Hearts" were to be sold, so his work was cut out for him and he had to hump from the very moment that he reported at Universal House, the seat of the T.-A. Film Company. It was Christmas before he had a breathing spell, and then he went to Glasgow to organize a trade show for the serial and then one in Manchester and one in Birmingham. Of course, it was necessary to get the exhibitors to come to the trade show and the publicity campaign that went with these and also the "publicity props" that were to help the exhibitors after booking the offerings had to be got ready. These trade shows struck a new note, and one of the immediate results of the campaign was to put "Trey o' Hearts" ahead of all other serials sold in Great Britain. When "The Master Key" came it took this place, but was supplemented by "The Black Box" in its turn. Universal House began to be dubbed "the House of Serials."

Comedies were what were especially wanted in war-stricken England, and the T.-A. also became known as the "House of Comedies." Billy Ritchie and his L-Ko comedians; Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and the Nestor Comedy artists have become household words in the United Kingdom. Some three-color-process lithograph postcards gave variety to "T.-A. funfete" nights at the shows when these comedy pictures were the program, and these have become an established kinema institution.

In March, Mr. Stevenson, after three attacks of influenza, due to a terribly wet winter, the worst in 100 years, according to the Greenwich observers, had to go to Spain for a chance to get back to vigorous health. On the way to France he came across big Joe Farnham and little Phil Klein, son of the playwright who lost his life on the Lusitania. They were on their way to Paris to buy war films. Joe facetiously remarked that Stevenson was so yellow that the minters in Paris would probably coin him into pieces of eight on sight. It was not until he reached the high altitudes of Spain that he began to recover and then he had a chance to look at the country's methods and business.

They are poor in Spain, he says, and the kinema is the poor man's show. Prices range from 10 centavos (2 cents) to a half peseta (12 cents). It is a bullfight country, and the blood and thunder pictures like "La Flor de Muerte" and "Lo Maestro de la Casa Roja" and the Sherlock Holmes pictures and "Lucille Love" (Senarita de Misterio) are the popular films.

Mr. Stevenson will remain in America for two or three months, keeping in touch with the trade on the other side through the mails, but improving his physical condition and getting strength for another go at hard work.

Enter "Social Mentor"

Mrs. Robert T. Haines Appointed to That Position at the Equitable Studio.

MRS. ROBERT T. HAINES, the wife of the actor, has been appointed "social mentor" of the Equitable Motion picture studio at Flushing. This means that she will act as sponsor for the social correctness of the pictures which are made at the studio. She will not only advise the individual actors as to the correct clothes they should wear, but she will see that all the latest social etiquette is observed. Mrs. Haines will also advise on the stage settings, and will see that the little artistic niceties, which are so often overlooked by men in their less careful regard for detail, will not be neglected. Being a woman of vast social experience, besides possessing a real knowledge of human life, Mrs. Haines will be consulted on all matters of importance, and will bring her knowledge of the woman's point of view to the assistance of the directors.

"Motion picture directors would cause themselves much less anguish if they could only have a woman with good taste, social experience, tact and breeding to assist them in their pictures," says Mrs. Haines. "Pictures which offend good taste and which have difficulty in passing the censorship board would probably be made in far less quantity if every director could rely on the judgment of a sane, well-balanced woman with artistic sense and clarity of mind to assist him. After all, the home and social life play the greater share of importance in pictures. The home, of course, is the realm of woman, and with that and with the social conventions she is more familiar than is man. I do not believe that many women would be capable to direct a picture, but on the other hand neither is a man able to feel the little things, nor does he possess the intuition that woman does. No woman is fitted for the responsibility of a position of this kind unless she has met every kind of life. Aside from the acting field in motion pictures the realm of motion pictures has been practically unopened to women. I think the social mentor will have a big place in the future."

Mrs. Haines is a southern woman. She was brought up in Washington society and has traveled widely. Her charm and simplicity make her invaluable in her new capacity. She had no intention of becoming affiliated with the Equitable company, having gone to Flushing some weeks ago merely to be with her husband while he was starring in Walter Macnamara's picture, "Human Cargoes." Unconsciously she found herself giving suggestions for the settings. They were so practical and Mrs. Haines showed herself such a genius in that line that Isadore Bernstein, general manager, asked her to become one of his staff.

Triangle Appoints a General Manager

J. N. Naulty Will Have Authority Second Only to That of President Aitken.

THE most important change in the line up of the Mutual Film Corporation since the annual election came this week when J. N. Naulty, formerly vice-president and general manager of the Mutual, resigned to become general manager of the Triangle, the new feature company.

When it became known that Mr. Naulty would have authority in the conduct of the Triangle organization second only to its president, Harry E. Aitken, those intimately acquainted with film conditions were willing to concede that the Triangle had taken an important step toward sure success. With David W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett producing pictures for the Triangle and with J. N. Naulty in charge of the marketing of the product, the combination will impress the film world as strong and constitute a tribute to the organizing ability of H. E. Aitken.

Mr. Naulty, during his regime at the Mutual, was in active charge of the chain of branch offices maintained by that organization, and his branch managers gave him their unqualified support. His successful experience, capacity for management and his ability to inspire loyalty in his subordinates will undoubtedly mean much to the Triangle. Mr. Naulty left on a brief motor trip on Tuesday and will begin his duties on Monday with temporary headquarters at 71 West Twenty-third street.

Horace G. Plimpton Resigns

Man Who for Six Years Has Supervised Edison Production Retires from His Post.

THE announcement of the resignation of Horace G. Plimpton as manager of negative productions for the Edison company came as a surprise to the trade. Mr. Plimpton had held the position for six years. When Mr. Plimpton tendered his letter of resignation to C. H. Wilson, vice president and general manager of the Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Mr. Wilson was greatly surprised and accepted it with reluctance. Since Mr. Plimpton's connection with the Edison company, the advancement of motion pictures has been marked and Mr. Plimpton has always been well in the forefront of all movements for the betterment of the screen.

Horace G. Plimpton.

As his resignation was to take effect as early as possible, Leonard W. McChesney, manager of the Edison Motion Picture Division, who has been stationed at Orange, N. J., took charge of the Edison studio in Bedford Park, New York City, on Monday, Aug. 9. Mr. McChesney contemplates no radical changes of studio policy during his regime, and, except for the change of head, the studio life promises to go on as usual, the company devoting itself to its present three reels. alternating with a four reel weekly; with a one-reel Wednesday and Saturday—all released through the General Film Company; and the production of special longer plays, to be released soon under the name of Kleine-Edison Features, the first of which will be Mrs. Fiske in her famous "Vanity Fair." There is every indication that the stock stars who have so long been with Edison and who alone have figured in the features which lately have been exciting such favorable comment, will be retained.

L. W. McChesney.

Mr. McChesney's career has been notable and is in itself a reflection of the rapid growth of the motion picture. Though still a young man he has in thirteen years worked himself up from a minor position to manager. Except for a comparatively short time spent as advertising manager of the General Film Company, his entire experience has been with the Edison organization, dating from the time he was in the advertising department, then stationed in Chambers street, New York. He rose steadily till he became assistant advertising manager of the Thomas A. Edison, Inc. His next promotion was to that of salesmanager of the motion picture department, in July, 1913. Recently the vast Edison enterprises were divided into divisions so as to give each more of a separate organization and management. It was then that Mr. McChesney became manager of the motion picture division.

DEATH OF HOPP HADLEY'S BROTHER.

The many friends of Hopp Hadley will be grieved to learn of the death of his brother, the Rev. George Daniels Hadley, of Jersey City, on Monday, August 9, as a result of peritonitis, following an acute attack of appendicitis, for which he was operated on on Tuesday, August 3. Dr. Hadley was an elder brother of Hopp Hadley and was the rector of one of the largest Episcopal churches in Jersey City.

V-L-S-E Urges Unusual Publicity

Adopts Slogan of "Sell Advertising to Sell Film," and Gives Advice to Exhibitors.

THE principal feature in the selling plans of the Big Four draws attention to a really remarkable condition that exists in the exhibition end of the motion picture industry. This condition is pointed out in the V-L-S-E advice to its representatives in the field in the slogan, "Sell advertising to sell film."

A comparatively small percentage of the exhibitors of the country realize the value to them in the proper publicizing of the features exhibited in their theaters. In many cases exhibitors book a feature and are then content with the display of a few posters outside and the arrangement of a few frames in the lobby; entirely overlooking the fact that if they book strong features they can attract many patrons that do not pass the theater.

The Big Four point out that during the eighteen odd years of progress the bulk of the improvement in the art has been made by manufacturers. Practically all the advancement in pictures is in the productions themselves. They have grown better in story, photography, motif and motion, and with each forward step they have grown more expensive to produce. This latter item, the cost of production, must be taken into consideration by the exhibitors. The public has been educated to expect great things of the silent drama, and if the manufacturer is to continue to produce high class picture plays he must be reimbursed for his investments by receiving a fair rental for his films.

Through the newspapers the exhibitor can advise every prospective patron of his film offerings, and if he has the class of pictures wanted people will come from far and near to view them. Every theater will find newspaper and billboard advertising very profitable investments, provided only the program they offer is of such quality that the people attracted will not be disappointed.

The motion picture art has reached a state of great dignity, and in offering its productions to the exhibitor the Big Four state that it will stand on their merits alone, but advise their exhibitors, almost to the point of insistency, that the V-L-S-E productions must be advertised in order to attract the maximum amount of business.

The claim is made, and it has already been demonstrated by the "Big Four" in many sections of the country, that patrons will not only be attracted from distant points to a theater showing the V-L-S-E subjects, but that these patrons are willing to pay an increase in admission prices.

The life of any business depends upon the new customers it creates, and the big, meritorious feature is vital to the industry in that it creates new patronage. If the big feature is used merely in the nature of a souvenir to the regular patrons of a theater, it is not serving its mission or returning the proper financial reward to the exhibitor.

The big feature has a distinct duty to perform. That duty is the promotion of new business, and while it is promoting that new business it will return increased profits to the theater where it is properly advertised and presented.

The film manufacturer, to continue to produce the high grade, expensive picture plays now demanded by the public, must receive rentals commensurate with their increased cost. This money must come from the exhibitor, and the exhibitor in turn must receive it from the public, and to do this he must attract greater patronage at better prices, through advertising the superior features offered in his theater.

JOHN INCE, EQUITABLE DIRECTOR.

John Ince, the second of the trio of Ince brothers, is directing "The Cowardly Way," the five-reel picture which he will produce for the Equitable, to be released on the World Film program. Mr. Ince brought with him his own technical staff, the members of which have been with him for the past three years and upon whom Mr. Ince declares he has come to rely for absolute co-operation in his work. They are Ed. Hopkins, manager of the old Arch street theater in Philadelphia, technical director; William Black, photographer; and Joe Boyle, Mr. Ince's assistant.

John Ince was on the stage all his life before going into the pictures. He started in 1888 with Henry E. Dixey at the bottom of the theatrical ladder and worked up.

Mr. Ince is not a believer in "types"—that is, he does not believe that inexperienced people can succeed in a picture just because they are of a particular type. He thinks that they become self-conscious because of their inexperience and therefore kill their "type" before the camera.

The cast of "The Cowardly Way" will be Florence Reed, Ben Southard, Orlo Lea, William Cahill, Fred Tidmarsh and Ben Hendricks.

Moving Picture Educator

Conducted by REV. W. H. JACKSON

VISUAL EDUCATION.

An Organization of Educational Institutions for Co-Operation in the Use of Motion Pictures and Other Aids.

SUCH are the title and proclaimed ambitions of the Visual Education Association of California, with A. C. A. Carson of the Pasadena high school as president.

The object of the association is as worthy as it is ambitious, and is entirely in line with desires of the Moving Picture Educator, which is to press the educational advantage of the moving picture everywhere. Representative educational men in various parts of the country are allied with this association, which gives it a wider prospective growth. Such an association cannot at present cover the whole country, yet it may either grow or become the pioneer of many others until ere long visual instruction shall become as general as any other form of everyday educational work.

* * *

It should be noticed that the California association is making a good beginning. Its sponsors have for some time been collecting and cataloging every film suitable for its purpose. Perhaps the best feature of its work lies in the fact that it will open a door to manufacturers of educational films, assuring them of a ready market for their productions, the organized lack of which has hitherto proved a hindrance. Another feature of the work will be the opening up of means of communication and co-operation between the makers and users of educational films, a coming together which will secure that progress hitherto denied. We wish every success to this and kindred assocations.

* * *

Military efficiency is the paramount issue of the day. National Guard encampments have taken on a seriousness which replaces the "picnic" of former years. In addition now there are also college men's and business men's military camps where the fundamental principles of the soldier's work are taught. To the moving picture, however, belongs the credit of being the best teacher and trainer. The pictures show the movements of a war strength company, the discovery of the enemy, maneuvering and firing. The most important part of the film illustrates the hand to hand encounter problems, bayonet parrying, the bayonets being covered with leather for safety, and similar tactics. The films show regular army officers as the instructors.

* * *

We are beginning to receive results of the moving picture at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. The Los Angeles schools were awarded a first prize for their educational exhibit. As a result these pictures are to be seen in all parts of the country, as requests have been made from educators seemingly without limit. At a recent meeting the Los Angeles Board of Education decided to grant these requests in the order in which they were received. Birmingham, Ala., having made the first request, will now be supplied. Before long these films will be traveling a wide circle and will prove a great incentive to the broadening of educational moving pictures in the schools.

* * *

The great city of New York, which ought reasonably to be the first in educational matters dealing with the moving pictures, has, on the contrary, been very slow; at last, however, there is an awakening and a cutting of the red tape which bound the sleeping giant. At the last meeting of the Board of Education the sum of $7,500 was inserted in the estimates "for the purchase of moving picture machines and for an exchange service." From this beginning there can be no other outcome than that of a thorough growth and development, until there is a perfect system of education by the use of moving pictures as an aid to every branch of study in addition to the new studies which kinematography brings with it.

* * *

A useful exhibitor is the man who, besides providing an evening's entertainment, makes his place one of especial benefit to the community along educational lines, peculiarly those adapted to the welfare of the inhabitants. Such an exhibitor is to be found in Marshville, N. C., where he has announced a "summer program," which was found to consist of a series of "health pictures," one founded upon the familiar yet very useful "Our town needs a clean up," which has proved beneficial wherever used. This picture always secures the co-operation of the young people and has very helpful results. Health, hygiene and safety pictures usually make an occasional good program. "The Housefly," "Pure and Impure Water," evils of so-called beneficial "patent medicines," and "Drugs," are in the list. These, together with a few well selected sciences, form a splendid program for "one night a week" during the holiday season, or even all the year around, for that matter. To encourage programs of this kind is one purpose of the "Educator," and without doubt the exhibitor at Marshville is by no means alone. There may be many of his kind, nevertheless this additional publicity should lead to more. Let us use every legitimate means to increase the usefulness of pictures that help.

CONSUL SUGGESTS FILMS OF SMASHED FREIGHT.

Illustrated lectures on packing of merchandise and its handling in foreign ports, as a means of educating American shippers, is advocated by Consul James Oliver Laing of Karachi, India, who writes of the dangers to which such freight is subjected unless properly packed. He says: "If single photographs of a smashed packing case, or a lighter full of goods being landed, or other illustrations are good, a picture showing how the case came to be smashed or how the goods were put into or taken out of the lighter would be better. Everyone knows that cases are smashed and a single photograph shows only the result, which any shipper can imagine.

"If, however, a shipper of flour, let us say, could see a lot of Levantine stevedores swing a loop full of sacks over the side of the ship and let it down on the run to a flatboat bobbing about in the waves, the sight of what happens when the boat rises suddenly to meet several hundred pounds of muslin-sacked flour would be an education to the shipper. If an American furniture merchant could see a moving picture of his packing cases dropped from a cart tail to a stone floor by a gang of Maltese dockers, he would appreciate the cause and effect."

PICTURE THEATERS ON VANCOUVER ISLAND.

(Vice Consul R. M. Newcomb, Victoria, Brit. Columbia, Can.)

The motion picture theater is as popular on Vancouver Island as it is in American cities. There are sixteen in this consular district—eleven in the city of Victoria, which has a population of about 50,000; three in Nanaima, with a population of perhaps 9,000, and Duncan and Ladysmith each have one theater.

Business in general is much depressed in this district, due to over-stimulation of values during a recent real-estate boom and to the bad effects of the present war. The motion picture business has had to share in this depression, and some theaters have found it difficult to remain open. In many cases prices have been reduced one-half.

The films used are American-made and are purchased through Vancouver exchanges. There are two high-class theaters, which change their program twice a week. The others are of the five-cent admission class. There has been an attempt by one of the local theaters to produce pictures, but so far the result has been unfavorable.

EASTERN TO FILM JOE LINCOLN STORIES.

The Eastern Film Corporation, of Providence, R. I., has closed a contract with the A. S. Barnes Company for three of Joseph C. Lincoln's celebrated Cape Cod stories, "Mr. Pratt," "The Old Home House" and "Partners of the Tide."

The producing company plans to erect a special studio in a picturesque location on Cape Cod and to make three feature films of unusual quality. The contract was negotiated by Miss Peggy McCall, of Frank Henry Rice, Inc.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard.

THERE was an amusing happening at the Boston theater recently when the film, "The Flaming Sword," attracted many spectators, especially feminine, as it was the first film appearance here of Jane Grey, who belongs to the Professional Women's Club and is very popular with the public generally. Now all the local papers had Lionel Barrymore playing Steve, the hero, when as a matter of fact he was the villain and played the role of a half-witted specimen of humanity and did it well, too. This is what reached my ears from two men: "Say, that ain't Barrymore at all; he's the holler-chested chap, and didn't it say so on the sheet that he was a queer one?" "Go long, guess I know what the papers say, and here it is in the latest edition." "Well, I bet you a dollar that the big feller ain't Barrymore, for I've seen his sister and know they look alike." "I go you, and now let's go out and ask the manager." It is easy to guess who won, but I wonder what was done to the press agent who perpetrated the error in print.

* * *

Another bull in the same notice is to the effect that Steve was a college degenerate, bent on suicide—hence the ocean scene and lighthouse haven. Not so; he had been ruined by Wall Street, and a wicked woman played havoc with his life; so he cut it all out and made tracks for "home and mother," who lived on an island. To reach her he hired a sail boat, was wrecked and washed ashore into the arms of a fairy angel in Jane Grey, the lighthouse keeper's daughter. This reminds me to say that he was hatless and coatless, so it was difficult to see how he recovered both as he was leaving the place. A small matter, doubtless, but with the films making a bid for permanent favor why do not directors or those in authority avoid such inconsistencies? True, the average auditor does not notice these things, but there is a discriminating public which does not enjoy an otherwise good picture marred by carelessness in important details.

* * *

One of the best films shown here of late was "The Island of Regeneration," with Edith Storey and a notable cast, including that dear little chap, Bobby Connelly, whom Boston fans so delight in. It was put on at the Modern, and as I watched Miss Storey do her swimming stunt, minus clothes, the thought came: "How would Mayor Curley like this?" Two men behind me uttered that thought aloud, for our Mayor puts a ban on bare foot dancers and undraped females. One said, "Gee, it's lucky the Mayor is in 'Frisco or he would get after this house." However, we had a chance to see Miss Storey do a most artistic piece of posing on the rocks with her gorgeous hair veiling her, and it was a sight for the gods. No wonder the Modern was filled to the limit, many going again and again, and the women liked her, too. The bill was excellent—the best of the season for many, for there were the Drews in "Following the Scent"; a George Ade skit, always great fun; some excellent war films, and good music (organ). Charlie Chaplin was refreshingly conspicuous by his absence, as at the Exeter and Bijou.

* * *

The Boston Journal is running a series of biographical sketches of moving picture feminine stars, starting in with Mary Pickford and Mary Fuller. They are valuable to the "fans" and the photography is unusually good.

* * *

Genial Fred Bossner has had a new title conferred upon him—that of film doctor. Mr. Bossner was the first here to raise the price of seats at his Park theater, and if anything the attendance is larger, for people will pay for what they want; and one thing is the long play. He gives two such, frequently, like "The Running Fight," with Violet Heming, and "The Fighting Hope," with Laura Hope Crews.

* * *

In an effort to escape the antics of an alleged comedian the other night I encountered the veteran Eugene Foster guarding the exit of the Boston theater. What of it? Well, first of all he has performed loyal service for that house for forty-eight years, most of the time as head usher, and is still "the old reliable 'Gene'" to regular patrons, for whom he always has a cheery greeting. For thirty-eight of those years he was also on the gate at the ball games, so that his face was and is a familiar one. A pleasant feature of the lobby of this theater is its picture gallery of famous players of the past generation, some of them quite rare ones, autographed way back in the sixties. Another attraction is the head usher, Miss Katherine Ward, a most executive young woman, always "on the job," as are her nine pretty assistants. I caught a glimpse of Eben D. Jordan, one of the Hub's best-known business men, the one who gave us our Opera House—alas, now dark. Miss Ward told me that he was a frequent patron usually accompanied by his daughter, Dorothy, the star dancer of the Vincent Club, the Hub's smartest for the young set. The Boston is a favorite theater for business men, as it is cool, commodious, well located, and the music is worth while, in the hands of Mrs. Caroline B. Nichols and her bevy of white gowned musicians. The incidental music is ever appropriate, requiring constant attention to detail. Following the concert, during which they play Wagner and lighter selections, they seem to sink themselves from view, yet are a most important part during the three hours.

Caroline B. Nichols.

* * *

Just as I was entering the Park theater to see Violet Heming, the dainty little star, with George Arliss so many seasons, I encountered Mme. Clara Poole, one of our foremost singers, a favorite in London and on the continent, now happily here to stay. She told me that she found great pleasure in the silent drama and rarely missed seeing the famous players on the screen.

* * *

One moving picture house is upstairs, and it is owned by Keith, which spells quality. Only one price—ten cents—is charged, and the tidy little theater, called the Bijou Dream, is packed all day. "Under Two Flags" was the piece de resistance last week. To reach the auditorium one goes by escalator or up the glass staircase beneath which water flows continually, lighted by green incandescents. I saw a film there lately which should be viewed by all young men, "The Acid Test," a splendid lesson all through, showing what a man can do with himself after being reared in luxury with money to burn on "wine, women and song." There was no "white feather" about that chap, and he certainly took the bull by the horns, in cutting out all folly after being cast adrift by the man responsible—his father, who brought the boy up in idleness. The way he made good was well worth watching as pictured.

* * *

"Mary's Duke" made a hit here at the Boston, and it introduced Mary Fuller and Matt Moore in an especially clever play full of vivacity and types.

* * *

We do not like to realize that there is anyone in the Hub who has not seen "The Birth of a Nation," which I have had the good fortune to see several times, always finding something new and wonderful to fill the eye. The last weeks are announced. A novelty in the way of advertising this picture was put forth the other day when one of the pretty girls of '61, gowned as in the play, went up in an aeroplane and scattered pennants, some of them having free tickets. She was dainty Donna Montran.

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION ACTIVE.

Although Ray Smallwood was with the Smallwoods Film Corporation as a director and has a stock interest in that corporation, he is not the president of that company, nor will the company cease operations as might have been deduced from a report circulated last week to the effect that Ray Smallwood of the Smallwood Film Corporation had joined the Kleine forces.

Beginning with the launching of the new Standard Program on August 30, President Arthur N. Smallwood announces that his company will release a two-reel production each week under the Pyramid brand, featuring Edwin August, Ruth Blair, Iva Shepard and other well-known players.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

A Projection Engineer.

LEON BRICK, of the Regent, Buffalo, sends in an eight-page booklet with some facts about the house, which apparently has been renovated and reopened. One paragraph states that the projection will be in care of "Buffalo's expert projection engineer," which should please Brother Richardson much. The two-page talk is well worded to give the reader the feeling that much has been done for his comfort and entertainment, and much stress is laid upon the music. The program is blue ink on lemon paper and the press work is exceptionally good. The grade of blue ink generally used on such jobs seldom works well with cuts, but here the imprint is as good as with a cut black. It is one of the little things that backs up the written statement. The announcement that the house was better than ever would not be so readily accepted were the facts stated in a badly-printed circular.

This is something that too many overlook. They word their advertisement invitingly, but while they say that they have a good house they say it in a program so cheaply gotten up that it is hard to believe that it is put out by a good management. Mr. Brick paid a little more and made the program say "Honest!" to his statements.

What he has to say about music may interest other program editors:

> The presentation of a moving picture without the accompaniment of appropriate music is like the presentation of grand opera without the accompaniment of an orchestra. That is why the Regent Theater employs none but experienced musicians who with constant practice and rehearsal are able to interpret and convey to the spectators, the various moods and emotions of the actors in the picture or enliven those scenes of nature or current events where men or women do not actively participate. The artistic presentation of a moving picture is now conceded to be in importance equal to its original reflection on the sensitive film. We are making this artistic presentation a constant study to the delight of hundreds.

Jimquin Stuff.

That's the unregistered trade mark of James C. Quinn, of Los Angeles. One of his most recent is a yellow four page folder; a very yellow folder and not a greenery-yallery color. On the outside (front and back) runs "About 413"; a ten line figure and two line "about." That is all there is. Inside it starts off:

> The other day we saw a picture—
> And the name of that picture was "413."

Then it tells in sprightly text just what the picture is like, how good it is, who made it, where it has played and all the rest. There are about 300-400 words. Then it ends up:

> The other day we rented a picture.
> The name of that picture was "413."

Where it is and when it is to be shown is told in the text.

Another exhibit might be the trimmings of the other sheet, a strip of paper about an inch and a half by eight, folded once. Outside there is only a panel box and in the lower right hand corner the bracketed "(over)" and nothing else. Inside in 24 point is "Over to the Isis theater, 524 South Spring." It's a good idea to use up cuttings. This is printed in brown ink where the larger sheet was done in brown. We think that next time Mr. Quinn works very yellow paper he will print in brown in preference to green. If he can't take brown he will be more apt to use red, or perhaps he'll put some black into the red and get a brown anyhow.

Another is a light card red on cream. The first and third lines are 36 point and the second and fourth in eight. The text is:

> If Chief Sebastian is convicted
> There'll always be a good show at the Isis.
> If Chief Sebastian is acquitted
> Well—There'll always be the same good show at the Isis.

The text can be changed to any copy that takes advantage of the big news feature of the moment.

The last is a sea shell on the inside of which is pasted a label reading:

> By the Sea
> (CHARLIE CHAPLIN)
> Isis, 542 S. Spring St.,
> May 13 to 20
> 10 A. M. to 11 P. M.

And with usual Jimquin thoroughness the shell came packed so well that it did not get broken in its transcontinental journey.

All But.

More artistic than effective is the tint work on a program from the Strand, Norfolk, Va. This is a folder program, white, printed in black. The lower half of the front is done in a slate "tint" which is an ink so pale as to suggest an offset rather than a color. This is also used inside for the Pathe(?) cut for "Who Pays." The cut stands up fairly well, but the title is almost hidden under the black lines of the regular program. The idea of the double printing is distinctly good, but a much stronger tint of a more pronounced color should have been used. With so good a black as the printer has given, even a light blue or red would not have killed the black lines. Apart from this the program is good work both in phrasing, arrangement and display.

But the back page emphasizes the fact that the pictures will make us a nation of newspaper readers. They have serials running in both the Virginian-Pilot and the Ledger-Dispatch.

A Question of Cuts.

James A. Morrison, of Morrison's Star Theater, Meaford, Ontario, sends in a postcard which we reproduce here. This is not a press-printed card but a photographic print. There are no details of price, but it certainly was no cheap job. It is hardly to be commended to others since it cannot be expected that it can show a large return on the investment, but on the other hand it is a capital bit of work, both in the photography and the laying out of the advertisement. It is very different from the usual crude printing, and on second thoughts it is to be commended where the cards may be had by some mechanical process of photography, since, with a good negative nothing can be more attractive and its quality attracts attention. Mr. Morrison writes:

> I enclose a card to show you how hard put we are to get the proper cuts with which to advertise our shows. The three cuts were cut out and pasted then photographed for a slide, the card and my newspaper work. I find it pays to get cuts, but the exchanges should be able to supply these. I ran the "Beloved Adventurer" and the home paper ran the serial and it certainly made money for me. I run General Film Service and find the Moving Picture World a great help in getting the advertisements. I do not see how any theater can exist without it. The Selig and Lubin Bulletins are also along the right lines.

The question of cuts is one that still remains to be solved. As the business is at present constituted, it is not practicable for the exchanges to supply cuts for general releases. Most bookings are not made sufficiently far in advance, and even at that perhaps a dozen or more cuts would be needed for each of the daily releases, many of which would not be used and remain a dead loss. A cut accompanying the film would be of no service whatever, and a cut seven or fourteen days ahead would be in advance of some bookings. On the other hand, many exhibitors would not use the cuts, even if loaned and more would not trouble to return them promptly. The exhibitor cannot order directly from the maker until he knows what he is going to get, and so it is not possible to work out an efficient distributing scheme.

With features the situation is better. They are booked further in advance, and can be better arranged for, but many live wires wish to use cuts for the one reel releases, and these are hard to obtain.

Much of the success of the Universal sales department is due to the care they take of the exhibitor in the matter of cut and other advertising material. The situation is getting better on the licensed side, but it is still far from good with many of the companies, and it does most assuredly hurt their sales more than they probably realize. The Selig Company was one of the first to provide feature cuts, probably the very first to regularly offer cuts for sale, though the Edison advertising department has always been most active in working with those who write in. Mr. Morrison will find that if he will get into direct communication with the press men of the various licensed companies he will be given more help than he has at present.

Needs Some Dates.

Fletcher Russel sends in Number two of his Windsor theater Bulletin from Hampton, Ia. It is well written, but still runs too large a type. Here is some good talk that may be useful to you:

> The motion picture is leaping forward as nothing ever leaped before. Fifteen years ago the first show opened at 5 cents admission. We barely realize that we have the privilege of watching and participating in its most wonderful growth. Today there is a picture that is commanding an admission price of $2.00 a seat. Seats are sold out three weeks in advance, while standing room is at a premium. Ignoring the popularity of motion pictures does not alter the facts; it makes whoever is so blind slip behind his contemporaries and lose a whole lot of enjoyment.
>
> The Windsor Theater has set a new standard in pictures.

marking up and interlining a script that it must be recopied before it is turned over for production.

The man who is in earnest and really expects to do things should not mind a little expense if it helps his product either in fact or appearance, and printed scene blanks do not come to much. If one expects to sell a photoplay for $100, he should be willing to spend a couple of dollars on its preparation, surely. The lay-out of the blank is another matter of taste. I have used several forms, without having found one which entirely satisfies me. Just at present I am having them printed in fours—that is, four blanks to the large sheet, the blanks being divided by perforations so that they may be readily separated after the scenes are written. The idea of this is to reduce to a minimum the annoyance and loss of time incident to putting forms through the machine. There is a considerable saving when four scenes can be written with but one insertion of paper into the machine.

Serials and plays of five or six reels naturally require many sheets of manuscript if the scene-to-a-sheet idea is followed out, and may be handled in two ways—by using a separate cover for each installment in the case of a serial, and as many covers as may be needed for the single long story, or by having the whole manuscript regularly bound. In the case of the serial, "Road o' Strife," which ran some eight hundred scenes, with many pages of notes, etc., I had the whole thing substantially bound in a single volume. It is to be considered, however, that this was a continuous story, with many cut backs and duplications, divided into chapters for release purposes only, and was produced as a unit. Had it been a series of more or less independent stories, I would have given each part a separate cover. In this manuscript I also tried out a color scheme, without any noteworthy results. All exteriors were on green paper; interiors were on pink; casts and scene plots were on yellow and synopses and notes on white. As I do in all scripts, I put everything intended for reproduction on the screen—titles, sub-titles, screen letters, etc., in red. I approve the use of the bi-color ribbon if the rule is strictly adhered to, that nothing be put in red except matter to be used in the same form on the screen.

On the Screen.

Study the pictures on the screen. See what you see. See what gets over, and then see if you can figure on writing the stuff so that it will be passed along to the director as clearly.

But most particularly be careful that what you put on paper for translation into action will translate into action that will get you the effect desired. Lately we had occasion to look over a script of about nine reels of action. Not a dozen scenes conveyed the idea of the action as the author supposed it would come and some of the business was farcical when it was intended to be intensely dramatic. The situation was dramatic and could have been made so in words, but the action without a mass of preliminary explanation would have been exquisitely funny. The trained writer comes to avoid what will be ineffective, but the novice knows only what he wants and cannot realize that what he wants and what he will get may be two very different things. They do not know how their stuff will look on the screen, and some of them do not take the trouble to find out. Suppose that the physician holds the bottle of anti-toxin that is to save the heroine's life. He drops it. He makes a vain effort to save the bottle from being broken, striving to catch it before it reaches the floor. The situation is dramatic, but the action is so violent and awkward that the spectator will accept it as comedy and laugh.

It is not how a story sounds but how it will look that counts. Study to know how a thing will look.

The Baltimore Inquest.

J. M. Shellman, of the Baltimore Inquest, makes this report for the season's work. We particularly commend to other Coroners the policy they follow of seeking to retain only workers. For that matter any Coroner is entitled to dismiss any trifler and, for the good of the others, should do so. This is the report:

> At last I am able to send in my second annual report of the proceedings of the Baltimore Inquest for the season which we have just ended. The reason for our prolonging the session, as you know, was due to our having missed so many meetings during the term. The last was held July 1st, '15.
>
> The most wonderful thing I find, in acting as Coroner, is that there are so many people who are "would be writers" who think that the writing of photoplays is merely a pleasant way of earning a little extra coin. By actual count we have had five parties who came to the meetings this season who started in with enthusiasm; but when they found out it was not a vacational sort of pastime, but the hardest kind of work, just faded away. We don't go after them, either, for we of the club figure that the sooner these get wise to themselves the better it is for all concerned. But with the staunch and true members we now have on our rolls, and the ones I expect to enlist next winter, we hope to make the Baltimore branch a most important one.
>
> The present number of members is five. They are: Miss K. K. Kepper, Mrs. Mary Benjamin, Miss Margaret Lee, Mr. L. M. Grice and the writer, J. M. Shellman. Miss Kepper still keeps up the pace for the rest of us and her biggest success this year was "A Sister's Burden," a two-reeler, produced by Kalem. This was submitted to them as a one-reel play and made into two. Mr. Grice has done no actual photoplay work yet, but he has been extremely successful in other branches, having had poems published in The Boston Transcript, the New York Herald and Sun, and having had a five-act tragedy in blank verse published. But he is taking a great interest and I believe the photoplay world will be better for his entrance.
>
> Now as to the work we are doing. The meetings so far have been carried on in a sort of Bohemian fashion, arguing, fighting (by words only, of course), and jesting, in the true "good fellow" style; and we have all accomplished much; because I have found that the freer the atmosphere is from any air of restrictions, the easier the mind works, and by gar!—we do have some battles. We meet every two weeks and nobody is ever on time, and in our discussions we take in the latest plays, the important points of technique, the latest effects that have been used and then we plunge into the criticism of a script—and the fur flies!
>
> Next year, however, we may have to come to some systematic arrangement of the time, for which I will be sorry, in order to get over all the work we wish to accomplish. In the meantime, during the summer we are all going to try and "put something over" on each other, so that we can have something to show at the beginning of next season. Incidentally I might add that we have a mutual arrangement by which any member can ask for a special meeting during the summer, if they wish help on a play of which they are not quite certain.

Heroes.

It is almost fatal to the success of a play to place the leading character in a position from which he cannot extricate himself with credit. Perhaps the most common example of this placement is the story in which the Sheriff must either arrest the man who saved his life or be false to his oath of office, but there are many variations to the situation and it is seldom, if ever, that it is possible to get the trouble straightened out and leave the character still a hero. Opinion will be divided as to the action and there will invariably be a feeling of dissatisfaction that a different course of action was not followed.

In some of the situations it is possible to evade the consequences by working the story to another end and leaving the matter ignored. If Jim Jones finds that the father of his sweetheart is a moonshine distiller, and he is a revenue agent it is his sworn duty to bring the man to punishment. If he does not, he is negligent of his trust. But if the story is brought to some other climax before he is forced to make a decision, then the situation does not obtrude himself. We are not interested in the outcome of this situation but are content to let the question pass in the greater interest we feel in the fact that he won the girl from her mountain sweetheart. If the story is founded on the position in which he finds himself, then the question must be answered, but it is very seldom necessary to adhere to such a plot. Something else may be worked from it.

Names.

When you start to call a character Joe, don't change and call him Smith in the next scene, even if he is called Joe Smith. The director and the editor do not want to stop and look back to the cast to see that Joe and Smith are the same any more than they want to be required to discover that Smith is the person referred to now and then as "the valet." It is easy enough to get the trick of always calling the character by one name if it will be remembered that photoplays are not stories and do not need the varying terms to remove the sameness. In fiction it is good practice to get variety and refer to the character in a variety of terms, but in pictures, have one name for a person and stick to that name even though the character be disguised a part of the time. If Billy Hicks impersonates a Count after scene ten, do not then refer to him as the Count. He is still Billy and no one else. Where the scene does not clearly show that the disguise is being used say "Enter Billy as the Count" that the director may know, but do not call him simply the Count. The director has a few other things to worry about, so do not add to his troubles by careless naming of the characters.

Watch the Releases.

If you have a story held by a company for several months, watch the releases of that company through the stories of the film. This is not because your story may be stolen but because it may be forgotten that a story was not paid for, and a simple note to the editor will bring a check.

Few companies have a cross check on scripts in the studio. The directors are given manuscript to read and are supposed to tell what they want to purchase. If they forget to tell, it is up to the author to remind the company and get a check and an apology. Do not, in writing, accuse the company of stealing the story. They have not. It is merely carelessness and they'll be glad to send a check when reminded.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is enclosed.

Leaders.

LISTEN to a correspondent who writes that he has had eight of his plays put on and that not one of them has carried his leaders. "What's the use of writing them," he complains, "if they do not use them?"

That is no way to look at the matter. Try and write better ones, better placed. Some of the leaders he quotes are of the "John wants to marry Mary" type. Naturally no editor at that late day wants to accept the crude leader. Taking the Stillman poetical leader he would probably say "His childhood playmate he would make his wife." That would be smooth and elegant and not jar on his sensibilities. It would be a few feet longer, but the footage would be well invested if the substituted leader gave atmosphere to the story instead of jolting it.

For a shorter leader he might have written "John would marry Mary." That is shorter than the original. It sounds a trifle unfinished, but it carries the fact. Perhaps "John pleads his suit" would do or "She viewed his love with cold disdain," would fit in and amplify the fact by adding the dismissal.

Many more suggestions might be offered along the same lines, it being taken for granted that the need for breaking action justifies the use of a leader at this particular point, and all of these suggestions should be carefully appraised.

The best way to write a leader is not to. Try first to eliminate the leader and the need for the leader as well. This is not always possible when action comes to a definite and final stop and a new action commences. Try, then, to get the best leader possible, not at the time the script is being written, but after it has been written in the rough draft and before the clean copy is made. When the action is down in practically the way it should be, then take a scratch pad and the script and go over it. On the pad write the leader as it stands. Then write as many more leaders as suggest themselves, ten, dozen, a score half a hundred. Then pick out the best or combine parts of two different leaders, always aiming at the best result. Suppose that the script shows this leader:

Mr. Johnson refuses to let Sam marry Sadie because he is too poor.

This is the fact that must be conveyed in a leader. Sit down and think it over. See what you can do that will be better. Supppse that after half an hour you get something like this:

Poverty bars Sam from Sadie.
Sadie's father objects to Sam's poverty.
Sadie's father wants her to marry a rich man.
Sam's poverty is a bar to his happiness.
Because of Sam's poverty, he may not marry Sadie.
Sadie's father tells her she must marry money.
Sam is too poor to win the consent of Sadie's father.
Sadie's father refuses to let her marry Sam.
Sadie's father says Sam is too poor.
Poverty acts as a bar to Sam's marriage.
Mr. Johnson is a worshipper of Mammon.

That's the idea. Take those last two. They are more like it. Almost in a flash you get "But Mammon comes to bar the gates of Love." That reads smoothly, is in harmony with the scene and does not jar. But perhaps it is too forced for the situation. Then try again and write other leaders until you get "Sam's poverty is the cause of his rejection." That might mean, though, that it is Sue who rejects, and her subsequent action will not be understandable. Then write it "Sam's poverty is the cause of her father's objection." That will do—unless you can think of something better.

The idea of writing down innumerable leaders is that the mechanical action of writing leader after leader brings the brain into the leader-writing habit, just as the writing of half a dozen plots, one after the other will lead to the writing of a really good plot. Each leader gives impetus to the imagination until a satisfactory result is attained.

And do not think that you have wasted half an hour writing one leader. You have spent half an hour studying the writing of leaders and each session will bring you nearer to the time when you can write leaders almost off hand that are better than the ones you could think out in an hour when you first commenced. This is something that too few realize. Time spent on scripts is never wasted if you still long enough to realize on the investment.

Another Course.

A correspondent sends in a copy of the instructions of The Photoplay Bureau, of Los Angeles, run by A. E. Meurling, who claims to have worked for Bison, Broncho, Majestic and Universal. In spite of this claim to practical experience, he says:

> The film companies generally prefer one-reel plays because they are easier to produce and there is more money in them, but if a play is very good they will produce a multiple-reel play up to 5 or 6 reels.

He gets two dollars for a sheet 8½ by 13 inches, printed on both sides in eight point, and two sheets of a sample script. The script is a horrible one, lacking continuity and worse than useless as a help to the uniniated. In one scene, for example, two characters go into the house for dinner. Without leader the next scene shows them sitting at the table and dinner done.

A script revised and typed is included in the exhibit. The story has no plot, being merely a series of incidents, yet the author was encouraged to spend $1.25 for typing three pages, twenty-five cents for the three pages of the carbon and twenty cents for postage in submitting, Meurling writing that "I think play well worth spending that on. Congratulations on the good start." And yet this good start is not a start at all. The author knows now that it was not a start and has started in to work without the assistance of the bureau, which differs not a particle from other bureaus that praise all the work of clients in order to collect typing fees. At the very highest market price this copying would not have cost more than forty cents with not more than fifteen cents extra for carbons. Done by the school typist it would cost about twenty cents worth of the girl's time and a couple of cents for material.

Another Page a Scene Idea.

In presenting this article by Emmett Campbell Hall, of the Lubin staff, on the one scene to a page script, we want particularly to emphasize the fact that while this may be of interest to the novice, it will not pay that novice to copy Mr. Hall's idea. Mr. Hall brings up the question of some definite form, not with the object of establishing a set form which all authors must employ, but with the idea of arriving at the most practicable form for the advanced writer and the staff man.

Most staff men have certain departures from the original form that appeal to the director with whom they work, or which is required by the studio. Other writers of the type whose work is followed, also seek to give the director a script in most practicable form. Louis Reeves Harrison probably turns out the most elaborate script, and we believe that he was the first to use the loose leaf idea. He does not give some of the technical details that Mr. Hall's single studio connection suggests to him.

The Hall script is worked with an 8½ by 11 inch page divided into quarters. The upper half of each section is divided into boxes for technical information. The legends will be self explanatory to the average reader. He does not say in what order he binds these up, but we think that the most convenient way, after the script is completed, would be to insert in the binders with all of the scenes in one set together instead of having them appear in their proper places by number. This would enable a director to work a set or location without turning more pages than are necessary. Colored blank sheets might be used to cut off the separate sets. It is about the only use that colored paper would serve in a single script. As a rule, in studio work, colored papers are used to designate the style of the script, all dramas, for example, being yellow and all comedies pink.

We do not agree with Mr. Hall in his use of the two-color ribbon. The better way is to run the screen stuff out into the margin where it can be picked up in making out the joining list.

Mr. Hall invites suggestions from other "regular" authors. His own views follow:

While I do not regard the matter of script form as of absolutely vital consequence—a good story printed on a shingle with a paint brush would sell—I do regard it as a highly important subject, and think it has been unduly neglected. In the early days, when a "scenario" was just that—a "brief dramatic outline" of two or three hundred words, the ordinary manuscript form was naturally followed and the conventional manuscript of today is in substantially the same form, but, owing to elaboration, the three or four sheets have become an awkward and inconvenient mass, particularly in the case of multiple reel stories. From a shortsighted author's standpoint, the conventional manuscript form is, perhaps, the most desirable, as being easier to prepare, and more conveniently sent through the mails, with the single drawback of being easily mutilated, but even mutilation can be guarded against by using a heavy manuscript cover. Considering the matter in a broader way, every effort should be made to attain a form of script which will be most practically convenient for the editor and director, and which will stand up under the rough handling inevitable during production, even though it costs the author a little more work and postage. Moreover, it wouldn't be good policy to write stories on shingles as a general proposition—goods presented in the most attractive form will register the highest percentage of sales, though the goods themselves may not be markedly superior, and the appreciation of directors is worth having.

After quite a little experimenting, it appears to me that the logical script form is found in the loose-leaf book, using a separate sheet for each scene. (This idea, I may say in passing, is not original with me, Clay M. Green of the Lubin Company having beat me to it.) The cover should be of convenient size—one that will slip into a side pocket, and may be either side or end opening. The fillers usually sold are cut from too heavy stock for photoplay use—the cover will not hold enough sheets for two reels, allowing sheets for synopsis, cast, scene plots, notes, and action. A light, tough bond paper should be purchased and properly cut and punched. Covers may be as cheap or as expensive as fancy dictates. I have used leather covers, with the title of the play stamped in gold, and also canvas covers which cost thirty-five cents. The use of separate sheets makes editing and correcting your manuscript—as you are very apt to wish to do so as soon as you have made your "final copy"—simple and non-laborious. Incidentally, it gives the photoplay editor a chance to edit without so Fewer Pictures and Better Pictures Pictures World Advertised and World Known. To accomplish this great change from cheap melodramatic productions and slap-stick comedy, going into serious drama and high class photoplays calls for a big faith in the future of the picture art and an equally large faith and confidence that the people of Hampton want only the best.

Now this does not mean that we are infallible. It does not mean that we will never have a mediocre or even a poor picture, but it does mean that Fletcher Russell is going to do the very best he can, that he is going to hang on like Bud's bulldog, to the big idea—and with your help and encouragement, is going to keep as closely as possible with the progress and development of the Motion Picture Art.

This is man-talk and convincing. Pictures are changing. Change with the change of pictures. Come into the new prosperity.

But we have to reach for the axe when we get his calendar for June. First place the name of the month comes at the end of the line "Decidedly distinctive features for June." This should have been

DECIDEDLY DISTINCTIVE FEATURES FOR JUNE

A calendar with a bashful title is bad. But in the layout for the thirty days there are but thirteen dates and seventeen titles. This does two things. In the first place, it is not worth a whoop as a calendar. In the second and more important aspect, it announces the fact that there are thirteen dead days. That is what James C. Quinn illustrated in a recent letter in which he says:

That sounded too much like an admission that our arguments had not gone over right and a kind of mental suggestion not to see it. That may be drawing it pretty fine but I feel that way about those things—I try to keep away from the use of negative expressions as much as possible. To illustrate. Instead of putting it as a sign I saw some time ago did—"This theater will be closed Tuesdays and Thursdays during the winter months." I would say, "This theater will be open every night except Tuesdays and Thursdays during the winter months." It may not seem to make a whole lot of difference and I've never asked myself particularly why I do it, but it just does itself instinctively.

It would take double printing to print dates on all the spaces and overprint titles where these can be had, but this would have been better, if a calendar had to be used. The calendar idea is good only where the titles for each day can be run. Otherwise give the calendar for reference and the greater space to the list of feature days as Ralph Ruffner used to do. He may still be doing it, but he hasn't been around lately. Will George Editor Carpenter please reach out and poke him up for us?

Mr. Norton is working along sound lines in his program and we hope presently to see a smaller type and more copy.

"Children in Arms."

J. F. Norman, of the Norman Amusement Company, Daytona, Fla., sends in a postcard picture of his traveling show: what our English cousins call a "fit-up." He writes:

Your advertising hints for Exhibitors are certainly to the point and never having seen anything from the traveling Exhibitor, I'll tell one instance where one was "put over" on me to my own benefit. While one of the boys was showing in Kentucky, a man about six feet four and of splendid physique came up to the box office and bought a ticket. "Is that straight?" he asked, pointing to a sign above the window that stated that children in arms were admitted free. He was told that it was correct. "I'll take my son in," he announced, and turning to a younger man six feet two, he picked him up and carried him into the theater as easily as one might a child. The talk the incident made brought in, I think, enough extra business to nearly cover the expenses.

In other words, there was no argument as to the reading of the sign and no insistent demand for a second ticket. It was the sort of bally hoo that could not be purchased and the exhibitor took it as such, and instead of making a noise, fell in with the joke and helped it along with the result that the story got about, as good stories do, with the exhibitor in the right light, and people came to the show who might have stayed away had the tale shown the manager as a crabbed, money-blind fool. He was a good fellow and could see a joke, even when it was on him, and so he must have a good show. That may be poor logic, but it is good argument and generally true that the right sort of man has the right sort of a show.

But Mr. Norman's letter rouses curiosity. There must be more than three traveling picture showmen interested in pictures and advertising pictures, but these are all we have ever heard from. Won't some of the rest of you follow Mr. Norman in?

And we wish some regular houses would follow Mr. Norman's example and send in good camera work. In post card size every letter on the house signs can be read and you can count the bricks in the wall.

Long, But Read.

A. W. Ballenger, of the Dean, York, Neb., very truly says that it is a long time since he was here last. He adds:

However, it is one of my first departments when the "World" comes to hand. "Ideas of Import" are sure crammed into those few pages.

An Exhibitor who won't study your department should take his long last ride, and be out of the way of earthly woes and miseries.

The enclosed advertising is taken from the daily paper of this city, a place of 6,500 people, and the paper goes into nine-tenths of the homes. With me I find that the newspaper advertising is better than weekly programs. I have a regular space for my daily advertising, and this is extra.

This went in against strong competition, and pulled the business.

Most of it, you will notice, is press stuff, but it is live, and the way it is put together makes it likable reading and showy.

Also the little notice that leads up to the big display reader.

Advertising is considered a regular weekly expense, and is not cramped for a few cents to make it good.

Often the expense on newspaper advertising costs us much more than the feature, and it doesn't always bring in as much as we pay out, but we fight to bring in new patrons, and then try to hold them.

We run our features at prices that tend to bring in new business and make our money on the regular runs through added attendance.

The matter sent is not as interesting as the letter, because the latter advances a truth that many Exhibitors do not realize. You may lose money for the moment on a film and yet still show a profit in the patronage you build. If you are in a large town, you will draw patrons from a greater radius. If the town is small you may draw more from the surrounding smaller towns. If you are one of the smaller towns you can hold your patrons to yourself. It works no matter what way you figure it out.

The advertisement is four columns, page length. There is one two column panel, eight inches deep, of fourteen point matter, and three and a half inches display at the bottom. The rest is all eight point straight reading about Miss Nansen. It will be read, because it is readable, being written by "Tanbark" Toxen Worm. It will work because there is much more of interest to be printed about Miss Nansen than of any single play in which she will appear, and this one advertisement will cover the series.

And As to That.

And as to that Shepherdstown program, the editor, who is also editor of the local paper, C. S. Musser, writes to this paper:

As a matter of fact, I could not do business without it, and, what is more, wouldn't attempt to.

The Opera House here has been up against many things in the five or six years of its existence, with various degrees of failure, and from lack of proper attention on down the line to bad pictures and worse film the house had lost cast with the people.

A year ago I took hold of the house, and by using a little sense and the Moving Picture World we are gaining headway, although there is yet lots to be gained to make of it the success it deserves.

Am enclosing herewith a little of the educational work we are doing for your criticism, and hope by this method to sufficiently educate our people to know good actors and actresses when they see them, and at the same time to try to induce them to come in so as to be able to see them.

By educational work he alludes to the fact that he gives a page portrait of a player with each issue and also a page of notes about the photostars, confining his program announcement to the single page. He is trying to popularize the players in order to captalize their popularity for the benefit of his house. It is much the better way. A deeper blue ink would make it a better job, mechanically, as Mr. Musser probably knows, but he is working on the right lines.

Really Good.

For a straight program without other reading matter, the Grandview theater, Grandview, Alberta, is particularly good. Outline letters permit the use of large display without getting the job too black, and the players are brought up through the use of capitals or bold type. The days should be dated and we would like to see a couple of lottery schemes cut out. They never act to the permanent good of the house.

Mixed Billing.

Look beyond the immediate announcement to see how it sounds. A correspondent sends in the billing for the electric sign at a New York house lately. The two lines read

CHARLES CHAPLIN
A CHILD OF GOD.

If intentional, it was in bad taste. If unintentional, it was supremely careless.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Important! Operators Notice!

THIS department has received such an enormous number of kicks about the poor inspection of film that I am going to make you the following proposition. I am doing this at the request of one of the largest film manufacturers in the country. Where you find evidence of poor inspection, cut out the faulty part, or the poor splices, and forward them to me, with the data as to what day the films were received, and what exchange they were received from. You may either sign the letter, or sign your name on a separate slip of paper, and enclose a stamped, blank envelope. I will then forward the whole thing to the headquarters of the company handling that exchange, with request they investigate the matter, and remedy whatever is wrong with the inspection in their exchange. Now, please understand that I must have the following data: First—What make of film is it? Second—Does it come from a Universal, a General Film, a Mutual, or an independent exchange? Third—What day was it received? Don't mix up bad patches, or other faults; cut from several reels. If you take out faults from several reels put each one in a separate envelope and mark them with the name of the film, when the film was received, and what exchange it came from; or, if you cannot use so many envelopes, pin the pieces of film together and attach a tag; also don't forget the postage, because, while I am willing to do this, I cannot pay out two or three dollars a day in postage to accomplish even as great a good as I hope will result from this proposition.

Operators' Union Directory, I. A. T. S. E.

Notice: Each union is entitled to have its roster of officers, meeting nights, etc., listed here once per year, free of cost. Preserve this list as it will not be republished. The mail address of the secretary should be included, and the address of regular meeting place, if any.

Local Union No. 552, Eureka, Cal.

Jack Gilbert, president; Joseph P. Francis, Jr., vice-president; Bert Cole, financial secretary; Cecil McKay, recording secretary, P. O. Box 240; Clarence Chamberlain, business agent; Kenneth Back, sergeant-at-arms.

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles have been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 98.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

What is chromatic aberration? What is its cause and its effect on the screen? How may chromatic aberration be lessened or eliminated? Give us your idea of what cause a light ray takes through the lens system. Illustrate by sketch.

Roll of Honor on Question No. 92.

Question 92 brought out a rather surprising assortment of replies. After careful consideration I have selected the reply of M. W. Larmour, Waco, Texas, for publication, supplemented by the reply of another brother in Texas, who wishes his name suppressed. I cannot vouch for the correctness of the chemical dope in the latter reply, but give it for what it may be worth. It, at least, is very interesting, and presumably has good foundation in fact.

The Roll of Honor consists of Jos. H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; John Solar, Watertown, New York; M. W. Larmour, Waco, Texas; W. C. Crawford, Brooklyn, New York, and F. V. Poyser, Brandon, Manitoba.

Reply to Question No. 92.

By M. W. Larmour, Waco, Texas.

The Question. What are the possible causes of excessive flaming of the carbons, and what are the effects? What, in your opinion, can manufacturers do to improve projection carbons? What, in your opinion, ought to be the D. C. amperage per square foot of screen, when using a cloth curtain, plaster screen, metallic surface and mirror screen? What, in your opinion, ought to be the A. C. amperage per square foot?

The answer. Flaming may be caused by wrong carbon set, carbons too far apart, carbons working above their capacity, too high voltage, poorly made carbons, carbons too soft or carbons not adapted to the working conditions. The flame has the effect of cutting down the light, since it, to some extent, comes between the crater and the lens; also, it may injure the definition of the picture, and where there is excessive flaming the color value of the light is not steady. Manufacturers should, I believe, experiment carefully and try to discover some chemical or mineral which will, when combined with the carbon or core, lower its resistance, give a whiter, steadier, or more brilliant light, and reduce the liability to flaming. Also there is still room for improvement in the matter of uniformity of density of the carbons, and more particularly of the core. The following table answers the amperage part of the question.

D. C. AMPERAGE PER SQUARE FOOT.		A. C. AMPERAGE PER SQUARE FOOT.
Amperes.	Screen.	Amperes.	Screen.
.5	Cloth	.6	Cloth
.4	Plaster	.5	Plaster
.2	Metallic surface	.35	Metallic
.15	Mirror	.25	Mirror

Never use under 25 amperes D. C. or under 30 amperes A. C., no matter what size or kind of screen is used.

With reference to the last sentence of Brother Larmour's reply I cannot agree with him. Thirty amperes A. C. is, in my opinion, altogether too low for any moving picture projection—that is to say, in a theater; also the cloth and plaster allowance for D. C. and A. C. are not properly proportioned. The following reply also comes from Texas:

> How many correct answers do you think you will get to Question 92—none? This is just an attempt which I believe to be along the right lines. In my judgment the principal reason for carbon flaming is, first: carbons have a poor binder, and when curent is applied the binder causes flaming; second, the carbon contains too much calcium fluoride, and are mineralized to some extent. Some carbons contain metallic salts, which also causes flaming. Some six months ago I received one dozen carbons from Zurich, Switzerland. There were several brands, one the T. B., and another the Alba. These carbons gave a very vivid incandescence, using less than .325 watts per mean spherical C. P. They contained titanium, magnetite and chromium, but I believe that carbons containing analogous stronitum and barium fluorides (Phew! Gimme the dictionary. Ed.) are better. Of course, carbons containing these oxides would have to have plenty of ventilation. In a few years you will see that we can buy carbons to be used on the positive only and carbons for the negative only.

The balance of Texas' answer is practically the same as the reply of Brother Larmour, except that I like his ampere allowance better. Evidently the Texas brother is something of a chemist. I don't pretend to know anything about the proposition, nor am I certain that I have got the names right, as they were written with pen and ink and the scribe did not produce anything more faintly resembling copper plate. The carbons for positive and negative are with us now, the negative ones have their cores surrounded by copper.

Simpson Solar Screen.

Several years ago the Simpson Solar Screen was a product familiar to exhibitors and operators pretty much all over the country, but, owing to the ill health of Mr. Simpson, since deceased, the sale of the screen has, of late years, not been pushed, and, like other things, in this old world of ours, once it drops out of sight it is in a goodly measure forgotten. Mrs. Ida L. Simpson, wife of the late Mr. Simpson, now, however, proposes to begin a vigorous selling campaign for the Solar screen. Incidentally, I might remark that Mrs. Simpson owns, or claims to own the basic patent on metallic surface screens.

The Simpson Solar screen surface is composed entirely of aluminum, placed on a cloth backing by a hand process. This surface is very brilliant, and gives sharp contrast as between whites, colors and black; also it gives a high degree of brilliancy to the whites.

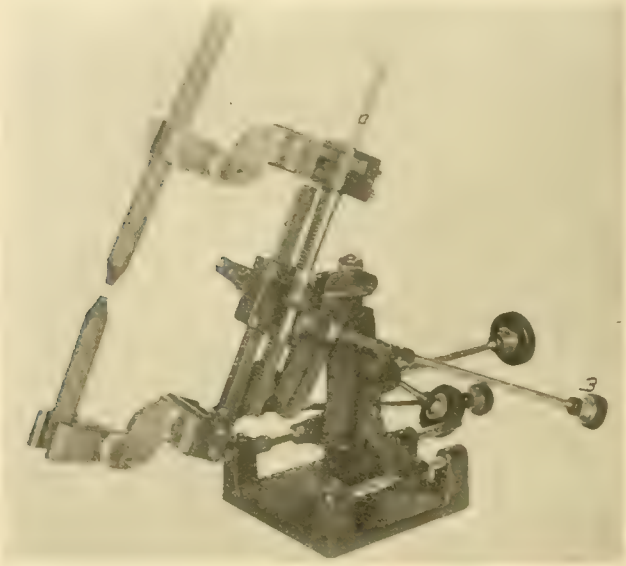
The writer has personally examined the Solar screen which was coated eight years ago, and has been used a goodly portion of the time since. It was still in good condition, and gives a clear, brilliant picture. The surface of the Solar is slightly matte. It is guaranteed against discoloration, peeling or other defect for a period of five years, and Mrs. Simpson informs me the guarantee will be made good.

We take pleasure in welcoming back into the screen arena the Simpsen Solar. It is an old stand-by and a good one.

New Edison Lamp.

The accompanying photographs give an excellent idea of the arc lamp which will accompany the new Edison Super-Kinetoscope now about ready to be placed on the market.

This machine was illustrated, and described in detail in issue of December 19, 1914.



As will be seen, the lamp is sturdy of construction, and has every needed adjustment—also these adjustments are in excellent form. Handle A feeds the carbons; handle B, through rod C, moves the upper carbon holder ahead or back; handle D raises or lowers the lamp; handle E moves the lamp, as a whole, ahead or back, and handle F moves the lower carbon sidewise. Screw G enables the operator to give the lamp, as a whole, any desired angle. The carbon clamps are strong and very effective. The insulation is well taken care of, and, in short, the lamp, taken as a whole, is one which we believe will please the operator. If kept properly lubricated with graphite, he should have no trouble in doing anything that can be done with his arc

Handbooks All Gone.

The editor is swelled up like a chunk of dried apple that has laid in water all night. He has reason to be. About five years ago the first edition of the Richardson Handbook for Operators and Managers, a cloth bound book of 175 pages, was placed on the market by J. P. Chalmers, publisher of the Moving Picture World, at $1.50. It was well received, and many hundreds of enthusiastic testimonials of appreciation were received.

Three and a half years ago, the second edition of this book was released for sale at $2.50.

There was considerable question in the minds of the author and his publishers as to whether any considerable number of operators could be induced to pay $2.50 for a work of instruction. Events proved, however, that our fears were groundless. For more than two years the New York City public librarian, almost weekly reported the Richardson Handbook as being one of the ten non-fiction books in greatest demand in the entire New York City Library. And in three and a half years the entire edition of 10,000 copies has been sold, and I may add that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, at least nine-tenths of these books have been sold to moving picture operators or managers, working as such when the purchase was made. In fact so unexpectedly large has been the sale during the past year that the edition has been entirely exhausted from four to six months before the new book can possibly be gotten ready.

Very naturally I am proud of this record, but, beyond all things I am made happy in the knowledge of the fact that the book has done wonders in educating the operator, thus enabling him to improve the projection in thousands of theaters in this and other countries.

For the past few months the editor has, on several occasions, made apology for his inability to go as carefully into some matters submitter to the department as he would like to have done. He has told you that he was engaged on a important work which was consuming much of his energy. Well that work is the preparation of a new Handbook, which is expected to contain about 550 pages. It is a tremendous task to compile this work, particularly in view of the fact that I expect the third edition to be even a greater improvement over the second than the second was over the first, and that is saying considerable. Many matters will be dealt with in greater detail. The machine instructions, transformers, rectifiers, and other matter will be brought up to date. The machine manufacturers are all, with one possible expection, having new and even better cuts made. The instruction matter is all being rewritten and brought strictly up to date. The Westinghouse and General Electric Companies are working with me in the endeavor to supply complete data and instruction with reference to their rectifiers. The various motor generator sets, with possibly one or two exceptions, will be dealt with completely and in detail. The light ray matter will be included.

In fact, it is my desire and intention to make this work as complete as it is possible to make it. I hope to have it on the market before the first of the year, though I cannot make a definite promise in that respect. The price will be somewhat higher than that of the old one, but I believe the book itself will be worth fully three times as much.

A Surprise.

Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas, writes:

> While swinging around the circle to the I. A. convention I stopped in Kansas City, and visited the Royal Theater. Projection was fine—in fact, high class in every respect. In Chicago I visited your old haunts, the Bijou Dream, and Cozarts' old place on No. Clark Street. The work was very good; in fact, as good, or slightly better, than when you were there, the improvement being due to up-to-the-minute apparatus. In Omaha I was surprised beyond measure. I visited the Elite, Palm, Parlor, Princess, Empress, Cameraphone and Farnum. At the Elite, Palm and Parlor the work was fine, and the operators should receive praise for their splendid projection. At the Princess I saw a reel run through in eleven minutes and thirty-five seconds, timed by a stop watch. A Charles Chaplin picture was run out of frame for four minutes, and the projector shutter was not set right either. The curtain was yellow at the bottom, and the picture jumpy. I called the manager's attention to these things, and told him I would report it to the projection department. He wanted to know what right I had to do that, to which I replied that I had paid good money to see pictures, not a shadow dance. Just about that time Mr. Operator put on "Bepo, the Barber" in place of reel number two of "The Ruse," whereupon the manager told him he had the wrong reel. It took four minutes to get back to the right one and I left in disgust. The Empress was crowded to the doors; there was a reason, and the reason was the excellent projection. At the Cameraphone Mr. Operator was smoking. I called this to the attention of the man who was taking tickets, and he said the boss would only pay ten to twelve a week for seven nine-hour days, and, of course, that was sufficient answer. I then called the proprietor's attention to the matter, and he told me I should visit a doctor. (If his twelve-dollar smoking operator had a fire, and a few people were killed it would not be a bad scheme if a mob made him a candidate for a visit to a doctor.—Ed.) During the entire three reels the picture was half yellow, and I guess the operator had planted grass seed on the aperture and it had started to grow. The picture, "A Doomed Hero," was out of focus. The last house I visited in Omaha was the Farnum; this was ideal, from all points of view; the pictures showed a master-hand at the projector, in that they were given the proper speed; in fact, the work was high class in every particular.
>
> At Wichita, Kans., I visited the Yale, Novelty and the Marple. Projection was very good in all three of these houses. At Henenessey, Kans., the New Majestic has very fine pictures, only they were run a trifle slow. Everything considered, however, the projection was good.

It is astonishing that some Omaha managers don't wake up, and, in the parlance of the street, take a tumble to themselves. I think there is no possible doubt as to the correctness of these reports, because, in the first place, I have every confidence in Brother Smith's judgment, and in the second place I have had at least a dozen similar reports. Of course the city manager who does not know any better than to expect a ten or twelve dollar man to put decent results on his screen, cannot be expected to take criticism kindly, or to take advice at all. My compliments to the Omaha men who are doing good work. I am glad to know some of them are delivering the goods anyhow.

Some Name.

Recently we were in receipt of a money order in payment for a Handbook, to be shipped to Hooseinbhoy Abdootatty, Marriott Road, New Market, Karachi City, India. Some names, my boy, some names!

A Unique Installation.

Recently the Nicholas Power Company made an installation, which was planned and originated by William C. Smith, its assistant general manager, in Madison Square Garden, New York City, the particulars of which are as follows: Two Six-A Power's machines, projecting a 36 foot picture at approximately 300 feet, using very nearly 100 amperes of current. The objectives were 8½ inch E. F. Gundlach lenses. The condensers were 8½ meniscus and a 7½ plano. The chief operator was Robert Sanders, with Jack Price as his assistant. The boys gave an excellent performance, and it was no fault of the picture, as such, that the venture proved a failure. I said long ago, and I still say that the Madison Square Garden will never prove a success as a moving picture theater, because it is "not built that way," and, moreover, is not rightly located.

The installation was a distinct credit to Brother Smith and the Nicholas Power Company. It might be noted that running at normal speed, even with that enormous picture there was no perceptible flicker.

The Discoloration of Condensers.

Frankly the editor is up a stump. Kicks galore are coming in about the discoloration of condensers. It used to be purple and green; now it is yellow. Let us hope it don't finally turn to black. I have exhausted every avenue I know of in the endeavor to find out why it is manufacturers are unable to make condensing lenses that will not discolor under the action of heat. I believe that yellow does less harm than any of the other colors, but I also firmly believe that any color in a condenser is bad.

There are those who claim that yellow in a condenser is an advantage, in that it softens the light and makes it more pleasing, which may be true, but the fact, nevertheless, remains that it is quite expensive, and I don't believe the possible benefit derived is anywhere near worth what it costs; also I'm not at all convinced that there is any real benefit. I like the clear black and white better.

This department believes the time has come when crude condenser lenses ought to be discarded. If they can be had, it is willing to boost the sale of really high-class condenser lenses which will be absolutely guaranteed from discoloration, which will have a standard diamater of 4½ inches (not "on, near, or about" that, but exactly 4½ inches) and a standard edge thickness of 1/16 of an inch, both surfaces ground and polished.

If that sort of lens can be had I am perfectly willing to advise managers to secure a modern condenser mount, such as the Preddy or Elbert, and to purchase these lenses even though they cost as much as six, eight or even ten dollars a pair. With a modern mount there is but little danger of breakage, and, to my mind, there is no question of a doubt but that the loss in light value and definition due to inferior condensing lenses is sufficient to far more than offset the cost of high-class lenses, even though it be as much as ten dollars a pair.

The editor has corresponded with various manufacturers and the matter is pretty well summed up in the following paragraph, taken from a letter received from a large Chicago house:

> "There is nobody connected with the motion picture industry who would be better pleased to discover a method of making condensers which will not discolor than ourselves, and you can rest assured that we are bending our efforts toward this end. Our White Label condensers are nearer perfect than any we have been able to procure. We know this to be the fact because we have had them tested by the Bureau of Standards at Washington, D. C., together with every condenser on both the American and European markets."

Yes, that is quite possibly true, nevertheless the lenses in question do discolor; also they have too thick an edge—too much useless glass, which absorbs light and makes unnecessary waste. Quite probably they are as good as can be had for the money—well, let us pay more money, if it will get a better article.

Easy.

E. L. McClure, Lexington, Kentucky, says:

> Have found difficulty in solving the following problem, and any assistance you can give will be greatly appreciated. Have two 50 amperes, 75 volt Wagner A. C. to D. C. converters. How can we operate them in order to run spot lights from them, either with the resistance already on the spot or with home-made resistance, and how many lamps can we run from them; all current to be carried from spot to operating room over two wires of sufficient capacity? The theater is a legitimate house, running pictures for the summer season. We use converters on the picture machines, and also wish to use them for spot lights.

I see no difficulty in this proposition at all, Friend McClure. You ought not to need more than 15 amperes at the spot lamp and may operate as many lamps as 15 is contained into the amperage capacity of your generator. Presumably the spot light will not be working while the projectors are running, in which case I would suggest the following: tap two wires off your projector feed wire at the operating main switch, and, first having secured a 75 volt, 15 ampere rheostat, connect the same, through fuses, and a switch, into the spot lamp circuit, cutting out the regular spot lamp resistance. You may, however, accomplish the same thing by short-circuiting a portion of the regular spot light rheostat resistance. This resistance is undoubtedly designed to furnish 12 to 15 amperes to the lamp from a 110 volt supply; that is not positive, but it is pretty near a cinch, and would mean that you would have to short-circuit a considerable portion of the resistance; the number of coils to short-circuit would be a matter for experiment. In order to short-circuit them just connect from one rheostat binding post to the end of the number of coils you wish to cut out, using a piece of No. 6 copper wire for the purpose.

If you prefer to run two wires from the stage, well and good, and if either of the projectors is to be used while the spot is running this would be the better plan, unless the operating room feed wires are large enough to carry the whole load. The connection at the stage must, of course, be made at a point where the wires will receive current, no matter which converter is running—I understand you to say you have two converters.

Practical Travelling Salesman's Projector.

The idea of producing a practical projection machine for the use of travelling salesmen seems to have taken deep root in the minds of men. The Projection Department would almost count that week as lost which did not bring at least one invention of such a machine to its doors.

It has, however, been left to the Holloway Corporation, Chicago, Ill., to produce what seems to be a remarkably compact, thoroughly practical and excellent projection machine, all contained within the confines of a grip or case, 16 inches high by 16 inches long by 6 inches deep. Within this case, which is asbestos lined, is found a complete projection mechanism, lamp, lamp house, condenser, objective lens, two reels, constituting what would be on the regular projector an upper and lower reel, the latter being a complete take-up and a thoroughly practical rewind, both on the same shaft.

The projector mechanism is seen in the upper right-hand corner, A being the framing lever, that operation being accomplished by raising and lowering roller B. C is the intermittent sprocket. The intermittent movement is of the regular star and cam type. The objective is focused by means of thumb-screw D.

The take-up belt E is seen at the back. The course of the film can be followed and the operation of the reels readily understood, I believe.

Any length of film, up to 1,000 feet, is rewound by unthreading the machine and passing the loop of film over roller F, whereupon the insertion of the machine crank into a hole in the door of the case causes it to engage with a gear which in turn engages with gear G and rewinding is thus accomplished.

The machine has a fire shutter, but that is nonsense, since the illuminant is nothing more nor less than a high power incandescent lamp, the rays from which would not set fire to a film in a hundred years. It is simply an example of the foolish requirements of the underwriters, who would want asbestos to be around a bottle of water if there was going to be a moving picture film within three miles of it.

The lamp attaches to an ordinary incandescent socket, the current consumption being approximately 4½ amperes. Alternating or direct current may be used; also 220 volts may be utilized by placing a second lamp in series with the lamp in the lamphouse.

I believe it is unnecessary to go into a more extended description of this mechanism since the photograph shows its construction very plainly. It must be said, however, in fairness to the Holloway Corporation that from the travelling salesman point of view, this machine is unique in its excellence. It is quite solidly built, a very practical projector and does not weigh quite twenty pounds. Owing to its lightness and the shape of the case, it is no more in the way nor any more difficult for the salesman to carry than would be an ordinary suit-case. Another thing which recommends this outfit to salesmen is the fact that when he arrives on the scene there is no splutter or fuss and feathers about getting ready to show the picture. The film being threaded in the machine, and having, of course, presumably attended to his rewinding in the privacy of his hotel room or elsewhere, all that is necessary to produce the picture is to select a white wall or pin up a thin white sheet and connect the light cord to an incandescent socket, stick the crank into its appointed place and get busy. This certainly will recommend the machine highly to a salesman. The company has named its baby the "Movette." The cases are covered with black leather and present a very neat appearance.

The machine may be had motor driven if desired, with an additional weight, however, of from four to five pounds.

This machine is also adapted by the Holloway Corporation to automatic window advertising. By means of an attachment, it projects standard advertising film automatically and continuously for any length of time. I am not so well acquainted with this end of the proposition, but I presume there is a considerable field for such a device.

The Holloway Corporation also call my attention to the fact that, whereas the machine is primarily designed as a travelling salesman's outfit, it is equally as well adapted to use in the home, where a self-contained, unpacked and thoroughly safe projector is essential.

Powers Chain Drive.

J. H. Anderson, Carroll, Iowa, writes:

> Can you tell me whether or not the Powers Company put out a chain drive for their 2,000 foot reel take-up?

The Powers Company does not make a practice of supplying a chain take-up but on a few occasions where they have had special requests for same the company has furnished them. However, special apparatus of this kind is somewhat costly, and, I think, unnecessary. If the round belt won't do the work, I myself would prefer to have two pulleys made, with crown faces one-half inch wide, to take a one-half inch flat belt. There should be flanges on either side of the pulley faces to prevent the belt from running off.

New York Local.

In July 31st issue I printed some editorial remarks concerning the New York Local 306. As soon as this appeared letters were received from several New York City operators, all of whom agreed thoroughly with what I said regarding the matter of politics in the union, and some made very caustic remarks concerning the organization.

Now it is by no means a pleasure for this department to enter into matters of this kind, but we are not stone blind, and if we don't see and recognize the fact that the New York union, after more than four years of effort, has accomplished about one-fourth of what it ought to have accomplished, we would certainly have to be blind, deaf and dumb. There is, of course, a reason for this, and I believe there are, as a matter of fact, three main reasons.

First: As I have said before, New York City, which comprises within its limits the Bronx, Coney and Staten Islands, districts which are geographically located many miles apart (in fact a portion of the territory is separated by more than thirty miles) is too large a proposition, both geographically and in population, to be handled by a body which holds meetings in one place only. By this I mean it cannot thus be handled in the best possible manner.

Second: There is an element in New York City known as the "East Side." Now, I have every respect for the boys whom we shall, for want of a better term, designate as the "East Siders." They are, for the most part, either Hebrews, or of foreign birth or parentage. These men are in every way deserving of precisely the same consideration that any other man is deserving of. They are just as good citizens, and just as good men as you and I, who call ourselves "Americans," or, more properly speaking, United Statesians. Freely granting all this, however, the fact remains that, due to temperamental difference and possibly to some extent, environment, the typical east side man has radically different ideas as to the best method of transacting business, and different views and ideas on many things than have you and I. It is not for me to say that their ways are the best ways, or that our ways are the best ways, but the fact remains that there is that difference, and that these very differences make it utterly impossible, and entirely out of the question to successfully mix or amalgamate the two into a thoroughly successful organization. To put it briefly, the main trouble is that, whereas the one likes to transact business in a calm, orderly fashion, the other either prefers to or at least does promptly proceed to turn the meeting into a long-drawn-out and vociferous debate, which is just as animated over the most trivial matters as over matters of weighty import. The result is (it is no use disputing this, because from experience I know it and you know it to be a fact) that, whereas the east sider will continue to go to the meetings and really seem to enjoy the three, four or five hours' session of what sounds like a Fourth of July celebration gone crazy, the other fellow soon gets very tired of it and many quit coming to meetings; also a good many of them drop their membership.

The third reason, and a very important reason it is, lies in the fact that there are, and always have been, certain men in the New York local whose first and greatest consideration is to be boss, to run the union—to be officers.

Of course this plain speaking will, beyond any question of doubt, arouse the ire of some of the office seeking brothers. Well, that is unfortunate, but the men know that what I have said is the even and exact truth, and, moreover, that, under the conditions, the way I have put it is very mild—very mild indeed. What I could say about conditions in New York City, and keep within the strict limits of truth, would not look well in print. I was of the opinion at the time, and still am firmly of the opinion that, whereas the organization formerly known as Local Union No. 1, headed by one, Robert Goldblatt, should have been taken into the I. A., it should have been taken in as a separate body and have been given jurisdiction over all that territory known as the east side, extending west of Fifth Avenue, east and south to the East River, and north to the Bronx. If this had been done I am quite confident that we would right now have two powerful organizations in New York City, which would have accomplished three times the amount of good the one body has done, or seems likely to do. I firmly believe that at the present time such a division would be wise, and I, for one, would welcome it. The two bodies would, of course, work together through a central committee of some sort.

In closing I wish to emphasize the fact that in these remarks I have in no way, shape, manner or form intended to speak slightingly of the east side men. The difference is all a matter of racial temperament, over which neither they or the men on the other side have any control. My way of doing businss is not their way, and their way is not my way. Why not recognize the undeniable truth of that proposition and act accordingly?

An Error and an Apology.

On page 484, July 17th issue, under article entitled "Frude Film Circuit Closer," I said that the manufacturer had failed to present this device to the department for examination and approval, and that until such time as this was done, we could not undertake to say that the device was good. It is regrettable this item appeared. It was an error, and being such, I desire to offer our apology to the Motion Picture Fire Prevention Devices Company which manufactures the device.

Two years ago last July Mr. Frank H. Frude, the inventor of the Frude Film Circuit Closer, made a thorough demonstration of his invention to the editor in Chicago, and it was pronounced good; also I believe it was at that time I said, in the department, that the device was good. Two years is a long time, particularly when one considers the number of inventions which are presented to this department in the course of a year. The Frude machine had not been brought to my attention again, and the fact that I had examined it in Chicago had completely passed from my memory.

I have not seen the model now being sold, but if it is the same as the one I examined two years ago, it is good. The principle is correct, and the device works like a charm. I cannot now go into details as to its method of operation, but I do distinctly remember that it was good. More than this I cannot at this time say, but if the company cares to send on a complete description to refresh my memory in the matter, I will be glad to describe the device in the department.

A Beautiful Thing.

William Smith, assistant general manager of the Nicholas Power Company, recently called my attention to something he had accidentally discovered while experimenting. It is a beautiful thing to look at, and as a novelty would even be an interesting thing to show to an audience. In order to produce the effect, proceed as follows: In a piece of sheet metal drill two holes about one-fourth inch, or a little less in diameter, and about one-half inch center to center. Place this metal right up against the condenser in front, with the holes in its center. I am not sure, but believe a metal slide placed in the slide carrier would do. Now open the machine gate and project the light through the two holes through the objective lens to the screen, and while doing this, using the proper lamp control, slowly shove the upper carbon tip ahead or pull the lower one back. Keep on doing this slowly and watch the effect on the screen. If you do it right you will see a marvelously beautiful sight. It is possible this was done with the stereopticon lens; I don't remember about that now, and Brother Smith is not where I can ask him. That item, however, you can quickly discover for yourself. But you can take it from me that the experiment is well worth trying.

Ghost.

P. L. Kron, Roundup, Montana, writes:

> Would like to ask you what causes a dark looking spot near the center of the picture when the lamphouse is as far back as it can go. Formerly there was no such spot, but now it is there, and stays there too. What is the cause?

The cause is probably the wrong lens combination. Measure the diameter of the opening of the back surface of your objective lens, and the exact distance from the back end of the lens to the film track on the aperture, when the picture is in focus on the screen. Estimate the number of amperes you are using. Forward the measurement and estimate to me, and I think I can then tell you how to get rid of Mr. Ghost.

MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

Kindly note that the Richardson Handbook is completely out of print. Please send no more orders or remittances. The author is now at work on a new and revised edition, which will be still larger and better. Announcement of publication date will appear in due course.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD 17 Madison Avenue, New York

Motion Picture Photography*

Conducted by CARL LOUIS GREGORY

Inquiries.

QUESTIONS in cinematography addressed to this department will receive carbon copy of the department's reply by mail when four cents in stamps are enclosed. Special replies by mail on matter which cannot be replied to in this department for $1.00.

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is a rule of this department that no apparatus will be recommended editorially until the value of such appliances have been demonstrated to its editor.

Light (Continued).

THE principal lens or objective of the telescope will not give a sharp image of an object if removed a slight degree from the axis or perfect squareness of position in relation to the line of light. Hence, the sharpness of the image produced by the objective of the telescope is confined to a small area close to the axis. The photographic lens, on the other hand, must be so constructed that it will give a sharp image of objects in front of the center of the lens and also of those that are situated to a certain extent on each side of the center.

2d. The photographic lens must also be so constructed that it will bring to a focus at the same spot the chemical and visual rays of light.

If not corrected, the lens will act as a prism and separate the light into its component parts and produce the spectrum as shown in Fig. 28.

The violet or active end of the spectrum is brought to a focus close to the lens and the red at the greatest distance. The yellow, which is brightest visually, is also further from the lens than the active violet. In focusing visually, the plane of the yellow would be sharp, but in photographing the sensitive surface would have to occupy the plane of the violet. The results would be that the image of the object focused by the eye would be a blur in the photograph. The photgraphic lens must be so constructed that the image of the object will appear sharp and clearly defined to the eye, and be equally sharp as a result of the chemical rays, when it is developed upon the photographic plate. Such a coincidence of the chemical and visual rays does not exist in the telescope or the microscope, but only in the photographic lens.

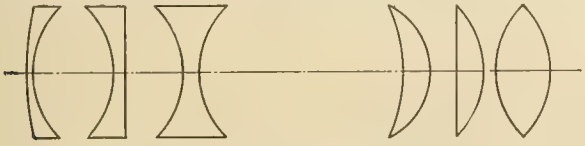

Fig. 31. Types of Lenses.

From left to right: Positive Lenses—Double Convex, Plano Convex, Convex Concave. Negative Lenses—Double Concave, Plano Concave, Concave Convex.

In the telescope and the microscope which are constructed for visual work it is not necessary.

To sum up these remarks it can be stated briefly that photographic lenses transmit oblique as well as axial rays and bring them to a focus in the same plane; and also bring the chemical and visual rays of light to a focus at the same spot.

This brings us to the consideration of the photographic lens and the principles which underlie its construction. By a lens is understood a piece of clear glass bounded by polished curved surfaces. The various forms of simple lenses are divided into two general classes:

Positive or Converging	1st. Double Convex. 2d. Plano Convex. 3d. Concave Convex.
Negative or Diverging	1st. Double Convex. 2d. Plano Convex. 3d. Concave Convex.

The first are thickest in the center, while the second are thinnest in the center.

These simple forms may be made up of one single picee of glass or they may be composed of several cemented together, as will be seen later. Diagram 31 illustrates these forms of lenses.

All lenses, whether singly or in combination, have the following properties:

1. Principal axis.
2. Optical center.
3. Principle and conjugate foci.
4. Nodal points.

How to Get a Job as a Cameraman.

How to get a job as a cameraman is not the title of this page, although one would think from the writers of the number of letters that have deluged the mail of this department lately must have read it that way. Speaking thus is not to discourage anyone who is genuinely desirous of becoming a cameraman. The mission of this page is a helpful one, but it cannot be an employment agency. It will gladly do all in its power to help any ambitious worker in the technical section of the film industry to advance their qualifications for better positions and it will welcome outsiders who will devote their energies to becoming skillful artisans in the industry, but it is quite outside its province to seek jobs for people who haven't the energy to scout them out for themselves. It is a hard game to break into without previous experience.

Experience in photographic work is the best foundation for a cameraman's job. The ranks of the cinematographers of the present have been recruited from strange places in many instances, but the most of the best men have worked their way up from some film factory position—they have worked in dark rooms, they have finished stills, but at the same time they were ambitious. Most of them had a camera or kodak of their own and they took their little cameras out on Sundays and made snapshots and during the evenings of the week they developed and printed them and they got books on photography from the public library and bought photographic periodicals and they read and studied them, and while they were at work in the film factory they learned all that they could from their fellow workers. They earned each promotion by hard work and study, and at last, after a thorough apprenticeship, they arrived at the position of cameraman. But if they became good photographers they did not stop then when they had learned to thread the camera and turn the crank; there were lots of things to learn yet—more about the lighting, more about artistic composition and posing; there was much to learn about lenses, about trick work and visions, and then beside all this and just as important, too, as the technical knowledge is the co-operation and co-ordination with the work of the diretcor. It is essential to the best work that the photographer be able to catch and instill into his picture the same spirit and motif which actuates the director who produces it. Unless the photographer understands and appreciates what his director is endeavoring to do, he cannot produce the best work.

From the ranks of the newspaper photographers have come some of the best topical news cameraman—theirs is practically a separate branch from the work of those who make dramatic pictures, and while numbers of them have gone in very successfully for studio work on dramatic pictures the qualifications which make for the success of a topical film weekly photographer are mostly different from that of the photographer who works with a director in the production of staged stories. Many of the boys who are now turning out productions have learned as camera boys or assistants to cameramen and their success has depended much upon the preceptors under whom they worked. Most of them realize the handicap imposed upon them by their lack of laboratory experience, and only by serious study from whatever sources available to them have they been able to overcome their lack of training in this branch. Unfortunately, there are many such at work taking pictures now who lack this training so necessary to the production of the best work.

Most studios, up to a recent date, have been in the habit of furnishing the cameraman with all of his apparatus, and the best of them have maintained mechanical departments where such apparatus could be kept tuned up to the best mechanical perfection. The increasing demands upon the limited facilities of these machine shops for the repair of factory machinery, such as perforators and printers, coupled with a shortage of the necessary number of cameras, has been to retard the work of camera repair and shove into the background that primary requisite for the making of good negatives—that is, a camera in perfect mechanical condition. So bad has this situation become, and the number of new studios which have started without even a pretense of a machine shop, that many of the more conscientious operators have purchased their own outfits and fitted them up at their own expense in order to have the facilities for turning out work of which they need not be ashamed.

One of the many lessons that the cinematographer learns is to keep his head—to be on the job constantly, be always prepared for whatever emergency may arise, his camera loaded and ready to shoot when the scene is rehearsed, to use judgment and tact, to keep in mind the dignity and importance of the photographic end of the picture, and to insist as far as consistent with holding his job that he be furnished with every reasonable facility for the production of the best quality of work.

He should make it his interest to know whether it is for the best interests of his company to sacrifice a small percentage of photographic quality and take pictures in a waning light in order to finish with a large cast so that it will not be necessary to call them a second day, or whether the improvement in better negative will justify the expense involved in quitting when the light is getting bad and hiring the large cast again the second day. Get together with your director at the close of work each day and schedule your work for the next day. It beats the haphazard method all hollow; it saves money for the concern, and if you train yourself for doing more you can earn more. If the company you are with is not able to discern when you are turning out more and better work, there are other companies whose business sense is better and who are willing to pay money for results

*Copyright, 1915, by The Chalmers Publishing Co.

Comments on the Films

General Film Company.

LOVE'S RESCUE (Biograph), Aug. 2.—The reformation of the hero in this one-reel drama, is not very convincing. Dramatically considered, the play is a creditable piece of work, and is acted in good style by Isabel Rea, Frank Newburg and Frederick Vroom.

THE KISS (Essanay), Aug. 2.—Peggy Sweeney and John Thorn have the leading roles in this one-reel drama. The story deals with English high society and a struggling artist, and is an exceedingly romantic bit of fiction. The use of an American newspaper, in connection with an enlarged "ad," is not in keeping with the care bestowed upon the rest of the production.

THE TAUNT (Lubin), Aug 2. A fairly good one-reel drama for a not over-critical audience. The action is brisk, and the acting of C. C. Miller, Jay Morley and Blanche Light satisfactory.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 61, 1915 (Selig), Aug. 2.—Aviation school at San Diego, Cal., is the first item shown in this number. A loving cup presented to Jack Ness, ball player, at Oakland, Cal., follows; also, wireless control inventions by B. K. Shepard, Medford, Mass.; Chas. Becker leaving Ossining for his second trial; Col. Roosevelt at Panama-Pacific Exposition; Baroness von Rottenthal dancing in Central Park; outing of Boston Chamber of Commerce, Beverly, Mass.; Lord Kitchener reviewing troops, London, Eng.; on the battle line in Serbia; burial of Eastland victims, Chicago.

THE SERPENT'S TOOTH (Vitagraph), Aug. 2.—A one-reel comedy, written by Frank Dazey, which contains a lot of fresh incidents, even if the main threads of the story have often done honorable service. Wally Van heads an excellent cast.

THE HYPNOTIC MONKEY (Kalem), Aug. 3.—The excellent quality of the humorous situations in this one-reel farce makes it an easy task for "Ham" and "Bud" to register a large collection of laughs. Lloyd V. Hamilton shows keen judgment in not trying to force the fun during his scenes with the monkey. In many respects this is the best number of the series.

THE RAKOON HOSE COMPANY (Lubin), Aug. 3.—A half-reel farce, acted by the Lubin colored contingent, the fun has plenty of breadth, if no great depth. John Edwards, Luke Scott, D. Rosebourough and Mattie Edwards are conspicuous during the proceedings.

A ONE-REEL FEATURE (Lubin), Aug. 3.—A Vincent Whitman cartoon comedy, on the same reel with "The Rakoon Hose Company," this number is an amusing satire on the moving picture play.

THE TAKING OF MUSTANG PETE (Selig), Aug. 3.—A rattling good one-reel western drama, filled with life, action and a top notch brand of humor. Plenty of hard riding and scenery. The rush of the ponies through these photoplays will always remain one of their strong appeals.

NOT MUCH FORCE (Edison), Aug. 4.—A wildly improbable but exceedingly amusing one-reel farce, this photoplay his been skilfully produced by Will Louis. Raymond McKee, Julian Reed, Dallas Welford, Lou Gorey and Caroline Rankin act the comedy roles.

"DREAMY DUD" IN A VISIT TO UNCLE DUDLEY'S FARM (Essanay), Aug. 4.—Dud's adventures in this half-reel living cartoon are as extravagantly comic as of old. Wallace A. Carlson's clever pen has never drawn anything more amusing. Interesting views of Navajo Indian life in New Mexico are on the same reel.

THE REPENTANCE OF DR. BLINN (Vitagraph), Aug. 4.—This one-reel drama transgresses a fundamental law of construction—that dramatic art deals with types, not individuals. Happily for the honor of the profession, physicians of Dr. Blinn's sort seldom, if ever, exist in real life. Granting the author's thesis, the resultant drama is a powerful and expert piece of dramatic writing, finely acted by George Holt, William Duncan, Myrtle Gonzalez and Jack Mower.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 62, 1915 (Selig), Aug. 5.—U. S. Artillery and Aviation School, Tobyhanna, Pa., is first on the list of news item; followed by swimming match, Charlestown, Mass.; laying trolley line on Euclid Ave., Cleveland; Shriners' parade, San Francisco; war scenes, Serbia; regulating street traffic on Fifth Ave., New York; air torpedo invented by George M. Russell, Hoboken, N. J.; swimming pool at Ossining prison; mimic warfare at San Francisco.

A DISCIPLE OF PLATO (Vitagraph), Aug. 5.—The excellent acting of Ricca Allen, Templer Saxe and Jay Dwiggins is a large factor in the success of this one-reel farce. While never riotously funny, the film is always neatly humorous. The climax is a clever touch.

BRONCHO BILLY'S PROTEGE (Essanay), Aug. 6.—A one-reel drama which affords G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton the chance to tell one of those "heart" stories that have won them many followers. Broncho adopts the orphaned child of the woman who jilted him, and determines to live straight for the little girl's sake.

A DAY OF HAVOC (Lubin), Aug. 6.—This one-reel drama, by Emmett Campbell Hall, has every requisite of a successful photoplay. It grasps the attention with the opening situation and moves steadily to an inevitable climax, the acting of Ethel Clayton, Thurston Hall, Francis Joyner and Walter Law, aiding largely in this result. Joseph Kaufman made the production.

DIMPLES AND THE RING (Vitagraph), Aug. 6.—Lillian Walker and Billy Quirk have glove-fitting parts in this one-reel comedy, written by Wm. Addison Lathrop. A portion of the action is laid on the golf links. Spirited acting of fairly good material makes the reel come up to the Vitagraph average.

STREET FAKERS (Essanay), Aug. 5.—Bud Jamieson and J. T. Kelly play a pair of itinerant merchants in this one-reel farce, which broadly depicts the humors of street-faking in a "one night stand." The reel is filled with rapid knock-about comedy.

WAKING UP FATHER (MinA), Aug. 5.—In this one-reel farce, George Ovey not only wakes up father but the entire neighborhood, he even succeeds in arousing the police. The reel compares favorably with its predecessors.

HER MOTHER'S OATH (Biograph), Aug. 6.—A re-issue of a D. W. Griffith one-reel drama, the principal parts being taken by Jennie Lee, Dorothy Gish and Henry B. Walthall. Forceful and closely knit from start to finish.

FREDERICK HOLMES' WARD (Biograph), Aug. 7.—A pleasant little romance is told in this one-reel comedy. The man and the maid are acted by Alan Hale and Vola Smith.

NOT WANTED (Edison), Aug. 7.—There is a juvenile flavor about this one-reel drama which will commend it to the women and children. It is a simple little story, nicely acted by Herbert Prior, Sallie Crute and Richard Peer.

THE SUBSTITUTE FIREMAN (Episode No. 39 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series) (Kalem), Aug. 7.—The story leading up to the "hazard" in this one-reel drama is not among the best of the series, but, when it comes to the big stunt, Helen the Fearless delivers the goods, with her old calm-eyed assurance.

BILLIE'S DEBUT (Lubin), Aug. 7.—Billie becomes a Stage-Door Johnnie, in this one-reel farce; then, an actor for one performance only. He is engaged as a super, but succeeds in holding the center of the stage and making his part the star role. Epes W. Sargent has supplied Billie Reeves with a very satisfactory vehicle.

THE BLACK LEOPARD (Selig), Aug. 7.—Wallace C. Clifton has written an entertaining Jungle-Zoo one-reel drama, and the production does it justice. It is competently acted by Ann Drew, Estelle Wynne, Geo. Larkin and Geo. McKenzie.

General Film Company, Specials.

THE CUP OF CHANCE (Knickerbocker Star Features), July 21.—Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson on page 669, issue of July 24.

THE DISAPPEARING NECKLACE (Kalem), July 28.—Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson on page 667, issue of July 24.

THE MAKER OF DREAMS (Kalem—"Broadway Favorite") Aug. 2.—Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson on page 831, issue of July 31.

THE MELODY OF DOOM (Selig), Aug. 2.—Occultism and a strain of weird music figure largely in this two-reel drama. A beautiful siren "who lured men's souls to the shores of sin, by the light of her wanton eyes," as George R. Sims puts it in "'Ostler Joe," is forced to confess to murder by novel means. The theme is played with the tremolo stop drawn out, and the picture will please lovers of the drama of mystery and crime. Eugenie Besserer satisfied every demand of the leading role.

THE DRAB SISTER (Biograph), Aug. 3.—A domestic drama in two reels, this photoplay has the worth and weight of a book by Mrs. Alexander. The plot, incidents, and climax comprise an interesting human document. Louise Vale realizes the title role perfectly. Franklin Ritchie, Madge Kirby, Kenneth Davenport and Kate Bruce round out an excellent cast.

BUSINESS RIVALS (Essanay), Aug. 3.—This two-reel drama is another instalment of the adventures of Dominica and Braga, the heroine and hero of Henry C. Rowland's "crook" serial. In this number the two thieves discover the identity of their rival, LeGrand, the ex-police official. The film is sensationally interesting. Nell Craig, Sheldon Lewis and Ernest Maupain sustain the leading roles.

JANE EYRE (Biograph), Aug. 4.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 670, issue of July 24.

THE TIDES OF TIME (Knickbocker), Aug 4.—A profound thought underlies this feature. It is a thought born of the contrast between utter selfishness and service in the name of humanity. The thought lost something of its vitality in the scenario and appears only in faint traces on the screen. The photography is exquisite throughout. The part of an elderly lady is played by Mary Nash, whose charm of manner and whose histrionic ability go a good ways toward redeeming the obvious weaknesses of the feature.

THE SECRET CODE (Third Installment of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel") (Kalem), Aug. 4.—This two-reel drama is right in line with the present day, when every civilized country on earth is keeping a wary eye on its neighbors. Foreign spies and Secret Service agents are the principal actors in the drama, and the attempt to steal a United States code leads to plenty of excitement in the rooms and office of the Grand Hotel. The reproduction of a modern high class hotel, used in this series, is a triumph for all concerned.

COUNTRY BLOOD (Lubin), Aug. 4.—Lawrence McCloskey, the author of this two-reel comedy, understands the supreme value of character in writing for the screen. In this photoplay, his country types are clean cut and quaintly human, and the incidents of his story smack of the soil. Why he has chosen to make the artist from the city a preposterous travesty of a normal being, or why the producer allows Howard M. Mitchell to portray "Romantic Rudolf" as an egregious ass, is not explained by the exigencies of the plot. Aside from this defect, the work of every one concerned is meritorious. Arthur V. Johnson and Lottie Briscoe are particularly happy in the leading roles.

THE WITNESS (Lubin), Aug. 5.—Clay M. Greene, the author of this three-reel drama, has devised a plot which carries the story steadily forward. Several of the incidents are not very convincing, but vigor of action and unimpaired interest are not wanting. Lilie Leslie and Joseph Smiley head a competent cast.

THE SCARLET LADY (Selig), Aug. 5.—The theme and treatment of this three-reel drama have much in them which makes for success. Will M. Hough, the author, has treated a vital subject with frankness and sympathy. He has not been able to maintain his story at the same high level all through, but the producer has given it every advantage to be derived from careful mounting and intelligent stage direction. Vivian Reed, Anna Luther and Jean Pallette are the leaders in a well chosen cast.

JUNE FRIDAY (Edison), Aug. 6.—Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison on page 669, issue of July 24.

FOR HIGH STAKES (Kalem), Aug. 6.—Harry O. Hoyt has written a brisk, two-reel photoplay, relieved by flashes of genuine humor. The scenes on shipboard are specially welll done, and the entire drama has been carefully produced. Tom Moore, Marguerite Courtot and their associates form an excellent cast.

EYES THAT SEE NOT (Essanay), Aug. 7.—This three-reel comedy, by Joseph A. Roach, resembles a story by "The Duchess." The plot is not at all complicated, but the characters are well-bred and their actions indicate absolute sanity and a welcome sense of humor. The production furnishes a proper environment for persons of culture. Beverly Bane gives another of her charming impersonations of the best type of a thoroughbred American girl. Sidney Ainsworth, Richard Travers, Marian Skinner and Frankie Raymond are also correctly cast.

PAT HOGAN, DECEASED (Vitagraph), Aug. 7.—There is nothing grim in Pat Hogan's return from the dead. Pat's sense of humor and genius for starting two fights where there is only room for one, keeps the fun in this two-reel farce moving at a lively rate. Healthy, invigorating nonsense is the principal ingredient of Elizabeth R. Carpenter's photoplay. Able acting is insured by the presence of William Shea, Flora Finch, Hughie Mack, Kate Price and Templer Saxe in

Mutual Film Corporation.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 31, 1915 (Mutual), Aug. 5.—Some of the interesting items of this issue are the Canadian contingent leaving Winnipeg for the front; scenes during the M. P. Exhibitors' Convention at San Francisco; submarines for the British navy being launched at Quincy, Mass.; also some scenes in the theater of war.

FATHER LOVE (Komic), Aug. 8.—An amusing burlesque in which women are represented playing the roles usually allotted to men. Fay Tincher makes a comical chauffeur. Frank Darien, Chester Withey and Olga Gray are among the cast.

THE REVENGE OF THE STEEPLEJACK (Thanhouser), Aug. 8.—A one-reel number featuring Mignon Anderson, Harris Gordon and John Lehnberg. This has a real thrill in it and arouses the observer's interest greatly. The struggle on top of the chimney and fall of the villain are well pictured. A good number of the kind.

THE EXILE OF "BAR-K" RANCH (American), Aug. 9.—An appealing story has been filmed in this production in which Vivian Rich is featured. The story tells of the death of a young lover on the day when he has purchased his marriage license. The young woman in an unfortunate condition is turned out of her home by her father, but is cared for and afterward married by a friend of her dead lover.

THE LITTLE ORPHANS (Reliance), Aug. 9.—Two juveniles, Violet Wilky and Harold Gordon, are featured in this. The newsboy befriends a little waif. Later he is impressed into service by two robbers, whom he helps bring to justice. The plot is obvious but pleasing.

JIMMIE ON THE JOB (Beauty), Aug. 10.—A good yarn, well-pictured, featuring Webster Campbell as a young auto salesman. By helping a buncoed farmer to recover his stolen money the young salesman disposes of two autos, one to the farmer and the other to the girl. The scenes in this are all agreeable and pleasing, though the plot is not strong.

THE RIGHT TO LIVE (Majestic), Aug. 10.—A juvenile subject, featuring George Stone and Carmen DeRue as two street waifs. The tenement setting and the incidents have a sentimental appeal and the story itself is pleasing. It is a little stronger than the average juvenile.

COMRADES THREE (American), Aug. 11.—This is a pleasant picture with Winnifred Greenwood, Edward Coxen and other capable players in the cast. A young man of good family indulges a desire to try the life of a hobo, and while doing so falls in with a young woman reared in the underworld, who has run away from her captors. He takes her and a young boy of their party home to his mother.

THE NOON HOUR (Reliance), Aug. 11.—There is some good comedy in this story, which pictures the manner in which Aunt Sarah conducts her niece's wedding at the point of a gun. Billie West and O. MacDairmid play the lovers and Florence Elmore the aunt. The plot is not entirely convincing, but has a good element of humor in it.

GUSSIE, THE GRACEFUL LIFE GUARD (Falstaff), Aug. 13.—A particularly pleasing comedy number, with a fresh little plot. Gussie goes broke at the summer hotel and the girl gets him a job as life guard, although he can't swim. Her brother does the rescuing. This has snap to it and is unusually well photographed.

THE LITTLE HERO (Cub), Aug. 19.—George Ovey, the new Mutual comedian, appears in this picture. Milton Fahrney is at work on the new brand which is being made at the Horsley studios, and, according to the sample in hand, gives promise of good things. The "little hero" in an escapade is picked up by a young society woman as the exact type for a certain character in an amateur opera. The result proves to be very amusing.

Mutual Film Corporation, Specials.

THE CEREMONIAL TURQUOISE (Reliance), Aug. 7.—An interesting two-reel production featuring Irene Hunt. The story centers about a large turquoise belonging to a tribe of Indians, but which, through a sale of a turquoise mine passes into other hands. In order to recover the turquoise the Indian chief kills the white man, a jeweller, and new owner of the mine. Later the daughter of the murdered man, whose lover is arrested for the crime, journeys to the Pueblo country and discovers the real murderer of her father.

BIG JIM'S HEART (Majestic), Aug. 8.—This is an attractive western picture of two parts. Teddy Sampson plays a charming role. And with her in the cast is Charles Clary, as "Big Jim," and also Emmett J. Flynn, William A. Lowery, F. A. Turner and Eagle Eye. The story is of a misplaced crime, and is not original in any way. The love thread running through it gives opportunity for charming developments. The photography displayed in this picture is exceptionally good.

A RASCAL'S WOLFISH WAY (Keystone), Aug. 9.—A two-reel burlesque on the crook story. The chief crook attends a reception, where he steals a valuable necklace. An uproar results and there is one of the wildest chase scenes yet made in pictures. A railway train, a handcar, an airship and an automobile are impressed into service. Some wonderful effects are achieved and the number closes in scenes of great excitement. The chase scenes in this are remarkably well put on.

A MESSAGE THROUGH FLAMES (Thanhousr), Aug. 10.—Mignon Anderson appears in this number as a young blind girl. The scenes taken in the blind asylum arouse the interest and lend plausibility to the story. The girl's heroic work in saving the special train and the life of the young operator made a tense scene. A good railroad yarn, running about a reel and a half.

CUPID IN THE OLDEN TIME (Thanhouser), Aug. 10.—An exquisite half reel subject, with above. It interprets a pastoral poem in a delicate, pleasing manner. With above this makes a good offering.

WHEN HUNGRY HAMLET FLED (Thanhouser), Aug. 17.—A two-reel burlesque subject which proves that old situations may be made new with the right sort of treatment. This pictures a bunch of amateurs being drilled in a melodrama by a player of the old school, who insists upon being the hero. When the regular performance comes a jealous individual has arranged that the scenes shall all fall to pieces. He succeeds in crabbing the show and much laughter results. This should prove popular with the average audience.

THE GIRL FROM THE EAST (Broncho), Aug. 18.—A two-reel picture of average interest, in which a young woman on her way westward to live with her uncle on his ranch, misses her train a few stations from her destination, thereby turning the tide of affairs for herself and others. Among those affected by the circumstances is a young man of bad repute in the town to which she is going. The story holds a fair amount of interesting material.

THE LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER'S SON (Domino), Aug. 19.—A two-reel film of ordinary merits. The story is of a young woman who loved unwisely. After her marriage to the fickle artist she is forced to return to her home, and is about to die of grief after the birth of her child, when her former lover, the son of the lighthouse keeper, goes to bring the husband, and is drowned while returning. The husband is rescued and the girl is happy again, but the old lighthouse keeper mourns the loss of his son.

THE KNIGHT OF THE TRAILS (Kay Bee), Aug. 20.—This is a two-reel subject featuring William S. Hart. The story is not a big story, but is one that has an appeal. It is somewhat lacking in originality, being the story of a young woman who turns down her first love on discovering that he is a bandit, and in spite of the fact that he promised to reform, and is about to marry another to whom she has entrusted a sum of money of her own earnings, when the latter makes good his escape. The former bandit follows him and brings the money back. The work of the players, and especially of William S. Hart, is excellent.

North American Film Corporation.

DESPERATE CHANCES (American), Aug. 9.—Chapter XV of The Diamond from the Sky. This number contains a mixture of comedy and dramatic incidents. The pelican drops the diamond into a frog pond, where it still remains at the close. Luke and Blair tie Esther to an anvil in a blacksmith shop and make an unsuccessful effort to find the valuable document which she had hidden in the rocks after the wreck of the coach. John Powell closes the mine temporarily and goes to Santa Barbara, where Vivian follows him, still determined to win his affections. The number is characteristic throughout.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

RAGS (Famous Players). Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 1177, issue of Aug. 14.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

PATHE'S NEWS, NO. 61, 1915, July 31.—Among the interesting items of this issue are the French Moorish Zouaves in their trenches made of bags of sand piled high one upon the other; entering of horses at the 22d annual show at Long Branch, N. J.; the launching of a submarine for the British navy, at Quincy, Mass.; Queen Alexandria presenting the Royal Corps with four aeroplanes; and a great German shell that failed to explode on exhibition in Paris.

IN OLD ISLE-DE-FRANCE (Photocolor), Aug. 9.—A beautiful colored scenic covering principally that portion of the country surrounding Paris which marks the line where the German advance on the city was checked.

SOAKING THE CLOTHES (Phunphilms), Aug. 9.—An amusing comedy in which a suit of clothes pawned with a roll of bills pinned into the lining makes a great deal of trouble. The story deals with the movements of three harum-scarum young men, and a couple of young ladies of expensive tastes.

AMATEUR NIGHT (Starlight), Aug. 14.—This is rather an amusing Aubrey and Kendig comedy in which the two comedians as a last resort try their luck in the prize fight ring. Some of the business of the picture is very funny.

COLONEL HEEZA LIAR, WAR DOG (Pathe), Aug. 16.—This half reel of film consists of a number of the Colonel's adventures as per Cartoonist Bray, and is on the same reel with "Intimate Study of Birds," No. 5.

INTIMATE STUDY OF BIRDS, NO. 5 (Pathe), Aug. 16.—This number of the series shows the linnet feeding her young, and other interesting varieties and stages of bird life.

THE SKY IS THE LIMIT (Starlight), Aug. 21.—A film in which Heinie and Louie inherit a fortune. Not knowing what to do with it, they proceed to give it away as fast as they can. As a farce comedy it has fairly good qualities of entertainment.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Specials.

ROMANCE OF ELAINE, Episode 32 (Pathe), Aug. 2.—Under the title of "The Searchlight Gun," this episode of the series waxes interesting. Elaine finds a bomb that is to be used by the Del Mar party in undermining the harbor. In the pursuit she forgets to take it from her automobile when the machine suddenly comes to a stop through contact with a bullet from one of the enemy's guns. In an underground passage she shoots with a searchlight gun presented to her by Prof. Arnold, both of Del Mar's agents, thereby affecting her own and Jamieson's escape

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 178 (Universal), Aug. 4.—A very entertaining and diversified number, showing summer sports, the Liberty Bell at San Francisco, scenes connected with the Becker case, Hy. Mayer drawings, etc.

IN THE GRASP OF THE LAW (Laemmle), Aug. 15.—This number, written and produced by H. C. Myers, features Olive Fuller Golden, M. K. Wilson and Lydia Yeamans Titus. The story is a conventional seacoast yarn, with opium smuggling and a mixed love affair as features. The seacoast setting is picturesque; the story is an average one.

LOVE ON AN EMPTY STOMACH (L-Ko), Aug. 15.—Hank Mann and his hobo partner visit the park. They meet another man's girl and some knockabout scenes occur. No particular plot, but fairly amusing as to action.

TONY, THE WOP (Nestor), Aug. 16.—A laughable one-reel comedy, in which a baby and the Italian's bread-winning monk are the actors of the mistaken identity motive. Lively playing by Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons, Victoria Forde and the rest of the cast, insures the success of the film.

THE COUNTRY GIRL (Imp), Aug. 17.—An interesting one-reel picture featuring Frances Nelson. The production has been developed in an attractive manner, and contains a good moral lesson. The film would be acceptable to any audience.

QUITS (Rex), Aug. 17.—A one-reel drama without one wasted foot of film, this photoplay keeps a firm grasp on the attention from start to finish. The story is vital, the scenes picturesque, and the acting of Lon Cheney, Arthur Shirley and the rest all that could be desired.

HER WEDDING NIGHT (Joker), Aug. 18.—A comedy number in which a bride and groom have a series of comic mishaps with a burglar and several sheets of sticky flypaper. The reel is fairly amusing. Fritzi Brunette has the title role.

ETHEL'S BURGLAR (Big U), Aug. 19.—Murdock MacQuarrie and Margery Beardsley play the leading roles in this sentimental comedy. Although built on the well-known burglar motive, the author has given the plot a new twist, and written an average good photoplay.

THE LITTLE BLONDE IN BLACK (Laemmle), Aug. 19.—A neat turn to the plot gives this one-reel comedy the advantage of a surprise finish. The story deals with a stolen necklace and a lady detective from Scotland Yard. Robert Leonard has produced it deftly. Ella Hall and Mr. Leonard play the principal parts more than acceptably.

THE DREAD SOCIETY OF THE SACRED SAUSAGE (Powers), Aug. 19.—No. 7 of the "Lady Baffles and Detective Duck" series. A characteristic number, dealing with the adventures of a Chinese Prince. The scenes are nonsensical and quite amusing, though there is not a great deal of plot in this instalment. Trick photography is employed to get effects in several instances.

KIDS AND CORSETS (Nestor), Aug. 20.—A one-reel comedy in which Billie Rhodes, Lea Moran, Jane Waller and Jack Dillon have the leading roles. The articles mentioned in the title manage to stir up two large-sized family rows. The fun is frequent and of good quality.

THE TAMING OF MARY (Victor), Aug. 20.—An amusing and well-made one-reel picture featuring Mary Fuller. The production has originality and will be found to be acceptable to any audience. Mary is finally brought to her senses through a ruse worked by her father and lover on board ship, when at fire drill the alarm is conveyed to Mary and one of her flames in so realistic a manner that the man runs away and Mary is forced to find refuge in the arms of her fiance.

A DOUBLE DEAL IN PORK (Powers), Aug. 21.—A comedy number, written by Ruth Ann Baldwin. Tom refuses to marry the daughter of a pork packer in spite of his mother's desires. Later he meets her at the beach and he and his mother marry the girl and her father. The photography is good and the offering quite pleasing.

Universal Film Mfg. Company, Specials.

JUDY FORGOT (Broadway-Universal Feature), Aug. 9.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 1176, issue of August 14.

REFUGE (Victor), Aug. 11.—A two-reel Western number of a rather conventional type, yet at the same time telling a story of considerable appeal. A white child, impersonated by Baby Early, is the sole survivor of an Indian massacre and is discovered by a young Indian lad living at a nearby mission. The girl grows up and is beloved by the Indian boy. But she is lured away by a Mexican, who abuses her. She then returns to the mission and her Indian lover. Elsie Albert plays the girl after she has grown up. The production is one of fair strength.

MOUNTAIN JUSTICE (Rex), Aug. 15.—A two-reel number, written by Julius Furthman, with Lon Cheney, Arthur Shirley, Elsie Jane Wilson and Grace Thompson in the cast. The plot is somewhat conventional, dealing with the running of an illicit still, but it is given a strong handling and contains much that is new and interesting. It concerns a cruel mountaineer who abuses his wife. His partner punishes him and gives him over to justice. The characterizations are good and the acting better than usual in this type of story.

JUST JIM (Broadway-Universal Features), Aug. 16.—A four-reel offering of considerable strength, written and produced by O. A. C. Lund. The story of a released convict who promises a dying woman to deliver some valuable papers and jewels to her nameless child in the West. Jim is true to his trust, and, though pursued by a detective and the rascally nephew, succeeds in bringing the girl to happiness. The accidental fall of the coach in the storm was put on with wonderful realism. The story is well constructed and holds the interest in spite of its familiarity of theme. Harry D. Carey and Jean Taylor play the leads acceptably.

A FIERY INTRODUCTION (Gold Seal), Aug. 17.—This two-reel comedy deals largely with theatrical life, and illustrates the humorous side of a fire in an apartment building. The author has been generous with his supply of characters and incidents, and shown considerable skill in creating laughs. Cleo Madison, S. J. Bingham, Ray Hanford and Arthur Moon meet all the demands of their respective roles.

LORD BARRINGTON'S ESTATE (Victor), Aug. 18.—This is an excellent three-reel production made by Wm. Dowlan, who also plays the male lead opposite Violet MacMillan. The only serious fault that might be found with the picture is that some of the comedy has the effect of having been forced in. For instance the comic importance given to the attorney is at first somewhat misleading.

THE SUBSTITUTE WIDOW (Imp), Aug. 20.—A two-reel crook play, this dramatic offering manages to come as close to being original as can reasonably be expected. The plot is well articulated. The human interest around the young girl whose poverty forces her into the society of crooks, is another important factor in the play's success. Frances Nelson acts the part with intelligence and personal charm.

THE GOPHER (Bison), Aug. 21.—The scenario of this two-reel production was written by Harvey Gates, and makes a fairly interesting picture. The Gopher is a young man who falls into ill-luck through the machinations of a couple of gangsters. He goes west and lives underground. Afterward these same two men locate near him and become high officials of the town. Through the peculiar situation of his home he is able to take note of the highway robberies that are almost daily being committed by them, and in the end he brings them to justice as they are robbing the stage coach in which his wife is being conveyed.

World Film Corporation.

THE STOLEN VOICE.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 1176, issue of August 14.

Miscellaneous.

THE BATTLE OF PRZEMYSL (Amer. Corres. Film Co.), August.—Reviewed by Lynde Denig on page 1175, issue of Aug. 14.

AMERICAN GAME TRAILS (F. M. Buckland), August.—Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush on page 1176, issue of Aug. 14.

Arthur James Goes to Metro

Merritt Crawford Also Resigns Editorship of Reel Life to Accompany His Chief.

THE Metro Pictures Corporation, which has repeatedly stirred the film industry with a series of star conquests and big picture offerings during the past three months, announced Tuesday that it had completed negotiations for and had secured Arthur James as head of its publicity, advertising and scenario departments. Mr. James at the same time anounced his resignation from the Mutual Film Corporation, where he has directed the publicity and publication departments, which included Reel Life, The Mutual Girl Weekly and The Film. Mr. James for the Mutual set a new high-water mark in general publicity with a record of more than 500,000 columns of newspaper space. He directed an organization of twenty-two persons and dealt direct each week with 2300 newspapers throughout the United States, Canada and Europe. His was the largest publicity group in the film industry. Associated with him have been his brother, Henry James, as business and advertising manager of Reel Life, The Mutual Girl Weekly and The Film, Merritt Crawford as editor of Reel Life, and a staff recruited from the newspaper and magazine field.

Arthur James.

Mr. Crawford has resigned the editorship of Reel Life to accompany Mr. James to his new field, and will be actively engaged in the several departments his chief will direct. Mr. Crawford is a man of wide experience in newspaper and magazine work, and was associated with Mr. James prior to his entry into the motion picture field, when the latter was Sunday editor of the Morning Telegraph. Mr. Crawford was managing editor of the Motion Picture News before he became editor of Reel Life.

Mr. James had already organized the scenario department with Captain Leslie T. Peacocke and George D. Proctor as film dramatists, and Edfrid A. Bingham, formerly dramatic critic of the New York Evening Mail and later managing editor of the Paris edition of the New York Herald, as chief reader. A suite has been set aside for the scenario department at the Rolfe Studios, 3 West Sixty-first street, one of the manufacturing companies contributing feature pictures to the Metro program.

Merritt Crawford.

The Metro, which has grown rapidly in size and importance in the feature industry, has newer and still greater plans for the immediate future, and President Rowland is gathering about him men of successful experience for the carrying out of his big program.

Mr. James is succeeded at the Mutual by Terence Ramsay, a Chicago newspaper man. Mr. James will have his headquarters at the Metro offices in the Heidelburg building at Forty-second street and Broadway.

Selig About to Release Comedy Serial

"The Chronicles of Bloom Center," Treating of Rural American Life, Will Be Issued Bi-weekly.

It has been said that there is nothing new under the sun, particularly in pictureplay series. Since the time when Colonel William N. Selig first inaugurated the pictureplay serial idea with "The Adventures of Kathlyn," the motion picture market has witnessed a deluge of "perils," "adventures," "episodes," "chapters," etc. The "Adventures of Kathlyn" set the pace, and there has been little deviation from the original plan since the advent of that most successful serial.

So it has remained for Colonel Selig to introduce yet another new idea in filmland. It is not a "serial" this time, but a series of comedies of a dozen two-reel rural subjects. Each comedy contains virtually the same cast of characters, and each comedy is complete in itself, possessing an easily recognized plot. The same characters disport themselves in every one of the series of comedies, thus cultivating and sustaining continued interest in real American people.

The rural characters have been drawn true to life, and those who have read the scenarios pronounce the idea the best having to do with real American life since the time of Charles Hoyt. There are no "blood and thunder" or "falling-off-of-cliffs" situations in this forthcoming series, for the comedies under the unique name of "The Chronicles of Bloom Center" deal with ruralites of true Yankee persuasion, people you have seen, people you know; and the stories of their trials and triumphs, frills and foibles are not overdrawn, and yet they are interesting, highly entertaining and at times appealing.

"The Chronicles of Bloom Center," to be instituted one every two weeks for six months, starting in the near future, are crowded with true humor. There is no "slap-stick comedy" of the near laugh brand, no vulgarity, but logically humorous situations guaranteed to incite unaffected laughter. Like the example set in "The Adventures of Kathlyn," this new series is expected to blaze the trail.

Colonel Selig in a recent interview asserted: "There is a sad dearth of true comedy both on the stage and in motion pictures. The people are tiring of the 'slap-stick' near humor with monotonous chases, allegedly funny falls, and unfortunate paper-hangers, etc. We have worked for over a year in the endeavor to provide a series of comedies which will carry situations logically humorous. We think that we have succeeded in our efforts and we are sure 'The Chronicles of Bloom Center' will be cordially received by exhibitors. These comedies will take us all back to our boyhood days. There is the country fair, the country circus, the 'Old Home Week,' the time when spiritualistic seances were all the rage in the rural communities, and other convincing and yet funny plots of true American atmosphere.

"I thought so well of 'The Chronicles of Bloom Center' that I ordered a complete village erected at Los Angeles. It was complete even to the town pump. There is the general store and post office, 'Melodeon Hall,' the smithy, the church, the volunteer fire department and other rural essentials. We venture the prediction that 'Bloom Center' the name of this village, will become dear to the hearts of pictureplay lovers and most popular with exhibitors before many days."

"The Chronicles of Bloom Center" is all about the 'home folks.' It will recall the nearly-forgotten days of youth to some; and it will vividly bring back the best of days—the days back home—to others. Every one of these multiple-reel comedies to be released under the general title 'The Chronicles of Bloom Center' are real-for-sure comedies. Each plot contains the necessary punch and swing and laugh, and, best of all, there is only good nature and cleanliness to be found in them."

Postmaster Pash, Constable Plum, Phil Pickle, Mrs. Plum, the Ladies' Art Embroidery Club, and other characters and organizations peculiar to rural America will appear in "The Chronicles of Bloom Center." The home talent theatricals, quilting bees and the general congregation of the villagers at the "station," when the "three-thirty" comes in, are all faithfully set forth by an all-star cast of character actors and actresses especially engaged by the Selig Company for the series. Marshall Neilan was the director in charge of the production.

It is expected that "The Chronicles of Bloom Center" will be released in the near future and the Selig Company is preparing for special exploitation, believing that the "Chronicles" will fill a long felt want on the part of motion picture exhibitors.

OWEN MOORE WITH GRIFFITH.

Owen Moore, who has been playing in Sennett comedies, it is announced has been secured by D. W. Griffith to play in forthcoming Fine Arts Films productions.

Standard Holds First Weekly Meeting

At Opening Session Committee Selects Program for Initial Showing Comprising Dramas, Comedies and Weekly.

MORE than six weeks ahead with their releases, the Combined Photoplay Producers, Inc., of which L. G. B. Erb, J. A. Golden and H. M. Goetz are the leading spirits, held their first weekly exhibition of Standard Program pictures in New York for the benefit of the committee empowered to select the productions that will make up the weekly program. This committee is composed of representatives of both the producing group and the Standard Photoplay Distributors, Inc., who look out for the interests of the exchanges.

When the committee has seen enough subjects to allow for the selection of a full week's program of worthy subjects, they are immediately scheduled for release and full reports rendered to the producing companies and the distributors.

At the first meeting of the committee of selection, the officials of both the Combined Photoplay Producers Inc., and the Standard Photoplay Distributors Inc., were all present with the exception of Al. Lichtman of the latter company, who was on his way east from San Francisco. They were all enthusiastic about the high quality of the pictures examined and the simple manner in which their scheme of selection worked out. The following productions were scheduled for the first week's releases: "Man and The Law," two-part Ideal drama: "The Vivisectionist," two-part Empress drama; "The Black Statue," single-reel Moonstone comedy; "The Law of Nature," two-part Pyramid drama; "At Twelve o'Clock," two-part Rainbow drama; "Trilby," single-reel Superba comedy, and the new Standard Review, a weekly magazine in one reel of pictures.

DATES SET FOR LASKY RELEASES.

Definite release dates of the Lasky Feature Play Company's productions through the Paramount Pictures Corporation during September, October and November have been announced. They are as follows:

Thursday, September 9, Charlotte Walker in "Out of Darkness"; Monday, September 13, Blanche Sweet in "The Case of Becky"; Monday, September, 27, Lou-Tellegen in "The Explorer"; Thursday, October 14, Donald Brian in "The Voice in the Fog"; Thursday, October 21, Laura Hope Crewes in "Blackbirds"; Monday, October 25, all-star cast in "The Chorus Lady"; Monday, November 1, Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen"; Thursday, November 11, Blanche Sweet in "The Cheat," and Monday, November 22, Victor Moore in "Chimmie Fadden Out West."

VITAGRAPH TO ESTABLISH SCIENTIFIC AND FIRST AID DEPARTMENTS.

In order to register in a technically correct manner the scientific and surgical work so essential to the realism of many pictures that show scenes requiring the aid of a physician, the Vitagraph Company has decided to establish a scientific department. It has engaged Professor Sig Stark to take charge. Not alone will Professor Stark supervise the scientific and surgical work in pictures, but he has been commissioned to establish a first aid department and will have a room which will be perfectly outfitted for first aid and operating surgery. As Professor Stark is not a practicing M. D., an attending surgeon will be called in, in case of necessity, and will be able immediately to administer necessary aid.

This will give the working force of the Vitagraph plant a new confidence, should any of them be unfortunate enough to meet with an accident, and will add materially to the efficiency of those who from necessity are compelled to subject themselves to danger. A large room has been given to Professor Stark, which will be lined with white tile and where every surgical instrument and appliance known to modern science will be kept on hand.

CHANGE IN AMERICAN'S RELEASE DATES.

A radical change has been made in the releasing schedule of the American Film Company, Inc., the output of which is distributed throughout the United States by the Mutual Film Corporation. Hereafter Flying A and dramas and American Beauty films will be released on Monday, Tuesday, Friday and Saturday. This announcement covers all releases on and after August 23, irrespective of release dates named in advertising copy. The decision to release two Beauty films instead of one each week and other developments made necessary these changes.

The American also announces the release, on Thursday, September 2, of a four-reel Mutual Masterpicture, entitled "Infatuation."

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week at the New York Motion Picture Houses.

Vitagraph Theater Bill.

William Addison Lathrop is the author of "The Tigress," the feature picture at the Vitagraph theater this week. The story tells of a woman, ostensibly one of the leaders of society, but who, in reality, is the guidng spirit of a band of crooks. "The Tigress" is a melodrama pure and simple, with the usual secret panels, underground passageways, gunplay, dictagraphs, and employing modern scientific detective methods characteristic of such stories, but produced with unusual care as to detail and continuity of dramatic action. The production was made by Lorimer Johnston, with a cast including Julia Swayne Gordon, Zena Keefe, Garry McGarry, Leo Delaney, Charles Wellesley, and George Stevens.

The Fifteenth Chapter of "The Goddess," brings this photoplay in chapters to a close. Other subjects on the program are Maurice Costello and Leah Baird in a one-part comedy drama, "The Romance of a Handkerchief," in which a handkerchief plays tricks on a married couple; Harry Morey and associate players present "The Good in the Worst of Us," a dramatic screen story in which a policeman, by shooting first, is the means of clearing a wife's name; "A City Rube," an amusing story of a city boy in the country, by Western Vitagraph Players, and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in a laughing comedy, "Their Night Out," in which a listless husband and wife sign an agreement to spend a night out each week with sporty friends, but fail of their agreement at the first trial, complete the program.

Fannie Ward at the Strand.

Fannie Ward, the comedienne, is at the Strand theater this week in "The Marriage of Kitty," by Francis de Croisset and Fred de Gresac. Kitty is a young American girl, suddenly thrown on her own resources. She seeks advice from a lawyer friend, who strikes upon the idea that Kitty would fit admirably into a scheme he is making by which Lord Reginald Belsize, a young English peer, may legally claim a fortune left by a wealthy uncle, who provided that Reginald must marry within a year of his death, but must not marry an actress. The production was made at the Lasky studios at Holywood, Cal., under the direction of George Melford. Miss Ward, who has been a star on the legitimate stage for over ten years, is recognized in this country and in England as a clever actress in light comedy. In the role of Kitty she has every opportunity to display her charming personality and histrionic ability, her beauty and attractiveness, adding materially to her success as a photoplay star. Miss Ward has the assistance of a capable company, including Miss Cleo Ridgeley, Mrs. Lewis McCord, Richard Morris, Jack Dean and Tom Forman. A lot of the latest European war pictures are shown in the Strand Topical Review, as well as the latest news pictures from this country and abroad. A new series of travel and scientific studies are also presented. Lieutenant Percy Richards, bass baritone, and Miss Grace Hoffman, soprano, are the vocal soloists.

Elsie Janis at the Broadway.

Elsie Janis is appearing this week at the Broadway theater as the star of a clever photoplay, "Nearly a Lady." The picture was produced by the Bosworth Company, and is a bright and amusing comedy. Other numbers are the Broadway Animated News, South American Travel Pictures, and one-reel comedies.

ROY McCARDELL VISITS NEW YORK.

Roy L. McCardell, author of "The Diamond From the Sky," the North American Film Corporation's mammoth picturized romantic novel, is in New York on a business trip. McCardell during his stay, however, will find plenty of time to get around town and say howd'ye to his host of friends before returning to Santa Barbara.

McCardell said that his family has grown so fond of the climate of Southern California that he doubted if he could ever induce them to return East. "It's a beautiful country, indeed," said McCardell, "but," he added, "New York is a mighty fine place at that."

RIFKIN TO HANDLE PROGRAM.

Herman Rifkin, general manager of the Eastern Feature Film Company, Inc., with offices at 57-59 Church street, Boston, is contemplating handling a regular service program in addition to conducting his prosperous state rights business. It is reported that soon he will be ready to make a definite announcement of his program plans.

British Notes.

WOE to the middleman! The infection of war has brought about a bigger and more formidable menace to his existence. Yesterday the Pathe Company, undeterred by the undeniable failure of its last attempt, sounded the first trumpet blast of a new campaign to oust the film renter. The Messrs Pathe, as pioneers and instigators of the movement, constitute the vanguard, but upon pain of I know not what clave, I for the moment give the names of the equally important organizations, not necessarily European, who will fall alongside as the allied forces of the great French firm. So much for the attacking party, but unless we have an immediate compromise of some sort a defensive army of considerable strength and power will take the field at any moment to vindicate and support the individual renter. These forces will also be augmented with extensive influences well out of the immediate sphere of activities.

Indeed, the whole film world may become involved and divided from producer to exhibitor alike into two definite camps, those for and those against the renter. Briefly, the Pathe propaganda is to cease selling films to the different renters and exhibitors, but to hire them instead for a stipulated period of only four months. The cost of this service to the largest renting house in the Kingdom or to the smallest exhibitor will be alike, viz: Twopence-halfpenny (5 cents) per lineal foot, irrespective of the length or quality of the subject. Big serials and special productions upon which author's royalties have to be paid are exempt from this arrangement and will be disposed of through the ordinary channels. Colored films will be upon non-inflammable stock and will be charged a halfpenny more per foot than monochrome films. But in all circumstances the essence of the drastic new arrangement is the limitation upon the career of every film. At the expiration of four months films must be returned to the makers, who, I have every reason to believe, will ship them away to the tropics or some market where kinema competition is not so keen as to demand the uninterrupted exhibition of brand new stock. Pathe Freres in its initial declaration of the scheme describe it as a selling arrangement through which they cease to be hirers. This is a debatable point. An article to be sold must be disposed of absolutely. One that is disposed of for a specified time only and has to be returned is obviously hired. Thus despite the firm's proclamation that it is to cease hiring films, by virtue of the foregoing system it becomes larger hirers than hitherto. From a strictly commercial point of view one reason advanced in justification of the new move on the kinematographic chessboard, that it will enable the makers to withdraw their films long before they are allowed to degenerate into a condition to discredit their trademark, sounds an excellent one. The film market does occasionally suffer from a superfluity of worn pictures. Yet in face of this, the idea is a kick for the renter, who, while being assured that Messrs. Pathe is to cease renting, is confronted with a counter-proposal that will strongly appeal to small circuits of theaters to hire or buy (the terms in this case are identical) direct from the makers. Nothing as yet is said of the responsibilities incurred by renter or exhibitor in default of the return of the films within the specified period; say, for instance, through fire or loss in transit. A renter taking films under this arrangement and sub-renting them to an exhibitor will doubtless be legally held to account for their safety, although they may be quite out of his own control. Such is the new Pathe policy which came into being August I.

* * *

Among the censorship agitators, "pro and con," too, the fat is very much in the fire. This situation, however, unlike the foregoing, has not been precipitated without a moment's notice. It comes as the only rational evolution of a "long winter of discontent" on the part of many exhibitors and a few producers. The official attitude of the Exhibitors' Association towards the British Board of Film Censors has by no means improved its solidity, and now that "Hypocrites" (Bosworth's) accompanied into the judgment chamber with clerical laudations, has been thrown out absolutely the position is regarded as critical. If the censor holds out in his decision it would not be a surprise to see him ultimately flouted. Coming from a firm of certain eminence in the industry such a precedent would be exceedingly dangerous to the standing and prestige of the Censorship Board. Meanwhile its promoters are inviting prominent people of London to view the film privately and give an expression of opinion upon its suitability for public presentation. So far the consensus of these criticisms are overwhelmingly in favor of its exhibition. Possibly this may induce the administrator of the unwritten film law to reconsider his decision.

* * *

A. F. Wagner left this country a few days ago for New York. Mr. Wagner is manager of the Edison interests on this side and is visiting headquarters presumably to explain what the company's fine new offices are capable of handling. He expects to be away about two months.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

Herbert Brenon Going to Jamaica.

With Annette Kellermann and William E. Shay He Will Try to Surpass "Neptune's Daughter."

WHEN Herbert Brenon sails away to Jamaica on Wednesday, August 18, he will be accompanied by the largest motion picture organization ever sent from this country. He will be gone three months and is expected by William Fox to bring back one of the greatest screen productions in the history of filmdom. To do this he has carte blanche as to the expenditure of time and money and as to the development of the story, which is an emanation from Mr. Brenon's own fertile brain.

In addition to the principals in the company there will be hundreds of supernumeraries, the costumes for all of which will be specially designed and made for this production. It will be necessary to build a city on land and another under water for this superlative fantasy, a beautiful conception of re incarnation, involving myriad fairies, elves, witches, gnomes, sprites and mermaids. The wonders of the forest and of the depths of the sea will alike be shown naturally and artistically.

It goes almost without saying the star for such a fairy tale of beauty and grace will be Miss Annette Kellermann, whose success in Mr. Brenon's great submarine achievement, "Neptune's Daughter," will not be forgotten by the many who were fortunate enough to see it. The male lead will be played by William E. Shay, who played opposite Miss Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter."

An imposing array of talent aside from the players will accompany Mr. Brenon. While working in Jamaica and the neighboring islands on his big production, Mr. Brenon will also write and supervise the production of three other features, the actual staging of which will be in the capable hands of Edward Morrissy, who has been so successful in producing one and two-reel pictures that Mr. Brenon has great faith in his future as a director of features. The technical director will be George Fitch. J. Allen Turner will be the technical expert. Many carpenters, stone masons, scenic artists, etc., will assist. James McKay will act in his usual capacity of general "right-hand man" to the director. Mrs. Irene Lee, the wordrobe mistress, will take with her a corps of seamstresses and a large portion of the steamer's hold will be occupied by her sewing machines. Mr. Brenon's orchestra of a leader and seven pieces will be important members of the party, as, of course, will be the five photographers, headed by Phil Rosen and H. E. Butler. Frederick Church will be business manager.

Keystone Film Company Vindicated.

Moneys Due to Miss Marie Dressler Tied Up by Plaintiff's Judgment Creditors.

THE attorneys for the Keystone Film Company, Adam Kessel, Jr., and Alco Film Corporation, in commenting upon the decision of Justice Page, briefly reported in last week's issue, declare that Miss Marie Dressler, who appeared as the plaintiff in these actions, failed in all of them. The interlocutory decree ordering an accounting does not, according to the attorneys for the defendants, give the plaintiff any remedy or relief which the defendants have not at all times been willing to accord to her. The attorneys for the defendants say that Miss Dressler has been repeatedly examined in proceedings supplementary to execution and the attorneys for the judgment creditors in such proceedings have served orders on the Keystone Film Company and the other defendants warning them not to pay any moneys to Miss Dressler until final adjudication of the supplementary proceedings. The defendants, it is declared, now have all of the net proceeds of the Dressler picture deposited in a separate account awaiting the final order of the court.

PLAUT PRODUCING NEW FEATURE.

I. S. Plaut, under the title of the I. S. P. Company, has disposed of nearly all territory on his latest production "Was He a Coward." Mr. Plaut now plans to produce another big feature under the I. S. P. banner, the title of which will be announced later. This organization handles many feature films of foreign make, some of which are being disposed of at a very low figure.

Reviews of Current Productions

Universal Scores With "Jewel"

Five-Part Broadway Universal Features Subject, Produced by Lois Weber, Has Deep Pathos and Delightful Humor.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN the production of "Jewel," a five-part Broadway Universal Feature, the Universal Company has scored a decided hit. The subject will be released on Aug. 30. "Jewel" is a splendid example of what may be accomplished by woman both in a creative and an executive capacity. The book is by Clara Louise Burnham. The script is by Lois Weber, and there is good reason to believe she also produced it. The telling of the story shows the touch all the way of a feminine hand—in the treatment of the little girl and her doll there is displayed an insight into child life that could not be expected of a male person.

Scene from "Jewel" (Universal).

"Jewel" contains pathos in abundance, but it is leavened throughout with smiles that will alternate with the tears of the susceptible and the gulps of the thick-skinned. The story is frankly that of a child brought up in a home where Christian Science controls—in a home where under its teachings a husband and father has been transformed from a drunkard to a useful member of society—but the titular, denominational name does not appear. Undoubtedly the picture will immensely please followers of Christian Science, but it will move and stir those who go to make up the great picture-going public.

Ella Hall has the role of Jewel, the child in short dresses who visits the stern old grandfather whose heart was closed to all affection when it was closed to his erring sons and also to their families. Miss Hall looks the child as well as acts it, and it is unusual to find even a very young woman who can look the child of ten or twelve. She charms and her work has deep appeal. Rupert Julian is the grandfather, and a fine one he is. Lule Warrenton is the housekeeper, Mrs. Forbes, who in the end is won by the child, as is everyone else in the house. There was a miscasting in the selection of Hilda Hollis Sloman as the daughter-in-law and Miss Brownell as the second granddaughter, a pathetic figure. Their acting was excellent, but they seemed of even age.

There are unusually large interiors as well as picturesque outdoor scenes in the making of this well photographed subject. There is a literary flavor in the letters that pass from the absent mother to the child at the grandfather's home. The sub-titles, too, have been written by a hand that is trained.

"Jewel" is a rare story, a tale containing much goodness and little villainy. Its interest is steady, cumulative, and that interest is founded on small things which by the depth of human appeal become great. This may be illustrated by the statement that what seems to be the dramatic climax is the act of the softened grandfather leaning over the sick child and kissing her. The housekeeper putting the formerly abused doll at table with the family is another of the simple things, the little things, that bulk big, for it marks the capitulation of the "giantess" to the child. And these are but two of many situations of power.

We should hear much of "Jewel" in the weeks to come.

"The Barnstormers"

Broadway Favorites Picture with Myrtle Tannehill—Good Story with Clever Touches of Burlesque Makes Fine Offering by Kalem.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE Kalem Broadway Favorites offering, "The Barnstormers," is a four-reel picture amply satisfying, as a whole, with a good human story and some hearty, chest-satisfying laughs. We recommend it to the exhibitors, with marked pleasure. The basis of it is a pretty love story in which Myrtle Tannehill has the lead. The second character is a sort of David Harum, keeper of an oldfashioned shore hotel, and the father of the girl's lover. The elderly character is kept by William H. West free from anything that is unpleasant and is made quite satisfying. William Brunton plays his son, the juvenile lead opposite to Miss Tannehill, with freshness and good sense. Miss Tannehill has a role to her taste and is charming. The story isn't stereotyped at all and is just over drawn enough to furnish real burlesque comedy. The producer, James W. Horne, shows more familiarity with certain angles of life reflected in the picture than with others, but roughly speaking, with 90 per cent. of what he shows he is successful.

The son of Adam Green comes home from college to the rough-house hotel run by his father. He cherishes a picture of a girl. Disgusted with things, he gets the old man to take a vacation in the city and makes the ancient hotel an up-to-the minute marvel. This is not convincingly done—the contrasts are too sharp and the director did not take time; it would have been a story in itself. Now we have theatrical scenes in the city and meet the "characters." With the understudy, a pretty girl, old Adams gets acquainted and rails sentimentally in love. A good deal of theatrical life gets itself portrayed in these scenes.

Later the show comes to the home town where, in the renovated hotel, the leading lady goes off the handle and quits.

Without his son's knowing it, the old man becomes "angel." He won't let them tell the girl he is "putting up the long green." She finds it out in a very natural way and "upsets the apples." Now the villains try to rob the old man. Their telegram brings the son, who frees his father from the old barn where they have tied him up; the end is that the girl gives up the stage and comes home to be the son's wife. As for the "company," the three villains in it don't get fare back to the city, but they get aboard. When the conductor comes for the fares they are put off the train, bag and baggage, to foot it, while the good members, whose fare has been paid, wave to them as the train pulls away. It is a good offering; because it fulfills the requirements of a good and humanly natured pipe dream. It has besides characters that are excellent butts for our artistic sympathy and on the other hand, our artistic hatred.

Scene from "The Barnstormers" (Kalem).

"His Mysterious Profession"

An American Beauty Film with a Story That Counts and Comedy That Is Wholesome and Entertaining.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

MY old friend Archer MacMackin popped up unexpectedly the other day—or at least his work did—in "His Mysterious Profession," a single reel American "Beauty" film, for which I predict a cordial reception by all who view it.

The story is built around a baseball player, who is the idol of his home town because of his wonderful pitching and powerful drives when home runs are needed most. Tom Blake is his name. He is well satisfied with himself and is addicted to frequent cafes with fast companions, but is stirred by the advice of an old friend, who advises him to quit hotel life and "get a room in a good home with good grub," and "land the big league next season."

In this way Tom gets acquainted with pretty Cynthia Hodges, who lives with her two maiden aunts, as he becomes a boarder at her home. It turns out that the elderly ladies look on ball players as being actually "worse than traveling men," so Tom hides his calling from them and makes them believe he is a pipe organ salesman. Cynthia is partner of his secret, and the young people learn to love each other.

Tom leaves for a few days to pitch in a League game, and Cynthia's aunts, who have grown to think highly of the pipe organ salesman, go into his room to add to its tidiness. They are horrified when they find a pair of spiked shoes, and immediately conclude that their boarder is a porch climber, or something worse, and decide on the spot to request him to seek new quarters.

Cynthia's brother, Bob, contrives to save the situation by getting his aunts to accompany Cynthia and himself to the league game, in which Tom Blake is the star pitcher. Much to their surprise they discover Parson Duncan and Deacon Heffelfinger, of their church, in the bleachers, and become so enthused over their boarder's brilliant pitching and batting that they indulge in rooting with almost hysterical mania. Needless to say that Tom was not asked to find other quarters, or that he was given the heart and hand of Cynthia in marriage.

There are several good views of the league game, in which Webster Campbell, who plays the part of Tom Blake, is seen to fine advantage. A close-up view of the bleachers gives a most realistic scene, when Blake makes a home run. The aged spinster, the parson and the deacon, and Cynthia and brother Bob are all seen in a frenzy of enthusiasm.

Scene from "His Mysterious Profession" (American).

The characters in the cast are all well sustained, and the photography is fully up to the standard set by the "Beauty" brand. The release date is Aug. 24.

"Mrs. Plum's Pudding"

Entertaining Five-Reel Comedy-Drama, Released by Broadway Universal Features.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

MARIE TEMPEST, the well-known comedienne, appears in this pleasing production, supported by W. Grahame Browne. The excellent cast also includes Eddie Lyons, who produced the picture in collaboration with James Dayton, Harry Rattenberry, Gus Alexander, Violet MacMillan, Jean Hathaway and Lee Moran.

The story is notable for its vein of quiet humor, which occasionally brings forth audible mirth from the observers. It gives full value in the way of plot and has many elements of universal appeal. It is of the general type of such legitimate plays as "The Henrietta," "The Man From Home" and other comedy-drama successes. Marie Tempest makes an excellent appearance on the creen, portraying the character of the newly-rich widow in a way that requires small assistance in the way of explanatory subtitles. W. Grahame Browne makes the part of the fortune-hunting lord one of such great appeal that one is glad to see him win the widow in spite of his early plotting for her wealth. Eddie Lyons is pleasing in the part of the widow's son.

The story opens at the oil fields, where the observer gets a graphic view of the manner in which Mrs. Plum gains her wealth. After numerous failures to strike oil on her property, the house is accidentally blown up. This starts a genuine gusher to flowing, which nets her fully two million dollars. She and her son move to the city, where news of their wealth is spread broadcast in the newspapers.

Lord Burlington, now suffering from financial embarrassment, pays her attentions, after conspiring with a society woman, named Mrs. Van Zant, to help rope in Mrs. Plum. Numerous love stories develop. Mrs. Plum falls in love with the Lord, Eddie proposes unexpectedly to Mrs. Van Zant's daughter, and later one of the men from the oil district succumbs to the charms of Mrs. Van Zant herself. In the midst of this general love making villainy takes a back seat. Mrs Plum, as a test, allows Lord Burlington to believe she has lost her claim papers, but he finally stands by her and so all ends happily.

Scene from "Mrs. Plum's Pudding" (Universal).

The story is carefully constructed and the action good. Without rising to any great heights in either comedy or drama, it is at the same time genuinely entertaining and will no doubt be enjoyed by the average observer.

Winifred Kingston Joins Thanhouser.

With the addition of another reel a week to the output of the New Rochelle organization, Edwin Thanhouser has once more shot an arrow at the Broadway sky and brought down a star to add to his stock company. This time it is Winifred Kingston. She will be best remembered in America for her work in "The Servant in the House" and in the all-star production of Thais; also as the leading woman with William Hawtry and Cyril Scott.

Miss Kingston has been in this country only six years, but her triumphs in London won her quick favor with American managers. There she held forth in leading roles at the Scala theater for several seasons and it was about then that she created her sensation by her work in "Hypocrites" under Charles Frohman.

In the films her work is not new to picture lovers. Under the Paramount trade-mark she has played the leads in "Elixir of Youth," "Soldiers of Fortune," "Squaw Man," "Brewster's Millions," "Trail Divides," "Call of the North," "Capt. Courtesy," "Love Route."

Darwin Karr Joins Essanay.

Essanay has engaged another popular leading man, and one of the best known photoplay actors in the country—Darwin Karr. Mr. Karr has joined Essanay's Eastern company, headed by Joseph Byron Totten, to take leading parts. His first photoplay for Essanay is "Hearts and Roses," a fascinating three-act love romance in which he plays the leading character. Mr. Karr started his stage career with a small part in "The Missouri Girl," later taking the part of the heavy on the sudden departure of the regular villain. He later went into repertoire work for four seasons as leading man, and afterward appeared in stock.

His advent in motion pictures was in 1911 when he joined the Edison Company. He also was featured by the Solax Company and took leading parts with Vitagraph before joining the Essanay Company. He is especially proficient in military plays and in romantic dramas.

"East Lynne"

Biograph Brings Famous Play to the Screen—Other Good Productions Are "A Difference of Opinion" and "The Mystery of Henri Villard."

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THE Biograph Company may look forward with confidence to the substantial success of its three-part version of "East Lynne." Long before pictures came into vogue the play was advertised the country over and exhibitors need do little more than announce the title to insure patronage. Like "The Old Homestead" and "Way Down East," it is a venerable favorite of the American public.

Scene from "East Lynne" (Biograph).

Travers Vale made an artistic version of the famous play, with Louise Vale in the role of Lady Isabel, Franklin Ritchie as Carlyle, Alan Hale as Levinson and Hector V. Sarno, Gretchen Hartman, Edward Cecil, Laura Lavarnie and W. J. Butler interpreting other characters. "East Lynne" contains an involved plot, difficult to handle in photoplay form, and the scenario writer deserves credit for having made the story clear, in spite of its complexities and the many persons introduced.

The picture is similar to the play in aiming to arouse sympathy by appealing to the elementary emotions—the sorrow of a misunderstood wife, who but adds to her troubles by running away with a blackguard, and the love of a mother for her children. Miss Vale knows very well how to portray a tearful role, such as that of Lady Isabel. She overlooks none of the tragic possibilities and at times gives a thoroughly emotional performance. When the broken-hearted Lady Isabel, disguised as a governess, returns to the home of her husband to see her sick child, an audience most certainly will respond to the grief of the woman. It will respond yet more completely to the finely played scene in which the mother weeps over the youngster that dies in her arms.

Scene from "The Mystery of Henri Villard" (Biograph).

There are many other tense moments in this heart-interest melodrama, and practically without exception they are acted with feeling. Then the highly artistic quality of the production is not to be ignored. The locations, many of them representing an English estate, are beautiful in the extreme and perfectly photographed. "East Lynne" bids fair to be one of the most successful of the Biograph feature pictures.

A Comedy and a Drama.

In "A Difference of Opinion," a two-reel picture based on a Roy Norton story, Wray Physioc has produced a bright western comedy introducing an unusual situation in which a baby figures as the center of disturbance. The baby is the pet of the entire community and when it shows symptoms of illness the neighbors are quick to volunteer their services in finding a doctor. One brings a veterinary surgeon, another a dentist and, of course, they disagree as to the nature of the infant's complaint. That there is really nothing at all the matter with the patient is not discovered until well toward the close of the picture. Jack Drumier, Joseph McDermott, Herbert Barrington and Mary Maletesta are in the cast.

"The Mystery of Henri Villard" is a two-part drama, not a war drama, laid in the picturesque south of an earlier period. The story is fortunate in the suspense it maintains, for an audience is kept in doubt about the murder and how it was committed until the author chooses to present an explanation. The picture is replete with attractive scenes and the company, under the direction of George Morgan, is uniformly capable, with W. J. Butler giving a telling sketch of an aged negro. Isabel Rea appears very fetching in a becoming costume and the sister whose fiance proves to be a scoundrel, is pleasingly presented by Helen Bray.

The Game of Three

A Production from the Studio of the Sterling Camera and Film Company.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS is an improvement over the last effort of this company. No attempt at anything pretentious is made; the feature is just an interesting detective story not always bound by the laws of probability, but always thrilling, always exciting, and never standing still. It is but fair to add that the story is free from the slightest moral fault, but that on the contrary it points a strong enough lesson in morals.

Scene from "The Game of Three" (Sterling).

The theme centers around a diamond necklace, which is stolen by a bogus society lady directly from the neck of a genuine society queen. The adventuress has a willing but rather clumsy tool, who manages to get a lot of innocent people mixed up in the hunt for the stolen jewels. Detective O'Bryan, a most courtly looking gentleman, gets on the trail of the criminals who have stolen the necklace; and after being baffled and checked several times manages to suspect and arrest two perfectly innocent people. It turns out that the son of the detective who has a deplorable habit of betting on race horses (and losing, of course) was implicated in the robbery. Just as this wicked son is about to escape into an adjacent building by means of a ladder laid horizontally between the ballroom and the place of escape O'Bryan shoots at him, wounding him in the arm. The poor fellow succeeds in reaching the haunt of the thieves on the waterfront and discovers to his intense disgust that his confederate does not want to play fair with him. Indeed the confederate, after taking the gems from the wayward son, rudely ejects the latter from the premises. Just to show that he can't be trifled with in this unceremonious fashion, the wayward son hangs around and, peeking through the holes in the partition, sees the confederate secrete the jewels in an old cheap clock. Events now follow each other so swiftly and complications arise with such suddenness that the interest in the story if sustained at all becomes feverish. It ends quite properly with the innocent people being vindicated, the guilty parties being punished and the wayward son being restored to the good graces of his father. The photography was very good all the way through, and the acting was all right, too. Many exhibitors will find a feature of this kind quite acceptable to their patrons.

"The Puppet Crown"

Two Fine Feminine Stars and Carlyle Blackwell Featured in Very Pretty Lasky Feature.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

GRACE, beauty, daintiness characterize this picture. The scenes are laid in a mythical miniature kingdom, and the plot, simple and unpretentious, is reminiscent of "Old Heidelberg" and of "The Prisoner of Zenda." I cannot speak in terms high enough to record my appreciation of the superb settings in this picture. There is a beauty in these orchards and gardens and landscapes that is intoxicating but not filling.

Scene from "The Puppet Crown" (Lasky).

We bother very little about the plot which runs along so smoothly after we see the two women stars—Ina Claire and Cleo Ridgely. It's all like a fairy tale. Ina Claire is the royal princess whom her royal father had sent to America so she could forget the cares and dignities of her station and just be a girl among girls. She meets (most romantically, informally and beautifully) a young American and now you can pretty well guess the plot.

I candidly doubt whether there are any such graceful princesses as Ina Claire in the Almanac de Gotha. Her engaging personality, her uncommon skill as an actress and her dainty ingratiating manners charm every audience. Scarcely less praise is due to Cleo Ridgely, who is far less prominent in the action, but who fills her part with rare cleverness. Carlyle Blackwell makes a charming young American, though in the last few scenes he certainly overdoes things and comes close to the border of the ridiculous. Tom Forman had a thankless part of which he made the best possible.

"Romance of Elaine"

"The Life Chain" of Episode 9 Supplies Real Thrill When the Heroine Takes Her Life in Her Hands.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ANOTHER attempt to get Elaine out of the way is clearly outlined in this episode. The skill with which the plot has been handled just at this point of the concluding chapters of the remarkable serial is deserving of mention. One of the numerous agents of Del Mar, who is intent on mining America's harbors and bridges, and a feminine member of the agency, pretends to be a modiste, invites Elaine to view some of her exclusive models, and so lays the trap in which she is caught by Del Mar and conveyed to an isolated house in the country.

Scene from "The Romance of Elaine" (Pathe).

Professor Arnold, the mysterious, happens on the trail again, and by the firing of a shot transfers the attention of the guards from the house long enough to allow him to enter and release Elaine.

The thrill of the story is not yet, however. It comes a short time later when Elaine, jumping in a canoe to escape her pursuers, drifts helplessly through the rapids to the very edge of a high waterfall, where she is rescued by a human chain made by Jamieson, Professor Arnold and one other. This incident presents a daring feat on the part of all concerned, and gives Episode 9 of the "Romance of Elaine" a larger significance.

"Nearly a Lady"

A Feature Produced by the Bosworth Company in Which Elsie Janis Takes the Leading Part.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

WHILE this story runs on strictly conventional lines and along well-beaten paths, Elsie Janis is unconventional enough to lend a certain interest to the performance. The clever comedienne takes the part of a somewhat hoydenish young woman brought up in the ways of the West and charmingly ignorant of the effete civilization of the East. The visit of an English lord to her "diggings" affords the writer of the scenario an opportunity for many funny episodes and amusing contrasts. The girl is taken with the manly ways of the Englishman, who holds his own in the rough jests the cowboys try to play on him. Though engaged to a plain young American, the girl seems to prefer the British lord until she comes East and is disgusted by the general artificiality of life and by a liaison which she discovers the lord had been guilty of, a chorus girl being the other party to the aforesaid liaison. It almost seems as if the lord had cut his connection with the chorus divinity and was really fond of the good girl from the West, but the story wants us to regard the peccadillo of the British lord as a grave offence and, thus prepared, we are not much surprised to see the plain young American "put it all over" the British aristocrat.

Scene from "Nearly a Lady" (Bosworth).

Elsie Janis, needless to say, is full of life and indulges in all sorts of wild pranks, shocking everybody by her abruptly unconventional ways. She is given every opportunity to disport herself, even a swimming tank and an accident being provided for this purpose. Elsie does some good swimming, but she is a good deal more of a sylph in her long and sinuous proportions than other famous women swimmers who were dowered more generously by capricious nature. The support of the leading lady is good and there are some quite laughable situations. The general average is just about fair.

Ethel Clayton Leaves for Arizona.

Ethel Clayton, the Lubin leading lady, left last Saturday for Phoenix, Ariz., accompanied by her brother, Donald Clayton, and Edward Earle, the camera man, to join Romaine Fielding's company in the Grand Canyon, Ariz., where William Vaughn Moody's play, "The Great Divide," will be filmed.

Webster Campbell Auto Race Entrant.

Webster Campbell, famed as a daring driver of racing cars, gives a thrilling exhibition of dare-deviltry in "Cupid Takes a Taxi," an American Beauty released August 3. Campbell is entered in the annual auto meet to be held at Santa Barbara on Labor Day. His friends are wagering that he will finish within the money

"The Man From Oregon"

Five-Reel New York Motion Picture Feature by C. Gardner Sullivan, Directed by Thomas H. Ince.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CHIEFLY remarkable for the large number of admirable types and one tremendous ensemble, embracing a sweeping view of the Senate Chamber, "The Man From Oregon" is well constructed and offers an interesting variation of the political story so often told on the screen of the fascinating adventuress who tries to turn an important political personage from his manifest duty. The fascinating adventuress is a favorite role with young and pretty actresses—very nearly all they have to do is to look the part—for it affords them an opportunity to be perfectly devilish in gorgeous attire, and Miss Clara Williams does all that is expected of her. Even more, she treats us to an occasional glimpse of mental revelation. The honors, however, go to the men.

Scene from "The Man from Oregon" (N. Y. Motion Picture)

Howard Hickman has a face and manner almost typically American, and he responds to his opportunities with a comprehension of his role that is both clear and dignified. Handsome Herschel Mayall is so exquisitely groomed that his acting might well be so denominated. Quite as remarkable as these fine types are Dowling and others seen in the body of the Senate. Fanny Midgley, as mother to "Honest Jim Martin," the incorruptible young Senator from Oregon, introduces a new and sweet element to a rather tawdry old tale. She looks her part and plays it with such natural grace and charm that the new element of tenderness gives a subtle fragrance, that of old rose leaves, to the modernity of political atmosphere. Mr. Sullivan is to be congratulated for this artistic touch, the play's saving grace.

"Sold"

Pauline Frederick and Excellent Supporting Company Appear in Emotionally Forceful Famous Players Drama.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

EVEN for a Famous Players cast, and no company maintains a higher average, that selected by Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford for the photoplay interpretation of "Sold" is striking. In "The Eternal City" Pauline Frederick won immediate recognition as one of the most effective actresses thus far seen in pictures. She did not need the prestige of her stage reputation to make her a valuable asset to the screen. She is given a part demanding emotional sincerity, such as she found in "The Eternal City," and there are few, indeed, who can portray it with equal impressiveness. Miss Frederick photographs beautifully, and by nicely judged acting succeeds in conveying to an audience the moods of a character as they vary through a series of dramatic episodes. She draws the Helen of George Erastov's story as a woman of real depth of feeling and self-sacrificing character.

Scene from "Sold" (Famous Players).

For the rest, we find in this admirable cast, Thomas Holding, Julian L'Estrange, Lowell Sherman and Russell Bassett. It is a picture in which everything is presented with artistic harmony. The acting is kept consistently in the key of dignified drama; the story is carefully motivated as it works up to a climax, corresponding to the third-act climax of a stage play, and a sure sense of the fitness of things is manifest in the settings. The photoplay, presented in five reels, leaves the impression of a subject carefully prepared in each detail and directed by a man who knew precisely what effects he wished to gain.

"Sold" is based on the vicissitudes of a young artist who finds it difficult to express ideals in his paintings and at the same time find a market. Eventually he is forced to sell himself to a mercenary dealer, the terms of the contract calling for pictures adapted to the popular taste. Donald makes the sacrifice that he may be enabled to provide for his wife, but there is a break with the dealer over a sketch in the nude. Helen thinks to release her husband from his obligation by posing for another artist, a former admirer, who will pay an exorbitant price for sittings. She intends to give the money to the annoying art merchant; but Donald misunderstands her motives in going to the studio of his brother artist, and preceding a satisfactory explanation there is a thoroughly dramatic conflict, forcefully handled by Miss Frederick, Mr. Holding and Mr. L'Estrange.

"The Master Hand"

Melodramatic Story Is Presented in Pictures with Nat Goodwin As the Star—Released by World Film.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

PRODUCED by the Premo Feature Film Company, under the direction of Harley Knoles, this five-part picture is, in the main, a satisfactory adaptation of the play in which Nat Goodwin once starred on the stage. In the picture he continues to act the character of Mr. Bigelow, the master hand that rights injustices, whereas Carroll Fleming, the author of the original work, appears as Edward Pembroke. Florence Malone makes an attractive Jean, and Julia Stuart gives a capable performance of Mrs. Rallston, the woman who is committed to a sanitarium without cause. Theodore Babcock, the James Rallston of the photoplay, is inclined to overact and become unnecessarily melodramatic.

Scene from "The Master Hand" (World Film).

The author of the screen version of "The Master Hand" found it expedient to make several rather radical alterations in the story; but in so doing he did not sacrifice the essentials of the plot or lose the spirit of the original. It is melodrama pretty well removed from ordinary human relationships, but considered in this light the screen story should hold the interest of an audience even if it does not always convince. Rallston is painted as a villain without redeeming features. Because he wants complete control of his wife's fortune, he secures the co-operation of an unscrupulous nurse, also of a doctor whose assistance is easily purchased, and between them they succeed in having the woman placed in a sanitarium though in reality she is perfectly sane.

After a lapse of fifteen years Bigelow has reason to suspect

Rallston's motives, and eventually brings about the release of the imprisoned woman. The villain of the play is killed in an automobile accident and the fortunes of all the deserving characters are saved. The production offers a number of pleasing locations and the interior sets are richly furnished. A stock exchange scene and the fatal automobile wreck are well handled. Mr. Goodwin makes the best of the limited opportunities presented in the role of Mr. Bigelow.

"The Secret Orchard"

A Magnificent Lasky Production in Which Blanche Sweet Develops Great Powers.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS play adds new laurels to the record of the Lasky company. The theme is unusually strong, the situations are often tense and pathetic in the extreme, the acting is beyond all praise, the photography and the sheer beauty of the film worthy of the very best efforts of this ambitious company. Perhaps the dramatic sequence of the events in the story is not as sharp as it might be, but the characterizations are exceptionally fine and the portrayal of the chief character has, it seems to me, revealed new notes in the emotional register of Blanche Sweet. There is a tremendous, yes, a gripping lesson, in the play, but it grows out of the facts naturally and logically, and there is not a trace of pictorial sermonizing. The interest of the spectator is held taut from the first scene to the very last.

I have never seen a play either on stage or screen to open more forcefully and directly than "The Secret Orchard." We are at once and by the touches of a master hand led into the midst of things. A lovely but erring woman, superbly impersonated by Cleo Ridgely, who seems to gain in strength and skill with every new part, is the mother of a sweet little girl upon whom she lavishes the purer affections of her heart. Realizing that the child might be corrupted in the atmosphere which has become familiar to the mother, the latter takes her to a convent. In the convent the girl grows up to a charming girlhood. She is permitted to visit the family of a schoolmate and intoxicated with the spell of her short freedom she romps along the seashore and in the woods. A young French nobleman married to an American woman meets the girl. The latter is deceived by the man, who pretends to be single, and who we are given to understand wins the girl's affections by his promise to make her his wife.

And now fate moves in a strange way. The girl's mother dying in a hospital is visited by the wife of the betrayer. This wife is devoted to charitable works and she grants the request of Diane's mother to take care of the girl. Thus the betrayer and his victim are brought face to face in circumstances which would make it but too easy for the victim to wreak her vengeance upon the assassin of her virtue. She forbears, however, and is resolved to bury her shame until her new protector's brother, an officer of the American navy, comes to visit his sister. The officer falls deeply in love with the girl, who reciprocates his affections. She admits she loves him, but refuses to become his wife, declaring herself unworthy. The young man is puzzled, investigates and discovers the perfidy of his brother-in-law, with whom he fights a duel, resulting in the betrayer's death.

It will be seen that retribution for his wrong to the innocent girl is visited upon the head of the wrongdoer in most tragic fashion, while "lovely woman who stoops to folly" is not made a hopeless outcast. On the contrary we are encouraged to believe by the ending of the story tnat after the wound to the young girl's heart is healed and her soul purified she will become the wife of a good man who loves her sincerely.

"The House of a Thousand Candles"

Splendid Selig Five-Part Screen Version of Meredith Nicholson's Novel for the V-L-S-E Program, Made by Selig.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IN the first place Nicholson's story has lent itself well to screen adaptation, in the second place Gilson Willets has used keen judgment in constructing his scenario, and lastly T. N. Heffron, with a fine cast of players, has painted effectively the picture that has been outlined for him. If any one has failed in bringing the production to a state of perfection according to our present standard, it is the editor. His work, it must be added by way of conciliation, has on the whole been done well. In fact in the earlier stages of the picture our attention is attracted almost unconsciously to the skillful manner in which the cutting has been done; and it is with somewhat of a shock that we are brought face to face with technicalities when the villainous lawyer and chief executor of the estate of Glenarm aims a powerful blow with a heavy candlestick, at the head of the old butler. Just here a few inches of film too many have been left in, and the result is that the eye registers the allayed blow, and eliminates a portion of the realism from the scene a couple of shifts ahead, where the old man is seen striving to rise from the position in which the blow has placed him.

Apart from this and one or two minor flaws the production must be considered as one of the best. Harry Mestayer as Jack Glenarm gives a delightful rendition of the part. Playing opposite him is Grace Darmond, who is particularly charming as the little neighbor girl whose pretty romance with the heir to the "House of a Thousand Candles" is so cleverly arranged by the elder Glenarm. George Backus plays well the role of the old Squire Glenarm. John Charles as the lawyer does effective work, as do also Edgar Nelson as Jack Glenarm's chum, and Effinham Pinto as Don Jose. Others of the cast, and all worthy of mention did space permit, are Forrest Robinson, Mary Robson, Gladys Samms, and Emma Glenwood.

The secret of the story has been guarded well to the end. And to one who had not read the story the disclosure of the secret comes as a great surprise.

The attractive sets that have been utilized are also worthy of mention. The atmosphere of the story has been wonderfully well accomplished and maintained. And as a last word we must say that a large tribute is due the director for the beauty as well as the realism with which he has clothed the Selig screen version of Nicholson's fantastic story.

Scene from "The House of a Thousand Candles" (Selig).

HOWARD DAVIES IN ACCIDENT.

Howard Davies, who is following up his success in "The Rugmaker's Daughter" with a fine characterization in Maclyn Arbuckle's first subject for Pallas pictures, "The Reform Candidate," wrenched his left knee last week in a spirited scene with Mr. Arbuckle. The knee has been weak since Howard Davies' university days when he threw it out in England in a championship game of football between the elevens of Oxford and Cambridge. The injury kept Mr. Davies out for a week, but as Director Lloyd merely postponed his scenes till his return it worked no hardship upon the finished picture.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS HONORED BY SOLDIERS.

"The Kathlyn Williams Association" recently formed by the soldier boys of Schofield Barracks, Oahu, H. T., in honor of their favorite motion picture actress, has grown in membership to 849. The clubhouse occupied by the association was built entirely by Uncle Sam's soldiers. In the clubhouse proper only pictures of the Selig star actresss are permitted, according to official statement.

Honorary Members, Kathlyn Williams Association.

Miss Williams, recognizing the honor that has been accorded her, recently forwarded a number of autographed photographs to Schofield Barracks. A letter has been received stating that these photographs have been framed and now the "boys in blue" are requesting Miss Williams to write them a short letter which also will be framed and hung in the clubrooms of "The Kathlyn Williams Association." Miss Williams will accede to this latest request. The picture herewith presented shows the President and Vice President of the association; together with the honorary members.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"THE TOAST OF DEATH" (Masterpicture).

"The Toast of Death" is a four-part Mutual masterpiece, produced by the New York Motion Picture Corporation. The story is by C. Gardiner Sullivan. Harry Keenan, Louise Glaum, Herschell Mayall, and J. Frank Burke compose the cast.

Mlle. Poppeo, of the Imperial Ballet in Calcutta, is wooed by Captain Yar Khan of her Majesty's Royal Bengalese Dragoons, and overcoming her inborn prejudice against marrying an Oriental, she consents to become his wife as she believes such a marriage to be the chance of her life, Yar being wealthy and of high social standing. After the honeymoon, Yar is ordered to the command of a native station in the sweltering south country of India, and Poppea, much against her wishes, Scene from "The Toast of Death" (Mutual).

is obliged to accompany him. The deadly monotony of her new surroundings get on her nerves, and she writes to Captain Drake, an old-time lover and personal friend of Yar's, asking him to come to her. Drake arrives and is welcomed by Yar, Poppeo meanwhile pretending to be very much surprised at his arrival. Not long afterward, Yar awakens to the fact that Poppea is false to him. He plans revenge on Captain Drake in true Oriental fashion. Yar fills two glasses with wine. Into one of them he pours a quantity of deadly poison. Poppea is forced to select one of the glasses for Drake, Yar taking the other. Yar speaks the toast of death and then both drain their glasses. An instant later, Drake drops dead. Poppea, overcome by remorse, flees from the house and into the sun-baked desert.

PORTRAYAL IN LIEU OF SPOKEN WORD.

For the purposes of "The White Pearl," a romance of the Orient, in which Marie Doro is starring, and "Twisted Paths," an Italian story starring Mary Pickford, a number of Chinese, Japanese, Italians and negroes were gathered at the Famous Players' studios last week and immediately built a Tower of Babel. Hugh Ford tried to explain the requirements of the action of the two subjects in the various languages of which he is master, but what one understood, five didn't—and one out of five isn't good team work. Then Mr. Porter, acting on the principle that a universal language must be derived from many spoken tongues, made an impromptu esperanto from a little French, German, Italian, and much English, but the distinguished actors only believed he was delirious, and looked pityingly at him. At last it flashed upon the veteran director:

"I've got it," he shouted, "motion pictures—the universal language! We'll act their parts!" And he did! And they did! And that's why "The White Pearl" and "Twisted Paths" will have such variety of action.

"SCHOOL BELLS" COMPANY LEAVES FOR VIRGINIA.

Albert E. Lowe, president of the Charles K. Harris Feature Film Company; Perry Vekroff, director of "School Bells," the feature picture written by Mr. Harris, and his assistant, Eddie James, will leave this week for Virginia to take some of the out-door scenes for the children's picture which they are making at the Kinemacolor studio at Whitestone. Mr. Vekroff has in mind just the setting he wants for part of the picture—a water fall on an old plantation. The company will leave in a private car, which is so arranged that they will be able to have all their meals there.

A number of the "School Bells" scenes have been taken at Staten Island among a camp of gypsies. "School Bells" will be completed with the Virginia trip.

"THE STRANGE CASE OF TALMAI LIND" (Selig).

"The Strange Case of Talmai Lind" is particularly noteworthy for the reason that it was written by and features Miss Kathlyn Williams. This Diamond Special, in three reels, released in regular service on Aug. 26, touches for the first time, perhaps, on the problem of prenatal laws. Miss Williams undertakes two important roles and gives versatility to them both. She enacts the part of both mother and daughter. She also enters the den of a lioness, which has previously been aroused to frenzy, and her acting of fearlessness and nerve provides a thrill right at the very beginning of this story.

Carl Lind, a trainer of wild animals, while intoxicated, forces his wife into an arena with an enraged lioness. When Lind comes to his senses he rushes to the arena and rescues his wife. Later a baby girl comes to gladden the home of the Linds, and the father vows that he will never again touch liquor or annoy wild animals.

Years later, Talmai Lind is a beautiful girl. Amos Drew is engaged by Lind as assistant animal trainer. He falls in love with Talmai. However, Talmai does not return his love and not only she but the lioness she loves are antagonistic, sensing the inherent brutalness of the man. Whenever Drew tortures the lioness, the torture is also simultaneously experienced by Talmai. She continues to spurn Drew, and he plots to torture Talmai through the lioness.

Talmai in one of her mountain excursions meets and learns to love Paul Burnham, an artist not knowing that he is already engaged. Burnham's sweetheart comes to see him. Talmai oversees their meeting and is heartbroken. Amos Drew, in a drunken rage, attacks the lioness. The animal springs at him and he deliberately shoots and kills the lioness. Talmai, on a mountain peak, far away, screams in agony, and falls over the rock. Paul Burnham and his fiancee hear Talmai's screams. They run to the spot where she is lying. Burnham quickly stoops over to life her. He speaks her name; she recognizes him, smiles and then passes away. Her death is almost simultaneous with that of the lioness.

Scene from "The Strange Case of Talmai Lind" (Selig).

An all-star cast has been selected to support Miss Williams in this beautiful Selig Diamond Special, and there are a large number of attractive scenic backgrounds.

THE LITTLE LUMBERJACK (Reliance).

The Reliance feature, "The Little Lumberjack," was filmed in a lumber camp fifty miles north of San Bernardino. A company under the direction of Ray Myers went to San Bernardino by rail and then by auto over rough roads to the lumber camp. The company included Paul Willis and Mildred Harris, the juvenile players; Bert Hadley, Mrs. Harris, Dark Cloud and others. The lumbermen of the camp were used in many of the big scenes. This Reliance feature has for its two chief characters children.

Scene from "The Little Lumberjack" (Reliance).

An interesting fact in connection with the filming of "The Little Lumberjack" is that Mildred Harris, who plays Mildred Edgar, the small heroine, was really lost. She with other principals of the company had taken instructions in woodcraft from Dark Cloud, the Indian player, and just for fun during a pause in the making of the production she wandered into the woods, trying to blaze the trail. The trail was very faint and Paul Willis, who tried to follow it, failed. The lumberman, too, were unable to trace the little girl. Finally, Dark Cloud was called. He succeeded where the others did not. He did not follow the little girl's marks upon the trees, but her trail upon the ground.

Paul Willis plays the title role. Mildred Harris is Mildred Edgar. Bert Hadley is Edgar, owner of the camp. Mrs. Harris is Mrs. Edgar, while Dark Cloud is a lumber-jack.

JERRY'S BUSY DAY (Cub).

David Horsley's second one-reel comedy release on the Mutual program under the brand name of Cub Comedy is called "Jerry's Busy Day." It features George Ovey and is scheduled for release Thursday, Aug. 26.

The title "Jerry's Busy Day" is wholly applicable to Jerry's experiences as recounted in this picture. His pranks are of a variety too numerous to mention and lead him into a continuous round of trouble, which, as portrayed by Ovey, makes for an unlimited amount of good comedy.

Scene from "Jerry's Busy Day" (Cub).

The story is of Jerry's plan of revenge upon a father who objects to Jerry's attention to his daughter. The plan is broad-sweeping and not only is Jerry's object caught in it, but a number of other characters besides. Others besides in the cast are Louis Fitzroy, Goldie Colwell, Gordon MacGregor and Janet Sully. Milton Fahrney directs.

DOT FARLEY IN STANDARD PROGRAM COMEDIES.

Prominent among the stars to be seen in the new one and two-reel pictures on the Standard Program will be Dot Farley, the charming leading woman and comedienne of Luna Comedies, who has won her way into the hearts of thousands of motion picture enthusiasts in addition to her tremendous following of admirers built up during her long stage career which began when she was three years of age. Miss Farley will be seen in one comedy each week on the Standard Program.

"THE WOMAN HATER" (Essanay).

This is a fascinating comedy-drama in three acts, written by the well known Chicago and Washington society leader and litterateur, H. C. Chatfield-Taylor, author of "The Crimson Wing," and numerous other novels. Henry B. Walthall plays the part of the leading character, a wealthy bachelor, who hates and fears women. Edna Mayo sets her cap for the bachelor and finally wins a proposal after her friend, the part taken by Bryant Washburn, lures him on to his yacht, where he has concealed a party of friends. The woman hater regrets his proposal and twice balks at the church and runs away. He Scene from "The Woman Hater" (Essanay).

finally is captured after another ruse and the fatal step is taken. The bachelor, much to his astonishment, finally wakes up to the fact that he really enjoys married life. Mr. Walthall brings out the various emotions of the timid bachelor with all his characteristic ability in portraying the subtle and deeper feelings of the heart. Miss Mayo and Mr. Washburn carry out their parts with an equal understanding of the characters and cleverness in registering expression.

CALIFORNIA M. P. CORPORATION PLANS.

Following immediately upon their production of "Salvation Nell," which has just been completed and is scheduled for release Sept. 1, the California Motion Picture Corporation settled upon a definite policy of issuing six master productions during the coming twelve months, each to be based upon an already famous story of unusual strength and popularity and filmed on the same elaborate scale as "Salvation Nell."

"We feel certain that in 'Salvation Nell' we have nearly reached the acme of producing perfection and have consequently set it as a standard below which none of our future pictures are to fall," said an officer of the company. "We have formulated our policy upon a quality rather than a quantity basis. We contemplate giving on an average of at least eight weeks to each of our future features. This will allow us ample time for careful and studied direction and the most minute attention to the all important item of detail. Our policy henceforward is to produce pictures carefully and with deliberation, our intention being to set a standard rather than to try to live to one already promulgated."

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK'S SCREEN DEBUT.

Raymond Hitchcock, noted comic opera star, will make his screen debut in a four-act Lubin fantastic photoplay, "The Ringtailed Rhinoceros." It will be released on Aug. 16. Associated with Mr. Hitchcock will be Flora Zabelle, Herbert Fortier, Earl Metcalfe, Raymond Hackett, Ida Waterson and Arthur Matthews. The play was filmed by George W. Terwilliger and written by Lawrence McCloskey.

The exterior scenes of "The Ringtailed Rhinoceros" were taken on Long Island, and the gardens of the homes of divers and sundry millionaires were utilized.

Scene from "The Ringtailed Rhinoceros" (Lubin).

"I think I used about everything on the Hitchcock estate," says Mr. McCloskey in speaking of the new picture. "Mrs. Hitchcock—Flora Zabelle—plays Marybelle and the Weeping Princess. You will notice 'The Counsellor Bird.' Hitchcock has two macaws at his residence and I couldn't refrain from getting one of them into the picture because 'Hitchie' does a great stunt of talking to the bird. Yes, most of the people in the lawn party scenes are real society folk, residents of the 14K colony on Long Island. 'Hitchie' and I motored over the Island and we had exclusive locations galore—the residents were willing to do anything for Raymond."

THE FATAL HOUR (Majestic).

Some effective photography and unusual scenes are presented in "The Fatal Hour," a Majestic feature. Of especial interest in these respects are the scenes in which an innocent man is cleared of a charge of murder. Walter and Edgar Clark, half-brothers, are sons of Hilliary Clark, gem expert. The father receives a package of diamonds. Edgar Clark steals the diamonds with the aid of crooks. He then proceeds to fasten the crime upon Walter. The father is found dead from a pistol shot wound, the safe open, the diamonds missing. Walter, a few moments before the discovery of his father's body, had fired at Edgar, thinking him a burglar. He is discovered by the police with the revolver in his possession. It has one exploded chamber.

Scene from "The Fatal Hour" (Majestic).

Helen, the wife of Walter, believes in Walter's innocence. She hires a detective. He finds upon the floor an exploded shell and the impact of a shell on the bookcase.

The detective reconstructs the scene. It appears that the elder Clark had unloaded a revolver and had thrown the cartridges upon the table. He placed his spectacles near them. At the hour of noon light entered the room in such a way that it was focused by the spectacles upon a cartridge lying on the table. This cartridge was exploded by the sun's rays and killed Clark. The detective uses a dummy to demonstrate Walter's innocence.

Charles West is Walter, Frank Bennett is Edgar, Margie Wilson is Helen, the wife of Walter; Edwin Harley is Hilliary Clark, Sam De Grasse is the detective, and Vester Perry has the part of a crook.

GOOD SCENERY IN "CHALICE OF COURAGE."

The remarkable scenic effects displayed in the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "The Chalice of Courage," has caused much favorable comment because they show the glorious topography of California in each of the year's four seasons.

In seeking perfect locations, Mr. Sturgeon said he covered practically the entire state of California, traveling a distance of fifteen hundred miles, by train, automobile and on horseback.

PAVLOWA BEFORE THE CAMERA (Universal).

Five reels of the massive Pavlowa film spectacle, "Fenella," or "The Dumb Girl of Portici," have been completed in the temporary studio which the Universal Film Corporation erected in Chicago adjoining the big Auditorium where the Russian dancer has been appearing nightly to audiences larger than any she has ever attracted in the Windy City. The company has returned to Los Angeles.

When deliberately asked to explain her motives in making so revolutionary a change in her career Pavlowa said: "At best I can appear even in America in only a score of the metropolitan cities; aside from London, Paris and a few great continental cities I have never appeared at all. In these and other war-stricken nations, including my own country, I am unable to face the public in the flesh under the appalling conditions now existent. The great moment to embrace this enobling art is when one's career is in its zenith. It was the goal of these perpetual film records and what they would mean when my gifts are less than now that determined me to harken to the call, and I am convinced, after some days in this amazing new environment, that my art will be immeasurably enhanced. Truly, I hope to increase my vogue with the public tenfold, while those who have admired me on the stage will marvel at the grandeur of this spectacle which a new science has made possible."

Pavlowa as Fenella (Universal).

PLAYER HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

One of the most thrilling stunts ever enacted before a motion picture camera occurred on a slender scaffolding atop the two hundred-foot chimney of the Standard Oil station, immediately in the rear of the Thanhouser studios, in New Rochelle, during the filming of one of the scenes for "The Steeple-jack's Revenge," a single reel drama for release on Aug. 8. And it was by the narrowest fraction of an inch that one and possibly the two actors participating in the scene were not killed or seriously injured. John Lehnberg lost his balance, but was saved from death by Harris Gordon and the exercise of his own great strength.

Colin Campbell, the Selig director, has sailed with a select company of players for Catalina Island, where he will produce a series of original two act photoplays.

"WHEN HUNGRY HAMLET FLED."

August 17 will witness the release from the Thanhouser studios of Edwin Thanhouser's first attempt at two-reel comedy, as the conception of comedy prevails today. The title of it is "When Hungry Hamlet Fled," and is the result of a wager for $5,000, made by Mr. Thanhouser and Seton C. ("Cyclone") Pierce, the Minneapolis traction man. It came about at a dinner at which six others were present, among them B. F. Juddel, the Mutual's Minneapolis manager, and B. B. Reissman, of the Scene from "When Hungry Hamlet Fled" (Thanhouser).

Dale theater of St. Paul. The challenge was laid down to Mr. Thanhouser so strongly that he took it up; the task was to make a comedy in two-reels which would be equal in effect to a very popular comedy brand now on the market, in which is featured a comedian conceded to be the peer of all funmakers. A set of conditions were formulated, and under these Mr. Thanhouser won his bet. He then decided to release the picture under the Thanhouser brand, the Falstaff comedies of the concern being only single reel releases.

"When Hungry Hamlet Fled" is a story of the stage in which Lorraine Huling, Frances Keyes, Eleanor Spalding, Harry Benham and Claude Cooper carry the action, with Cooper in the title role. As a "legit" of the rail-walking variety, an actor whose chief asset is an appetite as neglected as it is hearty, Cooper as Hamlet undertakes to give a performance at a tank town with tank talent. He incurs the ill-will of the ingenue's gay admirer in handing out the parts and the bumpkin determines to "crab" the show. His jay conception of how to ruin a performance is refreshing; the inspiration is lofty; he accomplishes his purpose with brilliancy enough to shower over a dozen jay revenges. And Hamlet, dignified to the last egg makes an exit as did the general who reported a victory thus: "The enemy is advancing with heavy loss; we are retreating."

"RENUNCIATION" (Universal).

The burned over ruins picture herewith represent what was left of Cattle City in which are laid most of the scenes of the Universal's production of Peter B. Kyne's photodrama, "Renunciation," in which Julia Dean is featured. Robert Leonard, who directed the picture, erected the city of wooden shacks at a total cost of $2,800.

According to the plot of the story, as written by Mr. Kyne, two factions in the little town become embroiled in a gun fight in the biggest building of the settlement, a combination dance hall, gambling saloon and cafe. A stray bullet strikes a lantern which explodes. The saloon is instantly ablaze and soon the entire street is a roaring mass of flames.

Actual Destruction by Fire of Entire Street, in Universal Production, "Renunciation."

Two cameras filmed the burning of the town. At the start of the fire Cooper Hewitts were turned on, but later Director Leonard ordered them out. Depending on the light of the fire alone the cameras cranked away. At 3:30 a. m. nothing but ashes remained of the town, and Director Leonard hurried to the studio laboratory with his cameramen to see how the negative had "caught" the flames without the Cooper Hewitts. The photography was perfect and everyone then motored home to well earned sleep.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY."

Thrills galore are embodied in "The Path of Peril," by which Chapter 16 of "The Diamond from the Sky" is known. "The Path of Peril" indeed is a title aptly chosen, for in the story there are three courses being taken by the principals—courses which are perilous to an extreme though differing widely in form.

In Santa Barbara Bay, John Powell, as Arthur now is known, goes for a trial spin on his yacht. The craft collides with Vivian's sailboat and Arthur dives headlong into the foaming waters to rescue the struggling girl, whom he drags to safety at the risk of his own life. Miss Burton, who plays the role of the adventuress Vivian, gives graphic proof of her intense dramatic ability in ensuing scenes in chapter sixteen. She has set her cap to ensnare Arthur, from whom she hopes to obtain the gleaming jewel, "The Diamond from the Sky." Arthur is completely won by the eyes of this bewitching maiden. Her conquest is apparently complete. Arthur is swiftly launched on his path of peril.

The comedy element introduced by Orral Humphrey in the role of Marmaduke Smythe, a happy feature of this great continued photoplay in chapters. In Chapter 16 Orral Humphrey attains the highest point which his laugh-making abilities yet have reached.

Scene from "The Diamond from the Sky" (American).

Miss Pickford's ability, too, is emphasized in "The Path of Peril." She cowers on the small mine motor under the protecting wing of Quabba. Then when she falls into friendly hands at the mouth of the mine she graphically details what has happened.

MISS DARMOND WRITES AS WELL AS PLAYS.

The Selig Polyscope Company claims the possession of the youngest leading woman in the World. Less than two years ago little Grace Darmond, with girl friends from Chicago's North Side, visited the Selig studios in curiosity. Miss Darmond remained to score worldwide success as leading woman for such stage artists as Tyrone Power, Otis Harlan and Harry Mestayer. Miss Darmond has not yet reached her eighteenth milestone, but she has been starred in "The Millionaire Baby," "The House of a Thousand Candles," "A Black Sheep," and other Selig Red Seal plays.

Miss Darmond is as clever with the pen as she is in the motion pictures. She recently completed a story entitled "How I Became a Movie Star." The Selig Company will soon release this feature illustrated with late portraits of Miss Darmond, as Number four in "Filmland Experiences." The other articles in this series were written by Kathlyn Williams, Harry Mestayer and Tyrone Power. These feature articles, devoid of exaggeration and faithfully produced as written by the Selig stars, are issued free to newspapers either in mats, plates, or proofs. Exhibitors are appreciating the worth of these feature stories and are urging their home editors to use them. It is said that little urging is necessary after live newspaper men have once read the stories.

"THE SHERIFF'S BABY" (Biograph).

Three outlaws, pursued by the posse, are crossing the desert when a child's cry halts them. Near a deserted wagon they see a mountain lion about to devour a baby, whose late guardians lie dead near by. Driving off the beast, the outlaws rescue the baby, first feeding it and taking it with them despite the handicap of its presence. Attacked by Indians, they still refuse to part with Little Pardner. In a running fight one of the outlaws is killed; another dies of thirst. The survivor escapes and, seeing the posse in the distance, fires a shot to attract their attention. The sheriff, coming up, is amazed to see in the outlaw's arms his own motherless baby, which he left in care of an old settler and his wife. The story told he bids the outlaw go where he will—for he will never take him prisoner.

Scene from "The Sheriff's Baby" (Biograph).

The scene showing the mountain lion and the baby on the desert is one of the most thrilling scenes ever shown on the screen. For this scene, a mountain lion, its trainer and six guards were employed, the trainer and guards standing immediately behind the squad of cameras, which were less than eight feet away, ready to shoot the beast in the event of danger. No harm was done, however.

Henry Walthall, Lionel Barrymore, Harry Carey, Robert Harron, Kate Bruce, Jack Dillon, Joseph McDermott and Alfred Paget complete the cast of this Biograph reissue. D. W. Griffith was the director.

"The Sheriff's Baby" is a strong one-reel picture and upholds the high standard established by the previous releases in the series of Biograph reissues.

"DRAWING THE LINE."

"Drawing the Line," a two-reel "Flying A" drama to be released Aug. 23, is built around a verse from the pen of the "Scene from "Drawing the Line" (American).

late Joaquin Miller, the famous poet of the Sierras. The lines are these:

"In men whom men condemn as ill,
I find so much of goodness still;
In men whom men pronounce divine
I see so much of sin and blot,
I hesitate to draw the line
Between the two—when God has not."

The leading roles are taken by Vivian Rich, Walter Spencer and Jack Richardson. Miss Rich is the heroine. Spencer is the young man "condemned as ill." Jack Richardson is the man "whom men pronounce divine."

In "Drawing the Line" Miss Rich gives a wonderful interpretation of a girl with eyes that see not. Her eyes are wide open, yet no power of vision is enjoyed. It is a difficult role, and another triumph in the long list of Miss Rich's accomplishments. Spencer and Jack Richardson give admirable characterizations. Lillian Buckingham, while she does not appear in the major portion of the film, adds a distinct pathetic touch to the early action of the drama. She takes the role of Mrs. Howe, Billy's mother.

"GREEN STOCKINGS" WITH A VITAGRAPH STAR CAST.

The Vitagraph Company has selected the cast that will present A. E. W. Mason's comedy, "Green Stockings," in which Margaret Anglin starred for three seasons. Stanley Dark, who was Miss Anglin's leading man during the three years of the comedy's run on the legitimate stage, will be seen in his original creation of Colonel Smith. Wilfrid North will direct the production of "Green Stockings," which will be a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature in five parts to be released through the V-L-S-E.

"LIFE'S CRUCIBLE" (Equitable).

"Life's Crucible," which has just been completed by Isadore Bernstein at the Equitable studios and will be released through the World Film, contains several remarkable camera feats, carried off by Billy Foster, the former Universal cameraman, who has joined the Equitable. The story called for a den, in which a master of crooks and the underworld could sit and see everything going on in the other rooms. Mirrors were placed at proper angles around the room, and opposite doors, which reflected the happenings in the exterior rooms on lenses in the center of the den, before which the master sat. The lenses again deflected the first reflection on to second mirrors on the wall. Mr. Foster also made an octupal exposure, running the film eight times through the camera, which called for the greatest care and accuracy. The exposure is a part of the introduction of the picture, wherein the figures of an ancient alchemist and a boy change into Father Time and an Angel, and three chemist's bottles become human forms.

Scene from "Life's Crucible" (Equitable).

William Courtleigh plays the lead, supported by Miss Clara Whipple, Miss Orlo Lea, George Soule Spencer and Roy Applegate.

MANY NATIONALITIES IN "THE MAN TRAIL."

Nearly 1,000 persons appear in the various scenes in Essanay's six-act feature, "The Main Trail," the photoplay adapted from the recently published novel by Henry Oyen. There is an exceptionally large variety in types, from the hobo to the college man, and in races, including Indian, Chinese, negroes and whites. Of the latter more than a dozen nationalities are represented.

One of the Indians, White Wing, is a full blooded Winnebago from the reservation in Washington State, who spent five years at Carlisle University. He has a splendid physique, standing six feet four inches tall. Several Chinamen are employed in running the gambling halls of the logging camp. Threescore lumberjacks of the north woods are engaged in the picture work. Chicago's slum district was combed for nearly 100 down-and-outers to represent the riff-raff hanging about the camp, the saloons and gambling halls.

Henry Oyen, the author, visited the Chicago studios and the specially built camp at "The Pine," near Waukegan, Ill., to watch the work of production and to give suggestions in the carrying out of the motion picture work. The play is being produced by Captain E. H. Calvert, with Richard Travers and June Keith in the leads. It will be released on the V-L-S-E program in September.

"POOR SCHMALTZ" (Famous Players).

It is announced by the Famous Players that the date of the first appearance in motion pictures of Sam Bernard in a typical characterization, "Poor Schmaltz," originally scheduled for release in October, has now been changed to Aug. 23. The Paramount Pictures Corporation ends its annual program during the week of the 23d, and it was in order to terminate the first Paramount year auspiciously that Mr. Bernard's initial screen creation was substituted for this occasion.

Scene from "Poor Schmaltz" (Famous Players).

In obtaining the exclusive motion picture services of Sam Bernard, the Famous Players has secured a most notable acquisition. Mr. Bernard was engaged in response to numerous requests from exhibitors throughout the country, whose patrons frequently expressed a desire to see the popular comedian before the camera, and it is predicted that in "Poor Schmaltz" Mr. Bernard will introduce a new type of comedy to the screen.

The subject selected for Mr. Bernard's introduction to the motion picture public, "Poor Schmaltz," presents him in the hilarious role of a German wigmaker who becomes the principal agent in a series of excruciatingly comic adventures, and it is certain that this characterization will rank with the popular star's greatest comedy creations and be recorded as one of the foremost travesty-triumphs of the screen.

"CAPITAL PUNISHMENT" (Knickerbocker).

"Capital Punishment" is the title of a three-part feature drama, by the Knickerbocker Star Features, to be released Aug. 18 on the General Film program which features Lenore Ulrich, a Broadway favorite. This drama is not a problem play, neither a preachment, but a powerful society drama, brimful of humanity, stirring action in every scene, some of which is sensational in nature. The Rev. Clarence J. Harris is the author, and he has put into it his best work. Joseph Levering produced the play.

Scene from "Capital Punishment" (Knickerbocker).

"Capital Punishment" holds because of the constant appearance of the unexpected, and shows how tables can be turned and people meet their own ideas and understand their significance. In this drama, a triangular romance takes on a new aspect, while the heavy lead creates many tense situations.

"A MOTHER'S CONFESSION" (Ivan).

The Ivan Film Productions, Inc., announces its coming release "A Mother's Confession," a five-part photodrama, full of gripping situations and strong climaxes, the story mirroring the result when money is king. It is written and directed by Ivan Abramson, the author and director of "The Unwelcome Wife," "Should a Woman Divorce" and "Sins of the Parents."

Scene from "A Mother's Confession" (Ivan).

The principals in the cast are Chrystine Mayo, a recent newspaper prize winner, and who played the leads for the Aetna and Ramo, and who is well known on the legitimate and vaudeville stage and on the screen, having played in "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and "Excuse Me." Austin Webb, who played in "Ninety and Nine" with Clara Bloodgood, "The Clansman," "The One Woman," and leading man with Mary Mannering and Charlotte Walker; Carrie Reynolds of musical comedy fame, having appeared in the "Red Rose" with Valeska Suratt in the soubrette part, the "Kiss Waltz," "Jacinto," and starred in the "School-Girl." Otto Kruger, who appeared in the "Runaway Wife," "The Natural Law" and other Broadway productions and is a well known stage and screen favorite, and Sidney Mason, who played in "Seven Sisters."

EXQUISITE INTERIOR IN KLEINE'S "HELLO BILL."

One of the most exquisite interiors ever designed for motion pictures was conceived and built in the Kleine studios last week, attracting much comment not only from casual visitors, newspaper men and several well known and experienced film men, but from the seasoned veterans who built it themselves and whose enthusiasm is hard to arouse. The interior is a boudoir scene from "Hello Bill," featuring Bickel and Watson. The bed, dressing table, writing desk, foot-stool, chairs, lamp and similar articles are of yellow ivory, blending delightfully with the pink and old-rose hangings and decorations. Even the pictures on the walls are seventeenth century prints obtained from one of New York's fashionable art galleries and, in quiet sepia tones, harmonize pleasingly with their surroundings.

Another innovation is the oval shape of the boudoir, whose graceful, gently sloping lines convey a sense of symmetry, harmony and proportion. The set was designed after a Parisian style much in vogue just now throughout Europe.

Scene from "Hello Bill" (Kleine).

"Hello Bill" will set a new standard for comedies. In addition to an all-star cast, the feature is conspicuous and unusual in many ways, one of which is the abundance of elaborate interiors similar to the boudoir set. "Hello Bill" will be released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service Sept. 15.

"THE WHEELS OF JUSTICE" (V-L-S-E).

The added Blue Ribbon feature on the V-L-S-E program for the month of August is the intense melodramatic type of play that visualizes two characters that are unquestionably the greatest menaces to society—the scheming woman, and the blackmailing crook. It shows the fallibility of circumstantial evidence, and the occasional miscarriage of justice that results from manufactured testimony.

In "The Wheels of Justice," which will be released August 23, two of the screen's popular stars are making their initial bow on the V-L-S-E program, namely, Dorothy Kelly and James Morrison. These two artists are ably supported by Eulalie Jensen, Charles Eldridge, George Cooper, Louise Baudet and Anders Randolph.

Scene from "The Wheels of Justice" (Vitagraph).

In this production Dorothy Kelly presents one of the strongest characterizations in which she has been seen during her film career, and James Morrison as Ralph Brooks, visualizes his part with that fine degree of artistry that has endeared him to the picture play patrons of the world.

DONALD BRIAN AT LASKY STUDIO.

Donald Brian, musical comedy star of the Charles Frohman Company, who is at the studios of the Lasky Feature Play Company at Hollywood, Cal., appearing in a picturization of "The Voice in the Fog," by Harold MacGrath, has become one of the popular members of the big professional colony in Los Angeles.

Several years ago Mr. Brian originated the "Merry Widow Waltz," which was the forerunner of the national dancing epidemic. Following "The Merry Widow" Mr. Brian appeared as the star in "The Siren," "The Marriage Market" and "The Girl from Utah." In each of these his dancing was a feature.

Since his arrival on the Pacific coast at the Lasky studios he frequently has attended social affairs where his extremely pleasing personality and extraordinary dancing ability have made him popular.

NEW RAINBOW BRAND FOR STANDARD PROGRAM.

O. E. Goebels' Santa Paula Studio in Southern California is to be the home of a new company of players appearing weekly on the Standard Program in two-part dramas.

Willis Robards, who recently made a hurried trip from Santa Paula to New York, has returned to the former city and will oversee the staging of the new brand which is to be known as Rainbow. Through Mr. Robards, President and General Manager O. E. Goebel of the producing company has organized a group of well known screen players which includes Lillian Hamilton and Frederick Church, who were formerly featured in Premier pictures, but will now be the stars of the new Rainbow brand.

ARNOLD DALY USES GOULD RESIDENCE IN A MOTION PICTURE.

Arnold Daly, who is producing pictures for Pathe, under the name of the Arnold Daly Series, sprang a new one last week in his desire for realism. Mr. Daly wanted to get a ballroom scene with all the realism of life in high society. Mrs. George Gould generously permitted the use of her palatial residence at 857 Fifth avenue, New York. Upper Fifth avenue opened its eyes to see a long line of carriages and automobiles discharging scores of men and women in evening dress at high noon before the Gould residence, and received by lines of powdered footmen in full livery. A number of persons well known in society consented to appear in the ballroom scene and doubtless when "Ashton Kirk, Investigator," the name of the picture, is shown upon the screens they will be easily recognized.

SOUTHERN ACTORS IN SOUTHERN PLAY.

There are no people who can play the roles of the traditionally charming and hospitable people of the South better than genuine Southerners themselves, so "Blue Grass," the Southern racing play, by Paul Armstrong, which is being produced as a motion picture by Charles M. Seay, for the Equitable Motion Picture Company to be released through the World Film Corporation, promises to be one of the most accurate and delightful plays recently produced, since the greater part of the cast came from South of the Mason and Dixon line. Mr. Seay himself was born and educated in the South, and James Cunningham, his assistant, came originally from Kentucky. Tom Wise and Miss Clara Whipple lived for years in Louisville, and Miss Bess Sankey only recently arrived from her native home in California. Lynn Young, who plays the role of the colored jockey, "Tommie Mead," is the highest priced jockey who ever left the United States for England. David Boone, who will also appear in "Blue Grass," is a great grandson of Daniel Boone.

THORNBY TAKES COMPANY TO LAKE PLACID.

Conducted by Director F. H. Thornby, Miss Mollie King and her acting associates who will appear in the World Film feature "The Code of the Mountains," have journeyed to Lake Placid, N. Y., in the neighborhood of which woodland resort Mr. Thornby has discovered a number of locations that promise to give the settings of the picture an atmosphere of impressive actuality.

Notes of the Trade

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN has been assigned the pleasant task of directing Carter De Haven and Flora Parker in "At Watt College," which will be another Broadway Universal Feature.

* * *

While "Old Dutch" was a large and expensive production, the plans are that "All Aboard" will be still greater. Elaborate preparations are being made at the studio to insure a spectacular production as well as a large comedy offering in this next feature, in which Lew Fields will be the star. Frank Crane, who made "Old Dutch" a World Film feature, has been placed in charge of making "All Aboard."

* * *

C. M. & S. A. Franklin, co-producers of the Majestic juvenile plays, are in receipt of letters from various parts of the country, complimenting them on their excellent work. These kid comedies are making a big hit and much of their success is due to the clever work of the Franklin brothers.

* * *

In "The Master Hand," the Nat C. Goodwin photoplay just released by the World Film Corporation, Florence Malone plays the part of Jean Rallston, a tragic role.

* * *

Helen Rosson, who recently joined the American forces in Santa Barbara, is to be cast for important roles in several productions now being prepared for the screen.

* * *

For years the Alcazar theater in San Francisco has been famous for the stage directors and players who were trained there. Fred J. Butler, who was for fourteen years stage director at this noted theater, has been engaged as a permanent member of the Reliance-Majestic stock company. He makes his screen debut with the players of the Griffith organization.

* * *

Some of the unusual and charming settings for the scenes of "Life's Crucible," the first of the Equitable Motion Picture Company's five reel pictures finished for the World Film, which was produced by Isadore Bernstein, are due to the excellent taste of Mrs. Robert T. Haines, the wife of the well known actor.

* * *

Director Archer MacMackin has produced a little gem in "The Honeymooners" an American "Beauty" film in one part, to be released Aug. 17. As usual Webster Campbell and Neva Gerber are cast in the leading roles. William Carroll and Martey Martin are the subordinate stars. The action throughout "The Honeymooners" is swift, natural and pleasing.

* * *

World Film Corporation will shortly present Mollie King in a photoplay entitled "The Code of the Mountains." This is a story of Kentucky life by Charles Neville Buck, whose books and plays have won him a considerable reputation.

The photoplay will be directed by J. H. Thornby, who in his selection of locations in Kentucky will be personally assisted by the author.

* * *

Harold Lockwood and May Allison, who scored so heavily in "The Secretary of Frivolous Affairs," a four reel Mutual Masterpicture, will be featured in "The End of the Road," a forthcoming Masterpicture, being filmed at the American studios.

* * *

Jerold Hevener, the director for the newly organized second subsidiary comedy company of the Wizard Film Company, which will be a part of the Equitable and release through the World Film, has completed his first picture, "The Crazy Clock Maker," which centers around "Sliding" Billy Watson, and is working with Ed Lee Wrote in "Janitor Higgins."

* * *

Although much of his time has been taken up with the construction of the new and larger studio at San Diego, Cal., Captain Melville, general manager of the Western Lubin companies, has found time to superintend the production of a single reel drama of strikingly human tendencies under the name of "Jealousy."

Picture Theaters Projected

LONDON, ONT., CAN.—C. H. Bangs, 110 Dundas street, contemplates erecting a four-story theater, including hotel and stores, 110 by 267 feet, to cost $300,000.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Kernott & Beck have acquired the property at 6 South State street for a consideration estimated at $75,000 as a site for a new moving picture theater.

MIDDLETOWN, ILL.—Dorgan Brothers are planning to make extensive improvements to their moving picture theater.

QUINCY, ILL.—Belasco Theater Company are having plans prepared for a two-story theater and store building.

BICKNELL, IND.—Kitzmiller & Mitchell are to remodel their moving picture and vaudeville theater and add a balcony.

CEDAR FALLS, IA.—The Grand theater has been purchased by E. H. Bennett, who is planning a number of improvements, including the redecoration of the interior of the house.

CLYDE, KAN.—L. W. Bloom has opened a new airdome here.

HIAWATHA, KAN.—L. W. Miller has let the contract for the erection of a commodious moving picture theater on Douglas avenue. The house will have seating capacity for 1,500 persons.

HIAWATHA, KAN.—J. W. Admire is planning to make extensive improvements to his moving picture theater.

LARNED, KAN.—The Popular theater formerly conducted by V. A. Fleming has been taken over by Karl Borsheim of Ellsworth, Kan.

SALVISA, KY.—R. E. Cunningham has opened a new moving picture theater here. It has seating capacity for several hundred persons.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Lee De Camp and Frank L. Wade, 26 Empress building, are preparing plans for a three-story theater building, 132 by 132 feet, to cost $225,000.

DULUTH, MINN.—George H. Lounsberry Company have obtained the contract to remodel the Empress theater. The improvements will cost $15,000.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The owners of the Royal theater, located at 1028 Main street, will expend about $12,000 in remodeling the house and increasing the seating capacity.

FALLS CITY, NEB.—G. W. Tinsley has disposed of his motion picture theater and airdome to W. M. Oliver of Scandia, Kan.

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J.—John P. Everett has been awarded the contract to erect a two-story moving picture theater, 32 by 110 feet, to cost $20,000, for Klotz & Ackley.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.—The newest addition to the string of moving picture houses in this city is the New Glove theater. It has seating capacity for 1,400 persons.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y.—William A. Mosher, Liberty square, will build a three-story addition to his moving picture theater, 65 by 140 feet, and make other alterations, to cost $40,000.

CINCINNATI, O.—I. W. McMahan, 109 West 5th street, and others have formed a stock company for the purpose of erecting a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 90 feet, to cost $25,000.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Cariola theater, located at 729-33 Christian street, has been purchased by a New York concern, which will remodel the building and open it for the exhibition of moving pictures the early part of September. The house is a one-story brick structure on a lot 47.7 by 128 feet. It is assessed at $20,000.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—The new Alamo theater, located on Church street, between Fourth and Fifth avenues, has made its formal bow to the public. The house has seating capacity for about 350 persons.

COLORADO, TEX.—The opera house here has been leased by H. W. McSpadden & Son, who will operate the house as a moving picture theater.

HOUSTON, TEX.—L. A. Buvens is planning to open a moving picture theater here, with seating capacity for about 400 persons.

MART, TEX.—J. M. Reynolds has purchased the Dixie theater from G. C. Carter and contemplates making extensive alterations to the house.

MIDLAND, TEX.—The Dreamland is the name of a new moving picture theater opened here by Ray & Coleman.

MORAN, TEX.—J. L. Terry has disposed of his interest in an airdome to W. R. Jackson and O. T. Smith. The new owners will make improvements to the structure.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.—The Royal Amusement Company has taken over the Wonderland and renamed it the Odeon.

SEALY, TEX.—J. J. Piper has disposed of his interest in the Novelty theater to Sailer & Ladig.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, TEX.—Joseph Rotramel has purchased a half interest in the Lyric theater.

TIMPSON, TEX.—W. R. Mills has taken over the interest of G. W. Trammell in the Crown theater.

FAIRMOUNT, W. VA.—George H. Nelson is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 100 feet, to cost $8,000.

The Arc Controller

YOU CANNOT DO BETTER THAN FOLLOW A SUCCESSFUL MAN'S EXAMPLE.

JOSIAH PEARCE & SONS.
GENERAL OFFICES
814-816 CANAL STREET.
NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA

JOSIAH PEARCE
J. E. PEARCE
F. W. PEARCE

AMUSEMENTS

New Orleans, La. July 27, 1915.

Mr. C. Douglas Danford,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:

We have your favor of the 19th. The results that we have obtained from the Arc Controller which we recently installed in the Tudor are such that we have another one on the way for that same theatre and have ordered controllers for the Trianon and Bijou Dream which will make six controllers in all which we will have in use very shortly.

We find that a great saving in carbons is accomplished by this machine and through the fact that we do not have any freezing of the carbons you can readily realize that it is a saving on the electric bill not saying anything at all about the satisfactory light that is always maintained on the screen. We know that you will be well satisfied if you install this controller on your machines.

We trust this will be of value to you.

Yours very truly,
Josiah Pearce & Sons.

JEP/GRB

Ask for Booklet "A"

Speed Controller Company, Inc.
257-259 William Street New York

Order Now

The Complete List of

Educational Film Releases

FOR 1914

Compiled by Dr. Stockton, of the staff of the Moving Picture World, as published in our issues of February 6th and 13th. Published in pamphlet form together with an article on the method of cataloging.

Bound in paper covers and selling at 20c each, they will form a ready and handy reference list.

Only a limited number have been printed.

Orders and remittances should be addressed

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Avenue, New York

Two cent postage stamps most convenient form of remittance

Film of Boston's Prison

Civic Exhibit Prepared by Penal Commissioner David B. Shaw Shows Deer Island Prison—To Let Citizens See How Appropriation Is Being Spent—Made Especially for Boston Free Shows and Prison Conventions.

By Edwin H. McCloskey, Boston Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

IN order that the taxpayers of the city of Boston might know how their money is being spent, Penal Commissioner David B. Shaw has had moving pictures made of the House of Correction at Deer Island, Boston Harbor.

The film will be used for exhibition in the Boston park free shows and in some of the theaters. Many of the pictures are full of action, showing the prisoners playing baseball, gardening and marching to and from their cells. All pictures were taken at a distance, thereby making it impossible for any of the inmates to be identified in them. However, many of the guards will be recognized when the pictures are publicly exhibited.

Mr. Shaw believes that the people should know how the money appropriated for his department is spent. As the citizens are unable to visit the island they may see the doings there on the screen. The film will run about 600 feet in length. In addition to being shown at the theaters and parks, it will be sent to prison conventions throughout the country to show persons in other parts of the country how the city of Boston treats her prisoners.

It is likely that other city departments will follow the example set by the penal institutions department and have pictures made of their departments for exhibition for the citizens. This action of the commissioner has caused considerable comment from the Finance Commission, whom it is claimed, will refuse to pay the photographer's bill, when it is submitted to them. The commission contends that the commissioner exceeded his authority in having the pictures made upon his own initiative.

NEW STRAND SOON READY.

Rapid progress is being made in the construction of the new Strand theater at the corner of Union and Mayberry streets, Lynn. The large stage had been practically completed, the placing of a large switchboard in the wings being about all that is needed to complete this part of the house. With the balcony girder in place for two weeks, the balcony will soon be ready for the decorators. Workmen have started laying the mosaic floors in the large foyer. The ticket booths are ready to be erected at any time. The electric sign, which will illuminate the front of the house, will be placed in position as soon as the exterior decorations are completed and the marque is placed. The letters in this sign are five feet in height. This will be placed vertically in front of the playhouse and will be the largest illuminated theater sign in New England.

It is expected that the house will open its doors to the public sometime during the next month. Managing Director Allan B. Newhall is selecting his employees and plans to have one of the finest orchestras in any theater in New England.

PRUDENTIAL PICTURE CO. BUYS BIG ESTATE.

Seventy-five acres of land, known as the Hermitage estate at Worcester, Mass., have been purchased by the Prudential Motion Picture Company. Comprehensive plans are being prepared for the erection of a modern studio and a regular producing company will turn out films. The deal is one of the largest real estate transactions ever consummated in Worcester.

The location secured is an ideal one, as measured by the exacting standards and requirements for moving picture production. The estate, until recently, had been used for many years as an exclusive country club. Thousands of dollars have been spent in improving the grounds. It is located on high land and commands a view of lakes, rivers and valleys, which contribute to the scenic value of Worcester County. Rising from a scene of panoramic beauty, Mt. Wachusett looms up in the distance. The natural scenery will afford the filming of scenes of mountain and pasture. The natural facilities are all that could be wished for to produce an artistic up-to-date photoplay. The land is four miles from the center of the city.

The company has announced that it will produce photoplays in which Miss Alice Dovey will be featured. Two other stars, whose names will be announced later, are said to have signed contracts with the company.

In selecting this wonderful estate as a producing stage, the Prudential Company has paved the way for many other moving picture producing concerns to invade the East, which is claimed by many to be as well adapted by nature for picture producing as any other part of the country.

William H. Eagan is looking after the company's interests. George H. Bunny, son of the late John Bunny, the Vitagraph comedian, is head cameraman for the company.

F. J. SITES BUYS LOWELL OPERA HOUSE.

The Lowell Opera House has been sold by the Washington Savings Bank to Francis J. Sites of the Sites Emerson Amusement Company. Several theatrical interests have been endeavoring to obtain control of this playhouse, which has been devoted to moving pictures for some time. A crew of cleaners, carpenters, painters and decorators are now in control of the house, preparing for its opening on Labor Day with a stock company and pictures before the show and between the acts.

BOSTON POLICE AFTER AMATEUR CHAPLINS.

A campaign against youthful imitators of Charlie Chaplin has been started by the Boston police. Ever since a few of the picture houses started Charlie Chaplin contests, the city has been overrun with imitators of the famed comedian. These youths, who range in age from five to twelve years, have not participated in any of these contests. They appear on the street corners and perform for the passersby. After their performance, a hat is passed and a harvest of small coins is reaped from the audience. Spectators, who refuse to contribute to these impromptu performances, are hooted in many instances. Superintendent of Police Crowley has issued a general order to all police officers demanding that the antics of these children be stopped. During the past week five of them were arrested. Their parents were sent for and given several good reasons why they must keep their children from imitating Chaplin or else the city would take care of them.

FREE FILMS THAT TEACH HYGIENE.

A novel plan for the dissemination of health lessons among the people of the State has been adopted by the Massachusetts State Board of Health. Moving picture films, picturing the evils of unsanitary conditions, neglect of children, the ravages of typhoid and other illustrations of the bad results of improper living conditions have been secured by the health department for exhibition by any city or town, school, or organization that makes application.

A lecturer from the State Board will accompany the films and explain them in detail as they appear on the screen. Each film contains a complete and interesting story along with its health lesson. Professor Selskar M. Gunn, chief of the health department publicity bureau, states that he has secured many pictures and that an interesting and extensive campaign will be conducted during the coming winter.

Any organization wishing to exhibit such films and to hear the lectures may secure them free of charge by applying to the State Department of Health at the State House in Boston.

TOLD IN BOSTON.

The Athol Theater Company at Webster, Mass., has been incorporated for $50,000 under the laws of the State of Massachusetts. The incorporators are Henry J. Steinberg, Edwin W. Forster and Leo J. Lavin.

The partnership existing between Alfred L. Parkman and Roger N. Wentworth, who have been conducting the New Empire theater at No. 197 Shirley street, Winthrop, Mass., has been dissolved. In the future the business will be conducted solely by Mr. Wentworth.

A. Carlos, general representative of the Fox Film Corporation, is in Boston for a few days. He is visiting Manager Harry F. Campbell of the New England Fox Film Corporation. Mr. Campbell is busily engaged at the present time working on the new one a week Fox policy contracts, which become effective in September. At the present time, Mr. Campbell is regarded as one of the most competent film exchange managers of the New England territory. He has placed Fox features in the majority of theaters in his territory and every week finds a new customer for the New England office.

Joseph di Pesa, publicity director of the New England Universal Film Exchange and of the Modern theater, is spending a few weeks with his family at their cottage at Lake Boone, Bryantville, Mass. Joe writes to his friends that he certainly is enjoying life at the lake. He feels in the pink of condition and states that when he returns, that New England newspaper editors will sit up and take notice of some of the unique publicity stunts that he has cooked up.

D. Cartoff is preparing to open his new playhouse, the Harvard theater, Cambridge, Mass., in the near future. Feature pictures and high-class songs are to be used.

Manager Nathan C. Brown of the Broadway theater, Everett, Mass., has contracted for the new Pathe serial, "Neal of the Navy."

The engagement of Miss Lillian Shedd and Edward E. Shindler has been announced. The prospective bridegroom is widely known among the moving picture men of New England. He is a prominent member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and is chief operator in the Olympic theater, Bowdoin Square, Boston.

Fred B. Murphy, proprietor of the United Film Service of New England, is planning to open two branch offices within the next week. One of these will be located in Franklin street, Bangor, Me., and the other will be in Dwight street, Springfield, Mass.

Charles H. Barolet will act as branch manager of the Maine office and William F. O'Brien will direct the destinies of the United for Western Massachusetts and Vermont from the Springfield headquarters.

A stock of films will be kept at each branch. On account of the increase in business during the past few months, Mr. Murphy feels that the two branch offices are needed.

Samuel Moscow, who has done considerable to place the United films in a large number of New England theaters, will remain at the Boston headquarters and assist Mr. Murphy in the management of the business in addition to catering to the exhibitors in Eastern Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont.

MAINE THEATERS PROSPER IN RAINY SUMMER.

From John P. Flanagan, Maine Correspondent Moving Picture World, Bangor.

MAINE motion picture men are firm believers now in the old adage that "it's an ill wind that blows nobody good." The continued rainy and cloudy weather has spoiled the resort business, has kept people from going boating and motoring and in general has prevented them from leaving cities and spending their money in numerous outdoor diversions, but it has kept them going to the picture shows continually. From all over the state come reports that never in the history of the motion picture business in the Pine Tree state has there been such a good summer as far as steady and large patronage is concerned. Exchange men say the demand for high grade service and more pictures on the program are continually growing.

WILL NEW BANGOR HOUSE SHOW MOVING PICTURES?

Much speculation exists in Bangor, Maine, as to what use will be made of the fine new hall on the third floor of the Morse building recently completed. That it will be opened up as a theater in the near future is certain, but whether it is to be for motion pictures exclusively, or for musical comedy, legitimate drama, or vaudeville, is interesting many theatrical men. The hall will seat 1500, is the largest in Bangor, and is completely equipped with motion picture booths. It is rumored that L. D. Mathis of Portland, a well known amusement and bowling alley proprietor is to take a lease of the hall, and Mr. Mathis does not deny the truth of this. He has a lease of the large bowling alleys on the second floor of the Morse building, and in Portland has had considerable experience in the amusement business.

CORDIAL INVITATION FROM FLANAGAN.

The Maine correspondent of the Moving Picture World is located at Bangor and would be pleased to meet Maine exhibitors and exchange men when they visit town. He can be found during the day by calling the office of the Bangor Daily Commercial, telephone 149-4 and in the evening at his residence, 147 Parkview avenue, telephone 917-M. He would consider it a pleasure to have film men call him up when in town.

PINE TREE WHISPERS.

A. L. Ehrgott, Bangor manager of the General Film Exchange, who has just returned from a trip to western Maine theatres, reports that business is fine, and that the exhibitors are all happy.

A. F. Walters, proprietor of the moving picture house at Rumford, recently returned from a trip to New York City.

Fred Johnson of Farmington, proprietor of the Opera house in that town, has started using General Film service three days a week.

James A. O'Brien, manager of the Empire theatre, Lewiston, Me., and William Gray, manager and owner of the Mystic theatre, Lewiston, in addition to several theaters in other cities, are about to enter an alliance, leasing and maintaining in partnership the Empire and Mystic theatres, it is understood. Neither has made any announcement regarding the arrangement, but from information that comes from reliable source, there is no doubt but that it will be entered into. This will not affect the policy of either house, nor does it mean that the Empire will be made an absolute picture house. The present policy will continue at both houses, it is understood, but the reason for the change is said to be that in this manner, better and newer moving pictures can be brought to Portland under a double arrangement.

The Bijou theatre, Bangor, Me., will open on August 23, after having been closed during the summer.

Contests Censor Decision

Philadelphia Exchange, Handling Famous Players Pictures, Appeals from Ruling of Censor on "The Secret Orchard"—Claims Offering Has Strong Moral Lesson—Is Lasky Picture with Blanche Sweet and Carlyle Blackwell.

Special to Moving Picture World from Philadelphia News Service.

THE Famous Players' Film Exchange, Philadelphia office 1321 Vine street, have appealed from a decision of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors in disapproving the new motion picture drama, "The Secret Orchard," before Judge McMichael in Common Pleas Court No. 3. The film was first censored by Mrs. Niver and Dr. Oberholtzer, who disapproved of the picture on the ground that the leading character leads what they term an "immoral life." The picture interests immediately appealed the case to Mr. Breitinger and asked him to censor the film himself, which he immediately did and announced that he was strongly in favor of Mrs. Niver's and Dr. Oberholtzer's decision, and that the picture could not be exhibited in Pennsylvania. Now the moving picture interests are just as determined that the picture will be shown in this state and thus followed the appeal.

The picture, which features Blanche Sweet and Carlyle Blackwell, is claimed by Stanley V. Mastbaum, of the Stanley theater, and many other prominent picture men in this locality, to be of a strong moral force and that it portrays Blanche Sweet at her best. It is said that the censors offered to pass the film if certain parts would be eliminated. However, to do this would practically ruin the picture and the Famous Players' Company are going to fight the matter to a finish in their effort to have the picture passed by the censors just as it was originally produced. The picture has never been exhibited as yet and was to have been a feature in houses over the entire country. The play was produced under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille, for the Jesse L. Lasky Company, and was to have been a five-reeler.

CHURCH FOLK AGREE TO STAY AWAY.

On account of the police authorities failing to stop Sunday moving picture exhibitions, the church folk of Long Branch, N. J., recently took steps to inaugurate a "righteous boycott" of all such amusement places.

At services in several of the churches worshippers affixed their signatures to an agreement not to attend any motion theaters which open for business on Sunday and several hundred citizens have taken the pledge which applies to every day in the week against those "who flagrantly violate the State law and encroach on the sanctity of the Sabbath day."

WILLIAM KATZ A PAINSTAKING EXHIBITOR.

Moving picture men in this locality are strong in their praise of William Katz, manager of the Stanley theater, and who has become known among exhibitors as one of the finest men in the business. Mr. Katz has been manager at the Stanley theater, one of the largest moving picture theaters in this city, since its opening several years ago and anyone who has paid a visit to this magnificent theater knows the quality of the shows, nothing but first run pictures being exhibited, and appreciate the efforts of Mr. Katz to give Philadelphians a brand of pictures that is equal to exhibitions anywhere in the country.

DINNER TO KEMP GREEN.

A large number of moving picture stars recently gathered in Zeiss's Cafe, Seventh and Walnut streets, and enjoyed a remarkable evening of fun. Marie Dressler told funny stories and sang songs; Billie (Bashful) Reeve did his comic caper and sang coster songs; Peter Lang obliged with Irish songs, and others who joined in the fun were James Cassidy, Thomas Shea, Nancy Baring, Blanche Smith, Grace Fowler, Peggy Anderson and so many others that it would be difficult to chronicle their names.

The occasion was a dinner and reception in honor of Kemp Green, well known moving picture man. Green is leaving this city to be starred in a series of pictures of the John Henry stories. He and a large company will first go to Mt. Pleasant, N. J., and later to Saratoga Springs, N. Y., where a series of racing pictures will be filmed.

IN AND NEAR PHILADELPHIA.

Many improvements have recently been made to the Colonial theater, of Harrisburg, including the installation of considerable new equipment, such as frames, lights and a new No. 6 A. machine, purchased from the Calehuff Supply Company, of Philadelphia. This theater is one of the best known houses in that section of the state and is one of the many moving picture theaters conducted by Messrs. Wilmer and Vincent.

The Cariola theater, 729-31-33 Christian street, has been sold by Joseph J. Goldstein to a New York concern for a consideration not made public. The property is to be extensively improved.

John Breexa, special officer at the Crescent theater, South Broad and Hudson streets, this city, recently reported to the police of the Second district that vandals had entered the theater and reeked considerable havoc to equipment, including damage done to the moving picture machine. Such an act is extremely contemptible and should be punished to the full extent of the law.

E. McHegh, proprietor of the Majestic theater, 2424 Kensington avenue, announces that the theater will be closed for several weeks in order to permit many alterations to be made both to the interior and exterior of the theater. The entire house will be repainted and thoroughly remodeled and much new equipment will be added to the theater. This theater is one of the best known houses in Kensington.

William R. Dougherty and Henry E. Baton are estimating on plans for the erection of a moving picture theater, store and apartments at Fifty-sixth and Pine streets, West Philadelphia. The new theater is to be absolutely fire proof in construction and will occupy a lot 140 by 83 feet.

Folks in the vicinity of Thirteenth and Vine streets are wondering what has caused Harry Bryant, of the Metropolitan Booking Office, to become so energetic of late. Mr. Bryant has been seen polishing his automobile on numerous occasions during the past week or so. Going away, Harry?

It has been decided by the management of the Curtis Publishing Company, whose establishment takes up an entire square at Sixth and Walnut streets, to provide a moving picture show for employes during their leisure moments. The first step taken to carry out their intentions was the purchase of a Simplex moving picture machine from the Swab Film Service, 1327 Vine street.

Harry Hersker, well known proprietor of a moving picture theater in Hazelton, Pa., was numbered among the recent visitors to this city and spent considerable time calling upon the various supply houses. Mr. Kersker is a thorough moving picture man and has one of the best paying theaters in the coal regions.

Open Sundays--Waiting

Chattanooga Exhibitors Are Keeping Open Seven Days a Week and Awaiting Developments in the Test Sabbath Violation Cases—Manager Dowler, of the Alcazar, One of Those Arrested, Not Open Yet.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Tennessee Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

MOST of the moving picture theaters of Chattanooga are now running open on Sunday and awaiting developments in connection with the recent indictments returned by the grand jury. Among the downtown houses the Crescent and Alcazar have been closed. Manager Howell Graham of the "Quality Way" houses gave a free showing of the initial installment of the "Exploits of Elaine" at the Alhambra theater on a recent Sunday. Manager Frank H. Dowler, of the Alcazar theater, has not been running open on Sunday since the first arrests were made, and stated that he ran open then merely to test the law. The Sunday following the indictments found the Majestic and Picto theaters open.

CRESCENT AMUSEMENT WANTS AMENDED CHARTER.

Amended articles of incorporation have been filed by the Crescent Amusement Company, of Nashville, Tenn. The new articles call for an increase in capital stock from $150,000 to $300,000. The incorporators of the company are W. J. Williams, Tony Sudekum, R. L. Burch, J. M. Gray, Jr., H. Sudekum and R. M. Wilson. The company now controls a large string of theaters in Kentucky and Tennessee and is contemplating erection of some new ones.

ALCAZAR AND LYRIC TO BE OVERHAULED.

Following a recent meeting of the Nashville, Atlanta and Chattanooga stockholders in the Lyric Company, of Chattanooga, operators of the Lyric and Alcazar theaters, it was decided to make a number of changes in these houses, and to place them in first class shape. The Alcazar shortly thereafter closed and will be closed for a period of two weeks until decorations can be done over. While the theater is comparatively new, and the decorations have only been in a short time, the latter are in such condition that it will be necessary to do over the entire interior. The original decorator was in no ways responsible for failure of the paint to hold, and he was ordered to rush the work, and was unable to let it dry properly. The theater company had no come back on the contractor as a result. The Alcazar pictures will be shown at the Lyric theater until the Alcazar is ready to reopen. Manager Frank H. Dowler, Jr., recently stated that there was no foundation for reports that the Alcazar would be equipped with a larger stage, a balcony, etc., and arranged it for a vaudeville or light musical comedy house. When repairs on the Alcazar are completed the Lyric will be closed for about a week. The Lyric has been doing nicely as a moving picture theater.

BIJOU MAY SOON REOPEN.

For a time it appeared as if the Bijou theater, at Chattanooga, Tenn., would open for its regular bookings this fall. Jake Wells' lease on the theater recently expired, and control of the showhouse reverted to the Chatt-Nash Company. It has lately been announced that C. R. Offutt, who managed the theater for Jake Wells last season, and W. A. Sheetz, manager of the Vendome theater, of Nashville, are about to close a deal whereby the theater will again be operated. It is understood that if the deal is put through the Bijou will open its doors about Sept. 1 with the big screen drama "The Birth of a Nation." It is hinted that admission prices will be the largest ever charged in Chattanooga for a moving picture performance if this picture is shown. The house will probably show the big legitimate attractions after the big film is shown.

CHATTANOOGA ITEMS.

The Alhambra theater, of Chattanooga, Tenn., has been showing one new episode of "The Exploits of Elaine" each day. This is a rather novel arrangement in showing serial films, and is said to be taking extremely well. These stories are proving immensely popular in Chattanooga and are gaining new friends every day.

W. A. Sheetz, manager of the Vendome theater, of Nashville, Tenn., has returned from New York, Atlantic City and other eastern points which he visited. He was accompanied by C. R. Offutt, of Chattanooga. Mr. Sheetz is making arrangements to start the legitimate season at the Vendome with "The Birth of a Nation," the big Thomas Dixon play which is now shown in film form. The two theatrical managers had a pleasant outing in the east. At Washington they ran into the Washington correspondent of the Tennessean, who promptly grabbed off a combined news and comedy story concerning the trip and future arrangements for the Tennessee theatrical season.

The Sixth Avenue Property Company, of Nashville, Tenn., is reported to have let a contract to the Foster-Creighton Company, of Nashville, for the foundations for the theater and store building to be erected on Sixth avenue North. Marr & Holman, of Nashville, are the architects.

Moving pictures were made of the Commerce avenue fire department, of Knoxville, Tenn., during the latter part of July. At an appointed hour all of the companies responded to a false alarm and came rushing from all the fire stations. All the equipment and men were arranged in front of the station while the pictures were completed. They will be shown in some of the Knoxville theaters shortly.

CINCINNATI HAS A NEW SCHOOL OF ACTING.

By Kenneth C. Crain, Cincinnati Correspondent Moving Picture World.

AMBITIOUS persons desirous of breaking into pictures from the acting end, of whom there are large numbers, according to local producers and would-be producers, will now have an opportunity to secure some professional coaching and some actual experience before presenting their applications. The first school for this purpose in Cincinnati, and perhaps the first in the country without questionable correspondence methods attached, has been opened in the Lyric theater building by Rex Weber and Miss Marjorie LeFern, under the name of the Five A Studios.

Both have done creditable work, on the stage as well as in moving pictures, returning recently from San Antonio, where Mr. Weber directed and played leads, while Miss LaFern, who is Mrs. Weber in private life, played leading parts, in a number of productions. It is understood that arrangements have been perfected here by which students taking the course will be given an opportunity to appear in actual productions, making the project really unique. The first term, which begins on August 16, is twelve weeks in length, indicating that some real work will be expected of students.

ONE AIRDOME MAKING MONEY.

The management of the Orpheum, the big Walnut Hills house, can testify out of profitable experience to the fact that nothing succeeds like success. In spite of the most remarkably wintry summer weather which has ever been experienced in these latitudes, the Orpheum roof theater, with its breezes, which are much too cool for real comfort in this sort of weather, has been crowded nightly, save when there was actual rain; and the obvious need for greater seating space led the management to dispense with the rows of tables which formerly fringed the roof on two sides. While many of the theater's patrons undoubtedly regretted the elimination of the refreshment feature, which formerly made it a very roof-gardeny place to spend an evening, the addition of several rows of seats has helped out considerably, and will in the course of the season mean a substantial addition to the revenues of the house.

APPEAL REAL ESTATE CASE.

The famous case involving title to the ground upon which the Family theater stands, in which it was decided a few months ago that Robert H. O'Neal, a grocery clerk, owns some of the most valuable land in Cincinnati, has been appealed by the defendants to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and will be reviewed by that and possibly the Supreme Court of the United States before the present holders of the property give up the fight. In the meantime, however, the Family goes on the even tnor of its way, as it is in nowise involved in the fight, being protected by a court order governing the payment of rentals during the litigation; and regardless of the outcome of the suit, it goes without saying that as a very valuable tenant the theater will be retained in either case.

"THE MAID OF THE MIAMI."

The Victoria theater, of Dayton, profited handsomely last week from the universal interest of people in themselves. In other words, it exhibited for the first time the much-talked-of Dayton photoplay, "The Maid of the Miami," in which familiar points of interest about the city are shown, and well-known local people take the principal parts. In several scenes large crowds were utilized, and as the total number of people participating in this way is estimated at 17,000, the play had a large number to draw upon for audiences. The Victoria management made a hit by supplementing the play by other local pictures during the week, the National Cash Register Co. supplying some and the city park department others, so that an all-Dayton program was offered. Incidentally, a charge of 20 cents for lower-floor seats was made in the evening. The Paragon Feature Film Co. of Omaha produced the play, directed by O. W. Lamb.

IN AND NEAR CINCINNATI.

Lima, Ohio, moved into the limelight last week in a rather conspicuous, but at the same time unfortunate, manner. The city was swept by a severe storm, accompanied by rains which produced a flood-stage of the river, and the resulting devastation was sufficient to cause the city to be featured in the Pathe News Weekly at the Lyric theater. Recently Lima also received honorable mention in the Weekly, on account of the celebration which it staged on the occasion of the stopping there of the Liberty Bell en route to San Francisco; and while of course the city was far from glad of the storm, which involved loss of life, at the same time it noted with a chastened pride the amount of publicity involved in figuring so often in the moving-picture news. The Lyric experienced heavy business when it showed the Pathe pictures.

The People's Theater Amusement Co. of Cincinnati, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000, for the purpose of operating a moving-picture theater.

The company has not announced its plans in detail, but it will probably construct a new house. Those interested are Francis R. Hoover, Rankin Jones, Jr., Spencer M. Jones, Nicholas J. Hoban, Jr., and S. Moore.

"The Battle of Ballots," the Star Film Company's feature, had an increasingly popular week's run at the Columbus theater, Columbus, O. Friday receipts doubled those of the opening Monday.

Two houses in the vicinity of Cincinnati, including Heuck's theater, a big house on Vine street formerly devoted to vaudeville, and the Rex, at Erlanger, Ky., are numbered among the business concerns which have joined in a new business-getting stunt operated by a Cincinnati enterprise called the National Travel Co. The company furnishes for use by those who use its system coupons, given to patrons, which are good for railroad mileage, and the plan is said to be working very successfully.

G. M. Westley, of the Royal theater, 234 East Federal street, Youngstown, Ohio, and the National Film Service Co., of Pittsburgh, were recently involved in litigation over the rental price of the production known as "Through the Enemy's Lines," a film play which has been much favored among the pro-Germans. The service company sued for a balance of $50 alleged to be due on the $75 charged for the use of the film.

IN LOUISVILLE.

Dell G. C. Bramble, of the Blache Feature Film Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., was a recent visitor to Louisville, where he called on a number of the exhibitors.

Pictures of the Eastland disaster were shown in nearly every theater in Louisville, and attracted a good deal of attention.

Robert Lucas, proprietor of the Clifton theater, recently returned from a very enjoyable fishing trip which was spent up in the state. The Clifton has been handling a nice volume of business throughout the entire summer.

A. L. Smith, of Owensboro, Ky., proprietor of the old airdome on Frederica street, is preparing to dismantle the old amusement place and erect a business building on the property. The seats of the old theater have been offered to the city for use in the new pavilion at Hickman Park.

At Vanceburg, Ky., J. M. Donahoo & Company have commenced building a new opera house on the lot occupied formerly by the old theater. The theater will be on the second floor of the new structure, and the lower floor will be used as storerooms.

Leo L. Oberwrath, an architect, of Lexington, Ky., is superintending the overhauling and repairing of the Frankfort, Ky., opera house. The repairs will cost about $7,000 and will include new electric fixtures, painting, plastering and general remodeling.

Moving pictures have proved interesting this season to the patrons of Fern Grove, a big private park which is operated by the Louisville and Jeffersonville Ferry Company. The boat company charges 25 cents for a round trip by boat to the resort, which is about 15 miles up the Ohio River, and on the Indiana side. The pictures are free. There is some talk of the resort being taken over by large hotel interests, and in this event a big summer hotel would be built on the property.

Arthur V. Scheckler, formerly of Louisville, who operated a moving picture theater at Vincennes, Ind., for the past year or so, recently returned to Louisville. He is now connected with John S. Purnett in managing the new Green Dragon theater, at Shelbyville, Ky. The Green Dragon and Brown's theater recently showed the Eastland disaster on the same day, both houses drawing nicely.

"Hypocrites" Went Well

In Louisville, Though Some Exhibitors Feared That Coming of Bosworth Parable Offering Would Excite Censorship Agitation, Picture Proved Acceptable—Ran Full Week to Big Crowds—Mayor Approved—No Unfriendly Criticism.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Louisville Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

FEARS of the timid that the exhibition of "Hypocrites" in Louisville might provoke agitation in favor of censorship were dissolved with the highly successful run of the feature at the Alamo last week. The allegorical presentation of Truth, even though involving the use of the figure of an undraped woman, was so artistically done, and carried such a strong moral lesson, that instead of being condemned, it was approved. One of those who placed the stamp of his approval on "Hypocrites" was Mayor John H. Buschemeyer, who said that it was not objectionable, as far as he could see. The picture ran the full week and was shown to big crowds, while newspaper comment of an unfriendly nature was lacking. Even those exhibitors who had refrained from showing the film in their own houses on account of possible objections admitted that Louisville is a much more liberal city than they had imagined. At all events the ghost of censorship aroused by the discussion has been laid, and the theater proprietors are breathing freely again.

MRS. SHELLEY PLANS NEW VENTURE.

Mrs. W. H. Shelley, who recently exhibited moving pictures in Macauley's theater, is much pleased with her first experience in the business, and is planning a new venture which she says will attract general attention. Her exhibition at Macauley's was largely in the nature of an experiment, and proved very valuable to Louisville's only woman exhibitor in showing her the important features of the situation. The fact that she closed up after a few weeks' run was not due, she asserts, to losing money, but to the fact that the Board of Public Safety insisted on changes being made in the character of the operating booth which was being used. An asbestos booth had been installed originally, but this did not meet with the approval of the safety officials, who ordered a sheet-steel one substituted. Mrs. Shelley had borrowed the booth from a local theater proprietor and was not familiar with the regulations, so that when the city offcials entered their order she decided to suspend operations for the time being.

LOUISVILLE EVENING POST ANSWERS PICTURE QUESTIONS.

The Louisville Evening Post has started a special department known as "Answers to Movie Fans." Questions of general interest are answered in the column as soon as the information can be secured. It is interesting to note how many people take advantage of the column and the wide range of questions asked. A good many of the questions concern plays in which certain actors have appeared. Every now and then personal questions as to age, wedlock and similar questions will be received concerning actors. Others are looking for places to sell moving picture scenarios. One of the funniest answers that the paper has published was addressed to J. B., and read: "Charles Chaplin is not in the insane asylum. He is working hard every day for the Essanay Company at the company's studio in Los Angeles."

LOUISVILLIANS WATCHING HOBART HENLEY.

Louisville people were somewhat interested in a recent announcement in which it was stated that Hobart Henley, a former Louisville boy, does the best work of his career in the recently produced picture "The Little Brother of the Rich," the Broadway Universal Feature in which Hobart Bosworth is starred, and in which Jane Novak is also cast.

LOUISVILLE BUILDING CODE DISTRIBUTED.

W. J. O'Sullivan, the city building inspector of Louisville, has been after the moving picture exhibitors again, and is cautioning them against failure properly to observe the building ordinance in connection with moving picture theater equipment. A copy of the code was recently mailed to each exhibitor with a special letter. Mr. O'Sullivan has become very strict in the matter of proper booths, etc., and has announced that the code is going to be rigidly enforced.

PROFIT FROM POLITICS.

A number of the Louisville moving picture theaters have been reaping a nice harvest in connection with the primaries held previously to the fall election. Practically every theater in the city is showing a number of moving picture slides of the candidates for election. A good price is obtained for this service.

SHELDON BACK AT HEAD OF S. & P.

Fred Sheldon, of Louisville, has returned to the S. & P. Film and Supply Company and resumed his former duties as general manager, succeeding Harry Greenway, who recently resigned and left the city. Mr. Sheldon was one of the original incorporators of the company, the initials of which stand for Sheldon and Pressy. Mr. Sheldon left to become local manager for the Mutual Film Corporation, but severed his connections there shortly afterwards with the intention of opening a moving picture house in the country. At one time he was Southern representative for the Kentucky branch of the Kinemacolor Company, of New York, and was also in charge of the office at one time maintained in Louisville by the Warner Film Corporation.

LOUISVILLE GOSSIP NOTES.

The Owl Feature Film Company recently supplied the seats, machines, booth and other equipment installed in the new Grand Central Amusement Company's theater, at Fourth and Central avenues, in South Louisville. The new theater has a capacity of 150 people, and is located in a good district.

The Magnolia Garden Hotel Company has purchased machines and other equipment with which to give free motion pictures in its big summer garden at Fourth and Avery streets. No admission price will be charged for the shows, which will take the place of the cabaret performances that have been shown in the popular garden for the past two or three seasons.

Judge W. Allen Kinney, of the Princess Amusement Company, has returned from a pleasure and business trip to New York. While in the East Judge Kinney purchased one of the old Keystone comedies, known as "Making a Living." The film has been played in the houses controlled by the Princess Amusement Company, and is now being booked around town.

Robert Haines, local manager for the Mutual Film Corporation, has returned from a vacation trip which took in Cincinnati, Toledo, Cleveland and Detroit.

Packed Aisles in St. Paul

Minnesota State Fire Marshal Hargadine Concerned About Conditions in Many St. Paul Picture Houses—No Law at Present Governing Standing Room in the Aisles—Measure Will Be Put Through at Once.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

DANGER of fires in St. Paul, Minn., picture houses is so great that State Fire Marshal Hargadine is "satisfied that the situation is one deserving of immediate and stern attention." Packed aisles is the greatest peril. There is no local ordinance to prevent this.

The fire marshal wrote City Commissioner McColl:

"An investigation of moving picture theaters in St. Paul by this department has disclosed the fact that it is the practice of a number of such theaters to pack people in the aisle and passageways back of the seats, which is very dangerous.

"On looking up the ordinance of St. Paul I find there is but one covering the congregating of people in the aisles and passageways of theaters. This is Sec. 317 of the building code. Upon taking up the matter with Corporation Attorney O'Neill, I am advised this ordinance is unconstitutional because of the penalty provided. This ordinance only covers theaters where stage scenery and apparatus is employed and I am unable to find that St. Paul has any law prohibiting the packing of aisles and passageways in exclusive moving picture theaters.

"I would respectfully suggest that you have an ordinance passed covering this matter so the local authorities can remedy conditions in St. Paul theaters, which are very serious and at any time liable to cause catastrophe by allowing people in the aisles and passageways of moving picture theaters. This department has had the matter up with Corporation Attorney O'Neill and I believe you will find his department is considering the drawing up of such an ordinance.

"I have investigated conditions in St. Paul for several weeks," he said in discussing the letter, "and I am satisfied that the situation is one deserving of immediate and stern attention. A moving picture theater burned down in the northern part of the state, but fortunately there were few people in the building at the time. Should such a fire occur in some one of our packed St. Paul moving picture theaters, I should hate to be held responsible, but so far as St. Paul is concerned I find my department is practically helpless. Hence my letter to Mr. McColl."

As the present ordinance will not "hold water" and exhibitors seem little inclined to remedy the situation, City Attorney McNeill is drafting a new measure designed to make motion picture men "toe the mark."

By using the still fresh Eastland disaster as an object lesson local editorial writers have created an uneasiness among theaters that cannot but hurt business.

POPULAR MUSIC IN DULUTH.

If somebody on a Duluth paper had asked a little information of local exhibitors before running an editorial on the high standard of music in English picture houses, the space might have been used for something better. The Rex Beautiful theater was especially aggrieved because Kenneth E. Runkel, organist, was just finishing his fourth twelve-week engagement of "playing the pictures" with operatic music. The organ at the Rex has great resources and, as Mr. Runkel put it, it was not necessary to use "the popular song which is a ballad, over or hypersentimentalized," or "a Bertha M. Clay tone poem." He also asserted that "the Rex patrons do not have the classical music thrust down unwilling throats, but enjoy that kind of music that is and always has been the most popular and for which the highest prices are always paid." In proof of this is his four three-month engagements.

"Moving pictures are silent drama. Grand opera is drama intensified and beautified by music written expressly for this one purpose," he explained, "Therefore in opera music we find that which depicts every atmosphere, emotion and dramatic climax. And since drama, although artificial, in many ways is a reflection or studied mirroring of life, opera music is a tonal mirroring of life or human nature. This is the reason operatic music is and can be enjoyed by those who love music, but have no technical knowledge.

"Thus with this kind of music one is most successful in enveloping the picture with a musical atmosphere; grand opera for the drama and comic opera for the comedy. There are many other sources from which one can draw but operatic music comprises most of the music used."

MINNESOTA BRIEFS.

D. A. Strobl, of Kelly Lake, has taken a two-year lease on the Bijou at Culleth. "Bud" Williams will be local manager.

Bosel & Weise, who operate the Empress theater in Crosby, have started a new motion picture show at Cuyuna.

The Othello theater at Eveleth was condemned by the city council.

Manager W. E. Mick has inaugurated a new policy at the Lyric theater in Minneapolis. Only Paramount pictures are run, the bill changing Sunday and Thursday.

S. J. Devlin has taken a year's lease on the Grand theater at McIntosh.

The Thomas Roddy building on Third avenue in Hibbing is being remodeled for use as a motion picture theater.

Herman L. Benz, who owns the Shubert and Empress building in St. Paul, has a lease on the old library site in St. Paul, and is said to be contemplating the erection of a new theater which will be taken by the Pantages.

F. J. Shimons has transferred a site for a motion picture theater at Snelling and University avenues in St. Paul to the Lake Amusement Company of Minneapolis. The theater, seating 60, is now under construction. It will be known as the Hamline.

J. H. French has sold the Grand theater building at Bemidji to A. T. Carlson.

The Iron Range Railroad gave a "safety first" motion picture show at the Grand theater in Biwabik.

Charles G. Branham, general manager of the Northwest Weekly, and Fred C. Place, news editor, were at Hibbing filming the mining industry.

Mucker & Gaffney of the Orpheum at Morris had people and street scenes there photographed for screen purposes.

MANAGERS IN SUPERIOR QUICK TO ACQUIESCE.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

UPON request of Miss Emma Tyler, policewoman, exhibitors in Superior agreed to discontinue after Aug. 9 all Charlie Chaplin films and others of a similar nature.

Miss Tyler wrote letters to the managers. N. La Page, manager of the People's theater, replied:

"Your letter of notification that the Chaplin films and others of a similar nature will be suppressed meets with my heartiest approval. You have never asked anything unreasonable, and any time you see anything which you consider not exactly right either in our pictures or vaudeville we will be pleased to know it and will do what is requested to eliminate the evil."

"We are pleased to work in harmony with you," said Manager F. C. Buckley of the Princess, Lyric and Strand theaters. "We will gladly discontinue the Charlie Chaplin films or any pictures which might be considered objectionable. You have always taken a broad-minded and liberal stand and we will be pleased to do what we can to make your work easier."

VILLAGE PEOPLE'S THEATER.

The Dousman Business Men's Association, at Dousman, a town of 400 population, in Waukesha county, has started a co-operative motion picture theater. The venture is entirely one of service for the village and vicinity. Any profit will be used to supply better pictures without an advance in price.

It is the plan, according to F. C. Kruger, president of the association, to give a show every Saturday night, in which four reels of pictures will be exhibited. There will be an educational film on each program. About $350 has been spent by the association in fitting up Woodman hall for the shows.

The co-operative plan was developed afted painful experience with private entertainments. A theater was opened last winter and ran twice weekly for two months, finally closing its doors because of lack of patronage. The people were not satisfied with the pictures. Since then there have been frequent moving picture and vaudeville shows given by traveling companies. Lately these organizations have been unable to draw crowds.

A MILWAUKEE PRODUCING CO.

A new producing company in Milwaukee, to be known as the Crossette Film Company, is backed by C. J. Meyer, president of the Evinrude Motor Company. "The Man of the Crib," a marine play with thrilling water scenes, has been produced at Pewaukee Lake.

"My representative is now in New York to dispose of our initial production, and upon the success of his efforts much depends," said Mr. Meyer. "I am not prepared to say what amount our company will be incorporated for, but it will have sufficient capital. Work will be rushed on the studio as soon as the plans for the building are completed."

WISCONSIN SHORT NOTES.

The Educational Lecture and Film Company, of North Fond du Lac, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $1,000. The incorporators are: J. L. McCadden, G. L. Burger and A. B. Weller.

The State Industrial School at Waukesha has installed a motion picture machine and by securing films free from the Department of Visual Instruction at the University of Wisconsin, is enabled to give the boys regular entertainment and education.

Papers at Neenah say that "The Birth of a Nation" positively will be shown in Neenah soon.

The Milwaukee Journal has taken the Wisconsin franchise in the National News Weekly and World Film corporations. The local weekly will be known as the Journal-World News Film Service.

The day of the snake-show-shell-game country fair is passing says a bulletin of the University of Wisconsin. It suggests that the modern fair give more motion picture exhibits of an educational nature, including films of actual farm operations and such useful information as the methods of tying rope knots and splices.

M Pics has had Architect F. W. Andree of Milwaukee draw plans for a reinforced concrete brick and tile, one and two-story, 65x127 motion picture theater at Twenty-seventh and State streets in that city. It will have vapor heating and fan ventilating systems and will cost about $25,000.

NO DISASTER PICTURES IN ST. JOSEPH.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

POLICE at St. Joseph, Mich., prevented the showing of the Eastland disaster films in that city. The pictures were shown in the sister city of Benton Harbor, but drivers of automobiles from Benton Harbor were arrested for advertising the pictures in St. Joseph. The Eastland was a St. Joseph boat, owned by St. Joseph people.

THREE NEW MICHIGAN HOUSES.

The Majestic theater, at Grand Rapids, will open Aug. 29, with feature pictures. Bert St. Johns, of Detroit, will arrive Aug. 22 from San Francisco, where he has been manager of Toyland, to take charge of the house. Included in the attractions will be automobile boxes seating six persons in the rear of the theater, a pipe organ played by Ferdinand Warner and a symphony orchestra.

The New Strand theater, on Monroe avenue, in Grand Rapids, opens Labor Day with a picture policy.

Motion picture theaters in Petroskey opened on Sunday and the city council has been wrestling with the problem. The fact that Petroskey is a resort city and has a large transient population complicates matters.

MICHIGAN MINOR OPERATORS' LAW.

The recent pleading guilty of Ben Gettlemen, of Hancock, to violating the motion picture law by employing an underaged operator, has caused Fire Marshal Winship again to call the attention of the moving picture theater owners to the law in all its details.

AMONG MICHIGAN THEATERS.

E. L. Butterworth, of Coldwater, has purchased the Gem, at Hillsdale, from Manager Sargent, and has re-equipped it.

Lee Lazelle, of Benton Harbor, has accepted the management of the new house which the Paul J. Schlossman Company has erected in Muskegon.

Don H. Finkle, of the Family, at North Branch, was called to California by the illness of his father and closed his house.

The opera house at Boyne City had a snapshot man at work on the streets getting slide material.

Mrs. Lou C. Fitch, of Grand Rapids, has sold the Lyric theater, at St. Joseph, to a Mr. Kahn, of Chicago.

Free motion picture shows are being given on the streets by business men at Reading. A similar plan has been formulated at Menominee, where thirty-five business men have signed up for an eight weeks' series of such entertainments.

S. C. Knapp has sold the Temple theater, at 337 North Main street, in Ann Arbor, to Marion E. Goodale, of that city.

The Majestic opened in its handsome new home at Owosso, with Robert Edeson in "On the Night Stage."

Edward Johnson, of St. Ignace, and Charles Ellison, of New York, has leased the John Mulcrone building, in St. Ignace, and have been fitting it up for use as a motion picture theater.

J. W. Gilbert has leased the Classik theater, in Algonac, to James J. Harper.

George E. Martin & Son sold the Crystal theater, at Grand Lodge, to Ray B. Wilcox and Roy E. Bush, of Hastings.

"The Call of the North" played a return date at the Aladdin theater, in Bay City.

The European war pictures were shown at the Post theater, in Battle Creek, under the auspices of Enquirer and News, of that city.

The Bijou, at Bay City, is being redecorated. Pink predominates in the interior and tan in the lobby.

The Wenonah Beach Casino, at Bay City, showed to grocers and butchers at a picnic, films of their outing, held the year before.

Graded License Fees

Bloomington, Illinois, Imposes Extra Municipal License Fee of $20 a Year to Users of Advertising Slides or Curtains—Regular License Fees Fixed According to Price of Admission—Run from $200 to $80.

By Frank H. Madison, Illinois Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

AN extra municipal license fee of $20 a year will be charged Bloomington, Ill., motion picture houses which use advertising slides or curtains. An ordinance drafted for the city council provides for this and also fixes the license as follows:

Theaters charging admission of 50 cents or over—$200 per year.

Vaudeville theaters charging admission between 10 and 50 cents—$120 per year.

Motion picture theaters charging admission between 10 and 50 cents—$100 per year.

Motion picture theaters charging admission between 5 and 10 cents—$80 per year.

PICTURES BENEFIT INSANE.

Motion pictures have proved a more potent factor than phonographs in the stimulation of patients in advanced convalescence, according to officials at the Jacksonville State Hospital for the Insane. Other hospitals in Illinois have been using the musical treatment, but Dr. Edward L. Hill has put considerable faith in the recreative effect of films and installed a complete outfit to be used in giving shows to patients on the road to mental recovery.

OPERATING ROOM TOO HOT.

When the pictures went wrong at the Gaiety theater, in Kankakee, an investigation revealed that Stanford Remington, operator, had fainted in the operating room, presumably from heat. He fell across the machine and suffered a severe burn on the forehead.

NEW THEATER IN BENTON, ILL.

Benton is likely to have four motion picture houses. W. W. McCreery is rebuilding the burned McCreery block, which will contain a big photoplay theater. A. E. Martin will build a new house and W. W. McFall will convert the Auditorium into a ground floor theater. The Crystal already is in operation.

ILLINOIS SHOWMANSHIP CLOSE-UPS.

Illinois managers are doing some "sharpshooting" at possible patrons to keep the houses comfortably filled in a gloomy season. There has been an unprecedented series of rains which has hurt business in the smaller cities. When the clouds were gone the people rushed for the picnic grounds and other attractions, so either way the picture houses held the sack. Playing local pictures is one method that helped bring out crowds as people like to see themselves as others see them. Home made films were found in the week's programs at the Criterion Skydome, in East St. Louis; the Apollo, at Peoria; the Empire, at Morris; the Washington Skydome, at Belleville; the Gaiety, at Springfield, which had "The Mine Owner's Daughter," a mediocre home-talent reel, and the Knights of Pythias opera house, at Pittsfield, which ran the films of its sister city, Barry. Capt. Hugh King, of Quincy, took to Lima the films he made there Independence day, and local church women gave a supper in connection with his show, making it a gala event. Manager Kizer of the Lyric, at Litchfield, is arranging a local photoplay. So is the Daily Herald, at Morris, who has secured the Zenith Motion Picture Company, of Chicago, to do the work.

Manager Lee Woodyatt opened the remodeled Colonial, at Rock Island, with "The Commuters." Roses were given lady patrons as appropriate to the new color scheme of the hangings and light shades. A new gold fibre screen has been installed. "Cool as a cave" is the well-coined phrase of the Empress, at Galesburg, but low temperatures have made it available only now and then. The Willard, at Kewanee, announces a new policy which will make it a comedy feature theater. The Barrison, at Waukegan, also catered to the laugh seekers with a Chaplin comedy carnival. The Princess, at Monmouth, showed the Williamson submarine pictures at 10 and 15 cents, terming it a "Packard value at Ford prices." A drug store at Hebron is giving tickets with each $1 purchase which are good for all 15-cent motion picture shows at the Hebron opera house. The Apollo, at Ottawa, has installed a new electric sign. The Princess, at Freeport, is conducting a voting contest with two free trips to the California fairs, and articles dear to the feminine heart as prizes. The West theater, at Galesburg, gets people to read its ad by publishing names of local residents who can secure two free tickets by presenting the ad at the box office. A Franklin boy needed an ankle brace so he could go to school, and Manager Elgin Olinger of the Princess gave a benefit performance of "Enoch Arden." White Brothers gave a benefit at the Electric, in Minooka, for the M. E. Church. "The Fortune Hunter" was the Labor Temple's attraction for a benefit for a Staunton mine workers' union.

FILMS HELP EVENING SERVICE.

Other churches in Elgin attacked Rev. George Gable, pastor of M. E. Church, for using motion pictures. The Sunday night film, "The Prodigal Son," was his effective reply.

"Here are 400 persons present," he said. "Do any of you regard this service as 'substitutional?' You know all is supplemental to Jesus Christ. The King of the Ages deserves the best we may afford."

More than a few persons on leaving the church remarked that they never had such a vision of the love of God.

ILLINOIS JOTTINGS.

There was practically no objection by municipal authorities to showing the Eastland disaster films. Many newspapers, however, decried the catering to morbid curiosity. These were the same papers that used all the pictures of the disaster they could secure and gave none of the money for relief.

George Houchens has purchased a motion picture show in Nauvoo. O. E. Babb will assist in its operation.

The Broadway Theater Company, Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are Benjamin E. Kahane, Orville W. Lee and George A. Trude.

M. C. Stewart has sold the Lyric, at Robinson, to G. W. Owings, of Winchester, and probably will engage in the photoplay business in some other city.

The Order of Eastern Star, at Harvard, has purchased a motion picture machine and will use it in connection with lodge meetings.

The Electric theater, at Manteno is running but three nights a week.

Walter Spoor expects to have the new Academy theater at Genesee and Clayton streets, in Waukegan, constructed and open by Nov. 1. Aside from the building, $10,000 will be expended in equipping it as a motion picture house.

Ben Davidson on Censors

Superintendent of Police at Houston, Texas, Makes Pertinent Remarks on the Question of Local Censorship and Censoring in General—Addresses Convention of City Marshals and Chiefs of Police Association at Fort Worth.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

AS long as public opinion controls in the United States, progress must be made slowly and with inevitable compromises. As long as there are tolerated yellow journals, sexual books, smart magazines, musical comedies, third rate vaudevilles, easily obtained divorces and reformatories which deform, public servants who are acting as censors cannot go too far nor too fast with motion pictures."

This is one of the most striking paragraphs from a paper on censorship read before the convention of the City Marshals and Chiefs of Police Association of Texas at Fort Worth, by Ben S. Davidson, superintendent of police at Houston.

This utterance was not warranted by the array of facts in Mr. Davidson's address. He did not make out a case for local censorship, the nearest approach was the statement that "it is recognized that moral sentiment differs decidedly on particular questions throughout the country." Some extracts from his paper follow:

Whenever supervision is attempted, we discover that we defeat our own ends if it becomes formal, dictatorial or oppressive. It is undoubtedly needed, but should have its well defined methods and there should be recognition of its limitations. It should be accompanied by sympathy and understanding. Not all persons are fitted by nature or by training to regulate plays or motion pictures. . . .

By some mysterious law when anybody is set upon or sets himself up to safeguard other people's morals he nearly always makes an ass of himself. The quantity of bad and good books and good and bad dramas and motion pictures that have been pushed to a financial success by misguided efforts to suppress them on moral grounds is prodigious.

It should be easy to draw a line between the mere exploitation of indecency and plain speaking addressed to persons able to profit by it.

In practically all cases, with the exception of Chicago, the officials have sought to obtain the advice of the national board of censorship. In all cases independent judgment should be encouraged, as it is recognized that moral sentiment differs decidedly on particular questions throughout the country.

The national board of censorship has established standards which are the outgrowth of long experience. Yet failure of their approval does not prevent the film from being shown or exhibited. The great mass of people are slow to act in immoral and illegal ways. They require decided stimulus to cause them to commit immoral acts. There are, however, a few in each community who are unusually open to surface influences. The rest of society must be protected from these people. . . .

In my judgment it is not only necessary to maintain police and federal supervision of motion pictures, but also to work out methods which will combine both democratic control and skillful cooperation with the management of motion picture shows.

We will admit that many forces are at work in the modern American city for breaking down the home life. Most of the public and commercial amusements tend to draw people away on the basis of sex or age. The motion picture stands out as one of the elements which is helping in a way to conserve the home. Thousands of families can be found nightly wending their way to the neighboring picture show and quite as many around the dinner table discussing among themselves the ideas which have been presented in the neighboring theater. . . .

Among all places of public amusement the motion picture ranks as a wholesome influence. It has proved to be a successful rival and substitute for the saloon. It is playing its part in binding together the family. It is taking the young people by the thousands off the street at night. It is opening the eyes of the intellectually blind and is breaking down the walls of tolerance and narrowness. It is teaching more effectively moral principles in an age when it is difficult to get the eye or the ear of the masses for such instruction. . . .

The motion picture has been adopted by the country as one of the greatest forms of amusement. Those who find it harmful or negative or vulgar, know little of humanity. Motion pictures have slipped into a position which is being recognized as second to only the church and school as an instrument for public entertainment and moral inspiration. . .

Enough can not be said of motion pictures as an educational factor. They are the greatest educational element of this country. Motion pictures show the world how the other half lives. They serve to banish ignorance and superstition, and through them we are getting acquainted with the world, and the world is being brought to our doors. The desire of the public to know is being satisfied because motion pictures have made it possible and show us.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE OPENS FOR FALL SEASON.

By A. H. Giebler, St. Louis Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Grand Opera House on Market near Sixth street, opened for the fall season on Aug. 9, with a bill of vaudeville and moving pictures. Harry R. Wallace, manager of the Grand, ran a long and successful season last year, and only closed his house late in June in order to make necessary repairs and improvements. The Grand begins its daily show at eleven o'clock in the morning and is continuous until eleven at night. Five reels of pictures are shown, besides several numbers of vaudeville. The admission is ten and twenty cents.

S. W. HATCH, OF V-L-S-E, ILL.

S. W. Hatch, manager of the local V-L-S-E exchange, was laid up last week with a severe attack of ptomaine poisoning. Mr. Hatch and J. A. Noehrn, assistant manager of the exchange, and a representative of the Selig Polyscope Co., of Chicago, had dinner together Sunday night, and mushrooms were an item of the menu. Mr. Noehrn also partook of the edible fungi but suffered no ill effects, so it is not known whether it was toadstools, mushrooms, or just Mr. Ptomaine Germ that put Mr. Hatch on his back. It was serious, however.

MAMIE MIKSICEK WITH KALEM.

Robert Miksicek, proprietor and manager of the Maryland theater and airdome on South 13th street, is proudly informing his friends and acquaintances that his daughter, Mamie, who went to New York a few weeks ago with a firm determination to become a moving picture actress, has found employment at the Kalem studios. Miss Miksicek has been a student of the drama ever since she could read, and her resolve to go to New York was not lessened because her parents opposed the idea at first, she only waited until their trust in her became great enough to let her go and try her fortune in the great film manufacturing city. Miss Miksicek is beloved of all her acquaintances and neighbors, having assisted her father in his theater until she knew all the patrons by name, and there is patient waiting at the Maryland for the first release to be issued by Kalem with Mamie Miksicek in the cast of characters.

BUILDING A NEW THEATER ON NORTH BROADWAY.

A new theater is being projected at 209 North Broadway, by George Angelich, proprietor of the Rainbow theater, Dr. Brand, a west end physician, and others. The remodeling of the building will cost approximately $8,000, and the equipment $3,000, which will be installed by the Lears Supply Co. The house will seat 700, and will open early in the fall.

BY YE GREAT HORN SPOON.

The Hippodrome, Sixth and Walnut streets, is advertised to open soon under the name of "New Grand Duchess." The Hippodrome is one of the largest and most expensive theater buildings in St. Louis. The new management promises from ten to fifteen reels of pictures, changed daily; for five cents admission!

ST. LOUIS PICTURE GOSSIP.

A rather pretentious moving picture production is in preparation by the smart set of St. Louis society. A scenario is being written by William Le Baume and A. J. Lindsay, two young men of talent. J. D. Wooster Lambert, another young man of various accomplishments, will be camera man, while Mrs. Samuel C. Davis will select the cast for the photoplay and assist in the directing. The film is to be completed in November, when it will be exhibited at the Victoria at Delmar and Grand avenues, the proceeds of the first three performances to be given to the St. Louis Protestant Orphan Home.

The Minnesota airdome, on Minnesota avenue, in Carondelet, South St. Louis, has changed management recently, and is now operated by S. J. Hankin, who is a veteran exhibitor.

The Business Men's League of St. Louis is having a moving picture film made of the voyage down the Mississippi River from St. Louis to South America, which it intends to use to exploit and revive river traffic. S. R. Brokbank, camera man, connected with the American Film Company, departed on the steamer Steel City, from St. Louis to New Orleans, where he will reship for South America. The films are to contain scenes of all the principal points and landings along the river.

The Kriterion Film Exchange in St. Louis has made arrangements to distribute the Standard Photoplay program of New York, according to J. W. Cotter, manager of the local office, of the Kriterion.

F. M. Wotke, manager of the Arco, one of the Associated Theaters company's big houses situated at 4207 Manchester avenue, ran a film a thousand feet on August 5th, showing the workings of the Independent Packing Plant; how meat is prepared for the market, showing everything but the actual slaughtering of animals. The pictures were made to be shown at the San Francisco. Manager Wotke heard of it, and as his theater is in the neighborhood of the packing plant, and a number of his patrons are employed there, he secured the film for a night's engagement, and packed his house. Officials of the packing house attended the show as well as State Food Inspector Fricke.

M. J. Walsh, who is one of the partners of the Manchester Amusement Co., and has been managing the theater operated by the company at 4257 Manchester avenue during the absence of J. W. Price, who took a trip to the San Francisco Fair, reports that Mr. Price is having a "big time," according to his letters, and says that he visited Universal City.

DETROIT SHORT STOPS.

The Pathe branch in the Peter Smith building is to move to more suitable quarters on East Jefferson avenue. The change will be made by the 1st of September.

The Detroit Times, in conjunction with the World Film Corporation, is showing the Times Weekly news film.

Ed V. McGrath, of the Maxine theater, Mack and Baldwin avenues, says business is great. He states that he is turning people away four nights a week.

Eddie Murphy, of the Gladwin Park theater, is proving to the directors of that playhouse that big features pay. Mr. Murphy says that no features are too big for him. He tried out a stunt of playing "Sins of the Mother" for two days. He packed them in both days. "Features are what the people want out here," he remarked. "Of course I also believe in giving a few comedies and short reels occasionally in connection with them, depending on the length of the feature. Our business is improving considerably and we are away ahead of last year."

For the week of Aug. 8 the Majestic theater showed the Fox film "Dr. Rameau." The Broadway-Strand played the V-S-L-E feature "The Climbers," during the same week. The more one visits the Majestic the more one can understand why it is doing such an enormous business. It is indeed a gorgeous playhouse. The service you get there is wonderful. The organization in every respect is most complete. Manager McGee is always on the job and is working constantly for even greater efficiency. The Majestic certainly gives a great show for the money.

The Fidelity Motion Picture Co., of Detroit, has been organized with a capital stock of $50,000. The purpose of the company is to produce pictures. Arrangements are now being made for a studio. The principal stockholders are Frank W. Pecker, E. E. Englehart and Harriet E. Mills.

ARTCRAFT SCREEN CO. IN DETROIT.

Detroit has been made headquarters for the Artcraft Screen Company, which has just been organized in Port Huron, Mich., to manufacture screens for moving picture theaters. Two styles will be made, one called "The Aircraft Gold Woven," and the other "The Artcraft Sterling Wonder." Both are made without seams and are sold with a guarantee. The company is heavily financed by Port Huron capitalists. The Detroit offices are located at 903-904 Majestic building.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER SPENDS WEEK HERE.

William Alexander, special representative of the Fox Film Corporation, with his assistants, William Bernstein and Jerome Abrams, has been spending a week in Detroit. His assistants have been signing up new business in the territory and have been very successful. Mr. Alexander told the World representative that Detroit was the only city in the country for its size with five houses playing features an entire week. He also said that the outskirt houses in Detroit were far superior to those in Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore and the big eastern cities.

STANDARD FILM MEN IN TOWN.

M. A. Lebensburger, of the Standard Film Service Co., of Cleveland, has been spending ten days in Detroit on special work. Mr. Harry Charnos, general manager of the company, was also in Detroit for a few days. The local office of the Standard has been doing such a big business that more room is necessary, hence the firm has leased additional space and will now occupy practically one-half of the fourth floor of the Peter Smith building. The Detroit branch is under the management of Bert Deiner.

New Michigan Fire Rules

State Fire Marshal's Office Has Revised Its Rules and Regulations—Cloth Advertising Signs Prohibited as Fire Hazards—Aisle Seats Barred; Will Be Counted as a Nuisance—Booths Must Be According to Rules.

By Jacob Smith, Detroit (503 Free Press Bldg.) Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE State Fire Marshal's office for Michigan has revised its rules and regulations for fire prevention and has issued the following statement, which is a very important one and which should be carefully read by every exhibitor in the state as well as every exchange man:

Cloth Advertising Signs.

The use of cloth advertising signs in front of stores, vacant buildings and on billboards is a decided fire hazard and a menace to life and property, and the use of same is hereby prohibited. A twenty-four hour notice from the State Fire Marshal, Assistant State Fire Marshal or any Deputy State Fire Marshal to any owner of stores, vacant buildings or bill boards or occupant thereof, shall be considered sufficient notice for such owner or occupant to comply with the above regulation, and at the expiration of such notice, the State Fire Marshal or any of his assistants is hereby given authority to remove such cloth advertising signs.

In this connection the State Fire Marshal has written the following personal letter to every exchange in Michigan: "You will note that Section 15 relates to the use of cloth advertising signs in front of all buildings. The State Fire Marshal is warned that the signs used in front of theaters come under the operation of this section. I would suggest that you at once make arrangements to replace the lithographs you are at present sending to your patrons with a style which does not include cloth in its make-up. Cloth signs will not be permitted, either when used on bulletin boards, as banners or on streamers."

The exchange men of Detroit plan an early meeting to see what can be done. The enforcement of this section cannot fail to work a hardship on the exhibitors as well as the exchange men, although it is believed that after it is in operation for some time it will be a good thing. It is sure to revolutionize the front of theaters. New frames will have to be built for unmounted paper, and this will prove a big saving to the exchanges. As for the exhibitors, they will buy their paper instead of renting it, as has been the case for some time. The exhibitor will benefit in the long run, because he will not be bothered with renting his paper, and will always have clean paper in his frames and in front of his theater. Several leading exhibitors frankly expressed the opinion to the World representative that they would rather use less paper and have it nice and clean. There is such a thing as getting too much paper in front of your theater.

Aisle Seats.

Section No. 17 of the Fire Marshal's regulations is also a very strict and important one. It follows: "The use of chairs or seats in the aisles of any theater, opera house, church, school, auditorium or hall where the public is allowed to congregate, is hereby prohibitde, and all aisles and exits in any theater, opera house, church, school, auditorium or hall where the public is allowed to congregate must be kept clear and unobstructed during entertainments, lectures or other exercises. These regulations shall take effect and be in force from and after the first day of July, 1915. A violation of these regulations is hereby declared to constitute a nuisance, and any person, firm, board or corporation violating such regulations shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than ninety days or both by fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court."

Operating Rooms.

In the monthly news bulletin issued by the State Fire Marshal's office is contained this article, which is also of considerable interest to all exhibitors: "Several theater owners in different sections of the state who recently installed new theaters or remodeled their old houses have found, after building new picture booths that did not comply with the law, it necessary to go to the expense of tearing out same and replacing with booths according to the provisions of the Michigan Moving Picture law. Fire Marshal Winship wants it thoroughly understood that all provisions of the law are being enforced by this department and that the old style sheet iron or metal booth, lined with asbestos paper, or the booth built of mill or plaster board, will not pass inspection. Owners building new theaters or remodeling booths will save considerable expense by following the above instructions."

ARTONE COMPLETES TWO FILMS.

Detroit's newest industry—the Artone Film Company—with offices at 79 Woodward avenue, and studios at 307 John R street, have just completed their two first films—screen versions of song successes—and the receptions given these auger well for the future of this enterprise. Willard H. Goodfellow is president of the company, and Will H. Gregory is producing director. The latest production, "On Dublin Bay," played the Washington theater, Detroit, the week of Aug. 1, and proved a splendid drawing card. Mr. Gregory has been connected with the Frohman and the Belasco interests in New York. Associated with him is W. T. Roberts. The company's next production will be a five-reel feature, "The Ring of the Anvil." Others connected with the Artone Company are: Louis B Jennings, vice-president, and president of the American Films Laboratory, Inc., New York City; August Froebel, second vice-president, formerly identified with the St. Louis Motion Picture Company, and Francis Reno, secretary and treasurer.

"NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER" COMES.

"Neptune's Daughter," which is again playing a summer engagement at the Detroit opera house, is the Michigan property of Will M. Elliott, who has associated with him Charles Hertzman, manager of the "Full House" show, now playing in New York City. This film played 16 weeks at the Opera House to 25 and 50 cents; this year prices are 15 and 25 cents. The surprising thing about this film is the fact that it is doing almost as much business as it did a year ago, despite the fact that it was shown consecutively at the same theater for 16 weeks. "I never believed that this picture could draw any such business at it has," said Bert Whitney, proprietor of the Detroit opera house. "When Mr. Elliott came to me with a proposition to play it again this summer I laughed and said it would be suicide. He was so persistent and was so confident that it could repeat that I took a chance and said 'all right, go ahead.' Apparently Mr. Elliott knew what he was talking about, because it has brought crowds to the Opera House, many of whom saw the picture last year. It only goes to prove that there are always newcomers."

Griffith Film in Spokane

Clemmer Theater Has Big Press of Ticket Buyers for "Birth of a Nation"—Canadian Censor on Hand to See Offering and Says He Has Seen No Greater Picture—Wishes Negro's Sunny Side Had Been Shown.

By S. Clark Patchin, Spokane Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

AFTER considerable discussion before the city commissioners and sending commissioner Samuel Glasgow, official censor for Spokane, Washington, to Seattle to witness the "Birth of a Nation," the play opened a three weeks engagement at the Clemmer theater August 2 and played to capacity houses up to the time this article is being written. The seating capacity is 1000. People were lined into the street to get tickets for the opening performance. Mr. Glasgow, upon his return from Seattle July 31 said:

"My observations and investigations in Seattle have proved to me that the local colored people are unduly exercised over the coming of the picture, and have an unwarranted fear of the results it may have. One of the most objectionable scenes under the sub-title of 'The Claws of the Beast,' a close range facial view of a negro who is pursuing a white girl, has been eliminated." This scene was not shown in Seattle and is not being shown in Spokane.

Dr. H. S. Clemmer advertises the show on the streets by having 10 young men on horseback, draped in white and the horses carry banners reading "The Birth of a Nation, being shown at the Clemmer."

Former Mayor W. J. Hindley, of Spokane, now pastor of the Central Congregational church of Winnipeg, Canada, who is acting as scout for the provincial motion picture censorship board of Manitoba, and has been delegated to take back a report on "The Birth of a Nation," based on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," witnessed the picture at the Clemmer. According to the Rev. Mr. Hindley, the Manitoba board is an active organization of five men, who view every reel of pictures before they are shown publicly in the province.

Theater managers in the Canadian city are interested in the big spectacle and have asked Mr. Hindley to bring a report to them also, and, on his decision, largely, depends the booking of the picture in western Canada. After seeing the picture he said:

"I have seen no greater picture that I recall. Its war scenes surpass those of 'The Battle of Gettysburg.' It is the biggest dramatic picture I have ever witnessed. It is unfortunate, however, that the sunny and prophetic side of the negro's nature is not emphasized a little more to give better balance to the picture of the negro. It is decidedly Dixonesque in treatment.

"To the Manitoba board I will recommend the picture and, for the most part, the rulings of the National Board of Censorship meet with my approval. I can see no real objection to the so-called saloon scene, which the board has eliminated. I will suggest that some of the close-up views of the degenerate negro be eliminated and a number of the subheads should be done away with. I understand many have been expurgated, but there are still some that could better be deleted.

"There is no feeling, in Canada, against the negro and I can conceive of no racial hatred springing up as the result of its exhibition. I will tell the theater managers that the only questions for them is the drawing power in Canada of a picture which is so pre-eminently American in its historic appeal. I believe it would be a great drawing card merely as a production. We have many G. A. R. men in Winnipeg and the 'Battle of Gettysburg' played to big houses. I believe 'The Birth of a Nation' will do the same, as it is especially appropriate at this time, due to its portraying the horrors of war."

WILLIAM CUTTS VISITS.

William Cutts, formerly manager of the Liberty theater and under the direction of which the building was erected, spent several days in Spokane, after having remodeled the American theater, Butte, Montana, at a cost of about $8,000.

Mr. Cutts is general manager of the Liberty Amusement Company, also of the Montana Amusement Company. He superintended the re-painting and re-modeling of the Butte amusement house and has 100 additional leather upholstered chairs placed, all of which were of the divan style. A new concrete floor was placed, new electric wiring was put in and other changes made. He reports the picture as well as other business excellent in Butte.

SPOKANE BREVITIES.

The Universal Film Company was the first to get moving pictures of the Eastland disaster in Chicago, into Spokane, and these were shown at the Liberty theater August 1 to 3 inclusive. They drew well.

The national convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles added greatly to the attendance at all picture houses during the week of August 1. All picture show programs start on Sunday. Due to this convention the Casino theater opened its doors at 9:30 a. m. during the week.

Attendance at the Saturday morning picture program for children at the Clemmer continues to grow. The attendance was placed at 1000 July 31.

William Farnum in "The Plunderer," proved a good drawing card at the Casino Eagles week, from a box office standpoint.

"Always in the Way," made from the Charles K. Harris child sob-song, and William Faversham in "The Right of Way," have proved to be good attractions for the Liberty, according to attendance. "Marse Covington," starring Edward Connolly, also drew well.

James Cruze, recently seen here at the Liberty, will appear in a moving picture of wheat ranch life near Walla Walla which is in the Washington wheat belt. A company of 35 actors will appear in the scenes, aside from harvest hands and threshers.

VANCOUVER'S ORPHEUM SOLD.

By E. C. Thomas, Vancouver Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Orpheum, Vancouver, B. C.'s, largest and finest theater, has again been sold—this time to Martin Beck and M. Meyerfield, Jr., of the Orpheum Circuit. The deal was closed July 29 by S. L. Lansburgh, secretary and treasurer of the Orpheum Theater & Realty Co., of San Francisco, who came from California to complete the negotiations. J. Pilling continues as manager, and the present policy of straight pictures will be adhered to for the present, at least. General Films service is being used. Mr. Lansburgh intimated that the Orpheum Circuit's big-time shows might be played in this house within the next few months, but no definite decision has been reached as yet in regard to this.

The Orpheum theater, since its rebuilding two years ago, has had a checkered career. Opening with Sullivan & Considine vaudeville, a change was later made to Orpheum Circuit vaudeville, but after a short time the house was returned to the S. & C. chain, and was included in the deal to Marcus Loew, only to be returned again to the original owners, who inaugurated a picture policy, which, as stated above, is now to be continued by the Orpheum interests.

PATHE FILMS IN WESTERN CANADA.

A deal involving the Pathe output in the whole of Western Canada was consummated last month, and on July 19 Pathe's Famous Feature Film Syndicate of Quebec took over the business of the Pathe Film Syndicate, Limited, with offices in Winnipeg and Vancouver. Andrew P. Keegan, formerly manager at St. John, N. B., has been transferred to the Coast, and succeeds E. R. Fauser as manager of the Vancouver Branch. Mr. Keegan reports a fair business in British Columbia and Alberta. The Winnipeg office, serving Manitoba and Saskatchewan, is now in charge of W. E. Allan, late of the General Film Co. of Montreal. R. A. Scott is the retiring manager.

SALISBURY NATURE FILMS ARE LIKED IN CANADA.

So satisfactory have been the results secured with Salisbury's Wild Life Pictures in Western Canada that the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, according to I. Soskin, Vancouver manager, have decided to import all of Mr. Salisbury's future releases of this sort. While the pictures were being shown in Vancouver the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company had a large colored scene from the bear hunt displayed in their window, with the information that these scenes were taken along their route.

PATHESCOPE AGENCY TAKEN FOR WESTERN CANADA.

Mason & Risch, Limited, a large musical company maintaining twenty-seven stores, have taken the agency for the Pathescope for Western Canada, and are conducting an active demonstrating campaign. A special effort is being made to prevent the use of these little projectors by traveling exhibitors, and the World man was informed that several orders for machines to be used for this purpose had been refused. The managers of the various talking machine departments will have charge of the Pathescope business, and the firm is also handling a Pathe camera using the same special size of film. It is announced that several subjects have been made for the Pathescope in the war zone in France, but that these will not be released until after the war.

FEW AIRDOMES NORTH OF 54.

Airdomes in this territory are practically a minus quantity. Although the weather at this time is sufficiently summery to make an outdoor theater very desirable from the standpoint of comfort, the days in this latitude are too long to make such an enterprise a paying proposition. Just now it is dusk at nine o'clock in the evening, while two months ago it was quite light even at that hour. About the time it is dark enough to start the show, most people are usually thinking of going to bed.

PROFIT SHARING COUPONS.

The Allen Theater Company, operating the Allen theater in Calgary, issues profit-sharing coupons, one of which is given with each ticket. A catalogue is also issued containing a list of a hundred or so articles, which are exchanged for coupons on a basis of five per cent. of their face value; or the coupons will be redeemed for three per cent. of their value, in cash. These coupons are also being used by the Monarch theater, Edmonton; the Rex theater, Rossland, B. C., and several other houses.

IN VANCOUVER.

Will H. Armstrong & Company are playing the Pantages Circuit with a sketch called "The Baggageman." Armstrong is first shown in moving pictures as a transfer man, then the curtain goes up, and in the same make-up the actor enters carrying a trunk.

IN SAN FRANCISCO.

C. Robinson, of the Bagby theater, Monterey, Calif., was a visitor here this week and purchased a late model Motiograph from Edward H. Kemp.

G. Hanline, of the Home theater, Anderson, Calif., was also a recent visitor here to enjoy the Exposition. He has closed his theater until September.

William Citron, manager of the San Francisco office of the William Fox Corporation, is planning to make a road trip shortly through California. He has been meeting with splendid success in arranging bookings under the new policy to be effective next month and exhibitors are looking forward to something out of the ordinary in the line of releases.

Moving pictures of the Eastland disaster at Chicago were shown this week at both the Portola and Market street theaters and attracted wide attenion.

The largest staff of experts in all departments makes the MOVING PICTURE WORLD the one paper in the trade that fully fills the requirements of every reader.

GOLDEN STATE NOTES.

C. C. Laval has taken out a building permit for the erection of a moving picture studio at Fresno, Calif.

C. N. Carrington & Son, managers of the Rose theater, Santa Rosa, Calif., have purchased the Columbia theater in that city.

The Chamber of Commerce of Santa Clara, Calif., is making elaborate preparations for the celebration of "Industry Day" on August 20 and 21, when ground will be broken for the plant of the San Jose Film Company on Alviso street.

The Eclat Film Company has been incorporated at Los Angeles, Calif., by Robert Levy, Ida Levy and Saul Gerber, with a capital stock of $10,000.

The Lyric theater will be opened this week in the new Fulton building at Fresno, Calif., under the direction of Cleve Beck and J. C. Moore. Fixtures for the house, including chairs, organ, projection equipment and dressing rooms, represents an investment of about $12,000. The theater has a seating capacity of 500.

Ferguson & Cain, proprietors of the New airdome at Tulare, Calif., will erect a new theater at that place to be known as the Theater Tulare, and which will have a seating capacity of about 700. Work on the building will be commenced as soon as plans can be prepared and contracts awarded. D. S. Taylor, who planned to erect a moving picture house at this place, has given up the idea.

J. T. Hayes, of the Dreamland theater at Woodland, Calif., has made a number of changes at this house of late, including the installation of a Fort Wayne Compensarc.

C. A. Timblin has opened a moving picture theater at Fairfax, Calif.

The Central theater at East Oakland, Calif., has been re-opened by F. Manchini, who has purchased a Powers Cameragraph No. 6 A. from G. A. Metcalfe.

The New theater has been opened at Cortland, Calif., by Yat Sun, a Chinese.

The Star theater, Colusa, Calif., has been reopened.

The Campus theater, Berkeley, Calif., formerly known as the Majestic, opened during the summer school at the University.

Bert Donellan, formerly of Stockton, Calif., has opened the Pioneer theater at Fruitvale.

E. N. Chickering, formerly of Fresno, Calif., has started out from that place with a moving picture road show.

The Lubin Studios, Los Angeles, have been furnished with a late model Motiograph by Edward H. Kemp.

The Orpheus theater, conducted at Klamath Falls, Ore., by A. Y. Tindall, burned on July 29.

Roadhouses Want Films

San Francisco Restaurant Keeper Has Announced His Intention to Remodel His Roadhouse to Make Pictures an Added Attraction—Doubtful Whether a License Will Be Granted—Picture Men Oppose Such Innovations.

By T. A. Church, San Francisco Correspondent to Moving Picture World.

The manager of one of the largest of the many beach resorts that line the Great Highway at San Francisco has announced his intention of remodeling his roadhouse and installing moving pictures as an added attraction. He recently discussed this matter with a leading film exchange manager and expressed great surprise when informed that it was doubtful if a moving picture license could be secured. Most of these resorts dispense liquors and permit dancing, making a specialty of catering to late automobile parties. The Board of Police Commissioners recently denied the application of a saloon keeper to show moving pictures in his place of business and it is probable that it will rule against the granting of a license in roadhouses, while they are conducted in their present form.

While this new proposition has not reached a definite form exhibitors are preparing to oppose it whenever it is brought up by its promoters. Various interests seem to be seeking to divide the patronage that is being enjoyed at the present time by motion picture houses, apparently feeling that this form of amusement is making inroads into their own business. Several dance pavilions in the downtown district are now featuring moving pictures as an added attraction; a determined effort has been made to place pictures in saloons, and now the roadhouse proprietors want them.

The film exchange interests are commencing to realize that the promiscuous showing of pictures is not to their advantage, in that it brings discredit to the industry, and several are commencing to carefully scrutinize prospective customers and are even refusing to serve vaudeville houses. The question here is not entirely what kinds of pictures may be shown, but who should be allowed to show them and under what conditions. The San Francisco Film Exchange Board of Trade is giving these matters its careful attention, as is also the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

OPERATORS' BALL TO BE BIG AFFAIR.

The annual Movie Ball to be given at the Civic Auditorium on August 14 under the auspices of the Moving Picture Operators' Union promises to be a huge success, judged from the advance sale of tickets at the various theaters. Many spectacular features are being planned and public interest is being aroused by attractive slides shown at all theaters and through billboard advertising. Arrangements have been made to have all the dances on the programs named after prominent Universal players and stars from several of the local companies will attend the ball.

SIMPLEX GETS GRAND PRIZE AT EXPOSITION.

The Precision Machine Company has received a Grand Prize for the Simplex motion picture projector exhibited in the Palace of Education at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition by the revision of award. This concern not only has a splendid display in its booth, but has a working display in a nearby theater to enable the public to see just how pictures are projected. Mr. F. B. Cannock, of this company, and designer of the Simplex projector, spent the last week in Los Angeles and San Diego, and has since left for the East. Mr. L. W. Atwater will shortly leave for New York, leaving Mr. Fred A. Clark in charge of the exhibit.

NEW V-L-S-E MANAGER.

A. W. Goff, formerly manager of the Cleveland office of V-L-S-E, Inc., arrived at San Francisco this week to take charge of the Pacific Coast division, succeeding C. B. Price. Although he has been here but a short time, he has met many of the local exhibitors and has made a splendid impression, his ideas being distinctively western. Assistant Manager R. B. Quive has been appointed manager of the San Francisco office, but no other changes have been made since his arrival. Mr. Goff has full charge of the three Coast offices located at San Francisco, Seattle and Los Angeles, and will shortly inspect all of these.

EDWARD H. KEMP ENLARGES OFFICES.

Edward H. Kemp, who handles the Motiograph in this territory, is enlarging his offices in the Commercial building, 833 Market street, by the addition of another large room. The new model Motiograph, with the improved flickerless shutter, was demonstrated recently to the local Board of Education and created quite an impression, members of the Board stating that such steadiness in the projection of pictures was one of the leading reasons why they could be used to a greater extent in the public schools.

SAN FRANCISCO FLASHES.

M. E. Cory, whose serious illness was recently reported, is rapidly recovering and is again attending to the management of the two houses owned by Cory Bros.

The Bell theater, at Twenty-ninth and Mission streets, is to be re-opened shortly under the management of James Murray, after having been closed for several weeks.

The Chutes theater on Fillmore street, near Eddy, which is now being renovated and redecorated, will be opened about the first of September with Charles Cole as manager.

The Machinery Club, whose membership is limited to those interested in exhibits at Machinery Hall at the Exposition, held its first dansant this week at the California building. Moving pictures were shown there, a Power's Cameragraph being used and its working demonstrated to visitors. The Nicholas Power Company has a display in Machinery Hall and was represented at the dansant by Mr. R. W. Horn.

A Westinghouse motor-generator set has been installed in the exhibit of the Southern California Counties in the California building at the Exposition and plans are being made to enlarge the theater. A Power's Cameragraph No. 6 A is in use here.

Leon Netter and E. M. Asher, of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., are making a visit to Los Angeles, the former on a short vacation and the latter to relieve Manager E. H. Emmick for a few weeks.

On August 3, Burton Holmes, the originator of the Travelogue, displayed his films on the Philippine Islands in Simplex Theater No. 2, Palace of Education, P. P. I. E. Films are shown regularly in this theater as a part of the Philippine educational exhibit, but this travelogue is a special feature which sets forth some of the unusual features of the islands, with the fancy of the author illustrated in many an amusing scene. The large attendance necessitated showing the picture twice in the afternoon. Burton Holmes also showed moving pictures this week at the Bohemian Club jinks in the redwoods near San Francisco.

Demand Dressing Rooms

Portland Juvenile Court Authorities Find Unsatisfactory Dressing Room Conditions in Small Theaters—Inspection Is Now in Progress—Amateur Nights in Some Houses Said to Be Deplorable—Change Demanded.

By Abraham Nelson, Portland Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

FOLLOWING the discovery by Mrs. Nissen, one of the workers of the Juvenile Court, that a girl of tender years was compelled to dress in the same room with men in a Portland picture theater on an amateur night recently, the Juvenile Court, co-operating with the district attorney's office and the city officials of Portland, is inspecting the picture theaters in Portland and theaters booking vaudeville and amateur acts will require dressing rooms that insure privacy to the performers.

"Amateur nights bring a lot of young people to the picture house stage whose standards of theatrical life have been set entirely by accounts of the stage appearing in magazines and newspapers," said Deputy District Attorney Ryan to the writer. "This is evidenced by the remark made by the 14 year old girl discovered by Mrs. Nissen dressing in a room with two men, 'Oh, we professional people think nothing of that,' she said."

The campaign being conducted by the district attorney and the Juvenile Court is one of inspection and suggestion only and not one of prosecution, says Deputy Ryan, and where picture houses are found having inadequate dressing room facilities the owners will be instructed to build rooms sufficiently adequate to insure privacy to the amateurs and vaudeville performers in preparing for their acts. A reasonable length of time will be given the owners to comply with the Juvenile Court's instructions. The smaller theaters are the only ones effected as the larger houses are well equipped with dressing rooms.

Portland has a city ordinance prohibiting the appearance of boys and girls under 16 years of age on the stage except under certain conditions, but amateur acts are usually booked through local agencies and the exhibitor takes what he gets. The exhibitors are being instructed that if there is any question of the age of the amateur performers, the matter should be taken up with some officer of the Juvenile Court. Judge T. J. Cleeton, of the County Court, Deputy District Attorney T. G. Ryan and Chief Probation Officer H. M. Dukes are engineering the inspection of the theaters.

PORTLAND BRANCH MADE A REGULAR EXCHANGE.

Commencing August 15, the Pathe Exchange, heretofore conducted as a branch of the Seattle office, will cut loose from the Sound City and sail under its own colors. Walter S. Wessling, formerly holding down the title of assistant manager, will continue the head of the Portland office. A bookkeeper and a cashier will be added to the office staff, W. W. Kofeldt being transferred from San Francisco to fill the latter position. Mr. Kofeldt has been connected with the Pathe exchanges for several years. B. J. Sperry, former road man for this territory, will receive the title of traveling representative. The Pathe offices are being overhauled to accommodate the additional working force. The territory which the exchange will serve from Portland includes Oregon, Southern Washington, Western Idaho and Siskiyou County, California.

EASTLAND PICTURES PUZZLE CENSORS.

Another breach between some of the Portland exchanges and Mrs. E. B. Colwell, secretary of the censor board, occurred over the portions of the weekly news films showing scenes of the Eastland disaster. It seems that the first film to be received of the scenes following the catastrophe were regularly passed by one of the censor board's regular viewers and immediately thereafter sent by the exchange to the Majestic theater for exhibition. Someone who had seen the picture in the theater reported to Mrs. Colwell that several very gruesome scenes were shown. Mrs. Colwell requested eliminations from the film, but as the rental fee paid by the Majestic theater covered the film in the condition it had been passed by the board's viewer, the film exchange was not in a position to make the eliminations.

A day or two later when other film exchanges received like pictures of the disaster, the censor board was confronted with the puzzling situation of passing a film which in the mind of Mrs. Colwell should be subjected to considerable pruning or of being accused of discrimination in permitting the Majestic's film to run. Exchange men complained of inconsistency and delays on the part of the board in passing on these news pictures and incidentally it seems that some Eastland pictures were run at the Columbia theater for a day or two without the board's official stamp or sanction and no arrests were made.

PATHE PHOTOGRAPHER A VISITOR.

E. B. Steeme, staff photographer for Pathe with headquarters in New York City, was a visitor in Portland en route to San Francisco on a trip of inspection. Mr. Steeme said that the Portland climate just suited his fancy and when he got through roaming about the country taking movies he wanted to make his home in the City of Roses. From San Francisco Mr. Steeme will go to El Paso as he believes the time is about ripe for something to transpire on the Mexican border.

PORTLAND VISITORS.

F. W. Newton, owner of the Rainbow theater, McMinnville, was a visitor in Portland.

A. H. McDonald, an exhibitor at Eugene, stopped over in Portland on his way from Seattle.

B. J. Sparks, Star theater, Heppner, Ore., was a visitor at the Mutual exchange.

Fred Parks, Lyric theater, Mollala, Ore., was a recent visitor in Portland.

F. A. Watrous, Star theater, McMinnville, was a visitor at the Pathe Exchange.

A. B. Knox, former manager of the United Film Exchange at Butte, Mont., was a visitor in Portland on his way to San Francisco.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

F. A. Langerman, manager of the New Grand theater, Portland, recently left for California, where he will visit the two expositions.

G. H. Grombacher, vice-president of Metro and its Portland representative, recently returned from San Francisco, where he was a visitor of Sol Lesser. After passing a few days in Portland, Mr. Grombacher left for New York City, where he will remain about 10 days.

The film service heretofore supplied the Orpheum, now closed for the summer, has been divided between the Columbia and the Majestic theaters, the former getting V-L-S-E and the latter the Mutual masterpieces.

NEW THEATER IN MIAMI.

By J. Melvin Andrews, Jacksonville Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

MIAMI, FLA., is to have a new theater, which will open about August 15th. This new house is to be built on the style of an airdome, which will be convertible into a closed house in case of cold or rainy weather. It is estimated that this house will cost abut $25,000 and will have a seating capacity of 1,000.

Ivan Jourdan and W. H. Nichols are the promoters of this new house. Mr. Jourdan was formerly manager of the Arcade airdome and Fotosho theaters in Miami, while Mr. Nichols was formerly connected with the Wigwam theater of Miami. These gentlemen state that only the best pictures will be shown in connection with a ten-piece orchestra under the direction of Prof. Geo. Snider, who was at one time musical director at one of the Keith houses in New York City.

Reports from all parts of the state are that business conditions are improving. It seems that a good many houses that did not close for the summer have settled down to make the best of the bad weather we have been having for the past few weeks and as a result business is coming just fast enough to keep going.

The Vaudette opened in Miami on July 24th. This is the only union house in the city, six reels of high class motion pictures are shown daily in connection with the orchestra, which seems to be a feature with this house. Crowds were waiting for three hours after the opening hour to get in this house on the opening night.

IN JACKSONVILLE.

The New Arcade theater, which has a seating capacity of 1,260 and cost $75,000 to build, was opened to the public for inspection on Monday, July 19th. Thousands of people visited this beautiful house and were served with refreshments and each given a souvenier. This, however, was only an informal opening and reception, which was presided over by Mr. W. L. Whithead, general manager of the Southern Investment & Amusement Co. The Arcade has two floors and a stage thoroughly equipped, should it be desired, but at the present only high-class motion pictures and singing attractions will be shown.

On Tuesday this house opened at one o'clock with its regular program, which consists of the pick of the "Metro," "Fox," World Film, the General Film, the Mutual Masterpictures and the Paramount service.

The Arcade theater it seems has filled a long-felt want in Jacksonville. Before the matinee was near over many hundreds of people were still on the outside waiting to get in, the same conditions prevailing at the night show. On Wednesday and Thursday the "Hypocrites" was shown to capacity business, many people being unable to see this production, a return date has been made. Capacity business and holding them out every night has been very much in vogue since this house opened. Marguerite Clark in "Seven Sisters" also did a wonderful business.

The eight-piece orchestra under the personal direction of Mrs. Joe Berry is also a wonderful drawing card to this house, and is being highly praised by every one who likes real music. Miss Helen Renstrom and Mr. Geo. Otto are the singing attractions this week and both seem to be going big. Miss Renstrom is getting to be quite a favorite.

Geo. B. Greenwood has leased the Grand theater and has been making extensive changes preparatory to putting in musical tabs, two reels of motion pictures and 40 minutes of miniature musical comedy will be the policy of this house from now on.

CAPITAL CITY NOTES.

B. Russo, who conducts the Cockade theater, at Petersburg, Va., was a visitor here last week. While in the city, Mr. Russo booked a number of big features. He declares that business, despite the heat, is good at this house and attributes this highly satisfactory condition to the fact that he is using good serials, serials of the type which will hold the attention of the people throughout their run, and the better known photoplay productions.

John F. Pryor, of the Southern Amusement Company, operating the Bijou theaters in Greensboro and Danville, was a visitor here last week.

Monte Craig, who operates the New theater, at Staunton, Va., is reported to have taken over the Savoy theater in that place.

EXPRESS MEN WHO WON'T READ.

Complaint is being made that the employees of the various express companies sometime exceed their authority and cause the exchanges no little inconvenience by shipping back to them films that should make a circuit. It seems that they have become so familiar with the names of the various companies that they do not pay enough attention to the shipping instructions on the film cases, and consequently send them back to this city. A recent occurrence of this kind resulted in the tying up of an entire circuit while the theater managers spent considerable loose change in telegraphing for their show. In this particular instance it is said that the shipping tag plainly showed that it was to go to another theater in a nearby town, but the films were sent the way back to Washington through the stupidity of some one.

WHOOPING COUGH PATRONS.

Complaint has been made that motion picture exhibitors are not strict enough in seeking to bar from their theatres children suffering from whooping cough. It is said that in several of the local moving picture theatres children with the ailment are to be found daily. According to the health department the law which prohibits those suffering with the disease from visiting theatres is enforced wherever possible, but there is no adequate method of locating every violation of the law which declares that "No person suffering from whooping cough can lawfully attend school, Sunday school or church, the theater of any place of public assemblage." Failure to comply with this regulation is punishable by a fine of not more than $50. It behooves the exhibitors to be on the alert in this respect and to refuse admission to any whom they notice suffering from the ailment. Aside from the fact that it is objectionable to others where a child is coughing, perhaps during a most thrilling part of an exhibition, should such a case come into court, the advertising that would come to the lax exhibitor would not be of a very desirable kind. It was reported that during the last week in July there were nearly 200 cases of whooping cough recorded in the district.

METRO LETTER ON EXPRESS VALUATIONS.

The Metro Film-Service Co., Inc., of Washington, recently sent out the following to all exhibitors on their books: "Owing to the new rule recently adopted by the various express companies, which insists on the valuation being placed on films, we have decided it is to our best interest to value all films at the minimum price of $50. This will give us a minimum express rate.

"Of course, we all understand that some of our productions are worth considerably over $1,000, but this rule is adopted only to save expressage.

"You will please be careful in the future on all packages, not to place the valuation of any film at more than $50.00, and paper packages at $5.00.

"Metro Film-Service Co."

No Ad. Films Wanted

Washington, D. C., Exhibitors Displeased at Attempt to Slip Over a Two-Reel Picture with Advertising Value to an Automobile Maker—Managers Think That Such Hurt Business—Count the Attempt Unfair.

By Clarence L. Linz, Washington Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

SEVERAL of the local exhibitors are complaining of the attempt of one of the large producing companies to slip over a two-reel film in which the plot was made secondary to the advertising of an automobile manufacturing company. The attention of the World correspondent was called to this film by a prominent Ninth street manager, who states he pulled it off his program after its first exhibition.

Washington exhibitors have generally refused to run anything in the way of advertising merchandise of any kind. They have found that it hurts their business, for the fans complain that the theatres are not the place to give publicity to commercial establishments. The public even objects to a too long showing of slides giving a list of future exhibitions and these are being cut down to a minimum. The exhibitors decry the attempt of the producers to "put something over" in this manner and complain of their unfairness in trying to make money both ways. Not only do they probably receive compensation for bringing this automobile prominently into the limelight, but the Ninth street manager in question is also called upon to pay rental therefor on the basis of a first-run picture.

It is reported that others who have had this photoplay assigned to their programs are seeking to have another two-reel subject substituted for it, and their comment is decidedly adverse. It is contended that this photoplay, at its best, is nothing to brag about and the injection of advertising into the plot kills it as a box office attraction.

FINDS UNSANITARY PICTURE THEATERS.

The proper, or rather the improper sanitation of the motion picture houses of the District of Columbia was recently called to the attention of the World correspondent. It seems that entirely too little care is given to the disinfecting of many of them. Strange as it may seem the theater-going public has had just cause for complaint of foul odors emanating from toilets wafted about the auditorium by the fans, the real purpose of which are to circulate pure air.

Too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the need for care in this respect. As previously stated in this column, District officials have been testing the air of the various theaters. The amount of unpleasant advertising one would get were it to become noised about this neighborhood that his house had been condemned because of unhealthful conditions existing therein, could not be estimated. It should not be taken that any of the houses are not equipped with so-called disinfecting devices for in all of them there are to be found something of this type. The trouble is probably that they do not go far enough or perhaps it is that the solution of itself has an unpleasant odor. This condition will probably come as a surprise to many of the exhibitors, yet it is none the less true, for the World correspondent himself made a little investigation of the own and found things as reported.

IN THE FOX FILM OFFICES.

Lieut. Jim P. Anderson has greatly improved the appearance of the offices of the Fox Film Corporation, at 305 Ninth street, Northwest, for he has caused the erection of partitions and fencing to form compartments for the various departments of the business. The front part of the second floor has been divided into two sections, that at the right being enclosed by a mahogany and glass partition forming the manager's office, while that at the left, set off from the poster space by a mahogany railing, is used by the stenographer and the booker. Mr. Anderson desires to state that although he will be shut off from the outside world by this mass of wood and glass, it must not be thought that he will be out of the reach of those who desire to see him on business; the door will always be open to visitors.

The entire floor is being redecorated at this time and new office fixtures are being installed. Poster racks are soon to be erected and that space devoted to the reception of visiting exhibitors is to be furnished in fine shape. Mr. Anderson believes that when all improvements are completed, he will have one of the best appointed exchanges in the city.

Carl F. Senning, traveling representative for the Fox Film Corporation, traveling out of the Washington office, has again left for a tour of the cities in North Carolina.

Lieut. Jim P. Anderson is spending the week traveling through Virginia.

Mrs. Harry C. Given has just returned from an extended visit in New York City to which place she went on business pertaining to the Regent theater. While in the metropolis Mrs. Given paid a call at the various film exchanges and states that at each of these she met with a very cordial reception.

WEATHER REPORT SLIDES.

Some of the branches of the United States Weather Bureau, it is reported, have been furnishing weather reports to motion picture exhibitors who convey the information to their patrons by means of slides. This plan has not yet been taken up by the central office. It is being tried out at several places and if it is found to be of any value in the dissemination of weather forecasts the service will be extended to any theaters that may make application. These forecasts are sent out from Washington by telegraph at 8 a. m., and 8 p. m., daily, but the latter reports would not be available for use in the theaters because of their not arriving in time.

EXHIBITORS CO-OPERATIVE OFFICE GROWS.

The Exhibitors' Co-Operative Booking Agency, of which Earl E. Reese is manager, and George W. Smiley, secretary, have enlarged their quarters in the Bank of Commerce and Savings building, at Seventh and E streets, Northwest, by taking the large office which adjoins that which they formerly occupied. They have thrown the two into one and the establishment has now taken on an appearance of at least greatly increased business, if not actually of prosperity. Both Mr. Reese and Mr. Smiley are young men and hustlers, and it would seem as though their future, as futures go in the film game, is assured.

C. O. MOSS JOINS WORLD FILM.

C. O. Moss, formerly traveling representative in North Carolina for the United Film Service, has joined the forces of the World Film Corporation and will continue to cover that territory. Mr. Moss is very popular with the exhibitors of the Tar State and all of these, as well as his many Washington friends, wish him good luck and success in his new position.

Higher Prices in Topeka

Kansas Exhibitors Are Being Charged by Exchanges for Censoring Fees—Makes Higher Admission Necessary—Topeka Managers See Failure in Jitney Shows —Public Should Be Made to Pay for Censorship.

Special to Moving Picture World from Kansas City News Service.

PROPRIETORS of Topeka motion picture shows assert that the admission price to their theaters must soon be raised—and for most of the theaters, doubled, as the large majority of them still are "jitney" shows.

The straw that the theater owners say breaks the back of the low prices they have been charging is the word they have received from the film exchanges in Kansas City notifying them that a charge of ten cents per film will be made in the price of the service furnished to them. The film exchanges declare that the rigid film censorship of the state of Kansas has made the raise in their prices compulsory. This is now the price that the people of Kansas—the voters have to pay for electing men to office that make such laws. The state of Kansas is getting a lot of money out of the film censorship and the people were told by the Legislaturers that they elected to office that the moving picture men would have to pay for it. They taxed themselves and now to view the pictures they will have to pay the tax that they helped and tried to place somewhere else. The people are fooled by such lawmakers time and time again, but never is there a bigger fool than the ones that fool themselves.

Mrs. Frank Gandy, proprietor of the Aurora theater, believes that the raise in the prices will be only a matter of a few weeks, she says. In this she is greatly mistaken, for the film exchanges mean business. The state taxed the exchanges in a matter in which they had no voice. They paid it for a while, but found the burden too heavy and shifted it to the exhibitors, which the law was aimed at. The exhibitors are now finding it too heavy and they are shifting it to the people.

According to a letter recently sent out by W. D. Ross, who is chairman of the state censorship board, after August 9 no pictures will be allowed to be shown in the state that have not already been censored. The new charges for this by the film exchanges will begin next week.

"An increase in the admission prices is inevitable," says Mrs. Gandy. "With the taxes that have been placed upon the motion picture theater within the past year we can do nothing else. We now pay a federal tax of $100 a year and a city tax of $100 a year. That amount is of course in addition to our usual state and county tax. The price of carbons that we use for our lights has increased from $3.50 to $15 since the war started. With all these extras besides the increases that have heretofore been made by the film exchanges in charging us for our service, what else may the public expect?"

Censor Puts the Blame for Delay on Exchanges.

"It is the fault of the moving picture exchanges and not the state censorship board," is the statement of W. D. Ross, chairman of the board is sending out to the managers of shows in the form of a letter.

Ross says that he is tired of having complaints filed with him that managers are unable to get censored films because his censors are not working fast enough on the films checked up to him for inspection.

"Several managers have informed me that they were told by the film exchanges that they were unable to get us to censor enough films to go around," said Ross recently.

"That is not true. There is no excuse for any house showing uncensored films in Kansas to-day. In this connection I wish to state that it has been and is now the fault of the distributors, if they are unable to furnish censored films. As a matter of fact, the film exchanges have had since April 12 to get their films censored; but most of the exchanges have been presenting only their new films for censorship. The statement that the censorship board is not able to censor all films now being presented to it is absolutely in error; for the board thus far not only has been able to censor all films presented the day they were presented but could handle more. If any additional censors are needed they will be put on."

The film exchanges are using this excuse according to Mr. Ross to put out some old uncensored films that they know will not get by the board. They want to clean up on these, he says, instead of sending new and better films into the state.

"The woman manager of a picture house at Cottonwood Falls has written me that she would close down for a week," continued Mr. Ross, "because the film exchange company had sent her a bunch of films that she would not show under any conditions. She says they told her that was all they had, on account of the state censorship."

Ross announced recently that several traveling inspectors were to be employed to see that no uncensored films were being exhibited in the state after August 9.

It seems that Ross is bitterly sore at the Kansas City film exchanges and is trying his best to help them into another litigation to test the validity of the state law. This litigation the Kansas City exchanges declare they will gladly receive and in the mean time several Kansas City managers declare that if Ross does not watch his words carefully they will see if something cannot be done about libelous matter in the interviews he gives on the Kansas City exchanges. They declare that Ross is entirely ignorant of the workings of the Kansas City exchanges and thus he takes the stand he does in the matter.

KANSAS HEALTH BOARD TO USE FILMS.

Motion pictures are to be used to fight disease in Kansas during the coming fall and winter, according to the announcement made from the office of Dr. S. J. Crumbine, secretary of the state board of health. It was asserted that pictures showing the sources of typhoid fever, tuberculosis, smallpox, measles and diphtheria, will be exhibited in every county. Proper personal hygiene and preventive methods also will be portrayed. In an attempt to hold interest in the pictures, they have been made with a story running through each.

IN EASTERN DIXIE.

By Clarence L. Linz, Washington Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

Virginia Notes.

THE skylight of the Colonial theater, in Richmond, Va., was blown off during the terrific storm which visited this section of the country on Sunday evening, August 1. The water pouring in at the rear of the theater caused some little damage.

A. L. Chockley, operator for the Virginian theater, in Roanoke, Va., will act as the local cameraman for the Mutual Weekly.

W. R. Koch, of the Onyx theater, Newport News, Va., has returned from a vacation of several weeks spent at Atlantic City, N. J. While in the north he stopped in New York City, looking over the various types of electrical plants suitable for installation at that theater. On his return he spent some time in Washington booking features and transacting other business for his house.

A first meeting of the creditors of R. L. Sutherland and D. D. Crockett, trading as Sutherland & Crockett and operating the Gem theater at Graham, Va., will be held in the Bank building at Graham at 9 a. m., August 17. This firm was adjudicated bankrupt on July 17. Creditors are being given notice of this meeting that they may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt and transact such other business as may properly come before the meeting. Mayo Cabell is the referee to whom the case has been referred.

In North Carolina.

AT the meeting of the city council of Wilmington last week an appropriation of $200 was asked for use as a contribution to in part cover the expense of taking motion pictures of that city during the convention of the North Carolina Moving Picture Exhibitors' League at Wrightsville Beach, August 15 to 17, inclusive. These pictures are to be used in advertising the city of Wilmington and it is planned to show them in the theaters of North and South Carolina and Virginia. They are to be taken under the supervision of the National Film Corporation, of Baltimore, Md.

W. N. Wood, manager of the Lumina open air theater at Wrightsville Beach, near Wilmington, pulled off a unique advertising stunt when, with an assistant, J. W. Croom, he dressed up in typical rube costume and paraded the streets in a farm wagon loaded with straw and placarded with announcements that they had come all the way from the farm to hear "Betty Wilson at Lumina all this week."

In Maryland.

THE Garden vaudeville and motion picture theater in Baltimore is making a great hit with its summer shirtwaist dances which take place each evening in the ballroom of the playhouse. Every Tuesday evening a society dancing contest is held and silver loving cups are awarded to the winners. Last Thursday evening a carnival was held and prizes were awarded for the most grotesque costume, the most elaborate evening gown and to the best dancers.

The Twilight Amusement Company has purchased a lot on the southeast side of Columbia avenue, near Elbow lane, Baltimore, for a motion picture theater. The lot is 44 feet by 190 feet, and is subject to a ground rent of $140.

The Baltimore theatrical crusade commenced early in the year, following the announcement of the girl students of Trinity College in Washington, D. C., that they would withdraw their patronage from any theater which presented any of a series of twenty-six plays blacklisted by the Washington Truth Society. The announcement created attention throughout the country and the Baltimore theater movement was a result.

The Baltimore office of the United Film Service, in charge of Carl Jones, has been removed to 202 North Gay street, where a store is occupied. This exchange is now on the ground floor and far more convenient for its customers. It is planned to send a large number of films over from the Washington office to give efficient service on fillers and to supply regular service to some extent, although the bulk of the booking will be done as heretofore from the Washington exchange.

The motion picture theater in the New Murray building, at Williamsport, which was recently completed, has been opened to the public.

The Parkway theater, at North avenue and Charles street, Baltimore, will be completed by the middle of next month.

It is said that this house will have a seating capacity of 1200 and that its construction and equipment will cost nearly $175,000. George R. Webb is at the head of the company which is building this house.

The Fox Amusement Company are erecting a new house which is to have a seating capacity of about 500, at North avenue, near Linden avenue, Baltimore. This house will be ready for its initial opening about September 1.

The Peabody theater at 11 East North avenue, Baltimore, is being remodeled and redecorated. The work of remodeling the house will give to it considerable additional space and the seating capacity will be greatly enlarged.

The Lord Calvert Amusement Company is erecting a new motion picture theater to have a seating capacity of about 500, on Fulton avenue, Baltimore. This company now operates two houses and it is reported that they are contemplating the erection of still another. J. Clement Webber is active in the affairs of this company.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the one paper you need.

IN INDIANA.

The cost of remodeling the Palace theater, Peru, Ind., will run about $700. New floor, new wall decorations, new lighting fixtures and a better seating arrangement are the improvements included. When the house reopens Manager Jimmy Chandler announces she will have an "augmented" orchestra. Jimmy says augmented is no relation to the word that means cheese or fried potatoes.

O. I. Demron, manager of the Opera House, Franklin, Ind., is remodeling the house, installing ventilating fans and making other improvements preparatory to doing some exceptionally fine things in motion pictures.

Charles Blackstone becomes manager of the Grace theater, Martinsville, Ind., a house owned by E. J. Rembusch of Shelbyville, Ind.

F. R. Martin, of the Fox Film Corporation, has closed with the management of the Why Not theater, Greenfield, for the Fox Features.

They are talking of a board of censorship at Elkhart, Ind., as a result of the trouble with Peter Sarantos.

The Wonderland theater, Clinton, Ind., has added another picture machine.

Goshen, Ind., the twin city to Elkhart, has caught the censorship spirit from that city and is talking censor board.

L. S. Brownin, with his picture-taking automobile, the Titanic, is to film the Muncie fair.

The K. G. Garden, Rochester, Ind., was open Sunday night without any adverse developments. They will open again.

Several Indianapolis exhibitors, particularly the owners of the Michigan and the Tuxedo theaters, have found the stunt of taking kodak pictures of the young folks of the neighborhood, to be exhibited on slides at the theater on a night a few days later, a stunt that pulls them in, young and old. The night when the youngsters are shown are always big nights and the photo orders that follow indicate that it is a stunt that it should not be hard to get a photographer to cooperate in putting on.

R. H. Carnes has bought the Wayne theater, Indianapolis, at Ft. Wayne and Tenth streets, from Eugene Short.

William Price bought from Jerry Hill the Idle Hour theater, College and Massachusetts avenue, Indianapolis. Price opened with "Midnight at Maxim's."

To popularize their Wednesday night show, the Orpheum theater, Mitchell, Ind., is giving away a small box of candy with every admission.

Indiana Compensation Act

Workmen's Compensation Regulation Goes Into Effect September 1—Exhibitors Must Take It Into Account—Minimum Addition to Overhead Will Be $10 a Year—Casual Employes Exempt—What the Term Means.

Special to Moving Picture World from Indiana Trade News Service.

EVERY exhibitor in Indiana is face to face with the Indiana Workmen's Compensation law, which goes into effect Sept. 1. Indiana has the "model" statute of this character, it is said, and that means that every employer of one or more persons must be prepared to pay compensation for accident to employes while in his service, or for accidents arising out of their employment.

The minimum policy means an addition to the overhead of about $10 a year. Compensation during total disability is upon the basis of 55 per cent. of wages for a period not exceeding 500 weeks, or $5,000; the maximum paid weekly not to exceed $13.20 and the minimum $5.50. The maximum for death is $3,960 and for total disability $5,000.

Managers of chains theaters are regarded as employes under the law, unless they own part of the company property and in other ways are subject to the hazards of the employer. This applies to exchange men as well, the film corporations being required to insure compensation for them unless it can be shown they are officers of the organization partaking of the profits and drawing no compensation for any service other than as stockholders and officers.

Casual employes are exempt from the provisions of the law, and some exhibitors who were congratulating themselves that they would not have to provide for compensation for extra ushers for Saturday and Sunday business, have been surprised to find that they are viewed as regular employes, because they come in the regular routine of business. A casual employe is the man who is hired to wash windows, or cut grass, and whose appearance on the horizon is intermittent and irregular. The chauffeur comes under the law, unless he is employed at indoor work at the residence of his employer, when he may be classed as a domestic servant, all such servants being exceptions and not subject to compensation.

NOTES FROM INDIANA.

The Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation of Virginia, total capital $3,000,000, has filed notice of an investment of $100,000 in Indiana with the secretary of state. The directors are given as F. F. Feist, M. J. Speigel, R. M. Atwater, Jr.

Joseph Bommersheim and John T. Belger of the Gaiety Theater Company, Ft. Wayne, Ind., has made final arrangements for starting the Gaiety theater in Bluffton, Ind. A room has been rented and is being remodeled. There will be a seating capacity of 350.

The Lyric theater, Indianapolis, closed Aug. 1 to renovate and redecorate. They will reopen about Sept. 1 with vaudeville and pictures.

Good crowds were attracted by the joint appearance of Edna Maison in person and in pictures at the Cosmo theater, Gary, Ind.

Manager Matthews of the aerdome, Monticello, Ind., after seeing the crowd standing around first on one leg and then another on band concert nights, while his seats were not being filled, began to advertise comfort, "Why stand on one leg and develop corns, when you can see pictures and hear the concert in comfort at the aerdome." It paid.

Willard Chiddister, pianist at the Irwin theater, Goshen, Ind., has signed to undertake a motorcycle trip into the far northwest. He hopes to run down and recapture his lost health. Louise Shellenberger-Collins has succeeded Chiddister at the ivories.

The Lyric, Aurora, Ind., is showing World Film Corporation features now in addition to Paramount pictures.

The citizens of Valparaiso, Ind., liked the Billy Sunday pictures so well that a request for a return engagement was made.

The Eastland picture was barred at Elkhart, Ind., by Mayor Smith.

Imagine the brain explosion suffered by Sherman Everling, Elwood, Ind., an ex-soldier, when he stopped in the middle of a hearty laugh at a Galveston scene showing a private struggling with a refractory mule unwilling to be loaded on a transport, astonished to find that said private was himself. At the time the mule was keeping him so busy that he didn't know the picture man was near.

The Lyric theater, Elwood, Ind., has engaged Paul Curry on drums and traps. Curry has a local reputation as some cat at his favorite occupation.

The Lyric theater, Vevay, Ind., is presenting World features once a week.

William Meloy has signed a contract with W. V. and S. L. Dorsey, Shelbyville, Ind., for the erection of a picture theater to seat 800. It will be fireproof, highly ornamental, and luxuriously comfortable, and will drive a livery stable off the main street. It will have forced ventilation and steam heat.

Peter Sarantos of the Family theater, Elkhart, Ind., is in bad with the Mayor, the Chief of Police and the Matron. The three named say they found a picture Sarantos had advertised to exhibit "not moral" and ordered him not to show it. Sarantos said they visited his show and left, without expressing an opinion, by which action he took them to mean the show was O. K. To this the city officials come back by saying that they had ordered him not to show the film in advance and that the visit had only confirmed the order, this being what they expected Sarantos to understand.

Grimes Brothers, owners of the Arc, Crawfordsville, Ind., have booked a number of photoplays, and propose to show them for five cents if the crowds turn out in number to give them a profit. They are advertising the program change in a big way.

Frank Kline, operator at the Empress, Huntington, Ind., has just got back on the job after a siege of sickness.

The Valparaiso, Ind., exhibitors are featuring a daily weather report as part of the showing. When requested the government weather bureau will furnish such reports regularly.

The Essanay Company, Chicago, has arranged to film the Merom, Ind., chautauqua.

Roy Parks of the Arcade and F. E. Thompson and R. L. Hudson of the Pacae, Richmond, Ind., are in bad with the building inspector because side doors were found locked during recent shows. Patent safety locks are to be installed.

A committee of several citizens at Logansport, Ind., called upon the city authorities, requesting that the theaters be notified to close on Sundays. City Attorney Kistler holds that the law is based on popular opinion, and simply states that a man cannot follow his usual vocation, and if strictly enforced would close all drug stores, cigar stores, garages, etc. The action the city takes, he declares, must be based on affidavit filed by some complainant. The city stood ready, he said, to prosecute such an affidavit.

Walker & Sons, Anderson, have taken out a building permit to build a motion picture theater.

Prejudiced Censorship?

Houston, Texas, Board of Censors Scored by Exhibitor A. J. Xydias of the Rex and Star Picture Theaters—Claims He Is Forbidden to Run Films Permitted to Other Showmen—He Is Upheld by Court After Showing Picture.

By G. S. Parker, Dallas Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Houston (Texas) Board of Censors have unreasonable demands, according to A. J. Xydias, proprietor and manager of the Rex and Star motion picture houses in Houston. "The Seventh Commandment" was shown at a theater in Houston, first run, and the censor board passed it. It was to be shown by Xydias second-run, and they said "no." But Xydias believes in justice—he ran the picture anyway, even after the censor board had especially forbidden it. They tried to close him up and stop the showing, but found they could not do it. So they had him arrested for "showing an indecent film." The case came up in the Police Court, and it was found there was no city laws regarding the matter, so his case was transferred to the county court.

Before a crowded courtroom, the various points in the case were thrashed out, and Xydias was acquitted by the jury in ten or fifteen minutes. The court held that a member of a censor board has no more authority than any ordinary citizen. Just as any citizen may file a complaint with a county attorney, if they believe an exhibitor is showing an indecent picture, so also may the censor board members, but their say-so does not mean that the exhibitor will be convicted—it remains for the jury to say whether or not they believe the picture is indecent. The censor has no authority to make the exhibitor eliminate any scene from the picture, nor can a censor prevent the showing of a picture, according to the law brought out in this case.

The Houston censor board has seemingly been after Xydias for some time. When he had "The Devil's Daughter" booked, the censors looked it over and said "It is an indecent film—we prohibit the showing of it in Houston." But a few days later "The Devil's Daughter" was shown at one of the largest theaters in Houston, after being passed by the Houston censors.

Xydias ran "The Seventh Commandment" again after being acquitted for the first-time showing at his house—and it is not necessary to say that he "had some crowds."

MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL IN DALLAS.

The Old Mill theater of Dallas has been receiving photographs of "beauties" to select the most beautiful girl in the city. They now have some three or four hundred photographs, and it is said the judges are having a hard time picking out any one that is more beautiful than another. The judges are composed of Ben B. Lewis, Old Mill manager; E. H. Fitzhugh, camera-man and producer of a number of local motion pictures; and other prominent men of the city.

As soon as the most beautiful girl in the city is selected, she will be starred in a short film, produced for the Old Mill, about the State Fair of Texas, which is in full blast each year between the middle of October and November 1st, lasting sixteen days.

One of the afternoon newspapers says that the secret meaning of the "beauty contest" is to secure beauties who are capable of acting before the camera, to be used in the corps of photoplayers of the recently mentioned producing company in Dallas, which is as yet in the projected class.

DALLAS FLASHES.

J. Fred Rogers, of Dallas, has left for the Pacific Coast to investigate the possibilities of securing directors, cameramen, players, etc., for a film producing concern to be stationed at Dallas. It is said that Mr. Rogers has lined up a number of business men in Dallas to put up the capital for the company.

Miss Katherine Stevens, who recently played in "The Heart of a Woman," "A Foolish Virgin," etc., has been in Dallas for several days in consultation with Mr. Rogers regarding the project.

The tentative plans contemplate a Dallas producing company that will put out pictures of a superior quality, and by their merit, command attention everywhere. Mr. Rogers thinks that Dallas has an equal opportunity of producing pictures with Los Angeles and other California cities.

CENSOR BILL IN GEORGIA.

By A. M. Beatty, Atlanta Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

ONLY nine more working days for the Georgia Legislature and not a bill has been introduced to censor moving pictures.

A KINDERGARTEN PICTURE.

The Free Kindergarten Association of Atlanta put on a film Monday at the Alsha theater, on Gordon street, in the West End. The film, "Uncle Crusty," one especially adapted to the entertainment of children, drew a crowded house all day. A part of the proceeds go toward the treasury of the association, which each year finds its burden greater in the establishment of new schools, where they are needed and in their maintenance.

TUBERCULOSIS FILMS IN ATLANTA.

As a means of educating the people along lines of hygiene and proper care for themselves from the standpoint of health, the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association has planned a series of motion picture films to be given in the city covering a period of five weeks.

It is the association's plan to present a program for three consecutive nights of each week, the first of which will be given this week on Bellwood avenue. The films to be shown will illustrate local conditions, and show how they may be improved for the betterment of the community.

Prominent physicians of Atlanta will deliver lectures in connection with the pictures. In addition to the educational films, there will be some comedy pictures shown to vary the program. Being for the betterment of the health conditions of the city, no admission will be charged, nor any expense whatever to those attending.

"THE WHITE COAT."

Made in Atlanta, with an Atlanta girl as heroine, and a supporting cast, all Atlantians, "The White Coat," the last picture produced here by Edwin Bower Hesser, before the Colonel departed for Broadway, is being shown this week at the Georgian, formerly the Montgomery theater. Miss Alameda Holcombe, winner of the beauty contest which the Universal company conducted a while back, is the Atlanta girl who plays opposite Col. Hesser in the "White Coat." The scenes were made in Atlanta, Marietta and Decatur, Ga. This is the play in which Miss Holcombe came near losing her life. While taking a scene at Silver Lake, the canoe in which Miss Holcome was sitting capsized; she sank to the bottom and would have been drowned had it not been for one of the actors, Chip Eubanks, who rescued her.

WHAT IS DOING IN GEORGIA.

P. J. Flannery, formerly with the New York Review, has been made a member of the publicity department of the V-L-S-E. Mr. Flannery was with the Review for the past five years, and previous to that he was with the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. While with the Review he conducted its motion picture section.

J. Walter Lamb, for some months manager of the Atlanta office of the World Film Corporation, has returned to the head office in New York, being succeeded by H. R. Mason, one of the well-known motion picture men in the South.

Manager A. C. Bromberg, of the Mutual Film, spent the week end in Jacksonville, Fla.

Daniel Webster, manager of the Airdome, Union Point, Ga., was in Atlanta a few days this week, and reports a splendid business for his theater. He is supplied by the World Film Corporation.

The Majestic theater, Columbus, Ga., reopened Saturday, and reports a splendid business. A. R. Hill, late of Herrin, Ill., is the manager.

The Paris and Strand theaters, of Durham, N. C., report the largest business of the season the past week.

The Pastime theater of Greenwood, S. C., for the past week has shown an exceptionally good patronage. This theater is using the Universal service, and has many Fox features booked also.

Clara Kimball Young, in "Marrying Money," filled the Strand theater to S R O both Monday and Tuesday. The Strand has taken on new life the last few weeks, and the splendid orchestra at this theater has much to do with it.

The Montgomery theater, one of Atlanta's high class theaters, is now known as the Georgian. It is within each reach of all the hotels and numbers among its patrons perhaps more of the traveling public than any other theater of the city.

Frank Montgomery's new Regent theater out on Peachtree street in the residental section is doing a splendid business.

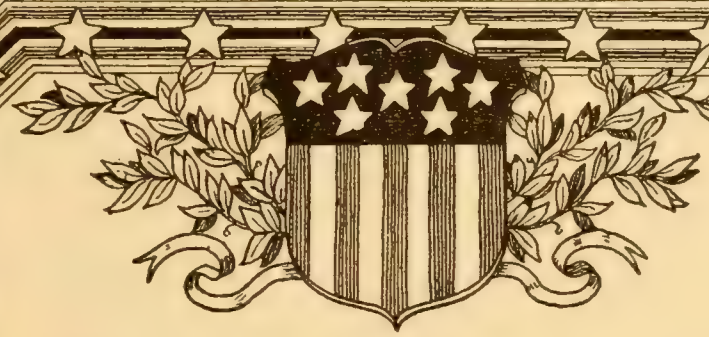
IOWA "FIRE-TRAP SHOWS" SCORED.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

DISASTERS in Iowa fire-trap motion picture theaters are possible, according to the Marshalltown, Ia., Times-Republican. The paper intimates that inspection is lax and that political reasons have a great deal to do with this neglect. It says: "There are hundreds of old store buildings without the large complement of exits where people crowd together to watch moving pictures, buildings where the inflammable films stand between the audiences and the doors. That Iowa has escaped a holocaust is more luck than management. A man may light a match in a powder mill and escape destruction, but he cannot continue the practice and avoid certain consequences of carelessness and bravado.

"So unless the condition of the cheap picture shows is amended the certainty exists that some town, little or large, shall soon find itself shocked and paralyzed with a horror proportionately as great as that which took place at the docks in Chicago Saturday.

"Strict investigation and inspection and rigid conformity to precautionary measures provided by law should be the watchword of state and city officers, whose responsibility for the safety of their own communities ought not to be sold for personal or political friendship or grafted upon to advantage or evaded through disinclination. For such evasion



Messrs
J. Stuart Blackton & Albert E. Smith
Have the Honor to Present

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

"A Call to Arms against War"

WHICH IS BELIEVED TO BE THE MOST NOTEWORTHY ACHIEVEMENT IN THE HISTORY OF MOTION PICTURES

Written and Vitagraphed under the personal supervision of

J. Stuart Blackton

with acknowledgments to Hudson Maxim
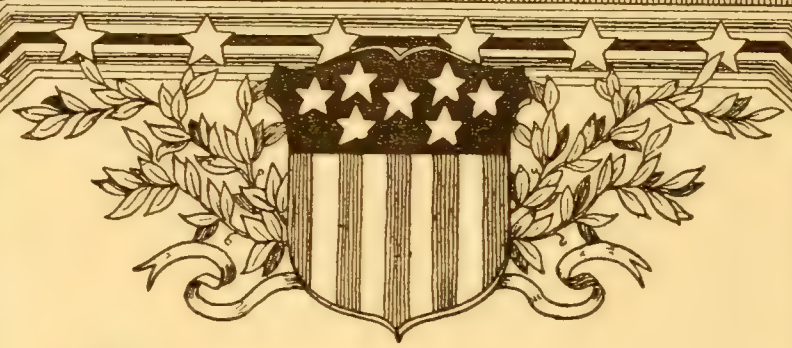
for facts contained in "DEFENSELESS AMERICA"

Notable among its sponsors are the foremost names in current American history. Personages of National and International importance appear personally in the production together with CHARLES RICHMAN and distinguished Vitagraph cast, 25,000 National Guardsmen, 800 members of the G.A.R., 5,000 horses and 8,000 supernumeraries.

VITAGRAPH BLUE RIBBON FEATURE



ONCE in a generation or so a book finds its way into history. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was a book of this kind. By crystallizing the scattered elements of a great problem it moved a nation.

Today there is another problem no less vital to our country's welfare than the one that inspired Harriett Beecher Stowe. Slavery threatened our unity; today our very existence is threatened by our defenselessness.

The solution of the one involved us in war; the solution of the other will prevent war.

To bring this great problem home to the millions of American people J. Stuart Blackton conceived a great idea.

Pioneer in the field of motion pictures, recognized as the great authority on motion pictures, one of the heads of a great motion picture industry—he saw an opportunity to utilize the great and hitherto unused power of motion pictures to help toward the solution of this national problem.

To carry out this idea he produced a wonderful picture; from it he has written a wonderful book.

He took the facts and statistics contained in Hudson Maxim's "Defenseless America" and around them weaved an absorbing story. With the unlimited resources of the Vitagraph Company of America at his command he translated this story into motion pictures. The result is "The Battle Cry of Peace."

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is the first motion picture to be used to exploit an important, nation-wide propaganda. Its object is to bring to the notice of the greatest number of people in the shortest possible time the defenselessness of our country; not only to make the American people realize our condition as a nation, but to show them also the consequences to which this condition may lead, and finally to show them how to remedy this condition.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is a call to arms—not for war but for PEACE. It will be shown in motion pictures theatres, schools, colleges and churches throughout the length and breadth of this country. It will arouse in the heart of every American citizen a realization of his strict accountability to his country in time of need.

is criminal, morally and legally criminal."

It is wiser not to take chances with human lives at stake. It is better business to run a legitimate picture show that will last than to make a big percentage on a small but temporary investment with high risks.

STATE'S EMINENT DOMAIN MAKES THEATER MOVE.

The West Side theater, at Cedar Rapids, was ordered by the court to move in order that the River Front Improvement Commission could slice ten feet off the rear of the building, which was in the way of a proposed "sea wall." O. D. Harman, owner of the theater, refused to vacate the building until ordered by the court. He probably will ask damages.

MAKES BURLINGTON, IA., FILMS.

Owne E. Lewis, camera man of Burlington, has been making a 3,000 foot commercial and industrial picture of that city. His work included the Tri-State Fair auto races and the Burlington speed boats racing in the Mississippi Power Boat Ass'n. regatta at Hannibal, Mo.

HERE AND THERE IN IOWA.

The Palace theater, at Waterloo, is using a slogan, "The House that Caters to the Masses and Not the Classes," which gives food for thought. It also says: "Some things you will not see at the Palace are peanut venders, a red-brown color over one-third of the curtain." "Some things you will not hear at the Palace, a funeral march at a horse race."

R. S. Ross, of Des Moines, has purchased the Iris, at Hamburg, from A. F. Larson.

Bernard McAnaa has opened the Crystal theater, at 613 East Locust street, in East Des Moines.

Thomas Matthews has sold the Star theater, at Knoxville.

The Magic theater, at Fort Dodge, has been leased to James Kearns, formerly connected with the Fort Dodge Gas and Electric Company.

Lloyd Gates, who recently sold his motion picture theater at Anamosa, has purchased the Crystal theater, at Greene, from D. C. Prior.

Members of the I. O. O. F. lodge at Lisbon, have purchased the motion picture equipment of E. E. Terry, of the Page theater, and will give regular shows at the opera house.

E. F. Russell has opened a motion picture show at Laurens.

Edward Ehlers has sold Wonderland theater, at Paullina, to Bert Phinney, of Sutherland, and is now selling automobiles.

George Tesmer, of Traer, has purchased the motion picture theater at Preston.

Ladies of the Moose Lodge, in Clinton, had charge of the show at the Family for a day.

The Lyric theater, at Iowa Falls, was sold at auction to C. M. Kellogg, of Webster City. Mr. Bussler, of Webster City, will be associated with him and will make a specialty of the musical programs.

Pertheram & Yeakel will erect a new opera house 32x100 at Kanawha.

L. T. Clark, of Rock Rapids, has opened a motion picture show in C. Gardner building, at Ocheyedan.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Chichester, of Sheffield, have opened a motion picture theater at Thornton.

MONTREAL TAX UNPOPULAR.

By Gerald Gallagher, Montreal Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Montreal Charity Tax has been in operation a week, and from the very first has been unpopular—with public, press, film and theater men. The public are angry, the press is loud in protest, and all exhibitors are losing money. The outlook for the future is optimistic, and there is every indication that Montreal will be freed from such a troublesome law. Already action has been taken against the city.

Monday, August 2, was the first day of the tax. Collection boxes were distributed to all places of amusement, and seventy-three policemen detailed to supervise the collection. There was some confusion that day. First of all, although the affair has been well press-agented, many were unaware of the new regulation. Then came the "kickers." The worst of the species were women with children. It is not amusing to pay a tax on a large family. From the start the poor people suffered, and this in turn affected the small picture shows. Many, in fact hundreds, at some shows, were turned away. In some cases, very isolated ones, the policeman permitted a patron who had not the extra cent to enter; in still other cases the management of a house would supply the needed coin.

It was thought, because the theaters were getting a percentage of the tax the theaters were the authors of the regulation so as to make more money. One manager claims a loss of fifty dollars a day. Another exhibitor claims a falling off in business of exactly fifty per cent. The attitude of the public towards the tax may be understood by this little anecdote: A party of pleasure-seekers stepped out of their car the other night and sought admission to a high-priced picture show in the West End. They would not pay the tax and so left the lobby. They were not mean or stingy, no. They even left the tickets behind and went away without receiving back their money. The public cannot be forced to do a thing.

The returns on the first day were $380. This represents about 38,000 people. However, this is not the average daily attendance at Montreal amusements. The business on that day was particularly bad, of course, and furthermore, the big legitimate theaters have not opened their seasons yet. If the tax continues to be levied it is safe to assume that returns will be larger. On the first day it was also announced that the city would remunerate show men later. Theaters will be paid five per cent of the amount in the boxes, as well as five per cent on the sale of tax tickets. Five per cent of 2000 admissions is only $1, since 2000 coppers only represent $20.

Action Against City.

As yet local motion picture exhibitors have taken no steps against the law. The Exhibitors' Association has held four meetings so far, but has not decided upon any definite plans. The WORLD man is given to understand that money will be voted soon for the purpose of fighting the tax. One firm, though, has already taken action against the city, and the first step will be to obtain an injunction restraining civic authorities from collecting the tax while the case is pending in the courts. The company which took action is the Dominion Park Company, Limited. Dominion Park is the Montreal Coney.

The petition is a lengthy one and sets forth in Section E, that by virtue of Par. 7, Sec. 92, of the British North America Act, the establishment, upkeep, and administration of hospitals, asylums, and charitable institutions other than marine hospitals belongs to the Legislature of the Province, which cannot delegate these powers to any municipal corporation, as it has done by the present law, to maintain the said hospitals and charitable institutions. In another section it is stated that the tax is the same on all tickets, no matter what the price may be, thereby creating, among the various establishments, such injustice as to constitute an illegality and render the said law null and void and ultra vires. The petition states as well that the law is contradictory inasmuch as in one section it claims proprietors to be personally responsible for the collection of the tax, and in another declares that the tax shall not be recoverable from the proprietors.

NO SCREEN
BUT THE BEST
The best picture service obtainable is only half as good if the projection is not of the best—and Perfect Projection is impossible unless the Screen used is a
Radium Gold
Fibre
—Moreover, Radium Gold Fibre Screens are made by a company that can and will make good on every business promise made.
Write for Sample, Price and Details of Our New Sales Plan RADIUM
GOLD FIBRE SCREEN
INC.
220 W. 42d STREET, NEW YORK CITY

BUFFALO CHILDREN IN SHOWS WITHOUT GUARDIANS.

By Billy Bison, Buffalo (229 Oxford ave.)
Correspondent of the Moving Picture World.

THE Buffalo Child Welfare Association announces that it will begin a campaign to require proprietors to enforce an ordinance which prohibits children under age to enter moving picture theaters and other amusement places without a parent or guardian. Letters soon will be sent out to all theater proprietors and managers in that city, warning them that the association intends to conduct prosecutions, unless the ordinance is enforced strictly. The association has also secured the conviction of a manager of a local moving picture and vaudeville house, who was charged with employing children under 16 years old in a vaudeville sketch.

A SENSATIONAL ADVERTISER.

Exhibitor J. Wallingford, manager of a five cent picture theater at 263 Main street, Buffalo, has been attracting a good deal of attention of late:

"I have earned the title of 'The King of Sensational Advertising,' said Mr. Wallingford, "and I am proud of the title. I am always on the lookout for novelties and my patrons appreciate my efforts. Five to six reels are featured by me. I try to show new scenes, new faces and new productions frequently, with music to match, and not have a sameness to my programs. The best offerings of Max Figman, William Farnum, Marguerite Clark, and other big stars are featured at my theater. In a contest at an early date I shall offer prizes to those who have the best make-up of Charlie Chaplin."

BUFFALO BREVITIES.

T. Leroy Wardle and E. T. Rinas will erect a moving picture airdrome at Farmingdale, N. Y.

For the benefit of the child welfare work, shows were recently given at all the moving picture theaters of North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Moving pictures of beautiful scenery along the Genesee River, N. Y., have been taken.

The Consolidated Amusement Co. has bought a moving picture theater in the Klienhans building in Salamanca, N. Y.

Several moving picture exhibitors of Syracuse, N. Y., have agreed upon a minimum admission fee of ten cents to be charged at their theaters after September 1st. In Watertown, N. Y., according to Papayanakos Brothers, owners of the Wonderland, Lyric and Antique picture theaters, the price of admission and the length of the programs will not be changed in that city.

The United States Film Co. has been taking moving pictures of residents and scenes in Oswego, N. Y.

A. F. Hanning has denied the report that he will build a moving picture theater at 114 Genesee street, Auburn, N. Y.

The National Movie Stamp Corporation has been incorporated in Jamestown, N. Y., with a capital of $100,000. The concern will manufacture premium tickets, stamps and coupons in connection with moving picture theatres, etc. The directors are Oscar Strangburg, James C. Peterson and Frank E. Felt, all of Jamestown.

Moving pictures reproducing scenes of the War of 1812 will be taken at Niagara Falls.

George and Peter Landry will build a $12,000 moving picture theater in Sixth avenue, Troy, N. Y. The house will seat 1,000 persons, and will be of white concrete blocks.

The Buffalo News in an editorial says the moving pictures of the Eastland disaster "have been rather a factor for good than for evil in Buffalo because they have impressed thousands of people with the danger of sudden rushes from one side to another on shipboard."

In Oswego, N. Y., recently, four persons were hurt, one seriously, while moving pictures of a pony parade were being taken in the business section there. The ponies became frightened, ran away and collided with a farmer's wagon.

The Buffalo Enquirer, in association with the World Film Corporation, and twenty-four newspapers in other cities, will release in local theaters each week a news film known as the Enquirer-World Weekly.

The Aldermen of Schenectady, N. Y., have decided against an ordinance which would have restricted the number of moving pictures in that city to sixteen, or one to every 5,000 inhabitants. All eight aldermen present voted negatively.

Oswego, N. Y., moving picture managers state that there will be no increase in the admission fee to their theaters and that the number of reels will not be decreased.

Harry D. Crosby, a Batavia, N. Y., actor, is spending his vacation in that city. Mr. Crosby appeared in the moving picture version of "York State Folks," as he was one of the members of the original company.

In North Tonawanda, N. Y., Mayor Rand has granted an unconditional license to Henry Klinger to conduct the Oliver theater seven days a week. The license was given under order of Justice Cuthbert W. Pound. This is the first time the movies have been granted a Sunday license in that city.

The International theater of Niagara Falls, which played dramas for many years, will be devoted entirely to moving pictures. In announcing the change the management said that on account of the popularity of moving pictures, "it is now difficult to secure a so-called 'legitimate' entertainment, most of the companies have been forced to give up their travels." Paramount service will be featured at the International.

Work is progressing on the new moving picture theater being erected on Oneida square, Utica, N. Y., by H. G. and A. G. Lux, owners of the Alhambra theater in that city. Names for the theater will be submitted in a public contest, and prizes will be offered. The house will seat 1400 persons.

The Avon will be the name of the new moving picture theater being erected on Lafayette street, Utica, N. Y., by the American Motion Picture Co. The stage will be 37 x 80 feet. A costly pipe organ will be installed by the Wurlitzer Co.

PITTSBURGH BANS CHICAGO DISASTER FILMS.

Special to Moving Picture World from Pittsburgh News Service.

MOVING pictures of the Chicago River disaster will not be allowed to be shown in Pittsburgh, according to R. J. Alderdice, police commissioner, who is acting superintendent of police. The pictures have been banned in several cities, according to dispatches. Acting Superintendent Alderdice has issued an order to all patrolmen to watch moving picture houses and if an attempt is made to show the picture of the disaster to report to the police commissioner immediately.

It has not been announced definitely what stand the moving picture men of this city will take in the matter, but it is thought some move will be made to overrule this order. Not only the moving picture men of the city, but the general public have taken notice that quite a number of interesting pictures have been prohibited from being shown, and it is thought the public also will make some kind of a stand in the near future to put a stop to this practice.

ROBERT WHITEHILL DROWNS.

Robert Whitehill, aged 19, a popular young man in the Pittsburgh film circles, employed as assistant shipper at the Metro offices, was drowned in the Allegheny River recently. Whitehill, in company with Robert Hoffman, left the Metro offices to go canoeing in Hoffman's canoe. Just as they reached the Sixteenth street bridge Whitehill leaned over as the canoe struck a whirlpool. Whitehill evidently lost his head and was drawn under some barges by the current, although Hoffman, who is an expert swimmer, called to his companion to keep cool and made every effort to reach him, but the current was too strong. The entire trade greatly sympathizes with his survivors and extend their sincere regrets.

IN SMOKY CITY CIRCLES.

M. J. Kornblum, manager of the publicity department of the Clark & Rowland chain of theaters in this city, has announced that he has made enlargements in the force of the advertising department. In addition to Arthur J. Simmons, who is assistant publicity manager, an advertising solicitor in the person of Walter L. Bacon, Jr., has been engaged, and Miss Helen Zinsmeister has also been engaged as stenographer. A multigraphing machine has been installed in addition to an Elliott addressing machine.

The two-reel story of the Knights of Malta picnic, held last Saturday at Kennywood Park, by W. B. Jones, of the Industrial & Domestic Film Company, of Pittsburgh, is already assured of an extended booking throughout the western part of Pennsylvania.

E. C. Rockwell, Pittsburgh manager of the Metropolitan Booking Offices, spent a few days last week visiting the Barkroot shows at Garrick, Pa.

Messrs. Parker & Elder, of Pittsburgh, have sold their Grand theater in Saltsburg, Pa., to M. G. Maute. Mr. Maute intends to enlarge and remodel this house in the very near future and change the policy to high-class features at increased prices.

Messrs. Hanitch & Robins, managers of the Coliseum theater in New Castle, Pa., are making many improvements on this house and intend making it one of the prettiest and most modern in the state. The house will be re-seated so that it will be more comfortable to the patrons and accommodate larger audiences. The interior of the theater will be finished in white and gold. It is expected that the house will be reopened about the middle of next month.

Mr. Hume has sold his motion picture theater located on Long avenue, Mahonington, Pa., to J. Hetrick. Mr. Hetrick has closed the house for repairs, and will reopen it in about a week.

J. Silverman, who operates the Pastime theater in Altoona, Pa., has purchased from M. O. Orner, the Juniata theater in this city.

Al. W. Cross, manager of the Hudson Feature Film Company, of Pittsburgh, has installed a Pony Rex film renovator which is giving excellent satisfaction. While the machine has been in use but a short time the exhibitors are commenting upon the clean and clear appearance of the films.

J. G. Meyer, manager of the Grand in Williamsport, Pa., has purchased a Minusa Gold Fibre screen from Ludwig Hommel & Company, Pittsburgh.

Gamble Brothers, who manage two theaters in Altoona, Pa., have purchased two motor-driven Power's cameragraphs from Ludwig Hommel & Co. The Gamble Brothers have Power's machines in all of their houses.

The contract for the terra cotta for the new Liberty theater on Penn avenue, near Frankstown avenue, East Liberty, has been let by the East Liberty Theater Company to the New York Architectural Terra Cotta Company.

John S. Wagner will have a $10,000 motion picture theater built in Ben Avon, near Pittsburgh, from plans by J. T. Steen, and bids on the job are now being received.

The contract for the Clarence Overend motion picture theater, to be built on East Ohio street, Northside, Pittsburgh, has been awarded to Golden & Crick.

Most Manufacturers
Look upon the picture business
As a gamble
The success of their releases
Is a matter of chance.
With
Vitagraph
Lubin
Selig
Essanay
It is not a gamble
Because
They have
The experience
To select the best scenarios,
The money
To pay the best actors and
The brains
To produce the best results
From the best material.

V.L.S.E. INC.
1600 BROADWAY, N.Y.CITY.

A screen inspection of
"THE CHALICE OF COURAGE."
Will do more to convince you
That this picture
Will meet the approval
Of your audiences
Than all the advertising we can place.
CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY,
Author of
"The Island of Regeneration",
Also wrote
"THE CHALICE OF COURAGE."
His name alone
Means packed theatres.
"THE CHALICE OF COURAGE."
Is one of his best works.
Directed by ROLLIN S. STURGEON.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA
EXECUTIVE OFFICES
EAST 15TH ST. & LOCUST AVE., BROOKLYN, N.Y.
NEW YORK CHICAGO LONDON PARIS

It is not only possible to secure
Blue Ribbon Features of five or more parts,
But commencing with

"the WHEELS of JUSTICE"

You can get Four Part
Blue Ribbon Features.
In quality, in cost of production, in intensity of dramatic action and in popularity

"the WHEELS of JUSTICE"

Will come up to and prove to be the equal of previous
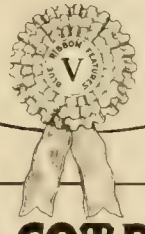
Blue Ribbon Features
Released Aug. 22ND



THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA
EXECUTIVE OFFICES
EAST 15TH ST. & LOCUST AVE., BROOKLYN, N.Y.
NEW YORK CHICAGO LONDON PARIS

LUBIN

ANNOUNCES

THE DEBUT IN PHOTOPLAY
OF THE FAMOUS COMEDIAN

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK

IN

THE RINGTAILED RHINOCEROS

SUPPORTED BY
FLORA ZABELLE
HERBERT FORTIER
RAYMOND HACKETT
EDWARD METCALFE
IDA WATERMAN
ARTHUR MATTHEWS
&
WILLIAM BOYD

A FANCIFUL COMEDY
IN FOUR ACTS

"ALICE IN WONDERLAND"
OUTDONE

FOR GROWN-UPS
FOR CHILDREN
FOR PESSIMISTS
FOR OPTIMISTS

FOR EVERYBODY WHO LIKES TO LAUGH

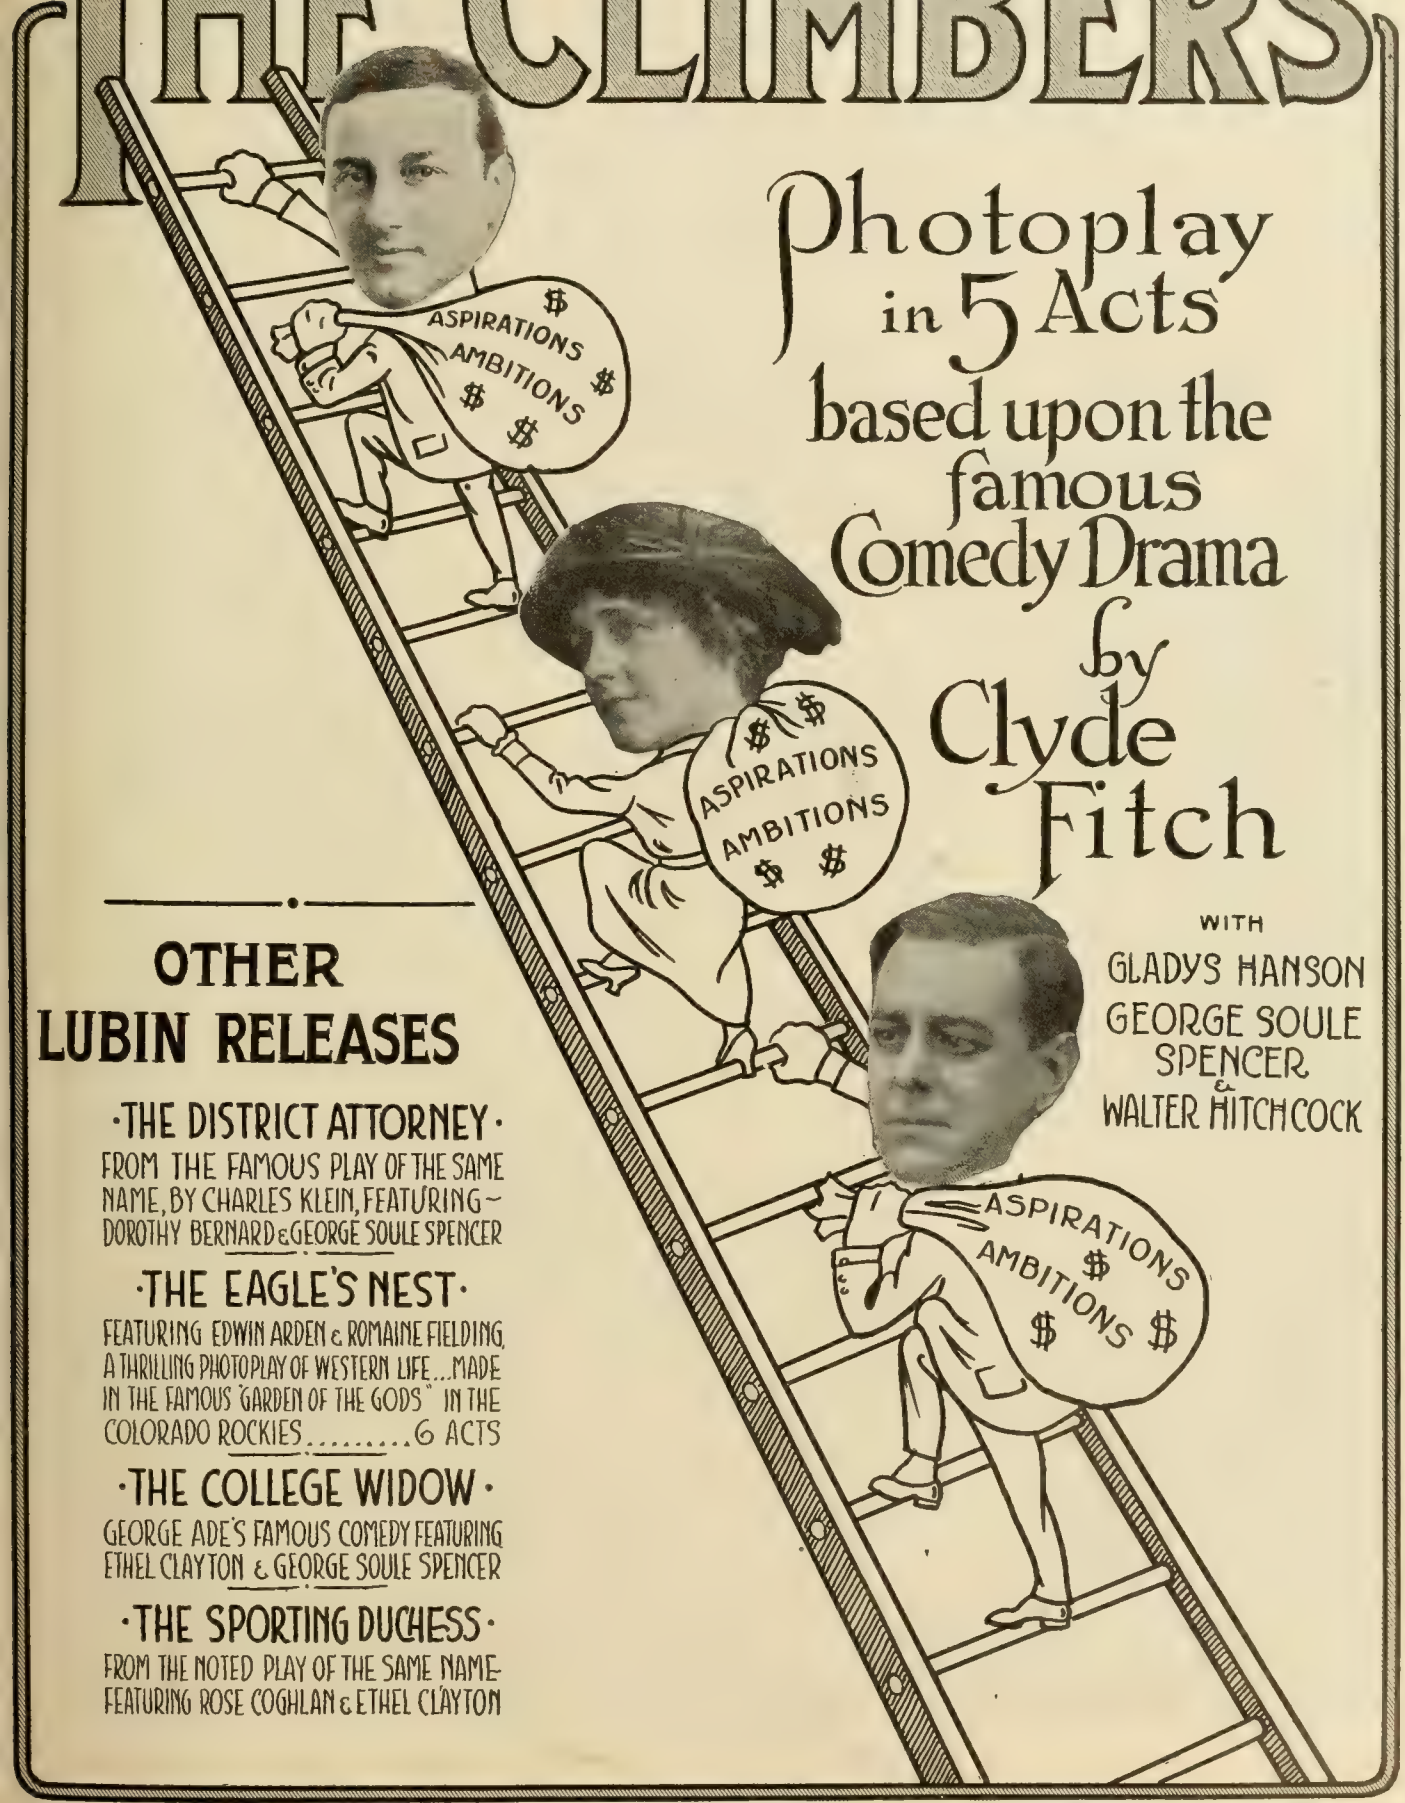
RELEASED
AUGUST 16TH

THROUGH THE
V.L.S.E. OFFICES

Reginald Lubin

Reginald Lubin

THE CLIMBERS



Photoplay in 5 Acts based upon the famous Comedy Drama by Clyde Fitch

WITH
GLADYS HANSON
GEORGE SOULE SPENCER
&
WALTER HITCHCOCK

OTHER LUBIN RELEASES

·THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY·
FROM THE FAMOUS PLAY OF THE SAME NAME, BY CHARLES KLEIN, FEATURING ~ DOROTHY BERNARD & GEORGE SOULE SPENCER

·THE EAGLE'S NEST·
FEATURING EDWIN ARDEN & ROMAINE FIELDING, A THRILLING PHOTOPLAY OF WESTERN LIFE...MADE IN THE FAMOUS "GARDEN OF THE GODS" IN THE COLORADO ROCKIES.....6 ACTS

·THE COLLEGE WIDOW·
GEORGE ADE'S FAMOUS COMEDY FEATURING ETHEL CLAYTON & GEORGE SOULE SPENCER

·THE SPORTING DUCHESS·
FROM THE NOTED PLAY OF THE SAME NAME FEATURING ROSE COGHLAN & ETHEL CLAYTON

COMING
THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES
IN FIVE ACTS
FEATURING HARRY MESTAYER
SELIG RED SEAL PLAYS
A Texas Steer
The Rosary
The Millionaire Baby
The Carpet from Bagdad
BOOK DIRECT SELIG 1600 B'WAY N.Y.CITY

"A Bunch of Keys" Provokes Explosive Laughter, Says Critic

Here is what a leading photoplay critic says of Essanay's five-act comedy, "A Bunch of Keys," written by Charles Hoyt.

" 'A Bunch of Keys' had a prolonged stage success.

"Its humorous incidents made ardent admirers yell themselves hoarse.

"Hoyt never permitted vulgarity or indelicacies in his plays.

"Essanay's production in films of 'A Bunch of Keys' has the real Hoyt atmosphere.

"For me the five reels evoked explosive laughter.

"It will keep the spectator in a mirthful state of mind.

"It will provoke boisterous merriment.

"To the excellent assignment of the characters in the cast is attributed much of the mirth.

"William Burress, John Slavin, June Keith and William Castelet, in the leads, form a strong quartet.

"Another strong point that will commend this Essanay production to favor is the care devoted to settings."

Book this comedy through any of the branch offices of the V. L. S. E., Inc. Produced by Richard Foster Baker.

Trademark Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

ESSANAY

"FIRST TO STANDARDIZE PHOTOPLAYS"

1333 ARGYLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Trademark Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

Stories of the Films

General Film Company

VITAGRAPH.

THE CUB AND THE DAISY CHAIN (Aug. 23).—The cub reporter writes a touching little story of Grandma's birthday party, with daisy chains, dances, etc., when he should have written her epitaph. His girl saves the day and Jimmy gets a good job.

FROM THE DREGS (Special—Two Parts—Aug. 24).—Lieutenant Curren, of the regular army, is assaulted by Private Roy, of his company, and the latter is sent to the military prison. Known as Convict 125, Roy serves a year of his time, then his desire for revenge turns to repentance and he apologizes to Curren. A pardon is secured and Roy reinstated in the service. War breaks out, and Roy saves the Lieutenant's life on the field of battle, but loses his own in doing so. From a locket found on Roy Curren's wife identifies him as her long-lost brother.

A CITY RUBE (Aug. 25).—Talk about a county boy being a Rube! You ought to see the green city lad in the country. After trying to make the cow sit on the milking stool, collecting all the china eggs and jabbing the farmer with a pitchfork, Adolphus flees for the railroad station, spurred on by liberal charges of bird shot.

THE GOOD IN THE WORST OF US (Aug. 26).—In protecting his wife from a companion of former days, a young husband is nearly shot. The police—called by her—shoot first, however, and the crook's dying words clear the wife's name and restore happiness.

THE WARDROBE WOMAN (Aug. 27).—Mary Mooney, wardrobe woman with a musical comedy show, adopts Ella, an orphaned chorus girl. Her wisdom and fearlessness save the girl from the clutches of a human vulture and set her feet on the straight and narrow path.

THE TIGRESS (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three Parts—Aug. 28).—Absolutely without fear, strong as a man and the wife of a Master-Crook, "The Tigress" steals the child of a wealthy man and lavishes upon it all the wealth of mother love in her ferocious nature. She becomes leader of the gang and rules them with a will or iron. On the other hand, she brings up her adopted son in total ignorance of the other side of her life. Eventually, the police round up the gang and "The Tigress" is arrested. Scornful to the end, she confesses everything, kisses her adopted boy for the last time, and dies by her own hand.

KALEM.

THE BARNSTORMERS (Broadway Favorites—Four Parts—Aug. 23).—Adam, the proprietor of a country hotel, loses his heart to Nell, a soubrette. Unknown to the old man, the girl and his son Jack were formerly sweethearts, but had quarreled because of her refusal to leave the stage. Knowing of Adam's love for Nell, Mason, the leading man, and Eppstein, the manager, induce him to finance the show. This is on its last legs. The members of the company stop at Adam's hotel while in Preston and thus Nell meets Jack again. Upon her refusal to give up the stage, Jack angrily leaves her. When the show departs early next morning, Adam goes with it.

Nell is fascinated by Mason and the latter plays her against Clara, who also fancies she loves him. Nell does not know that it is Adam's money which is backing the show. When she does discover the manner in which the old man is being fleeced, she promptly declares her intention of quitting the company. The conspirators vainly plead with the girl. Desperate, Mason and Eppstein kidnap Adam and wire Jack in the old man's name asking him to telegraph $600. His suspicions aroused, Jack determines to investigate. In the meantime, Nell has discovered Adam's predicament. Securing assistance, she rescues him just as Jack arrives. In gratitude, Adam advances enough money to send all the members, with the exception of the plotters, home. Nell, sick of the stage, returns to Preston with Jack and his father. The latter learns of their love affair, and concealing his own love, gives them his blessing.

HAM AND THE EXPERIMENT (Aug. 24).—Professors X. Periment and R. E. Search discover a liquid which, injected into the veins of any mere man, will cause the ladies to fall madly in love with him. The men of science try the liquid on Ham and Bud. Primed with this marvelous chemical, the adventurers wander forth into the world. Annette and her sister Muriel are spooning in the park with their sweethearts, when Ham and Bud pass by. The liquid promptly gets in its fine work. Deserting their sweethearts, the sisters throw their arms about the wanderers.

Unable to get the girls away from Ham and Bud, the distracted lovers call a policewoman to their assistance. The latter takes one look at the adventurers and promptly implores them to flee with her. Miss Highbrow, head of the school which Muriel and Annette attend, appears upon the scene. She, too, falls victim to the charms of Ham and Bud. Distracted, the poor men try to escape, but the rest of Miss Highbrow's pupils arrive and they also make love to Ham and Bud. In despair, Annette's and Muriel's lovers call a policeman, but when the latter attempts to arrest the harassed adventurers, the girls make it hot for him. In vain do Ham and Bud try to escape from the caresses showered upon them. Finally, taking advantage of the battle between the policeman and their admirers, they hit the high spots in racing out of town.

MYSTERIES OF THE GRAND HOTEL (6th Episode, "A Double Identity"—Two Parts—Aug. 25).—Paul Brooks, a heavily-bearded man, registers at the Grand Hotel and asks for a room without bath. The man is assigned to No. 12, next to No. 14, occupied by Brant, who had registered earlier in the day. Rooms 12, 14 and 16 really comprise a suite, but have doors which, when locked, allow the rooms to be rented separately. Late that night Jenkins, a diamond buyer in No. 16, is attacked by a masked man, who enters from the next room. The thief is temporarily frustrated and goes back to No. 14. When Francis and Hilton investigate, they find Brant, bound and gagged, in a chair. The man declares he had been overpowered by the burglar.

Two hours later, Jenkins is again attacked and this time five big diamonds are taken. The house detectives, investigating, find Brant has disappeared. Out in the hall they meet Brooks, carrying soap and towel, and clad in pajamas, coming from the bath room. The diamond salesman finds something strangely familiar about Brooks and imparts this suspicion to the house detectives. The latter spy upon the man and see him carefully place the soap in his trunk. Overpowering Brooks they examine the soap and find it contains the stolen diamonds. Brooks confesses that he and Brant are one and the same person. After the first attempt to rob Jenkins, he had removed his beard and played Brant. The robbery perpetrated, he retreated to No. 12 and assumed his disguise, donning pajamas and going to the bath room to establish an alibi.

A BATTLE OF WITS (An Alice Joyce Re-Issue—Aug. 27).—While at work in the woods, Tom meets Sue. Tug, who seeks to win the girl's hand, becomes insanely jealous when he learns of her friendship for Tom. The mountaineer inflames Sue's father against the surveyor and the old man forbids Tom to visit the premises. Some time later, Tug is given some mail addressed to Sue. Opening one of the letters, he discovers it to be a message from a promoter who has discovered that the railroad intends to lay its tracks through the girl's land. Meeting the promoter, Tug represents himself as Sue's husband and receives $10,000 on an option for the right-of-way.

When Tom learns of this piece of crookedness, he hastens to the Elwood cabin. Tug, however, has poisoned old Elwood's mind and the two attack the surveyor, making him a prisoner. Tom is placed in an outbuilding until his captors can decide upon his fate. Sue, who has been locked in her room because of her refusal to marry Tug, succeeds in escaping and sees the two men imprisoning her lover. She liberates Tom and the two start for the village, where they meet the promoter and explain the situation. The treachery of Tug is exposed and Sue's father consents to allow her to marry Tom.

TRAIN ORDER NUMBER 45 (Episode No. 42 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Aug. 28).—Borden, who nurses a secret grievance against Helen, awaits an opportunity for revenge. The girl telegrapher receives a mes-

YOU'LL BE AS MAD AS A WET HEN, ONE OF THESE RAINY DAYS

When you find your negative coming back to you all botched up. We are "dyed in the wool" cranks about turning out

PERFECT DEVELOPING AND PRINTING

In fact, that's what made us the biggest industrial and commercial factory in this country.

WRITE FOR FACTORY DESCRIPTION AND PRICE LIST

INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE COMPANY

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER, President 223-233 West Erie Street, Chicago, Ill.

sage which informs her that the freight of which Easton is conductor, is to wait at Workman until the Fast Mail passes. Helen turns a copy of this order over to Easton, placing the original, containing his signature, in her file. Easton, however, forgets instructions and is terrified when he sees his train rushing into a head-on collision with the Fast Mail. The man leaps from the freight, landing on his head. The collision is averted in the nick of time. Easton, rendered insane, disappears.

Borden, seeing a chance for revenge, destroys the original order. Consequently, Helen, unable to produce it and prove that she had had it signed by Easton, is suspended. Later, a detective comes upon Easton, who is hopping a freight. Helen witnesses the struggle between the two. Borden also sees Easton and in his effort to get the man out of the way, plans to dynamite the train. Easton succeeds in hurling the detective from the top of the car. Helen, however, lassoes the insane man and drags him to the ground. At the same time, Borden's dastardly attempt is discovered and he is placed under arrest. Helen is exonerated and restored to duty.

LUBIN.

THE SPARK AND THE FLAME (Aug. 26).—Bob Benham, a derelict of the city thinks sadly of his present state and the so-called good times that made him so. Mary Hamilton, a country girl who has come to the city in search of a career, also realizes that she has made a mistake. Her money runs out, and she is pressed by the insistent demands of her landlady. She secured a job at four dollars a week as salesgirl in a department store, not because of her ability, but because she appeals to the grosser senses of the floorwalker, Bascomb. She manages to evade his advances for a time, for her pay, though small, means much to her, and she needs the work.

Hungry for a sight of her beloved country, she takes a walk in the park with her first and precious pay envelope clasped in her hand. In putting her money into her pocket, she drops it upon the bench where Bob sits brooding. He finds the envelope and his first thought is to return it, but a weakness to which men are prone causes him to hide the money from Mary. Mary is heart-broken and hopeless over its loss. With the money in his possession, Bob hardens his thoughts to the fact that he stole it, and he determines to spend it in buying the companionship which he was denied. The cafe calls him, and thither he goes. Bascomb, determined to make a last desperate effort to get Mary in his power, goes to her lodging. He overhears her trying to explain to the unbelieving landlady how she lost her money. Her excuses and pleas are of no avail, and she is told to get out.

When Mary comes to the lodging house with no money and no place to go, he proffers his aid, and Mary, unsuspecting, gratefully accepts. As the second step in his plan, he coaxes her into a cafe, but when she realizes the kind of place it is and tries to get away, Bascomb shows his claws. Her appeals for aid are laughed at by the hardened habitues of the place, but Bob, who has come to a realization of what he has done, and is filled with remorse, responds. He battles his way to freedom, taking Mary with him, and in a measure redeems himself. He returns the lost pay envelope, unopened, and confesses himself a thief, but Mary, realizing that the good in him is stronger than the bad, prevails upon him to leave the city and work out his salvation in the wide open places of nature. Her words put new life and hope in him, and together they face the rosy future, hand in hand, where God intended man to live, in the country.

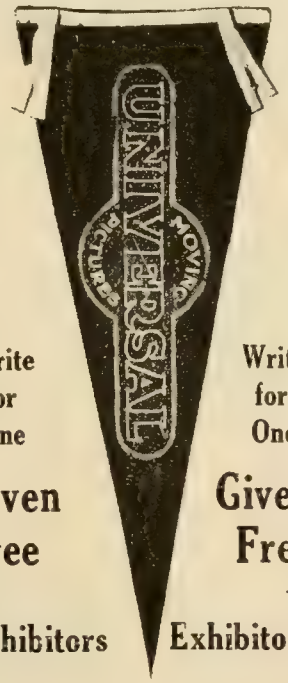
DOG-GONE LUCK (Aug. 24).—When Tony Spaghetti gets word that his uncle from Italy, whom they believe to be rich, is coming to visit them, he quits his job. He and his wife go to the dock to welcome him as he arrives with his dog. Both Tony and his wife hate dogs, but they show the old man greatest attention, hoping to get him to leave them his money. They take the old man home, where he asks them to get him something to eat. They go to the store and, after they are gone Tony's brother, who has been threatened by the Black Hand, comes in and asks the uncle to look after his money for him. The uncle agrees to do so and when Tony and his wife come back from the store they see him counting the money. They think it is his own and follow him to the bank and see him deposit it. They proceed to celebrate and go to a beer garden, but the uncle goes there, too, and overhears a conversation that is not very complimentary to him. He gets an idea and goes to a lawyer and makes his will. He dies a short time after and Tony pays his last cent for funeral expenses. Then they go to the lawyer's for their legacy and find that the fortune is nothing but the dog.

THE VICTORIOUS JOCKEY (Aug. 24).—This is a cartoon comedy depicting the adventures of the jockey riding the great race for which he is to win a beautiful heroine's hand. Of course he succeeds after a most exciting and thrilling race, and all ends happily.

Free! for 30 days and — to EXHIBITORS ONLY

A Beautiful Felt Pennant 11½x30" size

THIS offer is limited to 30 days only from the date of this issue of the Moving Picture World and to exhibitors only. No strings to this offer. Simply fill out the coupon below and mail it in. No pennants will be sent unless you USE THE COUPON. No attention paid to letters with requests for pennants unless you enclose the coupon below properly filled out. The pennants are handsome, made of fine felt and have the Universal imprint in design on them in two colors. See the cut. Send no money. These pennants are given to you FREE—but, you must fill out and send in the coupon. That's all there's to it.



Write for One Given Free to Exhibitors

Write for One Given Free to Exhibitors

Coupon Good for One Felt Pennant

Supply Dept., Universal Film Mfg. Co.
1600 Broadway, New York City
Gentlemen:
I would like to have one of the Free Universal pennants you advertised in Moving Picture World.

Theatre .....

City..... State.....

SUPPLY DEPT.
Universal Film Manufacturing Co.
CARL LAEMMLE, President
"The Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"
1600 Broadway New York

A SPECIES OF MEXICAN MAN (Special—Three Parts—Aug. 25).—A "Man," born of woman, in a republic of darkness, walked straight and true, preaching the doctrine of light, intelligence and progressiveness, and thereby developed a strength and manhood that the people respected and followed blindly, not as fanatics, but as an enlightened race. The above was accomplished by this man after years of strife, by following the commandments given by God to man, and weeding out iniquities, falseness and double dealings. Like our Savior, he surrounded himself for the most part by loyal workers of the cause—that cause was moral, mental and physical cleanliness, and at the beginning of the story we find the "Man" on the battlefield, working beside his men, enduring the many iconoclastic features that war entails.

From camp to camp his men bow in deference to his superior presence and intellect. What they feel most is his inherent goodness and the discipline that this same quality brings forth, the same being evident by the manner in which his small band fight against tremendous odds. The time comes, however, when the "Man" finds that he is compelled to leave his mother country for the purpose of importing arms and ammunition that the terrible war for right may go on. He visits his general commanding, finds him wounded unto death, and with his blessings and prayer, leaves him and goes to the United States. We find him crossing the international border, looking back upon the beautiful land of his forefathers, torn and misshapen. Turning, he faces bravely to his adventure, and while en route he meets with the daughter of the Powder King, who leads him to her father. Negotiations are entered and consummated for sufficient arms and ammunition to complete his conquest of Mexico. Prior to his return to his native land, he saves the son of a widow, Hiram, and his sister, Rose, from an untimely end. Later the sister, sensing the "Man," gives him her heart, but, bowing to the call of duty, he leaves. A note which he left for his sweetheart (the future Mrs. President of Mexico) reads simply: "When I am worthy I will come for you. Until such time, I remain the 'Man.'"

UNDER THE FIDDLER'S ELM (Special—Two Parts—Aug. 26).—Martin Fletcher, of the Fletcher Transatlantic Line, refuses to grant permission to his daughter Rosalie to marry Jim Chadwick, his secretary, until Jim "makes good." Jim, however, writes to Rosalie that he will soon have $25,000. Fletcher receives a black-hand letter demanding $25,000, to be placed on a rock near the so-called "Fiddler's Elm," under threat of the destruction of his new ship, the Flora.

Meanwhile Fletcher's friend, Stanley Beldon, returns from Africa with a strange box, the contents of which he keeps a secret. Beldon takes charge of the situation and places on the rock a fake package. Jim and a detective, Blake, watch near the rock, and the package is stolen while the detective sleeps. The next morning word comes that the Flora has been destroyed by an explosion. Jim is suspected and Blake searches his room, finding an outfit for experimenting with explosives, and a letter addressed to "Dearest," telling of expected money. Rosalie, meanwhile, meets Beldon in his car with a box of rabbits and a basket, in which she hears a strange noise. That night Blake and Fletcher, having put a package of real money on the rock, watch together. Again they find the package gone and no trace of the thief.

They rush to Jim's house, where they find him counting money. Just as they are arresting him, Rosalie dashes in and explains hurriedly that Beldon is the guilty man. They all hurry to Beldon's home and find the money in his pocket. Then Rosalie explains how she has solved the mystery. She noticed that the rock bore a peculiar streak of mud, and then found the fake package in the bushes. She watched that night with her field glasses and saw Beldon near her father and Blake. She explains that Jim's money has come from the sale of a formula to the Government. Then, in the mysterious basket, she shows them Beldon's thief—a well-trained African snake. The rabbits had been intended for its food, and it was on this slender clue that Rosalie had won her success.

THE MIRROR (Aug. 27).—She is a simple mountain girl with an overabundance of vanity common to her sex. She defers giving a final answer to her rival young mountaineer lovers. It is understood that the first to give her a new dress will be the favored one. Both men save their earnings to this end. The expected day arrives. One gives her a charming dress and a mirror the first she has had. The other comes to tell her he can give her his love as a loyal husband. His expected gift is not forthcoming. He leaves, seeing her decision for the other man written in her eyes.

The next day, attired in the gown which is a delight to her, she admires herself in the mirror in a glade at the foot of a cliff. A rock descends from above and smashes the mirror as she gazes into it. Believing it to be the work of the rival lover she hurries, angered, to his home. There he sees through the window a physician from the village attending the man's invalid mother. The savings intended for the girl's finery had gone to defray expenses for an operation. The rock which destroyed the mirror had become dislodged by the hoof of the horse bearing the physician to the man's home. His unselfishness and her own vanity are so forcibly brought before her that her mind is soon made up as to which man will make the better husband.

BILLIE JOINS THE NAVY (Aug. 28).—Billie gets tired of playing in pictures. He doesn't mind breaking an arm or a leg now and then, but he does draw the line at breaking his neck, and when his director tells him to go to the top of a tall building and fall off, he resigns so suddenly that he has no pay coming to him. He tosses up his last half dollar to see what he shall do next—and the coin rolls into the sewer.

A poster of the Navy Department attracts Billie's attention and he decides to enlist because he already knows how to dance the hornpipe. It is rather discouraging to enlist and find that he has to shovel coal, but he does the best he can. This is not very good; indeed, the steam pressure goes down to almost nothing and Billie goes to the brig. When he gets out they demote him to the rank of ordinary seaman and put him in the engineer's mess. He is just as bad a waiter as he was a fireman, and he thinks that it is about time to do something to get solid with somebody, so he hires a messmate to fall overboard and be rescued.

It is the first thing he has not made a mess of. He not only is congratulated by the captain, but he is given a medal and a hundred dollars. He is allowed to keep the medal, but his messmate takes the hundred on threats of exposure. That night Billie dreams that he is an admiral and bosses the whole ship, but what he dreams is the report of the sixteen inch gun is merely concussion with a board in the hands of a husky sailor.

BIOGRAPH.

THE DRAB SISTER (Special—Two Parts—Aug. 31) Olive Sheldon and her beautiful young sister, Evelyn, did dressmaking to keep a roof over the head of their invalid mother. Olive did the work while frivolous Evelyn romped with her chums and flirted with eligible young men. And when Mrs. Sheldon passed away, it was Olive who made the way smooth for her sister. One day Tom Weston, their neighbor, won recognition at last by means of an invention which within a few years would make him rich. Olive was glad, for she loved Tom secretly. But he loved Evelyn—and asked Olive's consent to the marriage. Evelyn cared nothing for Tom; she had fallen desperately in love with Walter Courteney, a summer visitor whom she met at a dance. Olive passed her on to give Tom an answer. Tom was rich, and, as she must marry some one, she took him. Evelyn exercised her new power for enjoyment to the limit. Three years passed; then, one day, Walter Courteney returned. He persuaded Evelyn to go away with him, and to bring her child. Their train was wrecked, and all were killed. Olive nursed Tom, broken by the news, back to health. In the months of close companionship he had learned to value her at her true worth.

TWICE WON (Aug. 23).—At a masquerade ball the popular young bachelor meets a girl in black, with whom he pleads in vain for a glimpse of her face. She expresses the wish to remain unknown; and when he, having unmasked, gives her his card, she writes on it "The Woman in Black." In the country, that summer, he meets with an accident while driving, and is succored by a villager and her niece. They take him to their cottage, where the bruises and broken wrist sustained in the runaway are treated. His hostess insists that he remain under her roof until he is entirely well, and he accepts. As he convalesces he falls hopelessly in love with the girl, but she will give him no encouragement. Returning to town he keeps his promise to meet the fair unknown at the next masquerade ball, and informs her that he loves another. She then unmasks, revealing the face of the girl he loves.

MISTER PAGANINI (Special—Two Parts—Aug. 24) The blind violinist had so endeared himself to the inhabitants of Willow Creek that they called him affectionately "Mister Paganini." One day the town of Fourflush wrote requesting the loan of Mister Paganini for a gala occasion. In the Fourflush saloon he was regaling himself with a glass of water when a local bad man rode through and started to shoot up the town. Mister Paganini stumbled through a doorway into an inner room, beyond which three newcomers were drinking in private. Without meaning to listen, he heard fragments of conversation which shook his confidence in humanity. The three ruffians were planning to jump an unfiled claim—and that claim was the property of his friends, Tom Evans, Shakespeare George and Stinger Johnson.

Mister Paganini determined to act. He feared to trust any one, so he must go through with it himself. He, a blind man, unfamiliar with the trails, must get back to Willow Creek before dawn and warn his friends. Undaunted by the terrible ordeal, he turned his back on Fourflush and set out. The next morning Marietta Johnson found him lying exhausted in the shallows of a stream and summoned her husband. The story told, Tom Evans and his partners armed themselves and sat down to await the claim jumpers, while Mister Paganini and Marietta rode to file the claim. Never were rogues more strangely checkmated.

HIS BIRTHDAY GIFT (Aug. 26).—The wealthy young bachelor's sweetheart is an idle, vain creature; but for a time she is successful in leading him to believe that she shares his ideas regarding woman's work in the world. When his birthday approaches, she realizes that the gift which he will most deeply appreciate should be something made with her own hands. She is too indolent, however, to do the work herself; so she purchases a fine scarf and employs a seamstress to embroider his initials upon it. The seamstress, going to deliver the work, loses the parcel. The bachelor finds it and, reading the worker's name and address upon the wrapper, returns it to her. She then conveys it to the wealthy girl, who gives it to her sweetheart as the work of her own hands. He, recognizing it, realizes her true character, and they part. Later he visits the seamstress and recognizes in her the type of girl in whom he can become interested.

THE SHERIFF'S BABY (Biograph—Aug. 27—Re-issue No. 12).—Three outlaws, pursued by the posse, are crossing the desert when a child's cry halts them. Near a deserted wagon they see a mountain lion about to devour a baby, whose late guardians lie dead of thirst near by. Driving off the beast, the outlaws rescue the baby, first feeding it and then taking it with them, despite the handicap of its presence. Attacked by Indians, they still refuse to desert "Little Pardner." In a running fight one outlaw is killed; another dies of thirst. The survivor escapes and, seeing the posse in the distance, fires a shot to attract their attention. The sheriff, coming up, is amazed to see, in the outlaw's arms, his own motherless baby, which he had left in the care of an old settler and his wife. The story told, he bids the outlaw go where he will—for he will never take him prisoner.

THE NEED OF MONEY (Aug. 28).—The rich man's daughter thinks only of finery. Her father gives her a twenty dollar note, with the promise of more when some of his tenants shall have paid their rent. While dressing to go downtown, she accidentally spills perfume on the note and pins it to a window curtain to dry. The wind carries the note away, and it is found in the grounds by a young laborer whose mother is very ill. He offers the note to the old doctor in payment of his bill, and the doctor in turn pays his rent with it. The girl, missing the money, reports the loss to her father. He consoles her by offering another note; she recognizes the perfume, and demands an explanation. The doctor is followed to the laborer's cottage, where the girl, her father and the detectives they have summoned enter as the boy's mother dies—victim of the need of money.

SELIG.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 61 (Aug. 2).

North Island Aviation School, San Diego, Cal—The first aero squadron of United States Army commanded by Captain Benjamin Foulois, is formed.

Oakland, Cal.—Famous ball player, Jack Ness, receives loving cup presented by Mayor John L. Davis. Has hit in 49 straight games and smashes hit record.

Medford, Mass.—B. K. Shepard invents devices controlled by wireless mast that he carries from place to place. He lights lights, moves signals, fires cannon, lights cookstove, sinks ship and operates auto all by wireless.

New York.—Lieut. Chas. Becker, of N. Y. Police Department leaving Ossining prison. Is refused last hope for life by Supreme Court.

San Francisco—Theodore Roosevelt makes address at Panama-Pacific Exposition, criticising pacificists who would "Chinafy" America. Also Hiram W. Johnson addressing throng.

New York—Baroness Irmgard von Rottenthal dances for benefit of children, using Central Park as her stage.

Beverly, Mass.—Boston Chamber of Commerce have novel battle at day's outing at Country Club.

London, England—Lord Kitchener visits Guildhall with Lord Mayor, inspects guard of honor in campaign for more recruits.

On Battle Line in Serbia—British Royal Marines help drag big naval guns to position along Serbian lines. Shielding guns from aeroplane scouts.

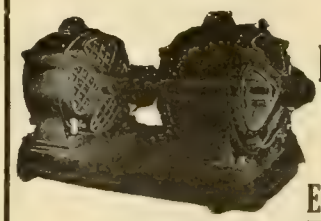
HALLBERG

Talk No. 59

Success is Assured with Hallberg Equipments because they produce that bright, white, satisfying, flickerless picture that soothes the public eye.

For Best Light at Lowest Cost

Install a

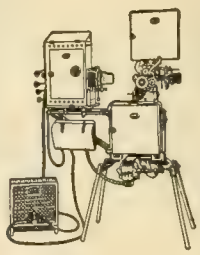


Hallberg AC-DC Economizer

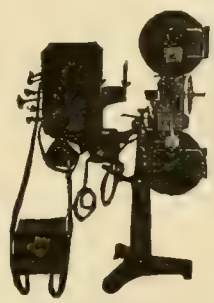
and let Hallberg equip your theater

"BAIRD"

I AM distributor of all makes moving picture machines and furnish everything complete for the theater, new and used apparatus.



POWER'S 6A



"SIMPLEX"

Send for Free Circulars and Catalogues, but for Hallberg's Big 100-page Catalogue, send 25 Cents.

I EQUIP THEATERS COMPLETE AND CARRY ALL MAKES CARBONS AND SUPPLIES.

J.H. HALLBERG SWEDISH ELECTRICAL ENGINEER

38 East 23d St. THE HOUSE OF QUALITY New York

Chicago—Five hundred victims of river tragedy are buried. Mourners follow Eastland victims to graves. Government starts sweeping investigation. William C. Redfield, Secretary of Department of Commerce, begins investigation of Eastland disaster.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 62 (Aug. 5).—Topyhanna, Pa.—Camp of instruction for Field Artillery and sanitary troops is opened by U. S. Government. Shows signal men sending up observation balloon, signaling with a wireless apparatus, rushing field battery into action and officers directing firing.

Charlestown, Mass.—George Mehan who set pace in ten mile swimming contest from Charlestown to Boston Light, collapses within reach of prize. Mr. Miron, the winner, is congratulated by Mehan.

Cleveland, O.—Street railway lays track on Euclid avenue, known as "Millionaires' Row," when courts put aside injunction.

San Francisco. Through the Court of Four Seasons into the Court of the Universe march the Shriners in full regalia on day set aside for them at Panama Fair.

Near Semendria, Serbia.—Serbians use tree as observation tower against enemies. Royal English Marine assist Serbs in moving a big field cannon to an advantageous position. Ambulances drawn by oxen arriving with wounded at American hospital Belgrade. At the battle front on Serbian firing line.

Hoboken, N. J.—George F. Russell, an American inventor, invents aerial torpedo and demonstrates projectile with aeroplane wings and wireless controlled motor used by the German troops in present war.

Ossining, N. Y.—Convicts of Sing Sing prison enjoy swimming pool, the result of latest innovation in Golden Rule administration of Warden Osborne. The various departments have their special periods to use the pool once every day.

San Francisco.—In mimic warfare on Illinois day at Exposition the Coast Guard defends Marine against four warships. Exciting battle scenes thrill the spectators on newspaper men's day.

New York.—Semaphore signal in street regulates Gotham's stream of traffic. Signals on mats are set up in Fifth avenue to aid officers to handle one of the world's busiest roadways.

THE CLAUSE IN THE CONSTITUTION (Special—Three Parts—Aug. 19).—Edward Clay, a newspaper man, is in love with Rose Rankin, the ward of John Duffy, a politician. Clay calls upon Rose; Duffy overhears the proposal, is furious and drives Clay from his home. Whether or not the Canal Bill will pass the legislature depends upon the attitude of Governor Graham. John Ransom, the editor, assigns Clay to interview the Governor. The Governor tells Clay he will sign the Canal Bill as soon as it is passed. Clay, after writing his interview with the Governor, meets Rose in the park. Duffy approaches and Rose makes her escape.

James O'Neill, president of the Eastern Pacific Railroad, is angry when he reads Clay's interview with Governor Graham. Duffy, the political boss, receives a telephone message from O'Neill, asking him to call. When Duffy sees O'Neill, he says: "If the Governor signs the Canal Bill our railroad loses half its profits." A check for $25,000 changes hands and then Duffy says: "The Governor won't sign. I'll fix him." Clay, through an accident, overhears the crooked deal, and decides upon quick action. Governor Graham tells Clay that he has received a telegram asking him to preside at the laying of the cornerstone at Mt. Holly University, and that he has accepted the invitation. Clay searches for paper to make a note of this, fails to find any and asks the Governor for the telegram. The Governor gives it to him and Clay puts it into his pocket.

In the office of Lieutenant-Governor Rainey, Clay asks the official how he would like to be the next Governor, and Rainey merely laughs. Clay picks up a copy of the constitution and reads: "In case of the death of the Governor or his absence from the state, the duties and powers of said office shall devolve upon the Lieutenant-Governor."

Clay shows Rainey and Ransom the telegram the Governor received and says: "The Governor will be out of the state twice tomorrow. You'll be Governor then by law." The next day the Governor leaves to preside at the laying of the cornerstone. The legislature meets to consider the Canal Bill. In the interior of the railroad car, Duffy, the politician, is conferring with Governor Graham. Duffy tells the Governer: "If you sign that bill I will drive you out of politics." The train passes the state line. The Lieutenant-Governor becomes Acting Governor. The Canal Bill passes the legislature by one vote. The Acting Governor immediately signs the bill during the absence of Governor Graham from the state, and it becomes a law. Clay's paper publishes the exclusive news, and Duffy the politician's power is thus snatched from him. Clay finally wins Rose.

IN THE KING'S SERVICE (Special Two Parts—Aug. 16).—Rupert returns to his Canadian home after five years, an officer of the Royal Mounted Police, under orders to capture some illicit distillers. Jacques, an invalid, being unable to make farming pay, has, unknown to his sister, Philomel, been induced by Antoine, a suitor for the hand of Philomel, to join him in the illicit whiskey traffic. Philomel learns that Jacques has joined Antoine in the illicit whiskey traffic, and though she and Rupert love each other, she, hoping to save her brother, refuses to become engaged to Rupert unless he will consent to be a traitor to his trust. Rupert refuses, and Philomel dismisses him. Antoine reports Rupert's presence and errand to the lawbreakers and they endeavor to shoot Rupert.

Antoine learns that Philomel has written Rupert to come to her. He imprisons Philomel in the cellar of her home, catches Rupert off his guard when he calls on Philomel, and tells him that Philomel's letter was a trick to betray him. There is a terrific hand-to-hand struggle in the house between Rupert and Antoine, but the latter finally makes his escape and flees to the illicit still. There he barricades the door, and with other illicit distillers endeavors to stand off Rupert and Jacques, who, seeing the error of his way, has joined the policeman in an endeavor to make reparation. Finally the marksmanship of Rupert and Jacques is too much for the moonshiners, and a well directed shot ends the life of Antoine. Philomel frees herself with the aid of a servant. She confesses to Rupert that she had been in the wrong, and they are reunited. Jacques proves to Rupert that he has never sold any of the illicit liquor, and that his reformation is complete.

THE PRIMA DONNA'S MOTHER (Aug. 17).—Myra Barnes, trying to struggle through school, is repeatedly snubbed by her companions because of her degraded mother. She finally runs away. Ten years later Myra Barnes is known as the "Queen of Song." Bob Phillips, her manager, and Ivan Quesno, a famous pianist, are rivals for her hand. She is unable to choose between them.

Back in the old home, Myra's mother becomes more pitiable. Myra sends her sufficient funds, but insists that the past be kept buried. Myra's concert tour takes her to her old home where no one dreams that she is the Myra Barnes who disappeared so long ago. Myra's heart is torn with a longing for her aged mother, yet she cannot bring herself to claim her. Myra is given an ovation at the concert. The aged mother, overcome by her daughter's songs, rises and calls to Myra. Quesno roughly seizes her to put her out, but Bob Phillips gently takes the aged woman and assists her to her home. Myra Barnes acknowledges her mother, and, later, she and Bob are married.

A LUCKY DEAL (Aug. 21).—Joe and Doc, partners in a mining town, are both in love with Hazel, daughter of the town storekeeper. Doc, believing he has no opportunity to win Hazel, sells his half in the claim to Joe for $200. Joe leaves town to work the claim farther and rides a valuable horse he owns. Rustler Jack follows Joe to the claim with the object of stealing his horse. The horse paws over the ground and knocks over some rocks, revealing some rich ore. Joe discovers this, ties up his horse and starts to dig for the gold. Hazel appears and Joe tells her of his good luck.

Rustler Jack approaches and steals Joe's horse. Doc, riding along spies Rustler Jack on Joe's horse, and finally captures the rustler. The rustler, however, overcomes Doc. In the meantime Hazel has notified the sheriff of the stealing of Joe's horse, and a posse is formed, but Joe appears in time to overcome the rustler. The rustler is then taken away by the sheriff, while Doc places Hazel's hand in Joe's and then slowly rides away.

EDISON.

CARTOONS ON TOUR (Aug. 18).—This animated cartoon picture by Raoul Barre depicts the elopement, right under the eyes of the stern father, of a young and loving couple. After the girl and her lover have enjoyed the cartoons, they hand the book over to "Pop," and he is so convulsed with laughter that they are able to drive to the parson's house with him and actually go through the ceremony while he is enjoying the "Grouch Chaser."

The first cartoon, "Tales of Silas Bunkum," illustrates how Silas was wrecked on a desert island, fed an elephant snuff, and was then literally "sneezed" through the air by the elephant, and landed safely on the deck of a passing vessel. This is followed by "The Kelly Kids' Kite," in which little Billy is carried up into the air hanging to the cord of Bob's kite. He enjoys it until he is attracted by a crow, to which he gives battle. After kicking out most of the bird's feathers he separates it from its head, whereupon it falls into the waiting hands of a hungry nigger boy. Billy makes a spectacular descent, his skirts acting as a parachute, and ends his aeronautical career by falling in a haystack of a sleeping farmer's whiskers and rudely awakening him.

"Mr. Hicks in Nightmareland" shows our friend Hercules transformed into an angel, seated on a beautiful white cloud. He looks through a telescope—handed to him by an exceedingly comely angel, and observes his beloved (?) wife perspiring over a washtub. Then the bottom drops out of heaven—and Hercules awakes to face his stern spouse.

In the fourth cartoon, "The Joy of Being a Grandpa," we see the old man and the child enjoying themselves in an amusing manner, this picture being the one that decides the case in favor of the young couple. Papa gives his consent and all ends happily.

SHADOWS FROM THE PAST (Special—Four Parts—Aug. 20).—Mary Fitz Allen has three suitors—Arthur Barton, a young soldier; Robert Jardon, a barrister, and Lord Lester, already past middle age, but devoted to her. Her heart, however, is wholly Barton's, and while, being very gracious with Lord Lester, has an ill-concealed dislike for Jardon. Her mother is purse-proud and favors the suit of Lord Lester. Jarden sees Mary and Barton talking together in the garden, and from her words, gathers something of what has passed between them. Later, in the village inn, he makes a remark against Mary's character that Barton overhears and the young soldier knocks him down. Barton returns to the barracks, but is told that in falling, Jardon had been struck on the head and is now dead. Ad-

J-M ASBESTOS BOOTHS AND CURTAINS

Made in styles to meet all requirements. They meet the approval of fire underwriters of every city. Write for Booklet.

H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO.
New York and Every Large City

PATENTS

Manufacturers want me to send them patents on useful inventions. Send me at once drawing and description of your invention and I will give you an honest report as to securing a patent and whether I can assist you in selling the patent. Highest references. Established 25 years. Personal attention in all cases. WM. N. MOORE, Loan and Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

GUMSTICKUM

An odorless powder paste that is clean; handy; vermin proof; usable in open or closed container, and just the thing for theatre and road manager and agent. Quart package size, 25 cents; five packages, $1, postpaid.

MADIGAN POWDER WORKS, Clarksville, Ia.

THE FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORPORATION

Producing successful dramas re-enacted before the recording eye of the camera by actors and under directors who have created artistic and box office successes in the "legitimate."

EIGHTEEN EAST FORTY-FIRST STREET, NEW YORK

WILLIAM L. SHERRILL, President

vised by his companions to leave the country at once, Barton sends a note to Mary, assuring her that "he will never desert her," but will send for her as soon as he is safe in another land. Receiving the letter, Mary falls in a swoon. Mrs. Fitz Allen tells Lord Lester that she is taking Mary to the continent for a visit, and that the girl will probably be more willing to do her bidding and marry Lester on their return. Then she takes Mary to the home of an old family servant of the Fitz Allen's, and there Mary's child is born. The mother makes the old woman swear to keep from Mary the fact that her child is alive, and, later, when they return to their home, Mary has the double grief of believing her child dead, and her lover unfaithful to her, for Mrs. Fitz Allen takes possession of the three letters that Barton has written to her during her absence. It is now that Mary consents to marry Lord Lester. Meantime Barton has shipped aboard a vessel bound for America, but in a quarrel with one of the seamen, has been thrown overboard and drowned.

Fifteen years later, Mary, now Lady Lester, is living happily with her husband, whom she has learned to truly love. Jardon is living in bachelor quarters, and Babette, a young French woman, who is infatuated with him, is an inmate of his house. All these years, Mrs. Fitz Allen has been paying for the care given the child by the old servant. Jardon, calling on Lord Lester, picks up and carries away with him a letter addressed to Mary's mother, written by the child's guardian, requesting more money with which to purchase clothes for her. Reading this at his home, Jardon immediately realizes the truth, and determines to compel Mary to listen to his protestations of love by threatening to expose her past life.

Meantime, Jardon has turned the French woman out of his house, and she, suspecting that Lady Lester is her rival, obtains a position as maid in her house, in order to spy upon her. On the night that Jardon makes it thoroughly plain to Lady Lester that he knows her secret, he is visited, at midnight, by Lady Lester herself. He pleads with her, and finally threatens her, but she leaves him after declaring that she will tell her husband everything of her own accord. As she leaves the house, Babette enters, and goes to Jardon's bedroom. He orders her out, and in the quarrel which follows, she draws a revolver and shoots him dead. When the crime is discovered, Lady Lester's handkerchief is found in Jardon's hand, and she is suspected of being the murderess. Overhearing the detective talking with Lord Lester, she writes a note of farewell to her husband and goes away to the farm where her child is living. Almost at the moment that her note is handed to Lester, a telephone message to the effect that Babette has confessed to being the murderer, is received. Lord Lester, learning of his wife's whereabouts, sends his housekeeper after her with a message that he wants, not only his wife, but her child, to come to him.

ON THE WRONG TRACK —A Safety First Film Produced in Co-operation With Public Service Railway Company of New Jersey—Aug. 21).—General Superintendent Bolen sends John Carlton on a trip to Bridgewood, with instructions to start a "Safety First" campaign in that town. On the very day of his arrival, in saving a little boy who has foolishly tried to cross the tracks ahead of an oncoming street car, he is himself knocked down and badly injured. He is taken to the hospital in the auto driven by Edith Weston, daughter of the editor of "The Sentinel." They become good friends, and upon his recovery, John finds his stay in the town very pleasant.

Edith promises the children in her Sunday school class a picnic, and when the Assistant General Superintendent of the road is dining with the Westons, she asks him to let her have a special car to take the picnic party to a park outside the town. They spend a merry day and are returning on the special, tired out, but exceedingly gay and carefree. Meantime, two former employees of the railway, who have been discharged a few days before on account of drunkenness, come seeking revenge to one of the stations. They attack the telegraph operator and render him unconscious with a blow on the head. They are about to attempt to rob the safe when a street car stops there. Surprised, the toughs attack the motorman and conductor. The conductor gets the best of one man and makes him a prisoner. The motorman, struggling with the other, in the front end of the car, accidentally pushes his opponent against the controller. This starts the car, just as the two men, locked in a deadly struggle, roll out of the door and down an embankment. The car plunges ahead and on down the line. The motorman falls on top of his assailant, and the man is quickly overcome. Then the motorman and conductor hurry to the assistance of the telegraph operator. He has recovered consciousness sufficiently to be able to send a message ahead telling the operator at the next station to hold back the special bearing the picnic party. He gets the reply that the special is on its way and they know that it is directly in the path of the onrushing trolley.

John and one of his assistants are engaged in some work close to the other station, and are told of the runaway car and the danger to the special. A gasolene-driven hand-car is beside them. They hurriedly place it in position on the track, and start off in pursuit of the wild car. Catching up with it after a thrilling chase, John climbs aboard through the rear window and, running to the front of the car, brings it to a stop, when it is only about fifty yards from the oncoming special bearing the children and Edith. That evening John wins Edith's promise to be his wife, and her father not only gives his consent, but promises his full support, through his paper, in the safety first campaign which the young man has been carrying on so successfully.

CLOTHES MAKE THE MAN (Aug. 25).—Harold and Kearney are rivals for the hand of Ethel, who apparently favors Harold. But Kearney is constantly on the job, and manages to take Ethel out rowing after she has made a date with Harold. Harold walks home, very disconsolate, planning revenge. He returns home and is about to have his lunch when he notices that his trousers—his one and only "good" pair—are sadly in need of pressing. Calling the colored janitor, he gives him the trousers, telling him to have them pressed and then bring them back immediately.

Meantime Kearney and Ethel, on their way home, have met a boy and girl friend, and together they fix up a plan to pay Harold a birthday "surprise" visit. They ask the other two young people to help them in getting a party together for the "surprise" and arrange to carry out their scheme at four o'clock that afternoon. At four o'clock, in a half-starved condition, Harold is still waiting for the return of the janitor with his pants. He manages to get hold of a string of sausages by dropping the hook of his fishing line out of the window, and is about to devour them raw when he smells smoke. Mr. Clancey, occupying the room beneath him, has fallen asleep and allowed his pipe to drop into the waste paper basket. The smoke and flames are beginning to be seen on the outside of the house only a few minutes

(Continued on page 1376.)

NOW

T S M Quality
Lobby Display Frames

The most important thing about your theatre is your Lobby Display.

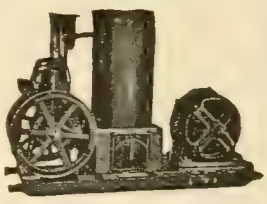
Write for our catalogue. Quality BEST—Our PRICES will save you money.

The Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co.
318 Long Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

HIGHEST GRADE
Developing and Printing
FILM TITLES
We guarantee all work, give prompt delivery, at lowest prices.
Can furnish Expert Camera Man on short notice.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
R. 1620, 5 S. Wabash Ave. Chicago
Phone Randolph 6692

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc. 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

MENGER & RING, Inc.
MANUFACTURERS OF
Poster and Lobby Display Frames
304-6 W. 42d ST., NEW YORK
Phone Bryant 6621-22



MOVING PICTURE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT
Used and highly endorsed by the United States Army. Biggest Sensation in the Moving Picture World. Can be operated by a boy 10 years old. One customer writes:
"Plant running like a top and delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house. Costs us about one-tenth as much as public service. Also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day."
Write today for Bulletin 101. It is a mighty interesting booklet.
(163) DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. 102, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

MR. EXHIBITOR: If you are in need of any SUPPLIES for your SHOW HOUSE and you feel that you are not getting good value for your money from your Supply House, send us a postal informing us of what you are in the market for and you will surely be remunerated for the trouble you have taken.
We can supply you with anything you need at a saving in price that will surprise you. We have a special method of doing business and can prove it to you. We can arrange a safe return of your money if goods are not absolutely perfect, and as we represent them or if dissatisfied with your purchase for reason of your own.
We are 16 years in business and are worthy of your confidence. Try us. We have a large stock of Bio and Electra Carbons.
STERN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 109 N. 10th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

COOL & VENTILATE BY TYPHOONS
Send for Catalogue "W"
TYPHOONS COOL YOUR SHOW
Tel. 8134 Bryant.
TYPHOON FAN CO.
1544 Broadway, N.Y.

THERE'S A REASON for doubt on technical points when authoritative information for the Exhibitor, Manager or Operator can't be obtained. The contents of the books herewith advertised place all necessary information and practical assistance within reach of every reader. For instance, every weekly issue of the contains an unequalled fund of information in regard to every angle of the moving picture art. Its staff is an aggregation of the best posted men in the industry who have devoted years to a study of the requirements of all our readers. Its correspondents are located in all the principal centers and its columns contain the most complete data possible. In a class by itself as a trade paper for every intelligent student of moving picture production and exhibition.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

F. H. RICHARDSON the recognized expert on projection has a second edition of his "THE MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS," consisting of 420 pages of fully illustrated articles on the subject of projection, that is enjoying an exceptional sale. This will be the standard textbook for managers and operators for many years. The price is $2.50.

J. H. HALLBERG well known as an authority on electricity has compiled a 278-page fully illustrated book, entitled "MOTION PICTURE ELECTRICITY," containing up-to-the-minute information on picture theatre electrical equipment. Also necessary tables and practical advice to the operator. A revision of all his Electrical Talks published some years ago in one of the trade papers. The price, $2.50.

EPES W. SARGENT is author of "TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY," an exhaustive treatise on the writing of the Photoplay, containing sample scripts and complete detailed instruction for experienced as well as inexperienced writers. Price, $2.00. All published by

Moving Picture World

17 Madison Avenue New York

Calendar of Daily Program Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending August 21 and August 28

(For Extended Table of Current Releases See Pages 1402, 1404, 1406.)

General Film Company

Current Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Mrs. Randolph's New Secretary (Comedy-Drama).
ESSANAY—The Market Price of Love (Drama).
KALEM—The Legacy of Folly (Special—Three parts—"Broadway Favorites" Drama).
LUBIN—Polly of the Pots and Pans (Drama).
SELIG—In the King's Service (Special—Two parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 65, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—Mr. Jarr and Circumstantial Evidence (No. 16 of the "Jarr Family" Series—Comedy).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Ashes of Inspiration (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Legrand's Revenge (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—Ham at the Beach (Ham & Bud Comedy).
LUBIN—The Dead Letter (Comedy).
—Persistent Dalton (Comedy).
SELIG—The Prima Donna's Mother (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—My Lost One (Broadway Star Features—Special—Three parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—East Lynne (Special—Three parts—Drama).
EDISON—Cartoons on Tour (Comedy).
ESSANAY—"Dreamy Dud" Sees Charley Chaplin (Cartoon—Comedy).
KALEM—The Sustituted Jewel (Episode No. 5 of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel,") (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES—Capital Punishment (Special Feature—Three parts—Drama).
LUBIN—The Second Shot (Special—Two parts—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—She Took a Chance (Comedy).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—His Last Wish (Comedy-Drama).
ESSANAY—Tale of a Tire (Comedy).
LUBIN—It Was To Be (Special—Three parts—Drama).
MINA—A Case of Limburger (Comedy).
SELIG—The Clause in the Constitution (Special—Three parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 66, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Quest of the Widow (Comedy).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 20, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Death's Marathon (Drama) (Biograph Reissue No. 11).
EDISON—Shadows From the Past (Special—Four parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Marriage (Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Game of Life (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—When Souls Are Tried (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—Cutey's Awakening (Comedy).
—Swedish Army and Navy (Educational).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Ace of Diamonds (Drama).
EDISON—On the Wrong Track (Dramatic—Educational).
ESSANAY—The Woman Hater (Special—Three parts—Drama).
KALEM—A Perilous Chance (Episode No. 41 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
LUBIN—The Life Guard (Comedy).
SELIG—A Lucky Deal (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Dawn of Understanding (Special—Two parts—Drama).

General Film Company

Advance Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 23, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Twice Won (Drama).
ESSANAY—Does the Woman Forget? (Drama).
KALEM—The Barnstormers ("Broadway Favorites"—Special—Four parts—Drama).
LUBIN—The Spark and the Flame, (Drama).
SELIG—The Girl with the Red Feather (Special—Two parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 67, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Cub and the Daisy Chain (Comedy).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 24, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Mister Paganini (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Hearts and Roses (Special—Three parts—Drama).
KALEM—Ham and the Experiment ("Ham & Bud" Comedy).
LUBIN—Dog-Gone Luck (Comedy).
—The Victorious Jockey (Comedy).
SELIG—The Doughnut Vender (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—From the Dregs (Special—Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1915.

EDISON—Clothes Make the Man (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Roystering Blades" (Comedy).
KALEM—A Double Identity (Episode No. 6 of "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel") (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—A Species of Mexican Man (Special—Three parts—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—A City Rube (Comedy).
—Perils of the Baltic (Educational).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—His Birthday Gift (Comedy—Drama).
ESSANAY—The Drug Clerk (Western—Comedy).
LUBIN—Under the Fiddlers' Elm (Special—Two parts—Drama).
SELIG—The Strange Case of Talmai Lind (Special—Three parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 68, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Good in the Worst of Us (Drama).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Sheriff's Baby (Drama—Biograph—Reissue No. 12).
EDISON—The Slavey Student (Special—Three parts—Comedy-Drama).
ESSANAY—Her Return (Western—Drama).
KALEM—A Battle of Wits (Alice Joyce—Reissue—Drama).
LUBIN—The Mirror (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Wardrobe Woman (Drama).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 28, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Need of Money (Drama).
EDISON—Matilda's Fling (Comedy).
ESSANAY—Rule Sixty-three (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—Train Order Number 45 (Episode No. 42 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series) (Drama).
LUBIN—Billie Joins the Navy (Comedy).
SELIG—The Master of the Bengals (Jungle—Zoo Wild Animal Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Tigress (Broadway Star Features—Special—Three parts—Drama).

BOOK THE GREAT BIOGRAPH, VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, KALEM, LUBIN, SELIG and BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

WEEKLY RELEASES AT

THE GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL COMPANY

Main Office: 126 West 46th Street (Bet. Broadway and 6th Ave.), New York City Bryant 7340

DEPOTS: NEWARK, SYRACUSE, PHILADELPHIA, SCRANTON, BALTIMORE, WASHINGTON, ATLANTA and PROVIDENCE.

SERVING THE BIGGEST VARIETY OF UP-TO-DATE PICTURES IN THE WORLD.

Lord Tennyson's immortal poem as dramatized by Charles Reade

DORA

Three Reel Biograph

Released September 1

The THREE REEL BIOGRAPH
released every other WEDNESDAY
IN THE REGULAR SERVICE

For descriptions of all Biograph releases read
THE BIOGRAPH mailed free each week

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
807 EAST 175th STREET
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Calendar of Daily Program Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending August 21 and August 28

(For Extended Table of Current Releases See Pages 1402, 1404, 1406.)

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 15, 1915.

LAEMMLE—In the Grasp of the Law (Drama).
L-KO—Love on an Empty Stomach (Comedy).
REX—Mountain Justice (Two parts—Drama).
UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE—The Broken Coin (Episode No. 9—Room 22—Two parts—Drama).

MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 1915.

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURES—Just Jim (Four parts—Drama).
NESTOR—Tony, the Wop (Comedy).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1915.

GOLD SEAL—A Fiery Introduction (Two parts—Comedy—Drama).
IMP—The Country Girl (Drama.
REX—Quits (Drama).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 180, (News).
JOKER—Her Wedding Night (Comedy).
L-KO—No release replaced with No. 1 Extra Joker.
VICTOR—Lord Barrington's Estate (Three parts—Drama).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1915.

BIG U—Ethel's Burglar (Drama).
LAEMMLE—The Little Blonde in Black (Two parts— drama.)
POWERS—Lady Baffles & Detective Duck in "The Dread Society of the Sacred Sausages" (Comedy).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 20, 1915.

IMP—The Substitute Widow (Two parts—Drama).
NESTOR—Kids and Corsets (Comedy).
VICTOR—The Taming of Mary (Comedy.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1914.

BISON—The Gopher (Two parts—Drama).
JOKER—Bobby Bumps Adventures (Animated Cartoon, by Earl Hurd.
—Seeing the Funny side of the world with Homer Croy (Educational).
POWERS—A Double Deal in Pork (Comedy).
POWERS—No release Replaced with No. 2 Extra Powers.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 22, 1915.

LAEMMLE—Dr. Mason's Temptation (Drama).
L-KO -A Tale of Twenty Stories (Two parts—Comedy).
REX—A Sea Shore Romeo (Comedy).
UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE—The Broken Coin (Episode No. 10—Cornered (Two parts—Drama).

MONDAY, AUGUST 23, 1915.

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURE—Mrs. Plum's Pudding (Five parts—Comedy—Drama).
NESTOR—His Lucky Vacation (Comedy).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 24, 1915.

GOLD SEAL—Extravagance (Three parts—Society—Drama).
IMP—Billy's Love Making (Comedy).
REX—The Cad (Drama).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 181 (News).
L-KO—Mr. Flirt In Wrong (Two parts—Comedy).
VICTOR—The Chimney's Secret (Drama).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1915.

BIG U—The Mystery of the Tapestry Room (Three parts—Detective—Drama).
JOKER—A Case of Beans (Comedy).
LAEMMLE No Release. Replaced with Extra Joker.
POWERS—Seeking An Inspiration (Comedy).
—The Best People on Earth (Educational).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, 1915.

IMP—Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (Two parts—Mystery—Drama).
NESTOR—His Egyptian Affinity (Comedy).
VICTOR—The Box of Bandits (Comedy).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 28, 1915.

BISON—The Social Lion (Two parts—Drama).
JOKER—The Bravest of the Brave (Comedy).
POWERS—She Loved Them Both (Drama).

Mutual Film Corporation.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 15, 1915.

KOMIC—The Fatal Finger Prints (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—The Kinship of Courage (Two parts—Romantic—Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Crogmere Ruby (Mystery—Drama).

MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Jilt (Two parts—Drama).
FALSTAFF—The Marvelous Marathoner (Comedy).
KEYSTONE—The Battle of Ambrose and Walrus (Two parts—Comedy).
RELIANCE—The Big Brother (Drama).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1915.

BEAUTY—The Honeymooners (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—Providence and the Twins (Drama).
THANHOUSER—When Hungry Hamlet Fled (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Assayer of Lone Gap (Drama).
BRONCHO—The Girl From the East (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—An Independent Woman (Drama).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1915.

CUB—The Little Hero (Comedy).
DOMINO—The Lighthouse-keeper's Son (Two parts—Drama).
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 33, 1915 (News).
MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE—A Yankee from the West (Majestic—Four parts—Drama).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 20, 1915.

FALSTAFF—Help! Help! (Comedy).
KAY-BEE—The Knight of the Trails (Two parts—Drama).
MAJESTIC—The Root of All Evil (Comedy—Drama).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1915.

BEAUTY—What's In a Name (Comedy).
RELIANCE—A Bold Impersonation (Two parts—Drama).

SUNDAY, AUGUST 22, 1915.

KOMIC—Faithful to the Finish (Crook—Comedy).
MAJESTIC—The Fatal Hour (Two parts—Detective—Drama).
THANHOUSER—In a Japanese Garden (Japanese—Drama).

MONDAY, AUGUST 23, 1915.

AMERICAN—Drawing the Line (Two parts—Drama).
FALSTAFF—Glorianna's Getaway (Comedy).
KEYSTONE—Title Not Yet Announced.
RELIANCE—Farewell to Thee (Drama).

TUESDAY, AUGUST 24, 1915.

BEAUTY—His Mysterious Profession (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—The Little Cupids (Comedy Drama).
THANHOUSER—Snapshots (Two parts—Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1915.

AMERICAN—
BRONCHO—Pinto Ben (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—Editions De Luxe (Drama).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1915.

CUB—Jerry's Busy Day (Comedy).
DOMINO—Subject not yet announced.
MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE—M. Lecoq (Thanhouser—Four parts—Drama).
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 34, 1915 (News).

FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, 1915.

AMERICAN—Mixed Wires (Comedy-Drama).
FALSTAFF—That Poor Damp Cow (Comedy).
KAY-BEE—Subject not yet announced.
MAJESTIC—Subject not yet announced.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 28, 1915.

BEAUTY—Uncle Heck, By Heck (Comedy).
RELIANCE—A Bold Impersonation (Two parts—Drama).

To our Readers: If you cannot depend on your newsstand, why not send us one dollar ($1.00) for a four months' trial subscription? You will get your paper earlier, more regularly and at much less cost. Send your dollar NOW. Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Avenue, New York.

GEORGE OVEY

"the funniest man in America"

"breaks" into the

MUTUAL

Thursday, August 19, in a rip roaring comedy in one reel called "The Little Hero"—the first of the David Horsley comedy productions under the brand name of

CUB COMEDY

to be released on the Mutual program

Book the "Cub" through your Mutual exchange.

J. R. FREULER
PRESIDENT
MUTUAL FILM CORP.

The World Famous

GAUMONT COMPANY

of New York, London and Paris has joined forces with the great

LEON GAUMONT
PRESIDENT
GAUMONT CO.

Mutual Film Corporation

and will provide star pictures for a star program

These will include

Three reel Feature Dramas with distinguished Broadway players

One reel Stage Star Comedies

One reel Mutual Cartoon and Scenic presenting one of the best known syndicated newspaper cartoons and "Seeing America First."

Together with

The Mutual Weekly
(Topical)

and

Mutual Masterpictures

Mutual Movies Make Time Fly

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES

SIGNE AUEN and WALLACE REID

PLAY THE LEADS IN

"A Yankee from the West"

A Four Part Majestic Masterpicture
Opie Read, the Author

How a "ne'er do well" goes wrong—repents—makes good—and wins the girl whose love and high ideals turned him from the high road of destruction to the path that led to happiness and success.

Get this Masterpicture—written by a Master Author and played by Master Players—for your theater and be sure to get the advertising helps that go with it.

Book it NOW
through the Mutual Film
Corporation

Maiestic Motion Picture Company
71 West 23d Street, New York City

MUTUAL PROGRAM

-and now the bigger, better, stronger, MUTUAL

The Most Important Film Announcement of the Year! Read All Four Pages!

Another volume has been added to film history! The Mutual Film Corporation announces the completion of the NEW MUTUAL PROGRAM—an all-feature, all-star program comprising the releases of the world's most noted film producers at no increase in rental prices. Beginning the week of September 13th the Mutual Program will carry in its regular service two three-reel Broadway Star releases every week; five two-reel Banner Features every week; nine one-reel Feature Comedies every week; two one-reel All-Star Dramas every week; one one-reel Mutual Weekly of World Events every week. In these productions ON THE REGULAR MUTUAL PROGRAM you'll find stars whose fame in film circles and on the speaking stage is world-wide. It will be the policy to put into single-reel productions the same high quality found in four to six-reel productions—the same great stars, the same expensive costumes, the same costly settings, and the same high-priced direction. And this quality policy will be maintained always in all Mutual Program releases whether they be single-reel productions or those of greater length.

EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS will be expended annually to make the Mutual Program the greatest box-office attraction exhibitors have ever had. Think of it! An Eight Million Dollar Mutual Program—and no increase in rental prices. You exhibitors who believe in reading "the handwriting on the wall"—TIE UP NOW to this bigger, better, stronger, all-feature, all-star MUTUAL PROGRAM before your competitors beat you to it. Get full information at your nearest Mutual Exchange and watch for startling announcements of releases.

Harold Lockwood
-American

May Allison
-American

George Ovey
-Horsley

MUTUAL PROGRAM

-and now the bigger, better, stronger, MUTUAL

The Most Important Film Announcement of the Year! Read All Four Pages!

Another volume has been added to film history! The Mutual Film Corporation announces the completion of the NEW MUTUAL PROGRAM—an all-feature, all-star program comprising the releases of the world's most noted film producers at no increase in rental prices. Beginning the week of September 13th the Mutual Program will carry in its regular service two three-reel Broadway Star releases every week; five two-reel Banner Features every week; nine one-reel Feature Comedies every week; two one-reel All-Star Dramas every week; one one-reel Mutual Weekly of World Events every week. In these productions ON THE REGULAR MUTUAL PROGRAM you'll find stars whose fame in film circles and on the speaking stage is world-wide. It will be the policy to put into single-reel productions the same high quality found in four to six-reel productions—the same great stars, the same expensive costumes, the same costly settings, and the same high-priced direction. And this quality policy will be maintained always in all Mutual Program releases whether they be single-reel productions or those of greater length.

EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS will be expended annually to make the Mutual Program the greatest box-office attraction exhibitors have ever had. Think of it! An Eight Million Dollar Mutual Program—and no increase in rental prices. You exhibitors who believe in reading "the handwriting on the wall"—TIE UP NOW to this bigger, better, stronger, all-feature, all-star MUTUAL PROGRAM before your competitors beat you to it. Get full information at your nearest Mutual Exchange and watch for startling announcements of releases.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

COMES all-feature, all-star PROGRAM

Here Are the Brands That Make Up the New Mutual Program

AMERICAN FILM CO., INC.
Producers of "Flying A" Photoplays
American Beauty Comedies and Dramas.

BOSTOCK JUNGLE AND FILM CO.
Featuring the Great Collection of Bostock Animals.

GAUMONT COMPANY
Producers of Knickerbocker Star Features
All-Star Comedies.

DAVID HORSLEY PRODUCTIONS
Comprising Cub Comedies
Centaur Sensational Features

MUSTANG FILM COMPANY
Producing Mustang Western Features
Prominent Screen Star Photo-Plays.

RELIANCE MOTION PICTURE CORP.
Producers of Reliance Star Cast 2 and 3-reel features.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION.
Producers of Thanhouser Feature Plays
Falstaff Comedies.

These producers represent combined facilities of enormous proportion. They already employ nearly 200 leading stars and this list is now being greatly expanded; they own some of the largest studios in America and Europe; they represent millions of dollars of capital—ample financial strength to carry out the plans to make the Mutual Program the greatest power in Filmdom.

See Next Page

Lenore Ulrich – Gaumont

Fritz Orlamond – All-Star

Mary Nash Gaumont

MUTUAL PROGRAM

A Gigantic Eight Million Dollar MUTUAL PROGRAM

The new Mutual Program, which will be in full swing throughout the country by September 15th, will actually represent an annual expenditure of Eight Million Dollars—a program so complete, so diversified, so well balanced that exhibitors will find it the most economical means to operate a high-class motion picture theater. The new Mutual Program releases will include:

Two 3-Reel Broadway Star Features Every Week

Produced by The American Film Co., Inc., featuring such stars as Harold Lockwood, May Allison and others; Gaumont Co. (producers of Knickerbocker Star Features), featuring such stars as Fania Marinoff, Mary Nash, Gertrude Elliot and others of Broadway fame; David Horsley Productions, featuring many stars known on the screen; Mustang Brand, featuring big stars in Western Dramas and film interpretations of famous books; Reliance Motion Picture Corporation, featuring a great group of prominent stars in thrilling dramas of deep heart interest and emotional appeal; Thanhouser Film Corporation, featuring such stars as Florence La Badie, William Morris, Julia Blanc, Grace De Carlton and others.

Five 2-Reel Banner Features Every Week

Produced by The American Film Co., Inc., featuring Winifred Greenwood, Ed Coxen, Vivian Rich, Robyn Adair, Anna Kromann, Joseph Singleton, Nan Christy, Joe Richardson, Harry Von Meter and others; Bostock Jungle and Film Co., featuring the largest collection of trained animals in the world; Mustang Brand, featuring many film favorites in gripping Western plays; Reliance Motion Picture Corporation, featuring artistic film reproductions of short stories; Thanhouser Film Corporation, featuring such stars as Lorraine Huling, Mignon Anderson, Morris Foster, Arthur Bauer, The Fairbanks Twins, Helen Badgley and others.

Nine 1-Reel Feature Comedies Every Week

Comprising Beauty Brand Productions, featuring such stars as Neva Gerber, and Webster Campbell; Cub Comedies, featuring America's funniest comedian—George Ovey; All-Star Comedies, featuring Broadway Comedians in a new variety of comedy films; Falstaff Comedies, featuring such stars as Boyd Marshall, Riley Chamberlin, Claude Cooper and Arthur Cunningham; Gaumont Cartoon Comedies—split reels carrying 500 feet of scenic, educational or industrial pictures and 500 feet of cartoons drawn by one of the nation's greatest cartoonists, whose work is syndicated through several hundred newspapers and is known to millions.

Two 1-Reel Dramas and One 1-Reel Mutual Weekly Every Week

The dramas to comprise "Fying A," Beauty Brand, and other productions. The Mutual Weekly to carry local news events in cooperation with big newspapers throughout the country.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

A Gigantic Eight Million Dollar MUTUAL PROGRAM

The new Mutual Program, which will be in full swing throughout the country by September 15th, will actually represent an annual expenditure of Eight Million Dollars—a program so complete, so diversified, so well balanced that exhibitors will find it the most economical means to operate a high-class motion picture theater. The new Mutual Program releases will include:

Two 3-Reel Broadway Star Features Every Week

Produced by The American Film Co., Inc., featuring such stars as Harold Lockwood, May Allison and others; Gaumont Co. (producers of Knickerbocker Star Features), featuring such stars as Fania Marinoff, Mary Nash, Gertrude Elliot and others of Broadway fame; David Horsley Productions, featuring many stars known on the screen; Mustang Brand, featuring big stars in Western Dramas and film interpretations of famous books; Reliance Motion Picture Corporation, featuring a great group of prominent stars in thrilling dramas of deep heart interest and emotional appeal; Thanhouser Film Corporation, featuring such stars as Florence La Badie, William Morris, Julia Blanc, Grace De Carlton and others.

Five 2-Reel Banner Features Every Week

Produced by The American Film Co., Inc., featuring Winifred Greenwood, Ed Coxen, Vivian Rich, Robyn Adair, Anna Kromann, Joseph Singleton, Nan Christy, Joe Richardson, Harry Von Meter and others; Bostock Jungle and Film Co., featuring the largest collection of trained animals in the world; Mustang Brand, featuring many film favorites in gripping Western plays; Reliance Motion Picture Corporation, featuring artistic film reproductions of short stories; Thanhouser Film Corporation, featuring such stars as Lorraine Huling, Mignon Anderson, Morris Foster, Arthur Bauer, The Fairbanks Twins, Helen Badgley and others.

Nine 1-Reel Feature Comedies Every Week

Comprising Beauty Brand Productions, featuring such stars as Neva Gerber, and Webster Campbell; Cub Comedies, featuring America's funniest comedian—George Ovey; All-Star Comedies, featuring Broadway Comedians in a new variety of comedy films; Falstaff Comedies, featuring such stars as Boyd Marshall, Riley Chamberlin, Claude Cooper and Arthur Cunningham; Gaumont Cartoon Comedies—split reels carrying 500 feet of scenic, educational or industrial pictures and 500 feet of cartoons drawn by one of the nation's greatest cartoonists, whose work is syndicated through several hundred newspapers and is known to millions.

Two 1-Reel Dramas and One 1-Reel Mutual Weekly Every Week

The dramas to comprise "Fying A," Beauty Brand, and other productions. The Mutual Weekly to carry local news events in cooperation with big newspapers throughout the country.

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES

Mutual Masterpictures
Colossal Productions by America's Greatest Theatrical Geniuses

In addition to the regular Mutual Program the Mutual Film Corporation will release every week one Mutual Masterpicture in 4 or 5 reels—a production of such magnitude as to make it impossible to produce it in one, two or three reels. These Masterpictures will be produced by special arrangements with America's greatest theatrical magnates and will bring to the screen film portrayals of great literary masterpieces

Featuring Big Broadway Stars

Mutual Masterpictures will be tremendous, inspiring works of art interpreted by the most famous of American and European stage-stars. Releases will be announced soon.

This, then, sums up the NEW MUTUAL POLICY—a policy of bigger, better motion picture productions combined in an ALL-FEATURE, ALL-STAR MUTUAL PROGRAM; colossal feature productions as Mutual Masterpictures; all reenforced by powerful capital and a policy of advertising cooperation that is bound to mean BIGGEST PROFITS TO EXHIBITORS.

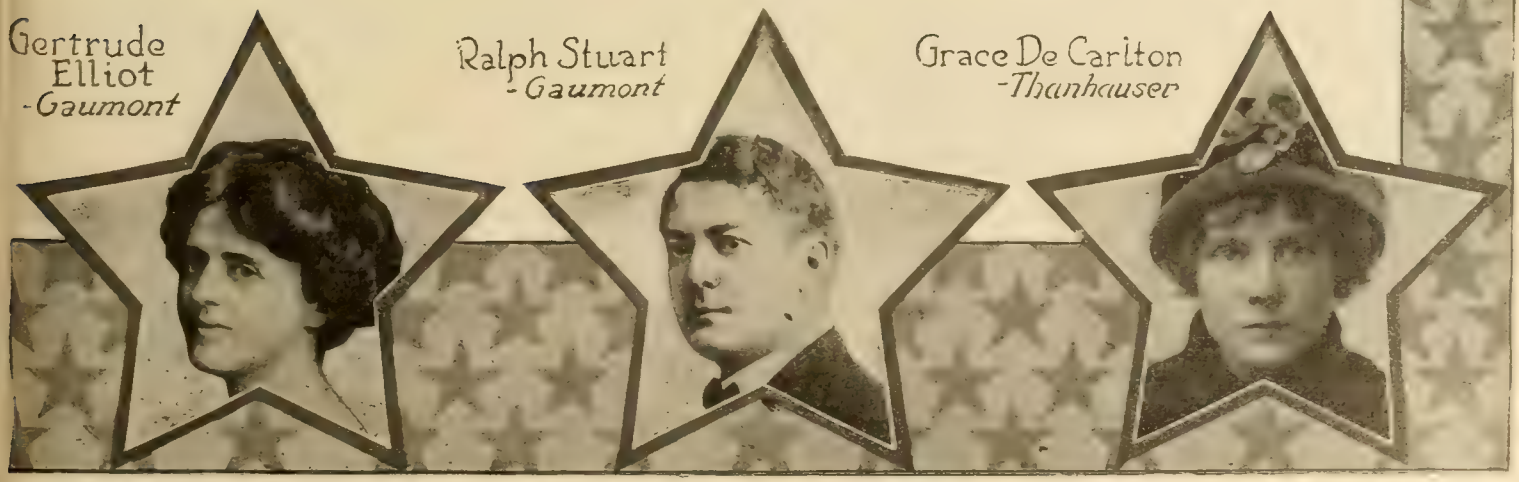
Are you ready NOW to book this ALL-STAR, ALL-FEATURE Mutual Program or will you wait and lose out? Apply at once to your nearest Mutual Exchange or write us.

Mutual Film Corporation

John R. Freuler, President,

Executive Offices: 71 West 23rd Street, New York City

Exchanges Everywhere.



(Continued from page 1364.)

after the surprise party arrives and goes up to invade Harold's rooms. They cannot find him, for, on hearing their approach, he hides in an inner room, locking the door. They smell the smoke, and rush out of the house. In an upper window, Kearney sees Harold, and he and some of the other boys rush off for an extension ladder. This they raise to the window and then Kearney, closely watched by the hero-worshiping Ethel, mounts it. As he climbs in at the window, however, he is felled by a blow from a golf club, in the hands of Harold. Harold quickly effects a change of garments and, once more fully attired, he backs out of the window carrying the unconscious Kearney on his back. Ethel stands in awe until he has reached the sidewalk and deposited Kearney on the ground. Then, with a cry of "My hero," she flies into his arms, and when Kearney presently comes to he realizes that his rival has permanently "beaten him to it."

THE SLAVEY STUDENT (Special - Three Parts—Aug. 27).—John and Alma Picket by the death of their mother are left orphans and destitute. Kind-hearted Sheriff Bolles proposes that they come and live with him and his wife until John can get a position. They gladly accept his offer, and a week later, John starts for New York. The superintendent of schools gives Sheriff Bolles a note of introduction to Miss Ruth Graven the head of the Graven Seminary, and Alma, again thanking the sheriff and his wife for their kindness, starts off to the school. She presents the note to Miss Graven, the note making it clear that she wishes to exchange her services for an education.

Meantime, in the city, John makes the acquaintance of the young man in the next room to his. Alma has been accepted on the terms of the superintendent's letter, and she starts in with her duties. She makes a good friend in Marjorie Wilford, a young heiress, who invites her to attend a midnight party. Just at this time Alma receives a letter from John, telling her that he is writing from a prison, having been charged with a crime committed by his friend of the adjoining room at the boarding house. Alma is greatly distressed, but Marjorie assures her that she is sure her brother is innocent.

A few days later Marjorie's brother Harry is invited to attend a dance given at the seminary. He brings with him a friend, Roy Ashton. At the dance Harry pays a great deal of attention to Alma, and Roy is equally engaged with Marjorie. Roy, in fact, lays direct siege to the girl's heart, and the result is that a few days later she tells Alma that she has promised to run away with him that night, and that they are to be made man and wife by Sheriff Bolles. Alma is asked to be bridesmaid, and finally consents. Meantime John has completed his term in prison, goes to Sheriff Bolles and tells him his story, which the sheriff believes. John is asked to be a witness to a marriage that the sheriff is to perform that evening. John, coming in to do his part at the ceremony, recognizes in Marjorie's betrothed the very man for whose crime he has served a prison term. Ashton confesses, and the sheriff is about to arrest him when both Marjorie and John plead for him, after Ashton has declared that his love for Marjorie makes him desire to be a better man. Bolles tells him that, if he is sincere, the loss of her will be his punishment, and her memory his guide. Then he tells Ashton to go. Explanations follows and the next morning Alma and Marjorie are back at school.

MATILDA'S FLING (Aug. 28).—"Snipe," an orphan, is very harshly treated by the farmer for whom he works. Finally he decides to run away, and via the box-car route, goes to New York. With only a few cents in his pockets, he is compelled to sleep on the docks, and make his living as best he can. In another small town live Matilda Waring and her miserly husband, Daniel. All her life Matilda has longed to go to New York, but Daniel refuses to give the money. He repeatedly reproves his wife for showing kindness to Nellie, another orphan. One day, starting away from home in a buggy, and in a violent temper, Daniel whips his horse so savagely that it runs away. Dashing into a fence, the buggy is overturned and wrecked and Daniel killed.

Nellie has witnessed the accident and is sent to break the news to Matilda. Receiving it, Matilda does not shed tears. Later, much to her surprise, she learns through her late husband's lawyer that the miserly Daniel has been banking and investing money for many years, and that as a result, she has been left a very comfortable fortune. Matilda decides that she will visit the metropolis and see the Statue of Liberty. On the train she makes the acquaintance of Judge Gregory and his daughter, who are delighted by her naive wonder at everything she sees. Arrived in the city, they see her safely installed at a hotel and promise to call on her later. Matilda soon starts out to find the Statue of Liberty, and stopping a newsboy, she asks where it is located.

This newsboy turns out to be "Snipe." He has been taken in hand by a couple of crooks, who are starting to train him for a life of crime. Following up his training when Matilda asks him to direct her to the statue, "Snipe" seizes her hand-bag and starts to run. He is seized by a policeman, and followed by Matilda, is taken to the police station. Matilda gets in touch with Judge Gregory, and assures him that she does not think "Snipe" is a naturally bad boy, and should have a chance. "Snipe" is released when Matilda promises to look after him and keep him off the streets. She takes "Snipe" to her hotel, buys him a good suit of clothes, and trusts him with her money till he pays for them, when delivered. Later in the day, going out on a message for her, "Snipe" is held up by the two crooks. They threaten him, and make him promise to "get" Matilda's money.

The boy arranges for them to meet him on the train that night, when Matilda and he are on their way to the country. The crooks agree, but do not count upon "Snipe" telling everything to Judge Gregory, who, with a detective, is waiting on the train when the crooks come through to the sleeping car from the day coach. They are seized and placed under arrest and Matilda realizes that her belief in "Snipe" has not been misplaced. They go back to the farm without Matilda having seen the statue, but on another trip, a few months later, she takes both "Snipe" and Nellie, and together they see the statue, and "do" the whole town to their hearts' content.

ESSANAY.

LEGRAND'S REVENGE—(Special—Two Parts Aug. 17).—Dominica Meduna, of the Paris underworld, nursing a scar she received when she tried to prevent a theft of the famous McFarland jewels by the notorious Gaston LeGrand, is detailed by the police to aid in his capture. She disguises as a reporter and attends the Baron Von Hertzfeld house party. LeGrand has secured admittance disguised as a private detective to "guard" the jewels. LeGrand recognizes her and tries to drown her in a fountain. Dalrymple, a sculptor, saves her. LeGrand rushes into the house, opens a secret panel and gets the jewels. An alarm is raised, however, and LeGrand flees, leaving the jewels behind.

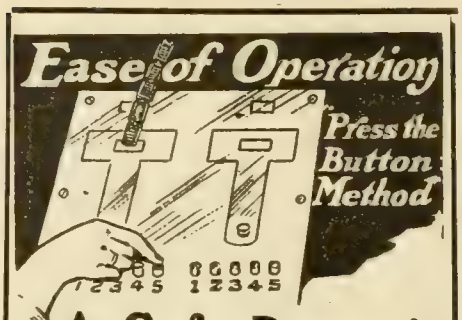
KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES.

CAPTIAL PUNISHMENT—Special Feature—3 Parts—Aug. 18).—Olive and her sister, Vivian, are admired by Jim Armsby. He finally decides on Vivian. Judge Baxley, the father of the girls, is considering serious political problems with his secretary, Duncan, who has long been an admirer of Olive. Duncan declares to Baxley that two things are necessary for his political success: the first, to stop Governor Clayton's Anti-Capital Punishment Bill, and the second, to give him the hand of Olive. On both of these propositions Judge Baxley looks with approval. Olive sees Jim Armsby place a ring upon the finger of Vivian, and turns away disheartened. Her father, seeing her disappointment, cheers her with the thought that she is loved by another.

Governor Clayton again commutes a death sentence, enraging Judge Baxley, who had imposed the sentence, and bringing matters to a crisis in the Governor's office. Whereupon the Governor declares that, after the people have spoken at the coming special election on the question of capital punishment he will abide by their will and never again interfere with the sentences imposed. Duncan has difficulty in working his suit with Olive, who resents his approaches, and finally he turns to the madam of the gambling palace, which he frequents, who suggests getting Vivian into a compromising situation and then Olive will turn to him for Vivian's sake and the family's name.

Duncan takes Vivian on a long-promised sightseeing trip to the gambling house. She is soon lured by the place, gambles and loses all. Duncan gives her more money and slowly gets her into his hands. Realizing the situation at last, Vivian, to save herself, gives Duncan a forged check in her father's name, which he keeps as a double hold on her, and, facing Olive with these facts, she slowly succumbs to his demands. The wedding of Jim and Vivian is postponed as Jim detects the working out of Duncan's treachery and discovers suspicious actions on the part of Vivian.

Olive is married to Duncan. Olive is heard by Jim and some guests to make serious threats and to declare to Vivian that the wedding is to protect her. In the hotel Olive faces Duncan, demanding the forged check, which he gives her. She sends the same to her sister and, taking a revolver, is about to end her own life. Vivian receives the check and a letter which seems to indicate that Olive is to commit a crime. Jim, getting the epistle as Vivian collapses and dies. Jim reaches the hotel as a shot is fired in the bridal room. He rushes in and finds Olive on the floor. Others enter the room as Olive declares she has killed Duncan. All look out the window and see his body far below on the pavement. Jim swears that Olive is innocent, saying that he shot Duncan and threw his body from the window. Both are arrested.



A Safe Deposit For Your Box Office

Our New 1916 Model of the AUTOMATIC Ticket Selling and Cash Register is now ready. If you want to obtain double security for your Box Office this new model offers a Burglar and Fire-Proof ticket magazine that is controlled by counter switch. It is the last word in Ticket Selling Machines.

Write for details.

The Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co.
1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY.

CARBONS
BIO OR ELECTRA

5/8 x 12 Cored, per 100	$7.00
3/4 x 12 Cored, per 100	10.00

TICKETS
5c., 10c., 15c., 20c., 25c. and Admit One, 2000 to Roll. Assorted Colors

1 Roll	$0.20
6 Rolls	1.00
5 Rolls	7.50

THEATRE LEDGER
A WELL ARRANGED AND NICELY BOUND BOOK FOR KEEPING A COMPLETE RECORD OF YOUR BUSINESS
PRICE .. $1.00

SEVERAL BARGAINS
In Slightly Used Machines
WRITE FOR FURTHER PARTICULARS

GET OUR LARGE CATALOG
OF MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS AND SUPPLIES NO. 40

ERKER'S
SIXTH and OLIVE STREETS
ST. LOUIS, MO.

The trial ends with a verdict of guilt and the sentence to death of Jim Armsby and the freedom of Olive who realizes that Jim is innocent and shielding her. On the day of the crime the populace voted in favor of capital punishment and Governor Clayton declares he will keep his oath.

Judge Baxley and Olive plead with the Governor, but the chief executive of the state refuses to consider anything. The city is stirred over the fact that a young man of wealth and influence is to be executed. Sentiment changes, but the Governor stands firm. Just before the hour of execution, mobs attack the jail and when all hope seems gone, a telegram comes from an unknown source, declaring that evidence can be furnished to free Jim Armsby. A young man who had witnessed the tragedy from another building was hurrying on with the evidence, but has been prevented by a railroad accident. He is found by Olive, who takes him to the jail, where he meets the Governor, Judge Baxley and others. As Jim leaves the death march, free, the mob outside tears down the prison gates and burn the gallows, while the Governor steps out and smiles on the assemblage and as the blazing gallows illuminate the night scene, speaks: "You destroy what you build; you burn that which you voted to establish; you are better than you knew."

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

VICTOR.

THE CHIMNEY'S SECRET (Aug. 25).—By the flickering light of a candle an old peddler hides a bundle of bills in the chimney of his wretched hovel. In a house nearby Mary, a factory girl, lives with her invalid sister. Mary comes to the rescue of the old peddler when some boys in the neighborhood throw stones at him, an incident which earns the gratitude of the miser. Mary is saving her earnings to take her sister to a climate where she will recover from her malady. Mary goes to the bank to open an account and gets acquainted with Charles, the cashier. Charles is afflicted with a secret greed for money and as he handles the funds of the bank he suffers a great desire to take them.

Mary's savings at the bank have grown to an amount sufficient to take her sister away, when the bank fails and it is announced that Charles, the cashier, has absconded. The old peddler sees Mary pounding on the doors of the bank. He hurries to his hovel, and gets the packages of bills from their hiding place and prepares to leave. Upon opening the door he is confronted by Mary, who is on her way home. Thinking he sees another vision, he staggers back. Mary, thinking him ill, enters the hut and tries to assist him. The old man shows signs of insanity, and, throwing the bills on the table, tells her he has robbed the bank. He clutches at his hair and beard, and, tearing them off, reveals himself, Charles, the cashier. Mary is horror-stricken and pleads with him to restore the money to the poor. In delirium he gives her the money and tells her to take it to the bank. She leaves with it. Charles, in a frenzy, starts to pursue her to recover the money when an accusing vision of her appears near the door. He staggers back and over a chair, which he hurls through the vision. Hiding his face in his hands, he staggers to the wall, where he sinks to the floor and dies.

L-KO.

ALL ON ACCOUNT OF A PHOTO (Aug. 15).—Grace Howe is a cigarette roller in a tobacco factory. She is engaged to Ferdinand Longer. One day they visit a photographer and Grace has half a dozen small portraits taken. At work the next day Grace slips one of the photographs in every fiftieth package with her name and address on the back of the photo. Theodore Long, proprietor of an old-established business receives one of the photos and lays it aside for the moment. An office boy sweeps the photo into a waste basket, but Paul Short, one of Lon's employees, finds the photo and writes Grace himself.

Long is distracted when he finds the photo gone and upbraids the careless office boy. He gives the boy $5 to purchase fifty packages of cigarettes and in the fiftieth box finds another photograph of Grace with her address. Long then writes her a letter. Short and Long both get identically worded letters from Grace and determine to visit her. Both buy bouquets, and when each discovers that the other is bound on the same errand there are thrilling chases and races by foot, handcar, motorcycle, automobile and on the cowcatcher of an engine. Short gets in to see Grace first, but is thrown bodily out of the window by Grace's sweetheart. He lands astride Long's neck and both roll, fighting viciously, to the bottom of a hill, while Grace and her sweetheart look on in amusement from the window of her home.

MR. FLIRT IN WRONG (Two Parts Aug. 25).—When floor walkers have an inclination to flirt, but still know it's dangerous, should they indulge in this pastime? Mr. Rawsberry tried to decide this question, but it was not until a tall gentleman had appeared and gave him a couple of smacks on the jaw that he realized he had decided the wrong way. Mr. Rawsberry went straight to his store and started floor walking. His flirting proclivities again cropped out and he had a misunderstanding with the janitor. He tried to fire the janitor, but the janitor would not be fired, and he went to the Boss. The Boss was the gentleman who had slapped his face in the park. Also he was the husband of the lady Mr. Rawsberry admired, and he knew that Mr. Rawsberry knew that he knew he knew he was.

The correct thing to do was to exit, which Mr. Rawsberry did. He didn't stop until he was a block down the street. Fate again intervened when a paper blew out an open window and Mr. Rawsberry took it inside to accommodate the lady who lost it. The lady was the Boss' wife again, and before Mr. Rawsberry could get out the Boss came in. The intruder's exit was rapid, but not rapid enough. Mr. Rawsberry had to take refuge in a bath house, but this didn't help, as a couple of bears from the Zoo, admiring the bathing girls, had come thither. Also a gentleman who had been indiscreet with the liquor jug was present, and between him and the bears Mr. Rawsberry's life could have been pleasanter. Everybody got out, including the bears, but Mr. Rawsberry was the only one who didn't get away. He climbed into the first window handy, and not until he was inside and took note of his surroundings did he realize he was back in the Boss' house. The events which now happened to Mr. Rawsberry had best not be recorded.

LAEMMLE.

THE LILT OF LOVE (Aug. 29).—After her father's death, Betty Logan is left entirely to the care of her step-mother and her step-sister, Irma. The mother finds there is but little left to live upon, and decides that the only thing to do is to get her daughter married off to the wealthiest man she can find. She compels Betty to remain in the background and when callers ask who she is, pretends that Betty is only a servant. Among the celebrities whom the mother endeavors to attract for Irma is a young and successful composer, Maurice Beaumont, and she is at last able to induce him to accept an invitation to her home. Beaumont is writing an opera and is anxious to find a woman to sing the premier role. The mother throws Irma at his head, but he, apparently, does not see her. One night in his room, he hears a woman's most wonderful voice. He calls his hostess and asks to know who among her household has such a wonderful voice.

The mother knows that he has heard Betty, but she is quick to see the importance of the incident and declares it was Irma, her daughter, that he heard. Beaumont then asks that Irma sing for him. The mother arranges to have Betty, who has seen the young musician and worshipped him from afar, sing in such a way that Beaumont will think it is Irma. Beaumont is fooled when he hears the voice, apparently coming from behind a screen, and later Irma steps forth. He embraces her in his excess of joy at such a beautiful voice. Later, however, Beaumont learns the truth and that it was Betty all the time. He denounces Irma and her mother for their intended deception and folds the happy Betty to his breast.

REX.

THE CAD (Aug. 24).—Billy Garrick is accidentally shot by Herbert Gale while they are on a hunting trip. While he is delirious Herbert steals a locket from him containing the picture of his promised wife, Violet Masterson. Herbert was also Violet's suitor, but Billy won her heart and hand. Billy grows worse and Herbert sees in his death a chance to marry Violet. He pays an Indian to make sure of his rival's death and goes back to the city and tells Violet and her family that Billy was shot and killed by an Indian for trifling with an Indian girl's affections.

At first Violet does not believe the story, but finally Herbert shows her the locket and convinces her. An Indian girl hears of the plot to kill Billy and determines to save him. The Indian thinks the fever will kill his charge and spends most of his time drinking. This gives the Indian girl a chance to nurse Billy back to health. Herbert forces his attentions upon Violet and she finally consents to marry him. As Billy gets stronger the Indian becomes more watchful and Billy cannot find an opportunity to escape. The day of the wedding approaches and Violet repents of her promise to marry Herbert, but thinks of Billy's supposed unfaithfulness and becomes reconciled. At last Billy manages to slip down the river in a canoe and escape. Violet is about to marry Herbert. The minister starts the ceremony when Billy enters the room. Violet, thinking he is dead, faints. Billy denounces Herbert, who is driven out of the house. Violet recovers and the minister unites the lovers in marriage.

U. T. HUNGERFORD
BRASS & COPPER CO.
STAR ★ BRAND

Brass and Bronze Railings
Grilles, Kick a nd Push Plates
Theater Equipment a Specialty
Prompt Service
RIGHT PRICES
EVERYTHING IN BRASS AND COPPER STAR BRAND
SUPERIOR QUALITY
HUNGERFORD BUILDING
Lafayette, White and Franklin Sts.
NEW YORK
PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, SAN FRANCISCO

SOLIDHED POSTER TACKS

No. 448 per 100 25c.
No. 468 per 100 35c.
No. 478 per 100 40c.
Illustrations are actual size
Saves Wear and Tear on Your Paper
Solidhed Tack Co.
38 Murray Street, N. Y.
Colored Celluloid and Special Advertising Tacks quoted on request

POWERS.

SHE LOVED THEM BOTH (Aug. 28).—Robert Mace, a young Southerner, loves Cherry Clark. He has a rival in the person of Dirk McGraw, a Westerner. Robert tells his sweetheart of the love he holds for her and asks her hand in marriage. She accepts his proposal. On learning of this, Dirk McGraw is filled with thoughts of revenge. Robert Mace and Cherry Clark are married. Dirk McGraw is among the people to congratulate the couple. Their horses are waiting for them. Robert misses Cherry's wedding ring and goes back to look for it, laying aside his long black traveling cloak and hat. Cherry awaits him on her horse. Dirk, seeing Robert's cloak and hat, puts them on and pretends he is Robert. She sees through his deception. He seizes her and rides away.

Robert, finding her ring, returns to find her horse riderless. The great shock turns his mind. Cherry learns to love Dirk McGraw for his daring. They are married and years later in the West, Dirk McGraw is forcing her to do his own ends. He employs her as helper in his schemes to rob other men of their money, while she dances in the mining camp "free-and-easy." Robert Mace has become an outcast in the West. He happens to be in the same town with McGraw and his wife and drops into the saloon where they are operating just as Cherry succeeds in doing a miner out of his dust. His memory returns and, going to the piano, he sits down and plays the melodies of long ago, which moves even the rough miners to tears. Seizing a miner's revolver, he quickly swings around upon the piano stool and draws. Dirk also draws. They shoot. The miners, for their own safety, shoot out the lights. Cherry, realizing what has happened, lights a match. The two men she has loved she finds are dead—each killed by the other.

IMP.

BILLY'S LOVE MAKING (Aug. 24).—Mrs. Hughes, who still considers herself in the matrimonial market and dresses her daughter of eighteen as though she were a child of twelve, decides to go to the beach for the season in the hope of being able to land a good catch for herself. When they are nearing the beach their machine breaks down and they are assisted by Billie Burnitt. Billy invites them into his car. Thinking that Violet is a child, Billie says that she can sit on his lap, as there are only seats for two. They finally arrive at the hotel. As Billie is ready to drive away Mrs. Hughes invites him to call. The next day Billie meets Mrs. Hughes and Violet on the beach and as they are talking an old friend of Mrs. Hughes comes along and invites her for a stroll along the beach. She goes and leaves Violet in Billie's care. Billie, hardly knowing what to do to entertain a girl of twelve, suddenly sees a man with balloons walking along the beach. He leaves her for a few minutes and returns with a balloon and a lollypop.

Violet, thinking that he is trying to cajol her, decides that she will get even, and that night when Billie comes to call upon her mother she dresses in one of her mother's evening gowns and goes down to meet her. Mrs. Hughes is very much put out and is rushing Violet up to her room just as Billie appears. He just gets one glimpse of her, but is very much taken with her and when Violet then appears as the little girl, Billie asks her who the other girl was, and she replies: "She is my cousin." Billie tells her that he will give her a box of candy if she will fix it up so that he can meet her. She tells him to get the candy and she will take a note to her, which she does on the delivery of the candy, but "cousin" refuses to give him the answer until he gets Violet another box of candy. So Billie buys all the candy in the store and everything is fixed up for the next night, when Mrs. Hughes is to be out. Billie calls with his arms full of roses and candy, and "Cousin" appears. Billie is making desperate love when Violet suddenly suggests that they go down to the beach where they can get some nice lollypops and balloons. Billie suddenly realizes who she is and takes her in his arms. Mother appears soon after with a beau of her own and there is a double wedding.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 179 (August 11).

War Motor Train.—Armored autos and motor trucks with machine guns off for war game at Plattsburg.—New York City.

State Feeds Miners.—National Guard officers supervise distribution of provisions to thousands of workers made destitute through closing of coal mines.—Southern Ohio.

Atop Mountain Peak.—Newspaper editors hold meeting mile above sea level.—Mt. Mitchell, N. C.

Curbing Ocean's Fury.—Coast barrier that cost thousands saves noted summer resort it devastating storm.—Sebright, N. J.

Militia of Three States.—National Guardsmen from Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, escorted by Uncle Sam's regulars, reviewed by governors.—Quonset Point, R. I.

Sixty-Mile Auto Speed.—Dare-devil driver smashes one-half mile track record in series of hair-raising sprints.—Allentown, Pa. Sub-title: Ira Vail, the winner.

Filming the Movie Men.—Members of Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America assemble for annual convention.—San Francisco, Cal. Sub-titles: Ex-President M. S. Pierce being congratulated on successful administration. Barbecue is held in honor of delegates upon their visit to Universal City, Cal.

Champion Aquaplanist.—Daring girl rides 30 miles an hour while balanced on board behind speedy motorboat.—Monessen, Pa. Sub-title: A moving picture oddity. As the movie man sees it—the negative. As the movie patron sees it—a print from the negative.

Dynamite Destroys Bridge.—Condemned 300-foot span across ocean inlet is blown up by powerful explosive.—Eugene, Oregon.

Settling Mexico's Fate.—South American envoys leaving State Department after peace conference.—Washington, D. C.

Uncle Sam Takes a Hand.—U. S. cruiser "Tennessee" on way to Haiti with regiment of marines to reinforce Admiral Caperton in quelling uprising.—Brooklyn Bridge, N. Y. C.

"Torch of Liberty."—Tugs meet in midstream to transfer famous suffrage symbol from New York women to New Jersey women.—Hudson River, N. Y. Sub-title: Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, Jr., of New York, presents torch to Mrs. M. C. Van Winkle, of New Jersey.

Women in War.—Forty thousand of four nations, who make munitions for battling armies, parade in native costumes with flags.—London, England.

Lord Kitchener Recruiting.—Great Britain's War Chief makes stirring appeal for volunteers.—London, England. Sub-titles: Crowds awaiting Lord Kitchener. Flags of the allies on the Guildhall. Arrival of the Guard of Honor. Lord Kitchener arrives and inspects the guard. Making his great appeal, which was answered by thousands of volunteers.

Most Patriotic Borough.—Camberwell sends record number of 4,300 men to the front.—London, England.

Cartoons by Hy. Mayer.

NESTOR.

HIS LUCKY VACATION (Aug. 23).—Tired of club and city life, Jack bids his friends good-bye and starts for a quiet week at the seashore. At the depot he finds a crowd of girls who block his passage. They are seeing their friend Billie off as she starts for a two weeks' vacation. Jack tries vainly but politely to get by them, but they seem deaf to his entreaties, and he finally has to demand in a loud voice that they allow him to get on the train, which is about to leave. The girls are angry at the manner in which he demands to pass. Billie gets on the train just as it pulls out and finds that the only seat left vacant is the one opposite that in which Jack has seated himself. It happens that they board the same bus at the beach and are conveyed to the same hotel. At the hotel, Jack requests a room near Billie, telling the clerk that the girl who has just registered is his cousin. He gets a room directly opposite Billie's.

Jack's phone becomes crossed with Billie's and he overhears her put in a call to the clerk for a taxi. He bribes the chauffeur to let him take his place. Billie, unsuspectingly, enters the taxi and a wild ride follows, as Jack lacks much of being an expert. When something goes wrong with the car Billie learns her driver's identity and plans to teach him a severe lesson. While he is busy inspecting the engine she hastily writes a note, which she pins to the cusion of the seat. Stepping out, she tells Jack to wait a few minutes until she returns. Then she quietly disappears into a girl friend's house and leaves by the rear entrance. Jack waits for several hours and at last discovers the note, which flatly calls him "fresh" and tells him that when he is tired of waiting he can return the car to its owner. The real chauffeur, meanwhile, has become worried over the non-reappearance of his car and puts a policeman on the trail. Jack is captured, but finally gives the policeman the slip.

At the hotel Jack sees the girls have arrived ahead of him. They have taken the chauffeur into their confidence and told him of the joke played upon Jack. When the policeman finally arrives and places Jack under arrest, the girls and chauffeur relent and finally Jack is set free. Jack, however, is more determined than ever to win the respect and love of Billie, so that night he arranges a false fire call, and, rushing to Billie's room, he saves her from the supposed conflagration. She becomes very angry, when she learns that it is another of his tricks. Later that night a real fire occurs and Jack really does try to save Billie, but she will not let him and upbraids him roundly. As he struggles to carry her out of the smoky room she strikes him over the head and he falls unconscious. She then runs downstairs, where she learns that it really is a fire. This causes her to suffer a change of heart and she pleads with the men to save Jack, who is up in her room. Next day Jack is the hero of the hour and receives his reward at the hands of the repentant Billie.

More Light and Better

With a direct-current arc in your machine, all the light is thrown forward. The light is steady. Focusing is easy. The result is better and clearer pictures.

If your electric service is only alternating current, a

Westinghouse-Cooper Hewitt Rectifier Outfit

will give you the direct current you need. It saves money in carbons and in current. A 30-ampere D.C. arc is sufficient for projecting 130 feet. Outfits also furnished for 40 and for 50 amperes. Entirely automatic.

Send for folders 4205-A and 4277

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.

Dept. K.R. East Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

"NEWMAN" Brass Frames and Rails

NOW IS THE TIME to fix up your lobby. Throw out those unsightly old wood frames and invest in neat, attractive BRASS FRAMES. You will be surprised how quickly your investment will return to you.
But be sure the name "NEWMAN" appears on all frames—the guarantee of satisfaction.

Write for new 1915 catalog.

The Newman Mfg. Co.

NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.

Established 1882

HIS EGYPTIAN AFFINITY (Aug. 27).—In the prologue an Egyptian Princess and the Prince Hassan are lovers. Nebo, the son of a sheik, abducts the Princess and carries her out on the desert. She is rescued, but the Prince is killed. The son of a sheik has kicked over the sacred idol, which means that all shall die. All lie down in death. Centuries pass and the spirit of the Prince has become reincarnated in an American. The spirit of the Princess has also become a part of a young American girl, with whom the "Prince" is in love. The girl, her parents and lover all take a trip to Egypt to see the sights. As the old guide is showing them around the sacred temple a feeling of familiarity comes over the two as they look over the different objects. They are shown the casket of the Princess who has been dead over 3,000 years.

The boy picks up a vial lying nearby and curiously opening it a puff of smoke rises and the Princess comes to life. With a surprised gasp she looks around her and sees the spirit of her dead lover before her. They are comparing notes when he notices another bottle and is opening it. She tries to hold him back, but too late! "The son of a sheik" comes to life. The girl and her parents take refuge in flight and are pursued by the son of the sheik. He is unable to catch them and returns. He confronts Hassan and Fatima and tells them that although the Prince killed him many centuries before, he will not get even. The two elude him, however, and get outside, where they grab a couple of camels and escape in the desert. The villain still pursues them, and the only thing he can find to chase them with is a decrepit old camel. He mounts the "water wagon" and starts out, assisted by natives pushing and pulling the ship of the desert along. They have quite a chase, but the speedy mounts of the two lovers, whose love has endured through the centuries, take them to safety, and as the story ends they are congratulating themselves over the second defeat of that dog, the "son of a sheik."

BIG U.

THE VALLEY OF REGENERATION (Two Parts—Aug. 29).—Rita Jordon, a girl of rather loose morals, is living alone in Manila and accepting the attentions of Gordon Dawson. Rita cares nothing for Dawson, except that he can furnish her with the funds necessary to keep her in luxury. Back in the country from Manila, at the small army post in the San Rosa Valley, Lieutenant Clark leaves on the boat for a short visit to Manila. Clark is engaged to Amy Norris, daughter of Captain Norris, who is in charge of the post. At the time Clark arrives in Manila, Dawson has run out of money and Rita throws him over. Clark takes a room adjoining hers at the hotel, and, seeing that he has plenty of money, she makes his acquaintance.

They begin going out together to the cafes, and Rita falls half in love with him. Finally the day for Clark's return to the post arrives. As a ruse to get Rita to reform he tells her of his little hut near the post, and asks her to go back with him. Rita accepts and they leave together. Arrived back at the post, Clark takes her to the hut and tells her that he brought her there simply to give her a chance to reform. Realizing the trick he has played upon her, Rita hurries back to catch the boat, but it is already putting back to Manila. She returns to the hut to find that Clark has gone to the hotel to live and left the hut to her. The officers' wives at the post shun her, but Clark has Sister Marie, from the convent near by, go to her and help hold her firm in her determination to stay. An epidemic breaks out in the village and Marie tells Rita that she is needed to assist in the care of the natives. As Rita kneels beside a sick native a vision of the cafe in Manila appears. Unable to stand the filth and squalor any longer she runs to the telegraph office and wires Dawson to come and get her.

Clark gets a message that Amy, who has been in the States, is coming on the next steamer. The boat arrives and both Dawson and Amy are on board. Dawson inquires the way to Rita's cabin and tells Rita to hurry so they can catch the boat back. But by this time she realizes she loves Clark, and she tells Dawson this, adding that she believes Clark loves her and intends to ask her to marry him. Dawson leaves and reboards the boat. Clark and Amy come to the hut and tell Rita that they are to be married Sunday. Concealing her feelings, Rita wishes them happiness, and when they are gone begins hurriedly to pack to go with Dawson back to Manila. She gets to the landing in time to get the last boat for the ship, but cannot bring herself to leave. The officer in charge of the boat attemps to hurry her so they can row out to the ship. Through the village streets Rita sees Marie on her way back to the convent. All desire to leave the valley is abandoned and she goes to Marie and asks to be taken into the convent. Marie complies and the gates of the convent close upon them.

A Permanent Display

with a BROADWAY FLASH is what YOUR LOBBY should contain. Novel and attractive POSES of many Film and Dramatic Stars worked up in any size and having the appearance of GENUINE OIL PAINTINGS.

Every player of note in any size can be furnished at short notice. Our collection of photographs includes the latest poses of all the leading performers of the stage and screen.

Photo Players Post Card

is ever on the increase for advertising and souvenir purposes. Five million cards always on hand of all the players in the films -wire us for your wants.

$3.00 per Thousand

Catalogue contains all the names.

Single Column Half-Tone Cuts of All the Players 40 Cents Each

Large Hand Colored Pictures

of all the leading players, size 22 x 28 inches, 80 different men and women.

75 CENTS EACH

Transparencies

Hand Colored photographs on glass of all the favorites for Day and Night display in various sizes.

(Catalogue for details)

Transparency Frame

holding Nine glass pictures with electric attachments including on and off light.

(The catalogue has illustrations)

The Silver Frame

with an 11 x 14 inch hand colored picture, 50 cents each; 500 players; pictures without frame, $2.00 per doz. (See catalogue.)

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all prominent players, Association and Independent, 500 different names, 20c. each.

FAC-SIMILE OIL PAINTINGS of the stars, all sizes, from $8 to $25 each, with heavy gold frames.

KRAUS MFG. CO.

220 W. 42nd Street

NEW YORK

12th Floor, CANDLER BUILDING

Send for New Catalogue of over 500 players and samples free. Write us giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURE.

MRS. PLUM'S PUDDING (Five Parts—Aug. 23). Mrs. Plum and her son live on a small ranch. Oil is discovered and Mrs. Plum goes to the city to register her claim, with her son as companion. In the city an English lord and his valet are stopping at a fashionable hotel. He is in search of an heiress to save his estates. In the offices of the oil company a young clerk who moves in society, but is really a crook, determines to steal the old lady's papers. The English lord is about to be dispossessed. He makes the acquaintance of Mrs. Plum and her son and they are overawed at meeting a real lord. He tells them they should move in the best society and arranges to have them meet Mrs. Van Zant and her daughter, who are short on funds.

They are introduced and Mrs. Van Zant, for a monetary consideration, agrees to take the couple under her wing and show them the inside of society life. Mrs. Van Zant is giving a big reception in her friends' honor and Mrs. Plum writes back to Oilville to tell her friends, Harry and Jake, of the swell "doin's" and to invite them to come on. The reception is a big success, and the only excitement is the arrival of Harry and Jake in their "oilfield clothes." Eddie has fallen in love with Betty Van Zant and she returns his affection. Lord Burlington plays the part of a cavalier lover to Mrs. Plum and she is foolishly fond of him. The crooks learn of the reception and, having gained an entrance to Mrs. Plum's room, take what they believe to be her papers and escape. When the loss is discovered there is wild confusion and the Lord is so disappointed that he refuses to be married.

Mrs. Plum is overcome and it takes all of her friends' persuasion to get her calm again. The crooks did not get the right plans as Mother Plum was not such a "sucker" as they thought, and she, becoming suspicious, had hidden them elsewhere. When the detective is put on the case and fails to find the real papers in the hands of the crooks, he insists on searching the guests. Mrs. Plum then confesses that what was stolen was only the counterfeit papers and that she had pretended to be ruined in order to test the Lord's affection. Meanwhile Eddie and Betty, in the excitement, get married. The Lord returns to his hotel and is torn between love for the widow and worry about his estate. Finally he resolves not to be a cad and returns to the widow in spite of her supposed loss of fortune. Mrs. Van Zant has refused to let her daughter marry Eddie, but the young people have been too quick for her, and when the news is announced, there is wild rejoicing. Lord Burlington returns to the house and confesses that his love for the widow is greater than his love for her money, and offers himself to her, thinking that she is poor. But great is his surprise when he learns that instead of being poor, she is in reality richer, as her wells are now flowing twice as much as those of her neighbors'.

GOLD SEAL.

EXTRAVAGANCE (Three parts—Aug. 24).—Mrs. Rogers Stanhope and her daughter, Minerva, have been living on the fat of the land without counting the cost. It has been so easy to charge, and they little think to what an extent their pleasures cost them until the first of the month, when the bills begin to come in. Finally things come to such a pass that Mrs. Stanhope finds her debts are in the thousands, while her credit at the bank amounts to only about $200. Alfred Stuart, a financier and man about town, is an intimate friend of Mrs. Stanhope and has long had his eye on Minerva as a wife. Minerva, heretofore, has accepted his attentions, and when Stuart calls up Mrs. Stanhope, while she is in her difficulties, and begs for a dinner engagement, she gladly agrees and thinks of a way to get out of her troubles.

In the meantime Minerva has received a letter from William Marsden, to whom she has been engaged secretly for some time, asking her if she had yet told her mother of the engagement and requesting an appointment for the evening. Mrs. Stanhope tells Minerva that the only way out of her difficuty is for her to marry Stuart, and by the aid of his money clear away their debts. Minerva vehemently refuses to have anything to do with such a scheme. Minerva goes with Marsden for a ride and upon her return persuades him to come in and tell her mother of their engagement. He agrees, and Minerva is treated coldly until her mother finds out Marsden is supposedly better fixed than Stuart. Minerva and Marsden are married and the mother, on the strength of their wealth, takes a trip abroad. Shortly before the marriage Marsden's trustee dies and he finds that he is almost penniless, nothing being left but some supposedly worthless copper stock. He offers to release Minerva from her engagement, but she refuses and they keep the matter secret from her mother.

Stuart finds out Marsden's condition and offers him a place in his own office, which Marsden is

(Continued on page 1382.)

SOON TO APPEAR!

FLORENCE ROCKWELL

MISS ROCKWELL HAS BEEN ON THE STAGE SINCE CHILDHOOD AND IS POPULAR IN EVERY CITY IN THE UNITED STATES. HER LAST APPEARANCE IN NEW YORK WAS FIVE WEEKS AGO AS A HEAD LINER AT THE PALACE THEATRE.

IN AN EARLY SEPTEMBER RELEASE

AUGUST 4th.

MARY NASH

IN "THE TIDES OF TIME"

"MARY NASH'S EXCEPTIONAL WORK WAS A RELIEF AFTER SO MANY FAILURES OF LEGITIMATE STARS ON THE SCREEN."

DRAMATIC MIRROR, ISSUE AUG. 11th.

PREVIOUS RELEASES

ALICE BRADY

DAUGHTOR OF Wm. A. BRADY

IN

"THE CUP OF CHANCE"

Sir. J. FORBES ROBERTSON

IN

"HAMLET"

RALPH STUART

IN

"THE KICK-OUT"

"YOU CAN'T BEAT IT"

STAR THREE

EVERY OTHER

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

Knickerbocker

NEW

AUGUST 18TH.

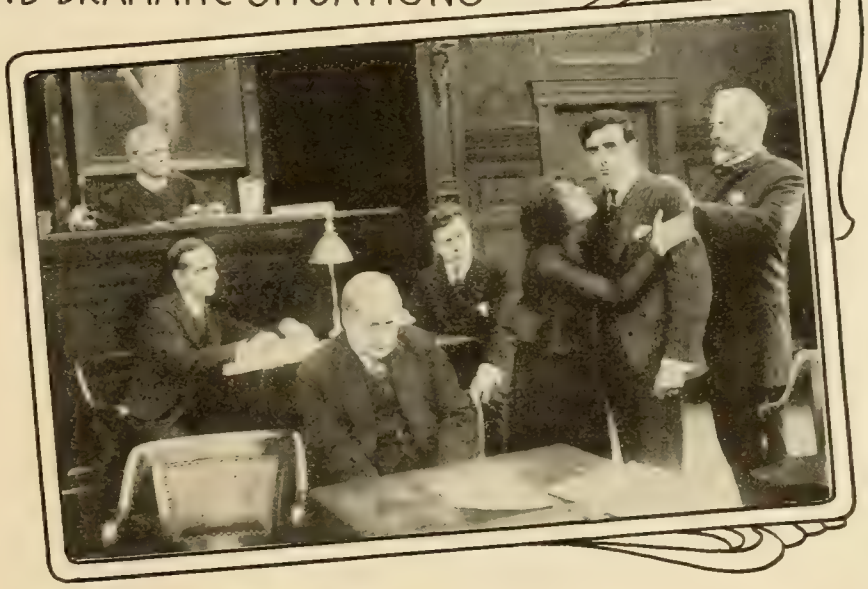
LENORE ULRICH

IN

"CAPITAL PUNISHMENT"

PRODUCED BY JOSEPH LEVERING

AN UNUSUALLY STRONG SUBJECT WITH MANY TENSE AND DRAMATIC SITUATIONS



LENORE ULRICH APPEARS TO GREAT ADVANTAGE IN THE HEROIC ROLE OF ONE WHO GOES TO GREAT LENGTHS TO SAVE A SISTERS HONOR. MISS ULRICH IS WIDELY KNOWN, HAVING GAINED SINGULAR SUCCESS IN "THE BIRD OF PARADISE" IN WHICH SHE PLAYED THE ROLE OF "LUANA" FOR THREE SEASONS

REELERS

WEDNESDAY ON REGULAR PROGRAM

SPECIAL ARTISTIC ONES, THREES AND SIXES

Star Features

YORK

(Continued from page 1379.)

glad to accept. Later the mother returns from abroad with many new gowns and when she learns of Marsden's loss of his fortune she is very cold toward the couple and renews her friendly relations with Stuart. Minerva goes to her husband for $100 and he tells her he cannot get hold of that much. Much disappointed, Minerva decides to make up with her mother. The meeting is cold, but finally the girl breaks down and the mother thinks she will win out at last. Stuart calls for them in a taxi, according to prearranged agreement, and just as they are getting out of the cab at the office Marsden comes out and sees his wife and Stuart together. Marsden receives word that his copper stock is not worthless and has to leave on the same night as a big party. He is delayed and when ready finds his wife has gone to the party, he hurries there to bid her goodbye. He finds his wife and Stuart alone and accuses the latter of paying too much attention to his wife. After a break with Minerva, Marsden leaves.

Deserted by her husband, Minerva is forced to work and takes a position in the office of Marsden's old lawyer. One day she takes Marsden's card from the office boy in which he requests an interview with the lawyer and sees that he is manager of a big copper company. The lawyer hides her in a closet and she hears her husband. Stuart learns that Marsden now has the power to ruin him and calls on Mrs. Stanhope for aid, but she is powerless to give him any assistance. Marsden's copper stock has proved to be valuable and he is now enormously wealthy. Minerva realizes that when he meets Stuart there will likely be trouble and hurries to the latter's office to prevent it if possible. She arrives in the midst of a fight between the two men and forces them to separate. Mrs. Stanhope, too, arrives on the scene and Minerva tells them that the blame of it all should rightly rest upon her mother. Stuart and the mother leave and Minerva attempts to explain away all the difficulties. Marsden at first holds back, but when his wife breaks down he takes her into his arms and comforts her.

JOKER.

A CASE OF BEANS (Aug. 26).—A newly-married pair have set up housekeeping in an apartment. The young wife is devoted to bridge and insists on entertaining her club friends at the expense of the comfort of her young husband. When her young husband returns from his work for lunch she forces him to eat on a corner of the kitchen table, and, although she has been preparing an elaborate lunch for her guests, she forces him to be satisfied with a can of beans. He rebels at this constant diet of beans and fills an empty can with gravel, puts a new label on it taken from another can of beans, sets the can on the shelf and departs for lunch.

The bridge party arrives, enjoy the day and discuss a big burglary reported. The ladies all insist that the hostess take charge of their jewels and put them in the safety deposit vault box which she owns. She accepts the trust and while waiting an opportunity to go to the vault hides the jewels in an empty can which she labels "Beans." These jewels she leaves for a moment while dressing for the street, and her cook, who discovers them as she is about to treat the ice man to a light lunch of canned beans. They both decide that the master and mistress are the thieves and begin a system of espionage that has its embarrassments for all parties. The young bride sets forth for the safety vault, carrying the can of gravel by mistake, and is followed by the two "detectufs." She meets her husband on the way, explains her mission and he laughs at her, but she goes on and he, continuing on his way toward home, discovers the cook and ice man following her. He discovers the jewels in a can which they are carrying, learns the facts as well as the suspicions that exist and plays a joke on all parties concerned that has a back-fire to it in the fact that he is compelled to eat the can of gravel before he gets through. Of course, there is a happy ending and a readjustment of values, in which the young bride forswears bridge and beans.

BISON.

THE SOCIAL LION (Two Parts—Aug. 28).—Mrs. St. John, an Eastern society woman, and her daughter are visiting in the West. One day the daughter, Anna, sees Ted Allen, a cattle king. There is mutual attraction between the two and Ted resolves to make the girl's acquaintance. The mother's susceptibilities are wounded by the rough way of the westerners and she disdainfully passes Allen by. Later, at the hotel, Anna sees Ted passing and hears one of the loungers remark that he is the richest man in that part of the country. At length Ted and Anna are married and leave for the East. At one of the receptions Bryson, one of Anna's old admirers, tries to again interest her in himself. Ted's mother-in-law contrasts the polished manners of Bryson with the rough and ready way of the westerner, and the latter suffers in the comparison.

Anna's brother, Bob, arrives from college and there is a strong liking between him and Ted from the start. In celebrating Bob's return Ted makes his first big "stampede" into society and Mrs. St. John is horrified at his manners. Ted wanders into the conservatory and hears Bryson tell his wife that she has been sold to a wealthy man and her life will be ruined. Ted is dejected and is packing his clothes to leave when his brother-in-law comes upon him and promises to teach him the artificialities of society. Anna, meanwhile, has resented Bryson's remarks and ordered him to leave the house. Ted has written the boys at the ranch a discouraging letter, which is the source of much worry to them. Under Bob's training Ted has progressed wonderfully, and one day at the club he hears Bryson make a remark about his wife. He shakes Bryson like a rat and tells him that the next time he will use more drastic measures. Ted's progress has been a secret, and even his wife is ignorant of the change. Ted sees a chance to make a good deal in cattle which will necessitate a trip to London. After a most successful trip, he wires home that he will be there soon and to have a big party to celebrate his success. Even Anna is a little dubious over the appearance her husband will make, but nevertheless makes preparations for a happy homecoming.

Ted arrives and, to the astonishment of all, conducts himself like an English lord. He proves to be the lion of the hour, and his wife is forgotten, while all give attention to Ted. That night after the guests have left Anna leads her husband upstairs, and, taking him over to a crib, lifts out a baby. He is aghast, and when the wife lifts out the other twin he nearly faints. He takes his wife in his arms, and as the four heads come together the picture fades.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE.

THE BROKEN COIN (Eighth Episode—Two Parts—"The Prison in the Palace" Released August 8).—Kitty learns from Sachio that she is to be detained by him until his king returns when she will be brought before the ruler. The king arrives and he asks Kitty what is on the other half of the coin, but she refuses to speak. With the alternative of being placed in prison, she tells the king that she does not know the inscription on the other half of the coin. The king is dubious, but while she is to be kept within the grounds, he agrees to give her the freedom of the palace under guard.

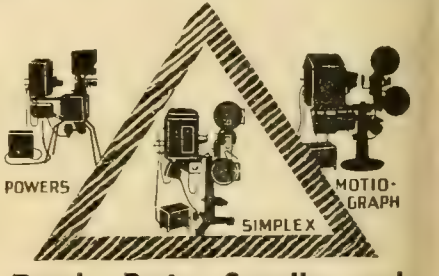
Frederick makes inquiry at the hotel where Kitty was stopping as to her whereabouts, and the clerk tells him that the only thing he knows is that she has been gone two weeks, but that her clothes are still in her room. He returns to the palace and reports to King Michael. One of the king's secretaries overhears his majesty remark to Frederick that if she does not come back soon he will start a search for her; whereupon the secretary immediately departs for Grahoffen, where Kitty is held prisoner. This secretary, while pretending to be a friend of Michael, is in reality a spy in the diplomatic circles of Grahoffen, and divulges what he has learned to his superiors.

In the meantime, Roleaux succeeds in escaping from the room where he is a prisoner and gets to the outside of the palace just as the man from Gretzhoffen enters the palace. Kitty is sent for again. The king asks her to tell what was on the other part of the coin and she will be escorted back to Gretzhoffen. She refuses and as she gets on the outside of the room she stands behind a curtain and listens to the king plotting with the man from Gretzhoffen to overthrow Michael by starting a revolution. Going down the hall she finds a door leading to the garden with no guards near it. Kitty is about to go to the boulevard when she hears people running in the hall she had just left. Making up her mind quickly, Kitty makes a last attempt to escape by running to the boulevard. Seeing a car standing still, she jumps into the seat and by luck starts the car just as Sachio and his men come from the palace. Giving the car all the gas possible, she succeeds in making a getaway. Sachio curses his bad luck and bawls out the guard just as the king comes into the garden and asks what the trouble is. The guards tell him about Kitty getting away. This enrages the old fellow to such an extent that he tells Sachio he will give him just twenty-four hours either to get the girl or the secret of the coins. He starts out to get Kitty.

THE BROKEN COIN (Ninth Episode—Two Parts—"Room 22" Released August 15).—Kitty is driving the car swiftly when she feels something near her and, looking back, she sees something move under the robes on the floor of the car. Slowing up, she awaits developments. She is about to jump from the car when the intruder comes to view and she gives a screech of joy as she recognizes her old friend Roleaux. They drive back to Gretzhoffen. Sachio and his accomplices arrive in Gretzhoffen. Frederick, again on the hunt for the missing girl, calls at Kitty's hotel to inquire for her and is told by the clerk that she has not returned. Frederick plys him with so many questions that the clerk says he will let him see for himself, and takes him up to her room. While waiting for Frederick to look around the room, one of the maids at the hotel calls the clerk and he goes, leaving Frederick in the room. Frederick examines the room and leaves unobserved by the clerk, who is busy.

Kitty and Roleaux arrive in Gretzhoffen, and, nearing the hotel, Kitty tells Roleaux that they look too mussed up to enter the front way. They leave the car some distance from the hotel and go in through a back entrance. Kitty tells Roleaux to hurry and dress and they will make another try at Frederick's apartment, believing that he has the coin she dropped on her last visit there. Sachio and his men arrive near Kitty's hotel and Sachio tells his man and the spy from Gretzhoffen to go to Kitty's room (through the back entrance) where an unsuccessful search is made for the coin. They hear some one coming down the hall and make a hasty getaway. As the spy comes out of the room the other man is attacked from the rear. Sachio makes inquiries at the desk regarding the "charming American girl." The clerk is just telling him that she left not half an hour ago when a maid comes shrieking down the stairs with the startling news that a man has been murdered in Miss Gray's room. Sachio "beats" it. Kitty meanwhile arrives at Frederick's palace and, leaving Roleaux hidden on the outside to keep watch, enters the place. She gets his coin and starts to go as he enters.

EVERYTHING FOR YOUR PLAYHOUSE
HOMMEL'S
COMMERCIAL BUILDING
422 FIRST AVE.
PITTSBURGH, PA.



Repair Parts, Supplies and Machines Shipped from Stock

IT PAYS YOU AND YOU WILL BE PLEASED IF YOU
Send Your Next Order to Hommel's

PORTER EQUIPS THEATRES COMPLETE

Solves all projection problems, furnishes and installs the very BEST MOTION PICTURE MACHINES and ACCESSORIES THAT MONEY CAN BUY. Perfect Projection Guaranteed. EVERYTHING OF FIRST QUALITY FOR MOTION PICTURE THEATRES.

B. F. PORTER, 1482 BROADWAY, Bet. 42nd and 43rd Sts., NEW YORK

There is great commotion at the hotel over the murder. Gendarmes are on and the clerk tells them that Kitty and Roleaux were the last to leave the room. He also tells them that Count Frederick had been there and the officers leave for Frederick's house. Frederick again asks Kitty for the coin. She still refuses to give it to him. He gets up to go to her, when the photo he had taken from her room drops to the floor near Kitty. He tells her where he obtained it. Just then Roleaux rushes in and tells them that the police are after them for murder. The police rush in and arrest the three of them. They are all taken to the hotel, where Sachio has been detained by the clerk. En route to the hotel, Roleaux succeeds in getting away from the police and goes to Kitty's room through a back entrance. The clerk accuses Kitty because she came from her room, when they had not seen her enter the hotel. Kitty, in turn, accuses Frederick. They are all surprised and refuse to believe it, when she tells them to look in his pocket and they will find her photo that he had taken from her room. They do so and the clerk enters and tells of letting Frederick into Kitty's room. The officers then arrest Frederick.

In the meantime, Roleaux, in Kitty's room with the dead man, feels the presence of another man, and, pretending to leave the room, hides behind a curtain in order to see who the intruder is. He waits a few minutes, when an apache comes from the back room. Looking around to make sure no one is near, he goes to the dead man and, kneeling by his side, takes a paper from his pocket and starts to leave the room just as Roleaux springs upon him, gets the best of him and takes him to the lobby as they are about to take Frederick away. Every one is surprised to see Roleaux and the apache. Roleaux accuses the apache of the murder, just as the Chief of Police enters and demands they all be taken to the room of the crime. The chief enters the room first. The others wait a little, still afraid and waiting orders from the chief as they hear him swear loudly, calling them to come in. On entering the room they are all staggered with surprise to find the room in perfect order.

Mutual Film Corp.

THANHOUSER.

WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE (August 13).—The wealthy importer was a good business man and a keen judge of character, and when his widowed cousin in the country sent her "darling boy" to make a name for himself in the business world, the importer was rather doubtful as to the outcome. The country youth was gauky. The elder man watched him unobtrusively and found that he was associating with a rather wild gang.

The gang held out in a certain billiard saloon, and greatly admired their leader, a young man who always seemed to have plenty of money. He gaves the boy a sample $5.00 bill, telling him to pass it and see how fine it was. On pay-day he handed the bill to the cashier pretending it was part of his salary, and requesting that it be changed. When it was returned from the bank as a counterfeit, he recognized it as the one presented by his cousin. The boy purchased a large sum of bad money but his pocket was picked. The thieves took the money to the billiard saloon room, recognized the counterfeits and threw the wallet under a table. An old scrub woman found it. The wallet contained the young clerk's card, and the honest woman decided to return him his property. He gave her several of the bills as a reward. This was in the office, his employer witnessed the transaction.

Other things he had discovered made him believe the boy was a dupe of the counterfeiters. He managed to have the scrub woman apparently arrested, and she was brought to his office where she was confronted by the young clerk, who had first denied having given her the money, but (when the supposed officer put handcuffs upon her wrists, and prepared to lead her out to prison) the young boy broke down and declared she told the truth. The employer changed the bad bills for good money, managed to quash the case, and told his trembling cousin that he had been weighed in the balance and not found wanting.

A MESSAGE THROUGH FLAMES (Aug. 10).—Kate, a blind girl, is adopted by Mrs. Folsom, whose son, John, a station agent, teaches his foster-sister the telegraph code. Kate soon realizes the importance of many of the messages which she sends, and how, in some cases, failure to transmit the magic signs would mean death to hundreds of passengers. One night she finds John lying unconscious from a fall on the floor of the station, a broken lamp by his side. She also smells burning wood. The telegraph key is clicking insistently, and Kate fights her way through the smoke to the key. She learns that a freight train and the Western Express are in danger of collision. Rushing out of the burning depot, the blind girl unlocks the switch and swings it open. The freight slips into the siding just in time to let the big passenger train go thundering by in safety. Kate is promoted by the officials of the road to a high position in their central office.

THE REVENGE OF THE STEEPLEJACK (Aug. 8).—They were a strangely assorted pair, the civil engineer and the steeplejack. The engineer was gay and companionable, the steeplejack, brooding and surly, yet they were great friends. To the engineer came an important piece of work, that of repairing the scaffolding about the giant chimney of the local lighting company. He relied upon the steeplejack to do the dangerous work and the steeplejack accepted the mission with his usual air of indifference. About this time a girl came into their lives. She was related to the landlady of their boarding house, and had come to the little town to spend her vacation. The engineer was smitten at first sight and paid much attention to the girl. Neither of them realized that the steeplejack was also in love.

One evening while out on the grounds, the engineer proposed to the girl and was accepted. Unseen by them the steeplejack was watching them and he bitterly vowed to be revenged upon the girl he loved and the man who had always been his friend. The next day while the steeplejack was at work on the top of the chimney stack he saw the girl approaching and hastily descended. He met her as though by accident, told her that the young engineer had been injured "over near the light house" and that he was on his way to a doctor. The girl declared she would go to the engineer at once and the steeplejack gave her directions. The girl was a stranger and did not know that the route he advised was over a dangerous quicksand where many lives had been lost. She hurried off while the steeplejack returned to the top of the chimney and watched her.

A few moments later the engineer clambered to the top of the stack to inspect the work. The steeplejack grasped him by the arm, pointed off and said "Look." The engineer gazed, saw his betrothed hastening into the quicksand. As he watched she stopped and he could see that she was trapped. The steeplejack pulled a revolver, pointed it at his friend and chuckled, "If she won't marry me," he said, "she won't marry you. We will stand here and see the last of her." The engineer realized that the steeplejack had gone mad. He grappled with the steeplejack and a fierce fight ensued, 175 feet above the ground. The steeplejack was the stronger, freed himself from his opponent's grasp, took a step backward, missed his footing, and, with a wild cry, fell headlong to the ground below. The engineer, unnerved by his terrible experience, managed to control himself just the same, hastened to the ground, and, mounting his horse, galloped madly to the quicksand and saved his sweetheart.

THE CROGMERE RUBY (Aug. 15).—The Crogmere ruby was stolen from the country house of its owner in England. Certain clues convinced the Scotland Yard authorities that the criminal would try to escape on a certain liner. The New York police received word that the Crogmere ruby had been stolen and was supposed to be on a certain liner, with the further information that "Inspector Bolton of Scotland Yard was on the boat." The liner had only been out one day when the first-class passengers knew that they had a Scotland Yard detective in their midst. The wireless operator gave further information by showing a maid-servant, in whom he was interested, a wireless addressed to the supposed Sherlock Holmes and signed only with the letters "S. Y."

It was noticed that "Sherlock Holmes" paid much attention to a young lady and young man. When the vessel arrived in New York a police captain and several men boarded the boat to aid Inspector Bolton. "Sherlock Holmes" told the captain that the young Lothario was the criminal and the man was promptly taken into custody. His stateroom was searched and the ruby found hidden away in a large cake of soap. The officers were escorting their prisoner away in triumph when the young woman in the case interfered. She induced the police captain to let her look at the ruby and promptly declared that it was simply glass. Closer scrutiny convinced the official that she was right. He was doubtful what further course to pursue, when the young woman pointed to the pipe of Sherlock Holmes and whispered to the Captain, "It's the first day since we left the other side that his pipe has not been lit." She then reached over, grabbed the pipe before Sherlock could interfere, emptied its contents in her hand and revealed the ruby, which had been hidden under a thin layer of tobacco. The bogus detective tried to flee, but was promptly captured.

Finding that the game was up, he made a full confession, admitting that he had stolen the gem. He said he knew the police would be on the alert so he had tried to escape a personal search, pretending to be an inspector from Scotland Yard, and had planted the bogus ruby in the young man's possession expecting that he would be locked up, giving the real criminal a chance to escape. It was later revealed that the young girl was Inspector Bolton of Scotland Yard and had been watching the pseudo detective all the way across the Atlantic.

WHEN HUNGRY HAMLET FLED (Two Parts—Aug. 17).—The Booth and Barrett Dramatic Club of Cedarville was just as bad as one would imagine. It put on the worst possible plays in the most impossible manner, but Cedarville pretended to enjoy it, because the talent was "home folks." Yet the day came when the populace rose in its wrath, but the only one who suffered was "Hungry Hamlet." Hungry Hamlet was not really his name. His press clippings described him as Lancelot Fortesque. When he first appeared in Cedarville, he was headed for Broadway, plodding along the railroad tracks, carrying his own baggage. Johnnie Jenkins christened him "Hungry Hamlet." It must be admitted that Johnnie was jealous, for "Hamlet" landed a job as professional coach of the B. & B. Dramatic Club, and also essayed the hero role, a part that had belonged to Johnnie by right, because he was really in love with the leading lady. But Hamlet sneered at Jenkins, and when casting the play told Johnnie he could either be the front legs of the horse or the hind legs, whereas Johnnie retired from dramatic life.

The vehicle selected for the edification of Cedarville, "The Jealousy of Envy." It had as its hero a brave country lad, who enlisted to fight the battles of his country, leaving his poor old mother in their cottage with the mortgage. There were also two girls he left behind him, one the sweet belle of the village, to whom he had plighted his troth, while the other was a scheming adventuress. During the horrors of war the adventuress sought to take his life, being aided by a captain of the enemy's forces, while the heroine was always showing up in time to aid him. The jealous Johnnie Jenkins could see that his rival would score heavily less something happened.

At the first performance the beauty and chivalry of Cedarville was assembled in the Town Hall. The first scene opened outside the home of the hero. He bade his weeping, gum-chewing mother farewell. In the second act the hero is led a captive into a fort of the enemy. He escapes sliding down a rope. Unexpectedly the rope broke, and the audience laughed instead of being thrilled. His enemies seized him, and bound him to a railroad track, just as the "midnight express" came tooting along. At the performance the train did not toot, somebody having plugged up the property man's whistle. The train came along, the property man walking back of the smoke stack with a smoke pot, to give the illusion. Suddenly the man slipped, the train progressed on its way, leaving the "smoke" and "whistle" behind it. Then the hero leaped into the ocean, and the "waves" collapsed, showing him floundering about on a mattress.

In the final act the walls of the fort fell down, revealing to the audience that the "soldiers" who were marching there were simply a few men with pitchforks upon which were helmets and bayonets, but the show collapsed when the prop horse broke in half, the front end running off the stage, while the rear part became tangled with the hero. This was the cue for "Hungry Hamlet," and he fled, bombarded with eggs and vegetables supplied to the audience by the vengeful Jenkins. Then the latter comforted the leading lady, and was soon in her good graces again. The cause of the theatrical fiasco can be attributed to the revengeful Johnnie, who tampered with the props so that everything would go wrong as he had planned.

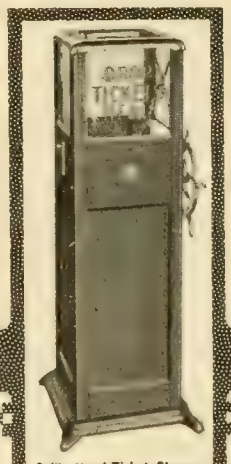
RELIANCE.

FATE TAKES A HAND (Two Parts—July 31).—Jim Brant, a crook, is in love with Broadway Maxine, whose insatiable love of finery holds Brant to a life of crime. Brant is caught and sentenced to the penitentiary. On being released, he returns to his father, promising to keep straight. Maxine breaks down Brant's resolution. Later, in a shoplifting venture, Maxine is trailed and captured. The district attorney induces the girl to turn state's evidence. She betrays Brant and his gang. Brant determines to kill the district attorney. He stations himself in a window opposite his enemy's office, and seeing the silhoutte of a man's hat on the window shade, fires. A few moments later he is captured by the police and taken to view the victim. On the back of a chair dangles the hat, untouched—just where the district attorney had hung it. Maxine lies dead on the floor.

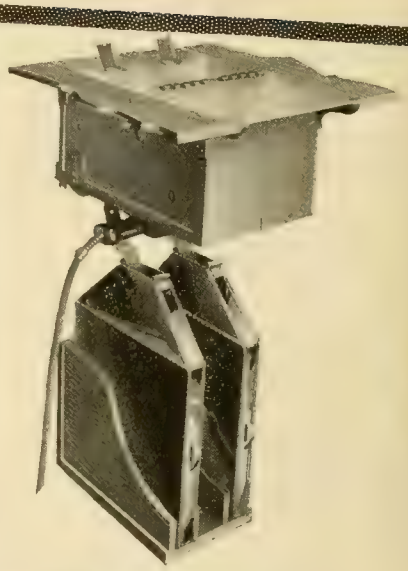
EDITIONS DE LUXE (August 25).—Freda, alias "Society Shirley," abandons her life of crime and becomes engaged to Jack McCarthy, a young detective. "Conny Peters," a gilt-edged confidence man, persuades Freda to go back to the old practice. McCarthy loses sight of her. Later, he becomes betrothed to Grace Manley. A year later, McCarthy is detailed to trail "Cony Peter" and his accomplice. He captures the man first, and then discovers that the woman is Freda whom he once had asked to marry him. He offers her her freedom.

(Continued on page 1386.)

Interior of Ticket Booth of Majestic Theater, Detroit, Mich. Equipped with four Caille Ticket Sellers and a Change Maker.



Caille Hand Ticket Chopper



Caille Double Ticket Seller

YOUR ticket booth is the face of your theatre. It reflects character just as the human face does. By its appearance, the public generally judges the theater interior and your provision for their comfort and safety.

If your ticket booth is equipped with the most modern, up-to-date devices designed to facilitate the handling of crowds with the least discomfort to the patrons, folks are bound to attend your theater in preference to the more carelessly equipped houses. This has been demonstrated thousands of times.

Our president, Mr. A. Arthur Caille, is a pioneer in the moving picture theater field. He learned the value of proper ticket booth equipment long ago. In fact its importance impressed him so strongly that he immediately applied his well known inventive skill to the design of the most efficient ticket booth equipment. The result is the production of the following widely used devices.

The Caille Electric Ticket Seller

This machine will sell tickets ten times faster than the old hand method. Every ticket sold is automatically registered. A glance at the register instantly tells you the number of tickets sold. This device is built and locked inside of the machine where it cannot be tampered with unless you give the operator your key.

The Caille Electric Ticket Seller will deliver tickets in any quantity and, best of all, separately (a feature not found in any other machine). Consequently tickets will not lie across knives in chopper as they do when delivered in strips.

The Caille Electric Ticket Seller is operated by merely pressing a button. There are five keys numbered one, two, three, four and five. Press number one and one ticket appears at the finger tips of your customer. Press number two and two individual tickets appear, and so on until five. If you desire to sell tickets of various denominations, a battery of ticket sellers can be installed, occupying very little room, for the entire machine is but 4¼ inches wide and 8 inches long. This device will sell tickets faster than you can count and positively eliminate any chance of error.

Each ticket seller has its own individual motor requiring very little current for operation. These motors are furnished for either alternating or direct current.

Caille Ticket Seller can be very easily and quickly installed in any ticket booth; in fact, it would take only a few hours for any ordinary mechanic to do the work. Every machine is thoroughly guaranteed.

CAI

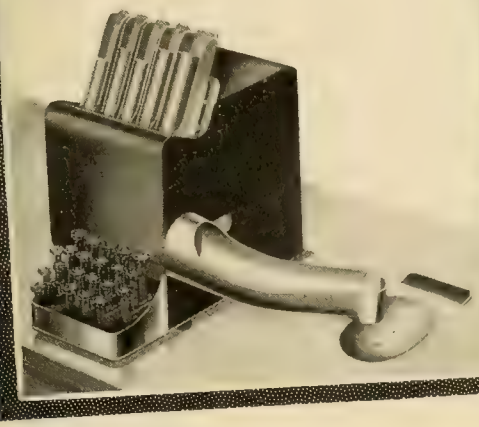
Ticket Office

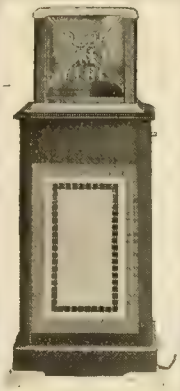
The Caille Ticket Chopper

These are designed to be operated by electric, foot and hand power. They shred and tear the tickets in small bits so that it is impossible to ever use them again. (The mechanism is so arranged that coins or metal checks can pass between the knives without injury, but paper tickets

The Caille Brothers Company

The Caille "Special" Movie Change Maker. The delivery spout extends through the window and pays the change direct to the patron.





Caille Electric Ticket Chopper

Caille Equipped Booth. Note the patron picks up his ticket and change simultaneously.

are torn to shreds.) This machine is thoroughly guaranteed. It means absolute safety and security in the handling of your tickets.

Caille Ticket Boxes

If you do not care for this Ticket Chopper, naturally you would want a box for your tickets. Caille Ticket Boxes are made in several styles in both metal and wood—a very compact and neat little device.

Our "Special" Change Maker

This machine does the calculating and pays the change direct to the patron. Suppose someone gave you $1.00 and wanted a 10c ticket. All you would have to do is press the 10c key and the correct change is delivered direct to the patron in a glass receptacle from which the hand can readily pick it up.

This machine has a very simple key-board conveniently located like the keys on a typewriter. The touch is very light and uniform throughout. It is swifter in operation and less tiring to the operator than any other machine of its kind ever built. This machine shortens the time of transaction, prevents errors in change and prevents disputes with patrons.

The Caille Theater Record Book

The Theater Record is the one perfect system devised for the theater box office record. It gives you an accurate and positive record of all business transactions through your box office. Your receipts are there in detail, your expenditures likewise, and through its use you can have a daily, weekly, monthly and yearly record of your business.

The Theater Record is printed on heavy linen paper bound with gray cloth. It has separate space for recording feature attractions, with a special column for recording weather conditions. It is ruled in three colors of ink and compiled to record afternoon and evening receipts separately. Every expense in a theater can be dispersed under one of the eleven columns.

Size of Theater Record is 21 x 16 inches. Fifty-two complete pages, one for each week.

Tickets

We can furnish you with any size, style, color or quantity of tickets for any purpose whatsoever. It makes no difference what denomination or name you desire on the tickets, we can take care of you. They are furnished either in strips or in rolls, in purple, white, green, salmon, ox-blood, blue, gray, buff, cherry, Mandarin, rose, fawn and yellow.

Send for Complete Catalog

Shows and describes the many Caille Ticket Office Equipments. It's free for the asking. A postal brings it.

LLE Equipments

1001 Amsterdam Ave., Detroit, Mich.

(Continued from page 1383.)

She misunderstands this to mean that the detective still loves her. In Freda's room McCarthy is set upon by pals of "Conny Peter's." The girl crook battles with them to save his life. A passing policeman notifies the detective bureau of McCarthy's danger and officers are sent to his rescue. Grace Manley comes with them. The crooks overpowered, Grace rushes to her lover. Freda, realizing that her place has been filled by another, goes silently away.

A BOLD IMPERSONATION (Two Parts—Aug. 28).—Count Rene Reviere, a bankrupt Royalist, makes a bargain with the Duc de Mauriere that Raoul, the dissolute son of the latter, shall marry Louise, Raciere's daughter, if the Duke will loan him money enough to retrieve his estate. Boceni, a young Italian, an unselfish lover of the girl, promises to help her escape. At a performance of "Romeo and Juliette," Louise and Hawksford, the English actor, who plays the enamoured Montague, fall in love. Hawksford meets the girl through Boceni, and, learning of her plight, plots to disguise himself and impersonate the Italian at the engagement banquet of Louise and Raoul. During the feast, Raoul picks a quarrel with the actor, who, he supposes, is Boceni. In the ensuing duel, Hawksford is wounded. Louise seizes the sword, and before she can be restrained, she has given Raoul a mortal thrust. The lovers escape on horseback, pursued by the vengeful duke. Louise leaps from her horse into the sea. Hawksford follows her, and they swim in safety to Boceni's yacht, where they are married.

FAREWELL TO THEE (Aug. 23).—Louise Fallows learns that Phil Brooks, an old admirer of hers, since gone to Hawaii, has fallen heir to a fortune in the United States. She goes, with Jackson, her partner in dishonesty, to trace Brooks and cheat him out of his legacy. Arriving in Hawaii, Louise finds Brooks married to Ana, a native woman. The adventuress bribes a witch of the island to terrorize Ana into believing that her husband will die if he stays in Hawaii, and if she continues to be his wife. The native girl, convinced of the truth of the soothsayer, gives up Brooks and disappears. He returns to the States to claim his fortune, Louise with him. For a few weeks, the little Hawaiian wife is forgotten. Then, one day, the American hears Louise playing on her guitar "Aloha-Oe," the Hawaiian song, "Farewell to Thee." She is entertaining Jackson in secret. Brooks forces from Louise a confession, and returns to the Islands, where Ana welcomes and forgives him.

THE LITTLE LUMBER-JACK (Two Parts—Aug. 21).—Paul, a homeless boy, is the mascot of Great Cedar Camp. He forms a friendship with Mildred, the beautiful little daughter of Mr. Edgar, owner of the camp, who has a refining influence upon the untaught boy, and, in his turn, he teaches Mildred woodcraft. Edgar is not a favorite among his men. Two lumberjacks, intending to hold Mildred for ransom, kidnap her and carry her into the mountains. Following Paul's instructions, she manages to mark the trail, so that the boy, following with a rescue party, is able to guide the others to the spot where the little girl is held captive. Mr. Edgar improves unjust conditions in the camp and provides for Paul's education.

FOR HIS PAL (Aug. 30).—Jim and Jo were pals in the gold fields. They stake the same claim, and Jim's wife, Priscilla, comes on from the East to join her husband. Then it is discovered that Priscilla is an old sweetheart of Jo's. Jealousy begins to creep in between the two pals. Ling Hung Foo, the Chinese cook, outrages Priscilla's housewifely ideals, and she discharges him. Jo chances to be in the cabin. Ling takes his revenge by bolting the door on them, and telling Jim that his partner is making love to his wife. Jim returns to the house, finds Jo and Priscilla locked into a room together, and is overcome with rage. Jo makes it appear that he was trying to rob Jim of his nuggets and that Jim's wife is holding him up. The ruse breaks the friendship between the pals, but it saves the woman's honor. Long afterwards, Ling, dying, confesses to Jim that he lied.

MAJESTIC.

BILLY GOAT (August 3).—Dan's father, who is president of his lodge, has a goat delivered at his house for the initiation to take place that evening. Dan hitches the goat to the baby carriage and goes for a drive. On the boulevard he meets Billy, who is taking Mae for a drive in his pony cart. Mae is disdainful. While she and her escort are in an ice cream parlor, Dan unhitches the pony and leads it away. When Billy and Mae reappear, they are sadly upset by the loss of the pony. Dan offers to take Mae home in his goat cart. She accepts gratefully. Going down hill, the goat becomes unmanageable. Mae is spilled in the dirt, and Billy, who meanwhile has given chase in a burro outfit, again wins the fair lady away from his rival. Dan determines to get even. He plans to hold a lodge initiation patterned on the one he has heard the grown-ups talk about. That evening the affair comes off, and Billy is made the "goat" of the occasion. Billy and his father arrive home from their respective lodge initiations much battered up. They solemnly give each other the lodge high sign, and discreetly separate.

THE KINSHIP OF COURAGE (Two Reels—August 15).—Carlos Dunning is the lawless son of the most famous law-maker the state of Arizona ever had. At last he meets Olive Temple. He resolves to behave himself. But his old associates in the West will not let him alone. Dunning goes to New York to begin life over again. There he once more meets Olive. The shadow of an old disgrace, however, falls between the two young people, and Dunning is about to give up his fight to live an honest life. But the cloud is dissipated as suddenly as it came, and the Arizonan and his sweetheart are happily married.

PROVIDENCE AND THE TWINS (August 17).—Abagail Dean, a sweet maiden lady, is tricked by Caleb Lacey, an old lover, into an agreement to marry him secretly and to invest all her small fortune in a pretended business deal in which he says he is interested. Just in the nick of time the twins are sent to stay with their Aunt Abagail. They are instantly suspicious of Caleb. They exchange the money in the bag which their aunt gives her deceiver for paper dolls, and when the old ne'er-do-well and spendthrift tries to pay some back debts with the contents of the bag, paper dolls not being negotiable, he goes to jail. Abagail tearfully celebrates her narrow escape.

THE ROOT OF ALL EVIL (August 20).—On the thirtieth anniversary of their wedding, Farmer Billings and Nancy, his wife, are presented with a check for $10,000 apiece. The checks are the gift of a philanthropist who has offered a prize for the happiest married couple in Nevada. When they get home the old pair quarrel. Mother Billings, now financially independent, wishes to adopt a pet pig, like Mrs. Vanderslip in the society columns—and Farmer Billings objects. He brings Toothless Thompson, his friend, and justice of the peace, to the house to arrange about a divorce. Mother Billings compels them to beat a hasty retreat at the point of a Colt 45. However, the divorce is secured. The farmer and his wife live apart in a double house on a ranch. Billings advertises for a housekeeper. Circus Kelly, a fakir, and his woman pal take advantage of the ad to get the old man's money. Mother Billings finds out just in time what the two frauds are putting over on her former husband. She goes to his rescue. Billings realizes that Nancy is indeed his one and only soul mate. He decides to make her happy. So he restores the pet pig to her lap, differences are forgotten, and the old couple once more come into their title as the happiest married pair in Nevada.

THE FATAL HOUR (Two Parts—Aug. 22).—Hilliary Clark, gem expert, is robbed of a valuable package of diamonds by his son, Edgar, and Edgar's crook accomplices. Walter, old Mr. Clark's favorite son, quarrels with Edgar, and his father takes away his revolver, emptying it of the shells, and letting them lie on his library table. The quarrel has grown out of an insult offered by Edgar to Walter's wife, Helen, and has no connection with the former's dual life of crime, which neither his father nor brother suspects. At noon that same day, Walter, entering the library, discovers his father dead in his chair. He opens the safe, finds the diamonds gone, and concludes that Clark has been robbed and murdered. Just then Edgar passes through the hall. Walter fires through the curtains at the supposed burglar. Edgar, unhurt, slips the diamonds into the pocket of his brother's coat, hanging in the hall, and rushes out for a policeman. Walter is found, the smoking revolver in his hand, the safe door open, his father dead, and the gems in his overcoat pocket. Both brothers are taken to jail. Helen secures a detective who finds, in addition to the exploded cartridge in the gun, a second shell on the floor. He also points out an imprint of the end of this shell on the surface of the mahogany bookcase opposite Clark's desk. The detective explains how the noon sun, focused on the cartridge, and refracted through the lenses of a pair of spectacles on the desk, has fired the bullet. Walter is released. Later, Edgar's guilt is uncovered, and he is sentenced to prison.

THE LITTLE CUPIDS (Aug. 24).—Dick and Mary quarrel and break their engagement. Each, unknown to the other, decides to go on a sea voyage to soothe their wounded feelings. They book passage on the same steamer. After the ship has sailed, the former lovers become aware of one another's presence, but they hold haughtily aloof. Dick's small brother, Georgie, and Mary's little sister, Carmen, who have been taken along, are squelched in their innocent desires to play together. Dan, the cabin boy, soon is "on" to the situation. He constitutes himself Cupid, and cajoles a jolly curate into bringing about the marriage of the reunited lovers. All ends happily, thanks to Dan, for both the grown-ups and the youngsters.

A CHILD OF THE SURF (Two Parts—Aug. 29).—Robert, son of a rich contractor, falls in love with Nancy, who lives with Grandfather Tom Darrell in a small fishing village. Grandfather Tom is so bitter against "city folks" that the young man disguises himself as one of his own laborers on the jetty. Robert discovers that the fisher people are in open revolt against the construction of the jetty. Although it is for the protection of their homes, it inevitably will cut off some of their fishing privileges. Young Dacey does some daring detective work to safeguard his father's interests. This also leads him into a position to save Nancy from the compromising attentions of a fellow of evil reputation. Grandfather Tom, on learning Robert's identity, does not oppose his marriage with Nancy.

AMERICAN.

THE JILT (Two Parts—Aug. 16).—Roy Norman and Marie Thompson are betrothed. Then Boyd, a friend of Roy's, comes. He and Marie are mutually attracted. At length Marie gives Roy back the engagement ring which he had given her. Marie's parents set out for the opera. Marie feigns a headache and stays home. She dismisses her maid early, for she is expecting a caller. Roy Norman comes but he is not the man she expected. Roy leaves as Boyd bounds up the steps. Surreptitiously he peeks in a window. He sees Marie accepting the embraces of the favored caller. As Norman leaves he encounters Marie's parents, who have returned since the prima donna was too ill to make a stage appearance. The Thompsons find their daughter feigning illness on a couch. A quick movement and Marie's father discovers Allan hidden behind the portieres. Allen is ordered from the home.

Months later Allan is visited by Dr. Boyd, his brother, who tells Allan that Marie has been a patient in an eastern hospital and that a baby has been born. He gives to Allan a copy of a statement the girl has made in which the father of the baby was named. A year later Allan marries. He and his happy bride have just returned from their honeymoon. He has forgotten Marie. She, however, has not forgotten him, and she calls upon his wife, whom she tells that Allan once loved and then jilted her. The young bride swoons. Allan returns. Finds Marie's card, and at once all is clear to him. That evening Allan decides to act. He summons Roy and together they visit Marie. There Allan reveals the copy of Marie's statement which his doctor brother had given him. Marie, thus confronted, admits Allan's innocence. It is Roy, not Allan, who is the father of her child. Marie writes to Allan's bride admitting the falsity of her charges. She adds, too, that she and her infant's father are to be wedded next day.

THE ASSAYER OF LONE GAP (Aug. 18).—Ned Evans comes to Lone Gap, having purchased an interest in an assay firm. He is a cheery, good natured chap, but he is obsessed by a terrible and unconquerable fear of a gun. The fear is due to a parental impression upon the highly sensitive mother. Before Ned was born an armed burglar entered the home. The mother's terror was imprinted in the heart of the unborn babe. Ned's weakness is known and the cowboys of Long Gap have much sport at his expense. He meets Belle Dugan, who has come to attend her injured aunt. The two (Ned and Belle) are fast friends, until a cowboy's joke reveals to Belle Ned's uncontrollable fear.

Buck, in drink, proceeds to "shoot up" Long Gap. Every living creature flees from the drunken "puncher," who is shooting wildly and waving his gun. Around a corner the intoxicated man comes upon Belle and her crippled relative. He makes for them. A block away Ned sees what is transpiring. With a mighty impulse he throws aside his fear, and unarmed, he dashes at Buck. There is a struggle. Buck's gun explodes harmlessly in the air. A mighty blow from Ned's fist lays the cowboy low. He regains his feet. Another blow crashes home, and Buck is beaten. He picks himself up from the dust, sober and chagrined, yet man enough to extend his hand to the man who beat him. Belle and her aunt watch the fight with amazement. As the townsmen cheer Ned, Belle steals quickly up and places her hand in his.

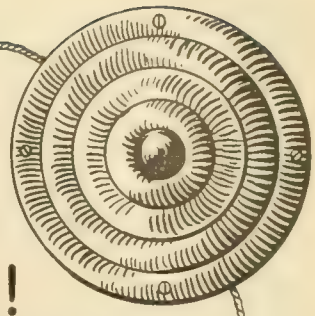
DRAWING THE LINE (Two Parts—Aug. 23).—Billy Home and Fred Harris both are in love with Edith. Billy's father was convicted of theft and Fred uses Billy's misfortune as a wedge to win his way into Edith's heart. Billy is given a chance assisting the village grocer. Fred causes his discharge by telling the tradesman of the short comings of Billy's father. Billy, driven to desperation, the next day rifles the grocer's till.

Six years later Billy is the owner of an underworld resort. Lulu, one of the demi-monde, enters. With her is an intoxicated man, who, much to Billy's amazement, is none other than

STANDARD PROGRAM

PRESS THIS BUTTON NEXT WEEK

AND GRAB YOUR TELEPHONE !



STANDARD PROGRAM RELEASES

EMPRESS PRESENTS _____ IN _____

PYRAMID PRESENTS _____ IN _____

RAINBOW PRESENTS _____ IN _____

IDEAL PRESENTS _____ IN _____

SUPERBA PRESENTS _____ IN _____

LARIAT PRESENTS _____ IN _____

MOONSTONE PRESENTS _____ IN _____

LUNA PRESENTS _____ IN _____

SUNSHINE PRESENTS _____ IN _____

MAGNET PRESENTS _____ IN _____

STANDARD PROGRAM EXCHANGES

NEW YORK _____ SYRACUSE _____ BOSTON _____ TORONTO _____ PHILADELPHIA _____

PITTSBURGH _____ WASHINGTON _____ CLEVELAND _____ DETROIT _____ CHICAGO _____

ST. LOUIS _____ KANSAS CITY _____ CINCINNATI _____ DALLAS _____ MINNEAPOLIS _____

DENVER _____ SALT LAKE _____ SAN FRANCISCO _____ LOS ANGELES _____ SEATTLE _____

STANDARD PROGRAM

WATCH FOR THE STARS AND THE PRODUCTIONS ON THE NEW STANDARD PROGRAM
YOU WILL WANT THEM IMMEDIATELY! —WATCH FOR YOUR NEAREST EXCHANGE
AND GRAB YOUR TELEPHONE !

STANDARD PHOTOPLAY DISTRIBUTORS INC.

ALBERT WARNER, PRESIDENT — AL LICHTMAN, VICE PRES. & GEN. MGR. — H. M. WARNER, SEC'Y & TREAS.

TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK.

Fred. Billy questions Lulu, and learns that Fred has been "going the pace." Fred drops a note which Billy finds. It is from Edith begging Fred to let her know why he doesn't write and why he does not visit her. Billy decides to visit Edith and tell her where Fred is and why he does not write.

At Edith's home he finds the girl gone blind. She told a pitiful story. Her father, an inventor, had died some years ago. Her legacy was her father's invention. Patent attorneys wrote Edith saying $300 would be needed to put the invention on the market. Edith had given Fred the money and he had gone to consult the attorneys. At intervals he wrote for more funds. At length Edith had been forced to take in sewing. The strain had been too much for her eyes—she became blind. As the blind girl talks a letter comes from the city, it is from Fred, who confesses all, but Billy, who reads the letter to Edith at her request, lies point blank to her, telling her that Fred has been ill and that you may expect him home in a month or so.

Billy leaves and as he does so meets the doctor, to whom he gives a bountiful supply of money, and instructions to do for Edith everything that can be done. Billy returns to the city, where he resolves to make Fred mend his ways. He causes Fred to be overpowered and placed in an improvised rural prison, where Fred must work hard and drink nothing but water. At length Fred is restored to his former state of sobriety and health. Billy tells him of Edith's misfortune. Then he takes from his pocket a roll of bills. To Fred he gives $1,000 and bids him return to Edith with the news that the invention is sold. Meanwhile science has triumphed. Edith's sight is restored. She and Fred are happy in each other's love but the man who made their happiness possible—Billy—turns back to the weary hum-drum of his life in the underworld.

MIXED WIRES (Aug. 27). John Smith, an insurance adjuster, leaves for a nearby town to adjust a loss. He tells Mrs. Smith that he will be home in a few days. John Smith, a traveling salesman, leaves for a short business trip. He also tells Mrs. Smith to expect him in a few days. John Smith, the salesman, wires his wife that he will be held up until the next day. John Smith, the adjuster, wires his wife that he will be home on the midnight express and to have a lunch ready for him.

The adjuster's message reaches the salesman's wife. She immediately prepares a lunch for him and waits for his coming. The salesman's message is delivered to the adjuster's wife, and, believing that her husband will not be in town until morning, she locks herself securely in the house and goes to bed. The adjuster arrives home and, to his surprise, his house is darkened. He tries to climb in a window and is arrested as a burglar.

Meanwhile the salesman's wife calls the station and is informed that John Smith is under arrest. She flies to the station and finds the John Smith in custody is not her husband. The police sergeant thinks she is "a nut," so she, too, is locked up. Next morning the salesman arrives home. He is astonished at his wife's absence. On the table he sees what looks like a mid-night lunch. Then comes a ring at the phone. His wife at the police station begs him to come and release her. The wife of the adjuster is also summoned by a similar message. The two couples meet at the police station and the tangle in Smiths is straightened out.

A QUESTION OF HONOR (Sept. 4).—Joe Wallace has been alone in the mountains for years when he reads of the annual banquet of the members of his old time club. He gets a craving for the city life and decides to sell his claim. In the city his daughter, Nellie, is in trouble. Her husband, deeply in debt has taken $2,000 from his employer, risked it on the stock market and lost. He is given until the 29th of that month to pay it back or go to jail. Meanwhile Joe finds a buyer for his claim—$1,000 is offered. Joe refuses to sign an option, but gives his word, promising to complete the deal at 4 o'clock on the evening of the 29th of that month.

A letter comes from Nellie telling of her trouble and her husband's guilty predicaments. Joe wishes he had $2,000 to give. Then from another man comes an offer of $2,000 for Joe's claim. The old miner is sorely tempted but he has given his word to another man. The train arrives and with it comes the man who was to buy Joe's claim for $1,000. He has not the money and pleads an extension of time. Joe refuses to grant the extension and hunts up the other buyer and sells the claim for $2,000. He wires the money east to his daughter. It arrives in the nick of time, just as Nellie's husband is being led, handcuffed, from the house. Joe's duty is done, and with its fulfillment, dies the longing for the city life. Willingly he hits the trail once more, again to seek his fortune in the hills.

BEAUTY.

LOVE AND LABOR (Aug. 14).—Pa goes to the country for a rest and takes his daughter, Dot with him to get away from her lover, Algy, of whom he does not approve. Pa finds the country is not so restful as he had hoped, and while working on the wood pile, also finds that he has not escaped from Dot's "city fellow." Pa routs the unwelcome guest, then goes back to his task. Alec, a country suitor of Dot's, turns up and Dot to get rid of him, persuades him that "Pa wants me to marry a worker." Alec proceeds at once to demonstrate the fact that he is a worker. Much to Pa's relief, Alec takes his place at the wood pile. Smart, another country admirer of Dot, turns up and he is also impressed with the importance of work, and proceeds to try to outdo Alec at the wood pile. Pa sees them at work and is filled with admiration. He tells Dot that either of them would make an admirable son-in-law. Dot fails to agree.

Pa finds that his country establishment has no means of keeping his beloved drinks cool, so he decides, much against his inclination, that he must dig a cellar. While Pa is at work Algy returns. Dot tells him the joke on Alec and Smart. This only fires him with a new ambition, and he tells Dot that he is going to prove to Pa that he can work in circles around the two rural boobs. Rushing to the cellar, Algy discards coat and cane and much to Pa's delight proceeds to show him how he can work. Pa steals back to enjoy his rest. Algy gets down to business and is shoveling for dear life, when he knocks the prop out from under the dirt roof and narrowly escapes alive. As he is recovering from the shock, Dot appears on the scene, and together they hatch a plot to leave his hat and coat near the cave-in to fool Pa. Algy and Dot make a hasty departure. Later Pa comes to see how the cellar is progressing and discovers Algy's hat and coat. He thinks Algy is buried alive. Frantically he rushes to the wood pile where Alec and Smart, nearly exhausted, are still competing with saw and axe. Pa tells them that the "derned dude" is buried alive, and the three frantically work to rescue the dude. In the midst of it Algy and Dot return and announce their marriage. Pa, relieved, that he has not a murder on his conscience, gives them his blessing.

THE HONEYMOONERS (Aug. 17).—John Warner, a wealthy young man, takes unto himself a bride. Together they leave for a quiet honeymoon at Westwater. Meanwhile Arthur Hicks, a shoe clerk, also has wedded. He and his bride on honeymoon bent also go to Westwater. Rhoda, John's bride, is possessed of a mischievious brother, who writes to friends in Westwater, describing his sister as a young woman carrying an alligator bag, and John a man with a yellow suitcase. Arthur, the shoe clerk, being low in funds, arranges that he work as a farm hand and his bride as a cook, to help defray expenses.

The train, bearing both couples, pulls into Westwater. Arthur and Stella stand around, while John and Rhoda deposit their luggage, seeking information at the station. There is a mix-up. John and Rhoda's friends bundle Arthur and Stella into a waiting automobile. Then Farmer Frells, for whom Arthur and Stella were to work, insist that John and Rhoda come with him. The tangle is complete. Neither couple can convince their captors of the great mistake. At length in sheer desperation, each pair become resigned to fate. Complications of all sorts ensue. Rhoda goes canoeing; the frail craft capsizes. Arthur proves himself a hero and saves the imperiled girl. By his act a fast friendship between the two couples is formed and at length the apparently hopeless snarl is untangled.

WHAT'S IN A NAME (Aug. 21).—Alderman Coyle Shea takes an afternoon off and goes fishing. He is rather old fashioned in his ideas of angling, and views with contempt the elaborate and complicated paraphernalia displayed by a young man whom he runs across at the brook. A sinker and a cheap line attached to a pole is good enough for Shea, but after he hooks and loses a fish, and sees the young man land a two-pounder with ease, he gets interested in a rod and line. The young man obligingly gives him a lesson. Just as Shea lands a good big one they are surprised by Dave Higgins and his hired man, who have crept unobserved and removed a pile of brush from a sign forbidding fishing on the grounds. They propose to haul Shea and the young man before the local justice for a trespass fine, but the young man sees through the sign trick and when Higgins proposes to let them off for $10 each, he flashes the "stand by" signal to Shea and proceeds to dump the farmers into the creek. Shea and the young man make good their escape.

Shea brags about the fish at home until his wife and daughter, Aileen, are weary. A box of roses arrives and furnishes a diversion. Shea insists on seeing the card accompanying the box, and finds that one, P. Wadlington Burke is the donor. Inquiry reveals that P. Wadlington is an admirer of Aileen. Shea announces that no man of that name can gain his favor. That evening he elaborates on his fish story at Dinty's place. Later he returns home and hears a suspicious sounding smack on the veranda. He makes his wife admit that P. Wadlington is the caller, and he immediately lifts the concealing curtain, revealing P. Wadlington and Aileen.

Shea is dumfounded when P. Wadlington turns out to be the young man of the brook. Then Burke explains that the "P" in his name stands for Patrick. Shea decides that "Pat Burke" is welcome into the family.

HIS MYSTERIOUS PROFESSION (Aug. 24).—Tom Blake is a star pitcher. An old ball player who knows the "ropes" advises Tom to save his money. He is told to cut out the gay hotel life and seek a good boarding house where he can get good food and plenty of sleep. Tom meets Cynthia Hodges and arranges to take a room at the home of her aunts, Priscilla and Angela. During the first meal, Tom learns that the aunts are terribly set against baseball, so he decides to keep his profession secret. While tidying up his room the aunts discover a pair of spiked baseball shoes. They come to the conclusion that their new roomer is a porch climber, for surely those are porch climber's shoes.

The parson calls. He professes ignorance as to the shoes and a stick of hickory found in Tom's room. They ask Tom his profession. He says he is a pipe organ salesman. Then Cynthia's brother, Bob, returns from his vacation. Cynthia, who is in on Tom's deception, takes Bob into her confidence. The aunts decide that Tom must go. Bob promises to fix things up. By a master stroke, Bob induces the aunts to go to the ball game. They are surprised to see the parson in the bleachers; surprised still more when they see their pipe organ salesman performing on the pitcher's mound. First time up Tom wallops a home run. The baseball bug bites the maiden aunts. They are proud, rather than ashamed, now of the man who boarded with them. Meanwhile Blake and Cynthia have fallen in love. Blake declares himself and is accepted.

KAY-BEE.

OVER SECRET WIRES (Two Parts—August 13).—Amos Dyer receives word from Washington that there are wireless messages being transmitted from a point in Oregon to foreign battleships off the Pacific Coast. Dyer, the Secret Service representative on the Coast, sets out with his assistant, Calhoun. He arrives, assumes the disguise of an invalid being wheeled about in a chair by his assistant and interviews the regular wireless operator at that point. The suspicions of the Secret Service Department are verified. Dyer writes to a large electrical supply house in Portland and learns that a powerful radio equipment has been sold to Ralph Bell, an artist. Dyer sets out to visit Bell, who is engaged in painting the ruins of the Mission of Santa Rosa to cover his real occupation, that of British secret service agent Dyer and his assistant gain admittance to the Mission, interview Bell, whose suspicions are lulled by the invalid appearance of Dyer. Dyer goes into the town of the Mission but he is unable to find any incriminating evidence, as Bell has his apparatus carefully concealed.

A few nights later Dyer and Calhoun from the window of their bedroom in the hotel see a suspicious light in the tower, and set out to investigate. Bell meanwhile is busy in the tower transmitting messages to British fleet off the coast and a naval engagement takes place in which the Germans are defeated. Dyer and his man arrive at the tower and Dyer climbs the vines. As Dyer is about to take Bell into custody the man is struck by a bolt of lightning and killed while the wireless apparatus is entirely demolished.

BRONCHO.

THE GIRL FROM THE EAST (Two Parts—August 18).—Edna Benson is left an orphan in an Eastern city. She finds herself nearly penniless. John Benson, her uncle, who owns a desert ranch, writes her to come West and encloses her expense money. Benson's ranch lies some ten miles from the railroad through a desert country. On the morning of Edna's expected arrival Benson drives over. The girl has missed her train. The night previous the citizens of Mesa, a small desert town some thirty miles from Benson's ranch, have grown tired of a series of shooting affrays and have organized a vigiliance committee. Corse Hazard, a crooked gambler, kills one of his customers in a fair fight, and immediately the vigilantes warn Corse to leave town, giving him twenty-four hours to make preparations. Corse Hazard leaves Mesa outfitted for the desert the same morning that Edna misses her train at the junction. He steers a leisurely course for another mining camp beyond the Benson ranch. Edna reaches Cerro at five o'clock in the evening. The train crew try to persuade her to go on to the next station, but she is confident that Benson will meet the train. Hazard goes into camp some twenty miles out of Mesa for the night. The girl spends a night of terror in the lonely deserted flag station. The following morning at dawn she strikes out for the ranch afoot. That morning Bradin, a road agent, his horse having cast a shoe, flirts with death by going at dawn into Mesa to have the blacksmith reshoe his horse. He is seen by the sheriff, who collects a posse and tries to arrest him, but Bradin escapes into the desert in a

Ready About August 16th

"A Thousand Heart Throbs and a Smile for Every Tear"

York State Folks

In Five Parts. Produced by Harry Jackson with

James Lackaye

Ray L. Royce

Sadie: "Uncle Myron, what makes all stories commence—once upon a time?"

A Perfect Picturization of a Beautiful Play

Magnificent Production and a Distinguished Cast

Elaborate Line of Pictorial Printing

Prompt and Careful Attention to all Inquiries

Are you on the job?—Then write or call NOW

The Dra-ko Film Co., Inc.

Geo. C. Wilson, Pres.

Studios: Tappan, N. Y.

Commercial Trust Bldg., 1451 Broadway, New York

running battle. Edna is lost in the desert. She sights Hazard approaching and signals him. He sees the girl is helpless and defenseless and tells her that he is one of the Benson's men and he will take her to the ranch. Instead he takes her to a deserted desert shack near the Benson ranch. The girl battles with him. Jim Brandin's horse falls nearby and Brandin makes his way to the shack as a place of refuge from the sheriff's posse. Brandin is just in time to save Edna. A moment later the posse arrives and capture Brandin. The sheriff resolves to spend the night at Benson's ranch. That night while the sheriff sleeps Edna steals his handcuff key and frees Brandin in gratitude for what he has done for her. A week later she gets a letter from him telling that he has reformed, etc.

MUTUAL.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 31 (August 5).—Cowboys at Prescott, Arizona, re-enact wild west stunts during frontier days celebration.

B. P. O. Elks are cheered by great Los Angeles crowds as the order marches in gay parade at annual convention.

Canadian contingent leaves Winnipeg for the front.

San Francisco, Cal.—The schooner "Hardy," after being rammed by the S. S. "Shasta," is run ashore on Golden Gate Beach.

Prominent film stars and "movie" magnates attend fifth annual convention in San Francisco.

Five hundred thousand cheering San Franciscans welcome the old Liberty Bell as it ends its triumphant journey across the continent.

Members of Boston's Chamber of Commerce have a big playday with much frolic and fun.

Miss Jane Adams and Miss Lillian D. Wahl visit President Wilson at the White House and give him a report on the Peace Conference at the Hague.

Submarines for England's navy are launched at Quincy, Mass.

Our new Secretary of State, R. Lansing, arriving at the State Department, Washington, D. C.

With the sea nymphs at New York's gay beaches during the hot spells of summer.

Waterloo Day.—Field Marshall Lord Greenfell inspects cadets at Wellington College.

The Irish Derby.—A fine race won by "Ballaghtobin."

Latest war pictures by courtesy of Union of French Cinematograph manufacturers. Subtitles: Trophies captured at Berthonval. Field mass for French troops. At the left may be seen a cannon captured from the Germans. Type of deadly gas projector used by the Germans.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 32 (Aug. 12).

Chicago's "Black Wednesday."—The city weeps as cortege of trucks and wagons bear coffins of the "Eastland" disaster victims to their graves. Subtitle—Secretary Wm. C. Redfield, who is conducting the government investigation.

500,000 barrels of oil go up in smoke when tank is struck by lightning near Tulsa, Okla.

The "Finland" sails from New York with Harvard Alumni, bound for the San Francisco Exposition.

Theodore Roosevelt arrives at San Francisco to deliver his famous "Chinafy America" speech.

Jack Ness, champion Coast Leaguer, beats Ty Cobb's record for safe hits in 49 consecutive games.

Beautiful horses win blue ribbons at the Long Branch, N. J., horse show.

Children of Rochester, N. Y., hold a fairy pageant.

Ruben Brown and his rooster companion arrive at Washington, D. C., on globe circling trip.

President Wilson and Secretary Lansing call Pan-American conference to pacify Mexico.

A trans-continental relay race starts from Washington, D. C., and ends at San Francisco, Cal., demonstrating the utility of the motorcycle for quick messenger service in war times. Subtitles—Assistant Secretary of War Breckenridge delivers the message to first relay team, at Washington. The riders arrive in New York and a fresh team takes up the grind. 14th relay team, Sterling, Ill., to Chicago, at Chicago. The riders arrive in San Francisco and deliver the message to transportation chief, B. H. Henderson. 117 motorcycles in 39 relays completed the journey in 119 hours, total distance, 3,584 miles.

Latest War Pictures. Arrival of a squad of German prisoners. In passing before the French generals, the Germans instinctively fall into the "goose step." Their examination. Photographs of their wives and children are returned to them.

CUB

THE LITTLE HERO (Aug. 19).—Jerry, in a quarrel with a policeman, is rescued from a pummeling by kindly old Col. Smilax, who witnesses his plight and pleads for his release. He then takes Jerry to his home and introduces him to his family. His daughter, the head of an amateur theatrical society, recognizes in Jerry the very type required for a part in a play which they are to produce, and prevails upon the director to enroll his services. At rehearsals Jerry is the center of attraction but particularly so in the case of an angular old maid who is quite effusive in expressing her regard for Jerry and his accomplishments.

On the night of the performance the house is crowded. Jerry is stricken with stage fright, much to the delight of the audience, whom a policeman attempts to silence by mounting the stage and addressing them. Jerry has a natural antipathy for policemen, and the actions of this particular one being especially displeasing, he gives vent to his feelings with the result that the officer lands heavily in the drum head. Jerry's fellow players, in their efforts to straighten out matters, turn the stage into a scene of unrehearsed excitement, which is quelled only when officers take Jerry to a safe cell in the station.

JERRY'S BUSY DAY (Aug. 26).—Father disapproves of Jerry's attentions to his daughter, his choice being a dapper youth for whom daughter cares not, and when he finds the young couple engaged in a spooning bee, he expresses himself rather forcibly on the point of his wishes. But Jerry is not to be turned away so lightly and when father, daughter and the favored suitor go automobiling Jerry goes along undetected by hiding under the front seat. Two policemen decide to take a little dip. So do father and his protege. Jerry, coming from his hiding place, suggests a ride in a rowboat with daughter. But a policeman decides otherwise and Jerry is left ashore—alone. Disappointed, he wanders through the brush surrounding the lake. He stumbles across the clothes which father and Jerry's rival have divested and left unguarded. These he picks up and drops in father's auto standing nearby. Two tramps beg him for alms. His sympathies touched Jerry not only gives them father's wallet but the two bathers' raiment and besides, invites them to call at father's home promising them a job in father's bank.

Again going through the brush Jerry spies the discarded uniforms of the swimming officers. He has a happy idea. Gathering up the uniforms he carries the bundle away to the spot where father's and the lover's clothes were hidden. Then retracing his steps he takes the old rags left behind by the tramps in favor of the superior outfit of father and his companion and places them in the spot where he found the officers' uniforms. When the bathers come from the water they are amazed at the costumes before them. There being no alternative father and friend make the best of the officers' uniforms, while the officers clad themselves in the tramps' patches. Coming upon the policemen Jerry explains that father and friend are the guilty men and they lose no time in rounding up and sending the two innocent ones to jail.

Meanwhile Jerry goes to father's home. The tramps call. Jerry wines and dines them. In jail father and his friend are bemoaning their fate when a friend, who is visiting the prison, recognizes them and explains matters to the desk sergeant, who releases them. Arriving home they find Jerry and the tramps in the midst of an hilarious session, which is soon stopped and the disturbers turned over to the authorities. Needless to say Jerry's prospects for daughter's hand are at an end.

KOMIC.

FAITHFUL TO THE FINISH (Aug. 22).—Colonel Boom has valuable fortification plans locked in his desk. Two spies are trying to lay hands on the papers. The spies overhear Fay, Boom's stenographer, rejoicing in the fact that the millionaire aunt has just died, leaving her a fortune, and that now she is free to give up her job and marry Ed, the bookkeeper. Lieutenant Schnide, one of the conspirators, determines to win the heiress for himself. He puts over a game on Ed, which causes Fay to break their engagement. Then he and his pal go after the plans. They are discovered, however, by Bobby, the office boy, who notifies Colonel Boom. The villains are arrested, Fay learns of Schnide's perfidy, and she and Ed are reconciled.

KEYSTONE.

A LOVER'S LOST CONTROL (Two Parts—Aug. 2).—Gussle and his wife go shopping. While Gussle's wife is trying on a suit, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis enter. Gussle starts a flirtation with Mrs. Lewis. Lewis wanders to another part of the store, and Mrs. Lewis discovers that she has no money with which to pay for her purchases. Gussle comes gallantly to her rescue. He and Mrs. Lewis leave the store together, get into an auto and drive away. Mrs. Gussle and Lewis pursue them in another car. A wild ride takes the wrongly assorted couples over the mountains and across the gullies—till at last one of the machines goes over a precipice and is smashed into a thousand pieces. A minute later the other car drops off a pier into the ocean and floats out to sea, its inmates clinging on like barnacles.

A RASCAL'S WOLFISH WAY (Two Parts—Aug. 9).—Arling, master crook, reads an announcement of a reception given by Mae, rich merchant's daughter, and resolves that he and his gang will get her jewels which she is to wear. At the reception, Mae receives attentions from her lover, Fritz, but falls in love with Arling. Arling and his gang spirit Fritz away and send Mae to rescue him. Mae, coming to his assistance, is met by Fritz with a gun in his hand demanding her jewels, a thing which he is forced to do by the gang hidden in bushes. Mae delivers the jewels and returns to the house to give warning, while Arling orders the gang to take Fritz to their underground den.

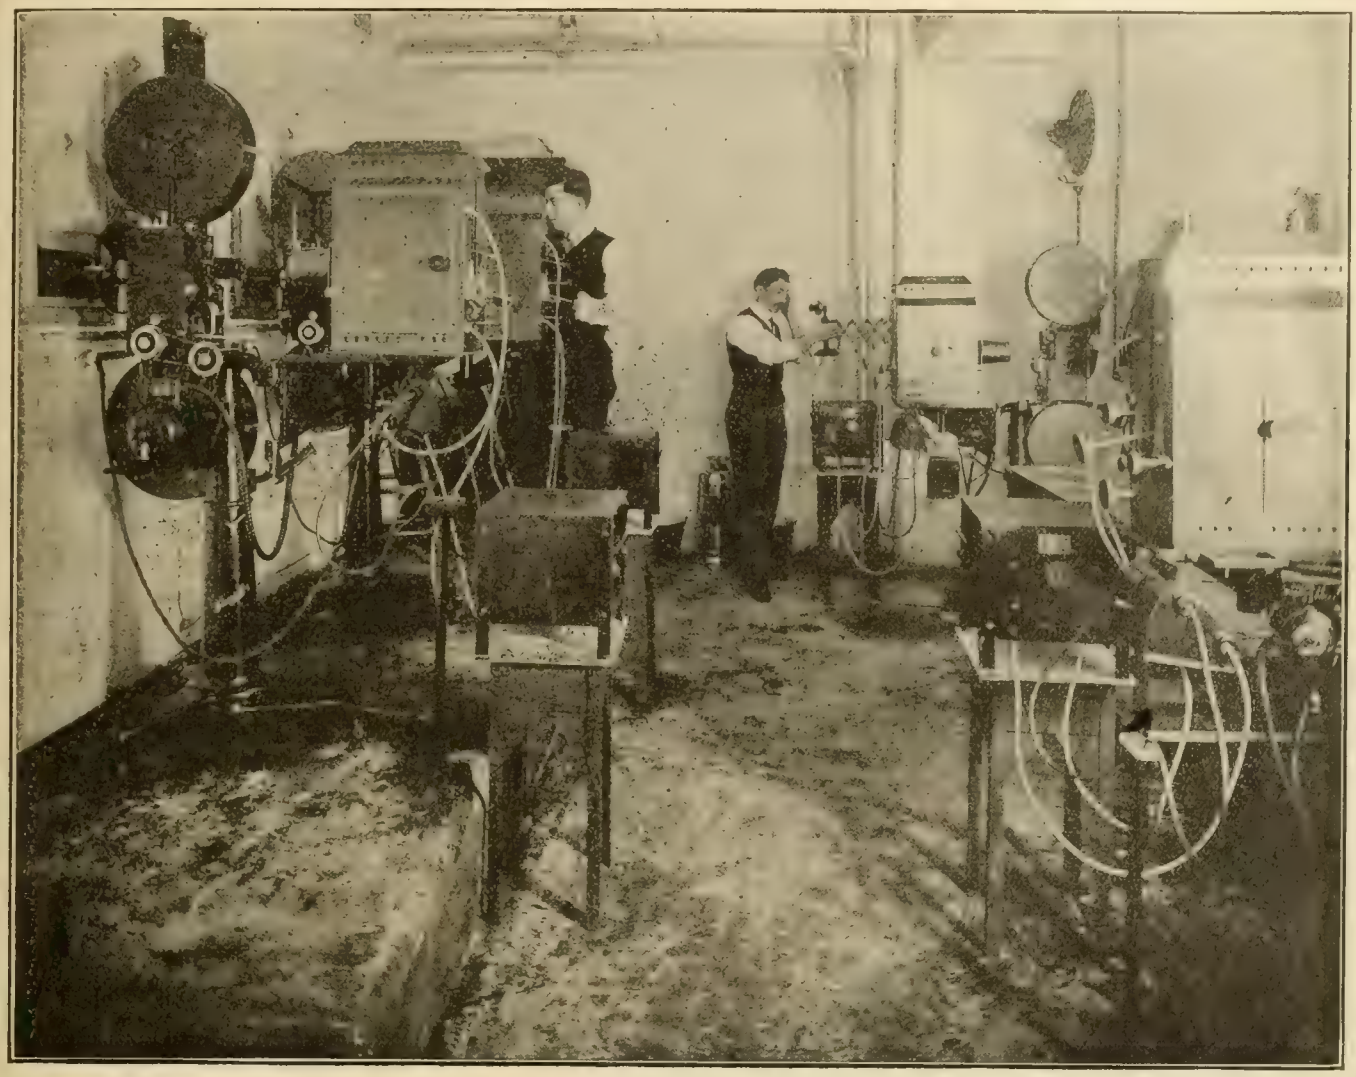
Mae's father, in going to the police station, is thrown into a cave of the gang. The father, who suspected Fritz of being the thief, is now convinced, but Fritz explains matters. The father escapes and returns to the house with the police. As they arrive, Arling escapes, followed by the father and police and later by Mae. Arriving at the cave, Arling informs the gang to climb the ladder into the now deserted police station. The pursuers enter the cave and a spring door locks on them whereupon the gang in the police station proceed to flood the cave. Mae, arriving, enters the cave and sees the water coming through cracks in the door. She is frantically hammering at the door when it breaks from the water pressure, and the police and her father are washed down a long tunnel while Mae is left helpless.

Arling and his gang are meanwhile initiating Fritz into their secrets. Fritz refuses to join them and they decide to tie him to the rails, while Arling will get a locomotive and by means of a rocket will give warning when to start. Mae, making her way out of the tunnel, meets Arling, who explains their intentions towards her lover. She pleads vainly, then rushes to her father and the police for aid. The gang have taken the police auto on their trip to tie Fritz and as Mae dashes to the station for help, the rocket is seen in the sky. Mae enters a racing car and starts for her lover, while her father and the police follow in an aeroplane. As the locomotive is about to cut Fritz to bits, a drawbridge is raised by Mae and the locomotive with Arling in it dashes off the end of the bridge into the water. Fritz is released while the girl who saved his life offers him her hand.

THE BATTLE OF AMBROSE AND WALRUS (Two Parts—Aug. 16).—Dora, daughter of insurrecto General Bernard, brings his lunch to camp and falls in love with Capt. Swain, but Conklin, Bernard's orderly, is also trying to win her affections. Conklin places important papers which he takes from the general's table into Swain's boot, causing much trouble when the general misses them and catches Swain making love to his daughter. Conklin swears he saw Swain steal the papers and the general gives him a body-guard and sends him to arrest Swain. Conklin approaches Swain, removes the papers from his boot, and, after a fight, Swain is dragged to the guard-house. The general, on learning that the papers have been found on Swain, orders him shot much to Conklin's delight. Dora, overhearing the order for her sweetheart's execution, grabs a cloak and runs to the guard-house, followed by Conklin, who tries to sympathize and makes love at the same time. Dora spurns him, hastens to the guard-house and changes clothes with Swain, who makes his escape disguised as a girl.

Conklin, seeking revenge, decides to chloroform the girl as she comes out of the guard-house and as Swain, disguised, comes out Conklin follows him and while trying to chloroform him Swain realizes the situation and thoroughly thrashes Conklin. The girl is taken from the guard-house, placed on the brink of a grave recently dug and a firing squad is given orders. After the beating Conklin confesses his plans to Swain, who grabs Conklin by the neck and dashes to Dora's rescue. He arrives just in time. Dora is released and Conklin put in her place ready to be shot. The order is given, Conklin dodges the bullets. He jumps backward into the grave, throws up the breast-works and with guns, which he finds in the grave, scatters the whole staff and escapes. Returning later, he kidnaps Dora, tieing her behind a target, which is about to be used for practice by Swain and his men.

Conklin hides. Swain, being a poor shot with a cannon, shoots a tree from under Conklin and, after shooting through the target several times, looks through glasses and sees Dora's predicament. While Swain and his men are releasing Dora, Conklin runs to the cannon and starts firing at them. During this gun fire, Conklin creates consternation by blowing up hillsides, farm houses, cattle, etc., and finally takes refuge behind a well where he is perceived by the general and his army. After all the ammunition is gone the general enters Conklin's fortification and ends his career with a large brick, thereby adding another medal to his large collection.



OPERATING ROOM OF PATHE FILM EXCHANGE, DESIGNED BY CHIEF OPERATOR MOVINO S. FREJMANN

Pathe Film Exchange Operator Uses Four Simplex Machines in His Operating Room. Considers Simplex Machines the Best Made Here or Abroad.

Pathe Film Exchange, Inc.
25 West 45th Street

Precision Machine Co.,
New York City, N. Y.

New York, N. Y., July 30th, 1915.

Dear Sirs:

I have been in the motion picture business for the past ten years and have traveled all around the world. Have been in charge of a circuit of twelve theatres as chief operator and electrician and also with film manufacturers. Among the machines which I have operated, and I have operated machines of every make, both foreign and American, I have found the Simplex machine to be the most noiseless, the steadiest and the strongest machine for wear.

I recommend the Simplex machine as being the best machine on the market for giving good results. I am at present using four of them in my projection rooms and cannot praise them enough.

Wishing you every success, I am
(Signed)

Very truly yours,
MOVINO S. FREJMANN,
Chief Operator and Electrician

Simplex
TRADE MARK REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

THE PROJECTOR THAT RECEIVED THE UNANIMOUS APPROVAL OF THE U. S. GOVERNMENT WAR DEPARTMENT.

SEND FOR CATALOG A.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St··· New York

DOMINO.

THE LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER'S SON (Two Parts—Aug. 19).—Owen Hanby the son of the lighthouse keeper, loves Mary Sanos, a beautiful girl in the fishing village. Mary, however, loses her heart to John Benson, an artist of the summer colony, marries him and goes back with him to the city. Soon Benson returns to his wild Bohemian life. Lote, a model of Benson's, whom he has wronged, resolves to be avenged. She entraps the artist and Yvette, a pretty French girl, in the studio and then sends for Mary. The young wife, her romance shattered, returns to her father. Owen believes that she still may be won back to himself, but Mary makes it clear to him that, despite what has happened, she loves only Benson. Some time later, when she is about to give birth to a child, Mary, dangerously ill and delirious, calls incessantly for her husband. The doctor tells Owen that her one chance of life lies in her seeing Benson. Owen seeks the artist in the city. Finding Benson unwilling, the islander forcibly kidnaps him. They start back in Owen's sloop. A heavy sea rises. The fury of wind and darkness increases. There is but one life preserver aboard, and this Owen forces upon Benson, compelling him to jump into the water. Benson reaches shore. Sobered by his tragic experience and by the other man's self-sacrifice, he seeks Mary. Fatherhood still further rouses the real man in him. He and Mary are reconciled.

FALSTAFF.

A MARVELOUS MARATHONER (Aug. 16).—The young business man knew nothing whatsoever about athletics, but he had the misfortune to fall in love with a girl whose father was one of the Olympian heroes of a generation or so ago. The old man, a widower, was very willing to give his daughter everything she wanted, but he insisted that when the time came for her to marry she select an athlete helpmeet. The business man only shone in athletics as a spectator, and if the truth must be told he was very much bored at such affairs. After they had attended one meet he made several efforts to propose to the young lady but something always intervened to prevent it. The following day he saw the young lady and her father in a taxicab in front of an office building. The father went into the building, leaving the girl alone in the machine. The young man saw his chance and hastily walked toward the taxi. He was interrupted, however, by becoming entangled in the chain of a pet dog, and did not notice, while apologizing to the wrathful owner of the animal, that the taxi had driven away and another one come up to take its place. The consequence was that when he leaped into the machine and breathlessly ejaculated "Darling will you be my wife," he was addressing a middle-aged spinster who received his proposal with rapture. He hastily got out of the machine and effaced himself, leaving the woman to mourn her loss.

He at last proposed to the right girl, was accepted, but her father declared he would not give his consent unless the young man won the Marathon which was to be held within a month. The suitor desperately accepted the task, and trained as best he could, but with sorrowful results. On the day of the race just before the start he was suddenly confronted by the spinster to whom he had proposed. She had seen his picture in a newspaper and came around to insist that he fulfill his promise to marry her. The young man was so scared by the sight of the unwelcome woman that he started off simultaneously with the starter's pistol, ran rings around everything on the course and made a new record for Marathoning. The spinster overtook him after the race, but fortunately transferred her affections to the girl's father, whom she recognized as an old suitor of years gone by.

So, in the end, everybody was happy, except the younger man, perhaps, because, you see, the spinster whom he feared would land him as her husband, in reality secured him as a son-in-law.

HELP! HELP! (Aug. 20).—The judge was a kindly hearted old man, but none of his neighbors regarded him as practical. He was absorbed in his books and his labor of expounding the law. Most of the families in the small town had more or less trouble in restraining help but the Judge's household ran on placidly, year after year, without change. His cook was a darky, and the best cook in town. His housekeeper was a competent business woman, his housemaid dainty and desirable, while the man who looked after the garden and ran his automobile was sober and industrious and never indulged in joy rides.

But still waters run deep and simplicity frequently covers guile. The judge never told anyone but on a certain occasion he was threatened with the loss of all his servants, yet without uttering a single plea he managed to retain them in his service. The housekeeper, it appeared, was secretly engaged to a man in Canada, and he was coming to claim her as his bride. The colored cook was married to a Pullman car porter, traveling West of Omaha, but he lost his job, returned to the Eastern town and decided that his wife should be the Goddess of his own home. The housemaid was observed receiving a diamond ring and the man-of-all work yielded to the temptation of a fat increase in salary and consented to become the speedy chauffeur of a millionaire auto maniac.

What did the judge do? With the eloquence with which he was gifted he induced the Pullman car porter to accept passage for Europe so that he could fight for the Belgians. The housemaid's sweetheart was a race track tout, and it was very simple to end the romance by sending the suitor up for vagrancy. A large busy policeman with a wicked eye and a hefty club met the housekeeper's fiance at the station and hoarsely whispered, "Beat it back to Canada, while the going's good." The man-of-all work did not take his job for the millionaire was arrested as a speed violator and the papers commented favorably when the Judge made an example in his case and sent him to prison for a brief term.

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES.

THE TOAST OF DEATH (New York Masterpicture Corporation—Four Parts—August 12).—Mlle. Poppea, of the Imperial Ballet, had fascinated all Calcutta. But most conspicuous among her devotees was Captain Drake, of the Royal Singapore Blues. It was not so generally known that Prince Yar Khan, of Her Majesty's Bengalese Dragoons, also was an ardent suitor of this Circe of the West.

Drake's and the dancer's infatuation was mutual. One evening, awaiting him Poppea sat before coil upon coil of Indian pearls. "To the fairest of the fair," read the card in the casket, "from her devoted slave, Yar Khan."

Captain Drake made his entrance. She was Drake's, she told the Englishman, and his alone. A few weeks later, Poppea held in her hand Yar Khan's letter of proposal. "He is a prince," she whispered to herself. "He is rich. Why not?"

Within the hour, Yar Khan rode away from their interview. Poppea and consented to marry him. And simultaneously in the perfumed, dim-curtained chamber of Poppea, Drake was demanding the meaning of the priceless, strange ring on her finger. As he learned the truth he turned away. For a moment she searched him with her great, lustrous eyes. Then, putting her face close to his, she whispered, "Need my marriage make any difference to us?"

After the honeymoon, Prince Yar Khan and his bride received their "mutual" friend many times at the palace. Drake came and went with the full confidence of Poppea's husband. Then, unexpectedly, the Prince was ordered south. Yar Khan was chagrined and sorrowful that he must take his bride into the sweltering southland

They had been gone about a month when, one day, Captain Drake was handed a letter. "And I'm sick of it," the letter concluded, "sick of the heat, the greasy natives, and being worshipped by a fool. If you don't come to me I shall go mad. Poppea."

The "mutual" friend, absent from the army at Calcutta on a plea of ill health, was made extraordinarily welcome by Prince Yar Khan.

Then, one morning, the Prince, entering his wife's room, saw on the candle-stand by her bed a heap of cigar ashes. The awakening was swift and terrible. True to the code of the Orient, he determined to work secretly. That evening he entrapped the lovers together. Placing a guard over them, Yar Khan retired to his study. He poured out two identical glasses of wine. Then, into one of these he dropped a quantity of arsenic. Poppea and Drake were led before him.

"One of these is harmless," he addressed the Englishman, "the other fatal. My wife will choose for you." At last she waveringly held out toward Drake one of the glasses. Ceremoniously, the two men drained the fatal toast. The Indian prince still stood, statue-like and smiling, when with a sudden, horrible writhe of his body, Drake fell over on the table, dead.

A YANKEE FROM THE WEST (Majestic—Four Parts—Aug. 19).—Billy Milford, Harvard graduate, goes West to seek his fortune. In Addertown he secures a position as station-master of the L. & R. Railroad, but is forced out because of his drinking habits. He accidentally meets Gunhild, an emigrant Norwegian girl, as she arrives in Addertown to take up her home with Jan Hagsberg, the town's saloonkeeper. Seeking revenge on the railroad, Milford joins Jim Dorsey in a scheme to hold up the road's paymaster on his way to pay the employees of the company's mine. The holdup is carried out successfully and the loot hidden under the floor of Milford's cabin. Dorsey later returns and steals it. Then he flees the town. Milford is accused of the theft, but a search of his cabin does not reveal the money and he is freed. Gunhild, confident of his innocence, pledges her love as Milford goes East to live down the past.

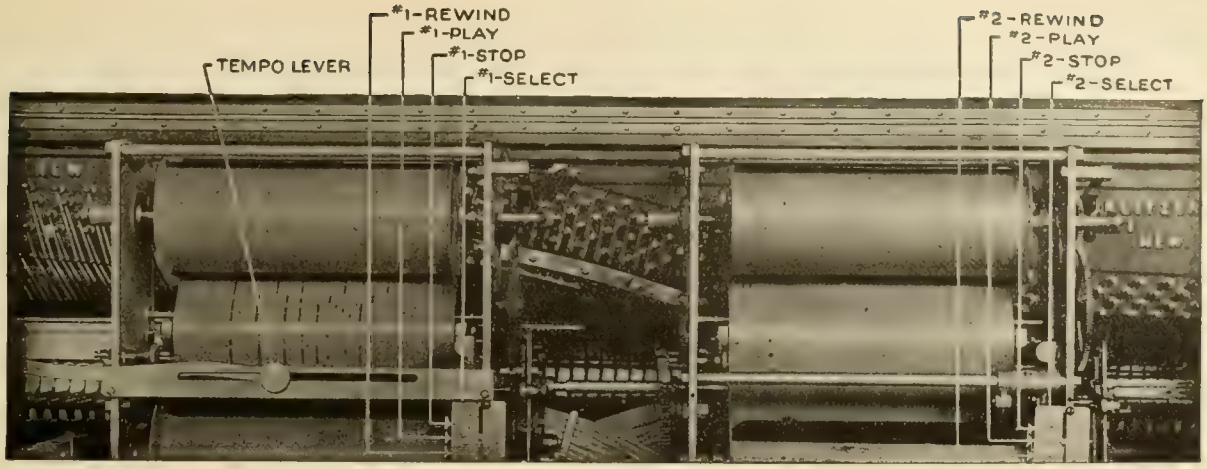
Two years later, Gunhild, employed as companion by a wealthy woman, arrives to spend the summer at a farm house adjoining the one operated by Milford. They meet by accident and their love is renewed. Dorsey, the strong man of a traveling show, reaches the town and insists upon forcing his attentions on Gunhild. Milford and Dorsey engage in a fistic encounter during which the latter is badly worsted. He leaves town that night. Having saved a large sum of money, Milford, accompanied by Gunhild, goes to the superintendent of the railroad and confesses his share in the holdup. Then he hands him the amount of money he had stolen from the paymaster. The superintendent, struck by Milford's honesty and the struggle he has made to make amends, gives the entire amount to Gunhild, now Milford's wife, as a wedding present. The two happy young persons then leave for parts unknown to begin life all over.

M. LECOQ (Thanhouser—Four Parts—Aug. 26.).—M. Lecoq, the famous detective, while wandering about Paris, heard shots coming from an ill-favored inn, run by Mother Chupin, who called her house the Pepperbox. With several gendarmes Lecoq captured a man while on the ground were lying the bodies of two notorious criminals. The slayer did not deny his guilt, but said that he had shot in self-defense, his story being borne out by Mother Chupin. Fresh elements of mystery were added by the finding of a a diamond earring on the floor of the inn, and later, after the two prisoners had been removed, the detective found outside the footprints of a woman, traced them some distance, and found that the woman had been joined by a man. One of the man's footprints was much more pronounced than the other, which convinced the detective that he limped, some brown wool which had rubbed off against a tree where he had been leaning gave the texture of his overcoat, and from the place where it was found it was an easy matter to deduce his height. When these facts were narrated to the official charged with collecting facts and testimony, and in preparing cases for presentation to the court, it developed that a man answering that description had been found outside the police station, apparently hopelessly drunk, and had been locked in the same cell with the slayer. Lecoq hurried to the station, but was not surprised to find that the supposed drunkard had regained his censes, made a pitiful plea to the jailer and had been set free. Lecoq knew that the man was an accomplice of the prisoner, and had planned to be locked up so that he could map out a line of defense for the prisoner to follow.

Later developments proved the correctness of this theory. Lecoq found himself blocked at every turn. The detective finally had the prisoner removed to a solitary cell, and watched the prisoner through a peephole. In this way he discovered that the prisoner was communicating with someone outside. Lecoq intercepted one of the notes. The communication from the prisoner explained that he believed that he could escape by the window of his cell if he had the tools. Lecoq arranged with the judge to allow the prisoner to get away, assuring him that he (Lecoq) would always be at his heels. The judge agreed, although he was not the judge who had originally taken up the case.

The prisoner got away as per schedule, but was dismayed not to find his friend awaiting him as he had expected. Then the realization came to him that he had been deliberately set free, but was being watched. The prisoner finally landed in a dive and was soon deeply engaged in conversation with a man the detective believed to be the mysterious man in the brown overcoat. The two suspects went away together closely followed by Lecoq. They passed into a narrow lane, on one side of which was a high wall. There the second man suddenly lifted Lecoq's prey over the wall, and, before the detective could follow him, there was a desperate fight. When assistance arrived, Lecoq surrounded the place, which was the residence of the wealthy Duc De Sairmuse. Lecoq believed, as he later proved, that the Duke was really the man who, disguised as a laborer, had been arrested in the inn. Lecoq finally saw a clue in the conduct of Maurice d'Escorval, the first judge, who, in order to get out of prosecuting the prisoner whom he knew, feigned illness, and turned the case over to one of his colleagues.

Then Lecoq played his last card. The following day the duke was told that a servant was outside with an important message that he insisted upon delivering in person. The duke saw him, and was handed a letter signed Maurice d'Escorval, in which the writer mentioned having shielded the duke and asked in return that the duke would loan him a large sum of money. The duke penned a reply warmly thanking the judge for not revealing his secret. Suddenly the letter was snatched away and Lecoq removed his disguise. The duke pleaded with him. His silence, he said, had been due to the necessity of shielding his family name. It appeared that the duchess was a woman of humble birth, but their married life had been happy, until the duke happened to find a letter addressed to her, in which she was commanded to bring a large sum in gold to Mother Chupin's Inn, under penalty of having her husband "learn all." The duke, pretending to be summoned away, disguised himself as a laborer and watched his own house, expecting and fearing to find that his wife had been



Dramatic Music for Your Dramas; Comic Music for Your Comedies

WURLITZER

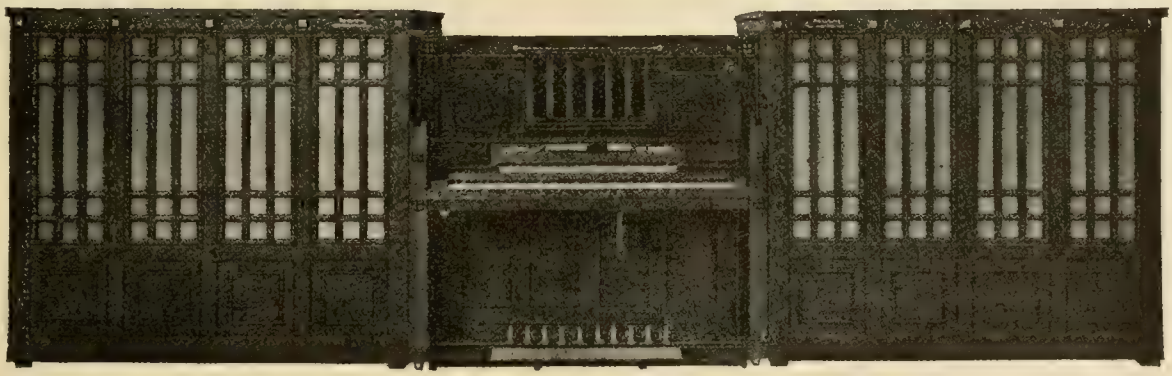
One Man Orchestra

when played automatically, requires no attention. Four rolls play 40 selections. Rolls set to change with the action upon the screen. Changes made by push buttons placed in box office or operating booth.

Wurlitzer One-Man Orchestra plays pipe organ, orchestra and every motion picture effect automatically or by hand. Installed in America's largest theatres. Write!

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

Cincinnati: 121 East 4th St. New York: 118 West 41st St. Chicago: 329-331 So. Wabash Ave.
Philadelphia: 912 Chestnut St. San Francisco: 985 Market St.



CAN BE PLAYED BY OPERATOR OR AUTOMATICALLY.

WHY NOT

PREPARE FOR THE WINTER SEASON NOW?

And have your patronage established when it arrives. You can do this by giving your patrons good music with the films. Your business depends on their attendance—increase it.

SHOW THEM THAT THE BEST IS NONE TOO GOOD

YOU CAN DO ALL THIS AND MORE BY INSTALLING

A SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA PLAYER

Style G is shown above. 224 organ pipes, bass, flute, cello, violin, piccolo and vox humana. All the necessary effects. A complete instrument. Other styles in catalog. Write for same—price and easy terms.

THE SYMPHONY PLAYER COMPANY

NEW YORK DISPLAY ROOMS
60 West 37th Street

CINCINNATI, U. S. A.
FACTORY AND OFFICE, COVINGTON, KY.

CHICAGO DISPLAY ROOMS
730 N. Franklin Street

untrue to him, he later finding that she was simply shielding her disgrace brother, a convict. On the appointed night he trailed her to the inn, and, through the window, saw her seated at a table. Suddenly two men came forward, and one dragged one of her diamond earrings from her ear. The duke ran into the building to aid her; the men attacked him and he shot them both down in self-defense. He then urged his wife to run and remained to cover her retreat, after whispering to Mother Chupin that he would pay liberally for her silence.

The next moment the police entered and made him a prisoner. After he was locked up, a drunken man was thrown into his cell, and to his delight he recognized Otto, his faithful valet, who had taken desperate steps to communicate with his master. The two mapped out a course of action, Otto supplying the duke with a story that the police could investigate and find apparently true and the valet also promised to keep an eye on Lecoq and as far as possible lead him astray. Regarding the duchess the duke's mind was at ease, for Otto told of having met her, fleeing from the inn, and of how he had started her home safely. The duke's story had the ring of sincerity, and Lecoq was much affected. Then the detective told the nobleman that the charge of murder would be squashed, as it was clearly a case of self-defense. Lecoq burned the two incriminating notes and departed, leaving behind a grateful friend who in years to come did not forget the detective who had saved the honor of his name.

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

PATHE NEWS (No. 60—July 28).—Chicago, Ill.—More than 1,200 persons perish when the steamboat Eastland, carrying 2,800 employes of the Western Electric Company on their outing, capsizes as she leaves her pier. The Eastland's overturned hull, shortly after the boat listed over. Removing the body of a child through one of the great holes cut in the Eastland's planking by rescuers. From the wreck to the hospitals and morgues, boats, automobiles and wagons carry the bodies of victims in a continuous stream. A police boat, laden with victims, on its way from the wreck. Vast crowds watch the rescue work from the shore. The Second Regiment Armory is turned into a great morgue, and frantic relatives of victims besiege the place, seeking news of their loved ones.

Pathe's American Fashions.—Latest styles in hair-dressing. A Marsel wave is the preliminary to any operation. The hair is divided in three. A twist of the hand, and the tresses form an imposing pile. Two curls, one long and one short, appear on the right. The finished coiffure. Another style of hair-dressing, showing how the looping waves are made. An elegant way of arranging the hair for evening wear. The debutante affects a simpler style. The famous Grecian Psyche knot, which is best suited to a classic profile.

The Eyewitness at the Front, Etc.—War's lighter side. Quite like the ordinary man at the finish of his day's toil, the soldier seeks diversion whenever a respite comes in the fighting. There are musicians aplenty in every camp, and an improvised orchestra can be organized at any time.

Many famous artists of the Paris music halls are serving at the front and they are always ready to give their comrades the benefits of their talents.

Punch and Judy usually are most prominent in the soldiers' impromptu vaudeville entertainments.

One ingenious French soldier early in the war conceived the idea of fashioning finger rings from pieces of German shells. The trick proved so popular that skillful workers in almost every camp now are using their leisure moments to make these rings.

Whenever a stop is made some soldier produces a pack of playing cards, and a "little game" soon is in full swing.

The soldiers delight in carrying with them the most oddly assorted mascots. One company has adopted and tamed a young goat which seems to enjoy the attention of the soldiers immensely.

The happiest time in the soldiers' life comes when the "mail" arrives. The infrequency of this event makes the letters and presents from home doubly welcome.

Th Liberty Bell, finishing its tour across the continent [illegible] on a triumphal march through the principal streets of this city on its way to the Panama Pacific Exposition.

A cheering crowd of 10,000 people greet the bell as it enters the Exposition grounds.

Mounted on a floral stand the bell is placed on exhibition.

PATHE NEWS NO. 62 (Aug. 4).

Actual photographs of the naval battle in the Black Sea.

1. By special and exclusive permission of the Czar to Mr. George Ercold, staff correspondent of Pathe News, who was decorated with the cross of St. George for his bravery.

2. On the eve of its departure, the fleet is inspected by the Czar.

3. In the early morning, just as the sun is rising behind the hills, the fleet makes ready to leave Sebastopol.

4. As the rays of the sun burst forth, on the sea, the fleet weighs anchor.

5. In grim, imposing line the ships proceed on their way to attack the enemy.

6. From the bridge of the flagship comes the order to clear the decks for action.

7. There is an ominous silence on deck as the muzzles of the great guns, like a tiger scenting its prey, move about in search of the exact range.

8. The swift destroyers, their prows dipping in the waves, dash about the battle line.

9. Then the bombardment begins, and the great guns roar as they discharge their death-dealing, destructive projectiles in the direction of the enemy.

10. Ercole, the Pathe News man, is the only person of all those with the fleet to remain on deck during the entire engagement.

11. The Medjidie, Turkey's largest battleship, actually sinking as a result of the bombardment.

12. After the battle, the Turkish Crescent is hauled down, and the Russian naval ensign hoisted in its place.

Paris, France.—Members of the American colony proceed to the Picpus cemetery to take part in the memorial ceremonies at the tomb of General Lafayette, who fought with Washington in the war of the revolution. Subtitle—One of the most impressive addresses of the day is delivered by William G. Sharp, of Ohio, the American Ambassador.

Three Rivers, Mich.—Though he is said to be the heaviest man in the United States engaged in any occupation similar to his, Sam Irwin finds his weight no handicap in guiding his bus around this place.

New York City.—The funeral of Charles Becker, the former police lieutenant who died in the electric chair as plotter of the death of Herman Rosenthal, takes place from the Church of St. Nicholas of Tolentine.

Palos Park, Ill.—To fight the high cost of living, school children of this place raise garden products which they dispose of in a public market set aside for the purpose. Subtitle—Trade usually is brisk in the community market.

PATHE NEWS NO. 63 (Aug. 7).—Athens, Greece.—Ready to plunge into the war as soon as she sees a clear advantage. Greece is training her troops for life at the front, paying particular attention to the cavalry.

Richmond, England.—Members of the Royal Horse Guards, expecting a call to the front at almost any moment, teach their horses the art of swimming in the Thames.

London, England.—More than 40,000 women take part in a remarkable demonstration in the streets of this city demanding that they be permitted to help win the war by giving their services to war work.

Paris, France.—The ashes of Rouget de L'Isle, composer of the Marsellaise, after lying in state at the Arch of Triumph, are solemnly removed to the Invalides. Subtitle—President Poincaire: "Since we were forced to draw the sword we have no right to sheathe it until we have avenged our dead."

Near Seabright, N. J.—Giant waves, lashed by a fierce northeast wind, break over the bulkheads protecting towns along the Jersey coast, and threaten great damage to property.

Erie, Pa.—Close to 75 lives are lost, and property valued at $7,000,000 is destroyed in this city when a great flood sweeps through the Mill Creek valley in Erie County. Subtitles—Wreckage stretches over an area of two miles square in the valley. A trolley car is practically torn to bits by the rushing waters near the city's center. Hundreds of houses are destroyed, and thousands are made homeless. Troops patrol the flood district to guard property against looters. Hundreds of workmen labor to repair broken telegraph and electric wires.

Rye Harbor, N. H.—Campfire Girls have a ceremonial meeting here at which they perform the quaint rites of their organization. Subtitle—When the meeting is over, though, the girls discard their Campfire garb, and amuse themselves thuswise.

Beverly Farms, Mass.—A keenly contested obstacle race is a feature of a circus held on the Haven estate here for the benefit of the Naval Y. M. C. A.

Bisbee, Cal.—Flood conditions prevail in the western part of the continent. The streets of this city become rivers as a great flood sweeps through Brewery Gulch.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The memory of the first settlers of the state of Utah is honored on Pioneer Day here, a great parade being a feature of the celebration. Subtitles—Among the most interesting vehicles in the procession are several of the prairie schooners in which the pioneers made their way across the plains. Lineal descendents of the pioneers take a prominent part in the celebration.

MAX AND HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW (Punch Films, Two parts, Aug. 9).—Max gets married, all right, but mother-in-law sticks around. She even follows her daughter, from whom she has never been separated for any length of time, to the railway station, and so anxious is Max to be rid of her that the happy couple forget to change the wedding clothes for traveling garb. Fond mother kisses her daughter good-bye with such fervor that Max, who is in the car already, goes off all by his lonesome when the train starts suddenly. He gets out at the next station, however, and "hoofs it" back. The honeymoon calls for a trip to Chamouni for a round of winter sports and good fun, but Max is forced to invite Ma to go along, too. Skating is the schedule for the first day of their stay, and big, fat mother-in-law also dons the glistening blades. Of course she falls all over herself on the ice and poor Max must cater to her and help her along. He tires of this, however, and she is left to crawl off the ice on all-fours.

Sledding down the side of the mountains is next tried out, and Ma insists upon getting on behind Max, much to his disgust. She topples off half way down, however, and makes the rest of the descent without the formality of using a sled. They then take to the skis, and the much-despised persists in hanging on even in this dangerous pastime. She makes a flying trip down the slope successfuly and Max, tired out because of her presence, suggests that they start back to the hotel. Mother-in-law is too big to get on the train, however, and is "boosted" on a mule tied behind the flyer. The rope breaks and the beast makes for its barn where Max finds her hanging to the top of the door and rescues her.

IN OLD 'LE-DE-FRANCE (Photocolor Films—Aug. 9).—This old department of France has always been noted for the beauty and diversity of its architecture. The famous cathedral at Beauvais, the capital of the department of the Oise, which was begun in 1247, represents one of the finest types of Gothic architecture in Europe. In the same city the Courts of Justice, noble monuments to the men who built them, are beautiful specimens of architecture and are lasting tributes to the skill and workmanship of days that have gone by. In the town of Compiegne is the famous Castle. This was built by Louis XV, and was used as a royal residence by Napoleon I and Napoleon III. It is now a museum of antiques. The beauties of the structures of Senlis, which was almost destroyed at the Battle of the Marne; and the majestic Castle at Pierrefonds are also beautifully shown in their natural colors. Several interesting war scenes are also portrayed on the same reel.

NATIVE VENDERS (Calcutta, India—Globe Films—Aug. 9).—These times while we are talking of oral hygiene, tooth brush drills, and dentifrices, we think not at all about the people of foreign climes who also have teeth to care for and how they are able to do it. In Calcutta a street merchant dispenses of Indian "tooth paste" to the passerby. This concoction consists of pepper, tobacco leaves, cocoa and lime. Other interesting fellows are also shown, notably the cobbler, the glass workers, cotton pickers and grain dealers, all out on the sidewalks trying to earn an honest dollar.

AMATEUR NIGHT (Starlight—Aug. 14).—Heinie and Louis follow Mabel into a soda emporium. As she leaves and is asked for her cash, she tells the waiter that her friends will pay, but they are not very enthusiastic about the invitation. They finally leave the place and camp on Mabel's trail, which leads to a gymnasium where she is working out for reducing purposes. They are persuaded to sign up to appear at an entertainment to be given some days later.

The eventful night rolls around and they are introduced to a packed house. A wrestling bout opens the fun. Heinie starts off with the famous nose hold, and gets a grip on Louie's "beak," angering the worthy so much that he retaliates with the famous toe hold. This is not sufficient and he is compelled to resort to a hold of his own invention, which he calls the "tickle" grip. This consists in tickling Heinie under the armpits and causes him to fall heavily to the mat, a beaten gladiator. They then start a ten round bout. The manly art of self-defense as portrayed by these two doesn't appeal, so the contest is stopped. The two contestants echo the sentiments of the audience and realize that as athletes they are frosts.

THE SILENT CHORD (Three Parts—Victory Aug. 28).—Harry Wilson lets his infatuation for Helen Dolores, demimonde, lead him to counterfeiting to satisfy her demands for the "good things" of life. He is caught and sent to prison for a long term. In the meantime his sister Edith, a baby when he began his prison term, is married to Stanley Griffin, a millionaire, and the happy couple is blessed with a child. Harry Wilson, broken, hopeless, and more wicked than when he was thrown in jail, comes out and looks desperately around for a means to live. His efforts are productive of naught but to throw him back again to the un-

Sturtevant

Two Essentials for Success

Good Pictures and Fresh Air

In the modern movie house there are important considerations as well as good pictures. The public insist on comfort—warm fresh air in the winter and cool fresh air in summer, but it must be fresh—always—and the way to keep it fresh is with Sturtevant Fans.

Sturtevant Fans

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

will remove foul air or supply hot air. Used in conjunction with Sturtevant heating coils, they supply heat and ventilation at a minimum of cost.

We have improved conditions in dozens of theatres. Why not yours?
Send us all details as to size, capacity, etc. Write at once.

B. F. STURTEVANT COMPANY, Hyde Park, Boston, Mass.
and all principal cities in the world

FEASTER NON-REWIND MACHINE

RECOMMENDED BY PROJECTION EXPERTS

(See article by Mr. F. H. Richardson in last week's issue of the Moving Picture World)

APPROVED BY UNDERWRITERS' LABORATORIES, INC., AND CITY AUTHORITIES

(FIRE RISK is lessened more than 50% by use of the FEASTER system.)

ENDORSED BY EXHIBITORS AND OPERATORS

(The FEASTER eliminates all the LABOR, TIME and NOISE of rewinding in the theatre.)

FILM EXCHANGES HEARTILY ENDORSE THE FEASTER SYSTEM

Because it eliminates the tremendous damage to film caused by rewinding, and prolongs the life and renting value of the film about 300%.

The FEASTER system is being used by many of the leading theatres. Names and testimonials sent upon application.

BYRON CHANDLER, INC.

1482 BROADWAY Distributors NEW YORK CITY

derworld. He breaks into a rich house, and comes face to face with his sister! Through a locket he has always carried, they discover their relationship, and a poignant desire for a cleaner, finer life possesses him. Edith promises to help him, and in the next few weeks makes frequent visits to him in his poor garret. Her visits are discovered by her husband, and she, wanting to shield her brother, can make no explanation. Her husband, inflamed with jealousy, confines her to her room, and puts an armed guard about his mansion. Harry, alarmed at his sister's absence, and knowing he'd be refused admittance through the front door, tries to break into the house to see her, and is shot by one of the guards. Then, in the meeting with Edith and her husband, comes a dramatic climax.

PRESSING HIS SUIT (Phunphilms Aug. 23).—This is the terrible tale of Toots the Tailor, Sally the Salubrious, Sweitzer the Swiss, and Kate the Kalamity. Toots loves Sally, he's not the only one; there's Sweitzer, the cheese maker, who's awfully strong for her. Sally loves Toots, but she's not the only one; there's Kate, the laundress, who has Toot's promissory note to marry her in default of his wash bill. Kate comes to claim Toots' forfeit of future happiness and discovers that Toots has an affair with Sally.

Kate sees she can't love him into marrying her, so decides she'll have to scare him into it, and accordingly takes one of Toots' models, and, dressing it in her clothes, shoves it up to its knees in a barrel of dye. This wouldn't be so bad if it weren't for the fact that it's in head first. Then the real Kate hides. Sweitzer, learning that Sally is to dine with Toots, comes prepared to shed blood. Sally comes prepared to shed manners and stow food. Toots discovers the figure of Kate in the barrel of dye and it spoils his dinner. Then the real Kate comes out and plays ghost. Then comes Sweitzer ready to carve Toots. Toots would rather be excused, thank you, and makes a hurried exit. Kate dons a man's clothes and makes up to the fickle Sally. The finish is funny.

THE ROMANCE OF ELAINE (Episode No. 35, "The Disappearing Helmets"—Two Parts—Aug. 23).—Elaine discovers the real mission of her pseudo-friend, Marcus Del Mar, and decides to have him apprehended. The mysterious Prof. Arnold captures Del Mar's messenger and finds on him a note from Del Mar to the Anti-American League cautioning them to act quickly in their harbor-mining schemes, lest they be discovered.

On an invitation from Del Mar, Elaine and Jameson visit him at his apartments. Elaine's aunt, Josephine, frightened at Elaine's adventurous boldness, goes to Lieutenant Woodward at Fort Dale, and prevails upon him to go with a troop of soldiers to Del Mar's house to insure Elaine and Jameson's safety. The mysterious Prof. Arnold, with the aid of a telaphotograph (an instrument for transmitting a picture over a telegraph wire) gets a picture of a certain Martin, a criminal, and finds it is the picture of Del Mar! Disguised, he goes to Del Mar's rooms to apprehend him. Del Mar, with the aid of an electric wire door-mat, renders Jameson powerless, and, overcoming Elaine, encases her in a diver's suit, and disappears with her through his private passage to the seashore just as Prof. Arnold, Lieut. Woodward and the soldiers arrive in his rooms. There is a chase down to the shore where the pursuers stand astounded to see Del Mar, carrying Elaine, disappear into the depths of the sea.

THE ROMANCE OF ELAINE (Episode No. 36, "The Final Chapter" Two Parts Aug. 30).—Marcus Del Mar, the foreign agent who is endeavoring to mine America's harbor and bridges, has managed to capture his greatest stumbling block—Elaine—but in doing so has betrayed the whereabouts of his secret harbor.

The mysterious Prof. Arnold who, for some strange reason, is interested in Elaine's welfare, and Lieut. Woodward and a troop of soldiers, all hot on Del Mar's trail, spy him, with the aid of a submarine telescope, under water. When Del Mar and his submarine crew arise to the surface, a fierce battle ensues, Del Mar escaping for the nonce. He is finally surrounded and, in desperation, jumps on a car on the top of a steep incline above the ocean, and severing the cable that holds it fast goes shooting widly down to the water. He is picked up by his submarine. Jameson and Woodward, acting on Arnold's orders, go to Burnside's hangars and, mounting a hydroaeroplane with a wireless torpedo attached beneath it, go soaring out over the water in search of Del Mar's submarine. Its periscope betrays it. With lightning rapidity Jameson and Burnside drop their torpedo, and guide it with their wireless apparatus to its target, the submarine. It strikes true, and the submarine goes quickly to the bottom, carrying with it the perfidious Del Mar. The last of this episode discloses a surprise better relished on the screen.

COLONEL HEEZA LIAR, WAR-DOG (Pathe—Aug. 16). "Let them loose the dogs of war," says the Colonel—"we shall muzzle them soon enough!" He has no sooner spoken when, from a lunch-basket beside him, up rises a brace of eavesdropping sausages, and disappear again into their kennel. A stalk of corn even lends its ear to this conversation, and there seems no privacy in the world. Old Heeza goes for privacy aboard his yacht, when suddenly he espies a torpedo making direct for him. Jumping into the brimy, the Colonel wrestles with the whitehead, and manages to turn it back against its sender. The Colonel next essays fishing. Suddenly he feels a tremendous tug, and his line is almost pulled out of his hands; but he holds on gamely to his prize, feeling a whale worth his while. Over the crests of mountainous waves he is drawn and still he hangs on to his catch. At length the tugging ceases he thinks he has exhausted his catch—when up from beneath comes a submarine whose captain loudly bawls old Heeza out, and sets him adrift. Back again on his yacht, the Colonel is sure something must be wrong when a bomb explodes on his head. Looking up he spies a hostile 'plane. Jumping into the beak of his trusty pelican, he mounts to the clouds where he vanquishes his enemy and descends to his yacht, king of "the earth, the air and the sea."

AN INTIMATE STUDY OF BIRDS (Part Five On Same Reel as Foregoing). Here is shown the female linnet, an ample provider for its young, who, after dinner, take their siesta beneath the downy body of the mother bird. The bunting, a brilliantly plumaged songster, is shown hiding its food in the bush and brambles near its nest, against a dry day; for the proverbial "rainy-day" means fat pickings in worms for our feathered friends. Here is a picture of our littl friend, the wren, perking about in all its busybody fussiness.

Miscellaneous Feature Films

PARAMOUNT.

SOLD (Famous Players—Five Parts—Aug. 5).—The story is of two artists, one a success and the other, although with far greater ability, lacks the funds with which to make the connections that contribute toward success. Both love the same woman, who selects the poor artist as her husband. Through a long period of stress and financial difficulties she emerges with the determination to aid her husband financially. On a visit from the rich artist to their home, he admires a painting of her husband's for which she had posed in the nude. The rich artist explains that he requires just such a model for the completion of a painting upon which he has been at work, "The Harem Market," and that he would be willing to pay thousands of dollars for her services. Later, the wife, in order to obtain the money with which to assist her husband, visits the rich artist, tells him she was her husband's model, and that she will accept his offer. In time, the husband learns of her act, and entirely misunderstanding her motive, denounces her as a false wife. How his faith in his sacrificing wife is restored, and how the dawn of a new life brightens before them is tenderly unfolded in the photoplay.

SECRET ORCHARD (Lasky—Five Parts—Aug. 9).—The sound of merry voices and the clinking of wine glasses came through the closed door of a child's room in an apartment situated in a quarter of Paris where night life predominates and where revellers know they may come and go as they please. It was late at night. The child had been asleep, but awakening, frightened, she stepped to the door a moment to listen and then fearlessly, having heard the musical laugh of her mother, she opened the door and entered a large room. It was filled with men and women, whose gayety may have had some inspiration from the bottles which poked their heads above the rim of ice buckets, which formed an outer fortification around the banquet table. At the sight of the child the conversation ceased for a moment, then burst forth at some indiscreet remark. A woman arising from the head of the table hurried across the room, caught the child in her arms and carried her back into her room. The woman was Cora May; the child her daughter, Diane, age four. Cora May was one of the stars of the Parisian demimonde. The next morning Cora took the child to a convent, bade her a tearful farewell and returned, sorrowful, to Paris. In her ears there still rang relentlessly the words spoken by a friend the previous evening when he saw the child: "She has the devil in her eyes, Cora, just like you."

The little girl, Diane, grew up in the convent, learned to love the Sisters and their sweet ways, blossomed into lovely girlhood and at nineteen she left the convent to pass a vacation at a friend's home by the seashore, at Narbonne. "Monsieur le Chevalier" saw the child one day. Her beauty attracted him, her innocence kept him at a distance, but her eyes, those eyes wherein the "devil" was lurking, baffled and confused him. There followed a flirtation, innocent enough, a few words between them, a declaration of love and Diane had fallen a victim to the worldly wiles of "Monsieur le Chevalier," who was, in fact, none other than the Duke of Cluny. Meanwhile, Cora May, Diane's mother, had died, never having seen her child from the day she had taken her to the convent. Deserted by her care-free friends she found sympathy in a woman of rank, Duchess of Cluny, who sat at her bedside and watched an unhappy life ebb swiftly away. The Duchess made one promise: she would seek out the child, Diane, and take her into her home and guard her from temptation. Diane, still stunned by the experience of her betrayal, dedicates her life to the friendship for the kind Duchess, never associating her with "Monsieur le Chevalier." Subsequently Diane and the Duke, filled with remorse because of his indiscretion, recognize each other, yet spare the Duchess, whom each loves, from their secret.

The past would have remained untold had not Diane and Lieutenant Dodd, U. S. N., fallen in love. The young woman refuses marriage but withholds her reasons, but the young American is obdurate and in time the truth dawns upon him. In a duel he kills the Duke of Cluny, who by death atones for his sin, and we are left with the reasonable conclusion that in time Diane and Lieutenant Dodd find happiness together.

NEARLY A LADY (Bosworth—Five Parts—Aug. 12).—That a fork was ever meant for anything but spearing bread never dawned on Frederica Calhoun until the arrival at her father's big Montana ranch of Lord Cecil Grosvenor, a prospective buyer. He opened her eyes to an hitherto undreamed of world of refinement and good form, and she in turn appealed to his imagination by her crack riding, her beautiful lariat dances which the cowboys had taught her, and her unfailing sweet disposition and sunny bubbling good spirits. But on their betrothal, with its subsequent visit to Lord Grosvenor's sister, a New York society woman, the idyl showed a flaw. Redfern gowns, afternoon teas and the formal social routine of the patrician Knickerbockers did wonders for Frederica, transforming the cocoon into a butterfly. But to Grosvenor it was demoralizing, and word of his escapades reached Frederica's ears. The night of the French Ball she borrowed a suit of men's evening clothes and hid by a stage door where with her own eyes she saw her fiancee come out with the dashing show girl with whom his name had been connected. Indeed, Frederica's "young man" makeup was so complete that Grosvenor grew jealous when Frederica eyed his companion so straight and hard.

The fatal breach was widened when Frederica's prospective sister-in-law peeked into her room after her return and deceived as her brother had been, felt it her duty to inform him she had seen "a man." This Frederica spiritedly admitted, inasmuch as the "man" was none other than herself, but Grosvenor presumed to wax furious, and the absurdity of such a stand disgusted her and she tossed the Englishman over. As a matter of fact, she was glad of the excuse, for she had all the time been playing straight with him only at the expense of holding off an old Montana sweetheart who had come to New York and made good. Her hands free Frederica returned to a man whose word she knew was good as his bond, and, thanking her stars she had learned in time that a man was not to be judged by the way he handled a fork.

NORTH AMERICAN FILM CORP.

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY (Chapter No. 15—"Desperate Chances"—Two Parts—Aug. 9).—The crashing of the stage coach down the mountain came clearly to the ears of Blair and Luke, who went to the wreck. There lay Esther and Marmaduke Smythe. Esther had been thrown our providentially, it would seem, along with a cushion from the coach, which had saved her even from shock and bruise. At the approach of her enemies, she slipped the Stanley document from her bosom and hid it under a stone. As she felt Blair stooping over her, she sat up. Instantly Luke picked her up in his arms. "You bring her baggage," he commanded of Stanley, roughly. "She isn't dead, thank God!" In this way she was borne back to the blacksmith shop. When Esther professed to know nothing about the Stanley document, and declared that no such paper was upon her person, her latter statement at least was respected by her kidnappers. Blair forced open the suitcase, but it contained men's clothing only. Her captors tied her securely and went back to the wrecked coach to find the right suit case. Meanwhile, however, the eccentric English lawyer had come to his senses. Clutching the only piece of baggage in sight, and still clinging to his stag's head and gun, he had trotted off into the wilderness. When Blair and the gypsy reached the place they could find no trace of Esther's belongings.

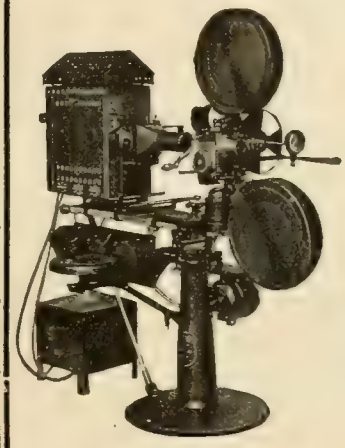
A clear picture

is as essential as a good scenario. Because the basic product is right the clearest pictures are on Eastman Film. Identifiable by the stencil mark in the margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Best and Most Substantial Motion Picture Machine on the Market

It is giving better results than expected.
It is the machine of the hour.



Before you purchase any other make inspect

The 1916 Model Motiograph

Ask your dealer to show you the New Sliding Disc Connection and the Extra Balance Wheel on Cam Shaft.

Or better still ask for a demonstration. The machine will tell FACTS.

The Machine is Right
The Price is Right

Can you afford to miss such an opportunity?

Price Complete 1916 Model..... $250.00
Motor Attachment..... $35.00

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.
574 W. Randolph St., Chicago

Eastern Office
19 West 23rd St., New York City

Western Office
833 Market St., San Francisco

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX — EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

BOUND VOLUMES
Second Quarter 1915
April—May—June
Also Complete Sets for 1912—1913—1914

These volumes include every issue of this publication, bound quarterly in a substantial and attractive dark green cloth cover.

Price $1.50 each F. O. B. New York

17 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK

Yearly Subscription Rate:
Domestic, $3.00 Canada, $3.50 Foreign, $4.00

A Reel Bright Spot

Produced Only With

BIO RECOGNIZED BI CARBONS BRAND STANDARD CARBONS

ORDER FROM YOUR DEALER OR EXCHANGE OR FROM

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK

MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St.
165 Greenwich Street
SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.

Back in the blacksmith shop, the girl having freed herself of her bonds, was beating upon the door and crying for help: Quabba, trailing Esther, heard and recognized her voice. Seizing a sledge he battered the door till it fell. Blair and Luke, returning a few minutes later, observe that their captive has escaped and give pursuit. When day broke on the other side of the mountain, at the Lady Veronica mines, the hoarse whistle of the power plant woke Esther and Quabba where they had fallen exhausted in their flight on the mountain side. It also roused Luke Lovell and Blair Stanley. But when Esther and her bodyguard reached the mine they saw that the plant was deserted. Nearer and nearer came Luke and Blair. They had dared to cross the canyon by means of the empty ore cradle. Now, inspired by despair, the Italian and Esther boarded the little electric engine and entered the mine.

At the same time, far away in Los Angeles, "John Powell," back from the mountains, was taking possession of a magnificent new yacht. From her hotel window, Vivian Marston spied upon his movements. A scant half hour before, she had ordered a sailboat. Arthur, standing at the wheel, receiving his first instructions from a sailing master, was startled by a wild cry forward. A small sailboat, with a woman at the helm, lay right across his bow. The next instant the little craft was struck. It veered and crumpled on its side. The woman was in the water. Arthur hurled himself after her. Vivian, risking her life for a diamond, had plotted to cross the young millionaire's path "impressively." So far, at least, she had succeeded. But the gem of which this unscrupulous, fair woman was in quest, lay in an inland marsh in a frog puddle. Far overhead in the blue, a pelican with open bill, winged his way into infinity.

WORLD FILM CORP.

THE MASTER HAND (Premo—Aug. 23).—James Rallston has married a rich widow who is an invalid with a daughter, Jean. Being in financial difficulties, he plans to get control of his wife's fortune. A woman doctor, Miss Lane, attends Mrs. Rallston and by drugging her reduces her to such a condition of physical impotency that no difficulty is found, by the aid of an unscrupulous keeper of a sanitarium, Dr. Garside, to secure an order for commitment and deprive her of liberty.

Fifteen years pass. Rallston lives in magnificent style on his wife's money. He believes her to be dying. Miss Lane hopes to marry Rallston when Mrs. Rallston dies; but instead of dying, she recovers her health and is perfectly sane. Meanwhile, Rallston speculates heavily and loses his daughter's fortune. He tries to persuade the girl to marry an old friend, Bigelow, to whom he appeals for help in recovering his fortune. Bigelow suspects Rallston of deception, as well as dishonesty, and is unwilling to believe that Mrs. Rallston is either dead or insane. Bigelow forces up the price of a stock and recovers Jean's fortune for her. Then he disguises himself and, obtaining admission to the sanitarium, rescues Mrs. Rallston. The keeper of the sanitarium, Dr. Garside, takes to flight, and Rallston is killed in an automobile accident. Miss Lane confesses her crime. Mother and daughter are reunited and the girl marries the man of her choice.

THE LITTLE DUTCH GIRL (Shubert—Aug. 16).—The old gardener, attracted by the antics of the ducks, goes to the lake to find a basket with a baby in it. Six years later Little Dutch is sharing in the labors of her guardian—assisting him in the garden and trudging by his side to the city market. When she is fourteen, death takes her guardian. He leaves her a few coins, besides the house and garden, and there she lives, alone. Lionel, a famous painter, seeking a model for his "Marguerite," sees Little Dutch, and persuades her to pose for him. Jean, the woodman, becomes jealous of the attentions of Lionel.

On the day the good Padre sets aside for the villagers to make a pilgrimage to the Shrine, Lionel invites Little Dutch to share a day's outing with him. After a drive they visit a hotel. From a secluded arbor where they are eating she sees the villagers enjoying themselves. At eventide they return to her home, where he bids her good-night. Her absolute innocence has conquered him. Lionel resolves to leave her in peace. He tells her he must go away. Poor Little Dutch becomes more and more quiet. One day Lise, who always delighted in torturing Little Dutch, tells her "Your painter is poor, and ill in the great city." Little Dutch resolves to go to his assistance. She finds that with no money she cannot ride—so she resolves to walk the 200 miles.

When Jean learns that Little Dutch has left for the great city, he hastens there, locates the painter's abode, and awaits the coming of Little Dutch. Finally she arrives, with holes worn through her wooden shoes, clothing bedraggled and worn, a really forlorn object. She rings the bell, the door noiselessly opens and she enters—astonished and awestruck—a large gallery filled with paintings and statues. She hears voices, follows the sound and finally locates the noise behind the curtains. She parts them and is dazzled when she sees Lionel lying on a couch, surrounded by a riotous crowd of men and very decollete women. With a piercing scream Little Dutch turns and flees. Lionel tries to follow. Faithful Jean, although he has remained on watch outside, is not in time to prevent her from jumping into the river, but he rescues her and takes her home. On her little bed she lies, surrounded by her neighbors whose sympathy is extended, alas! too late. One day she rouses herself and, placing two rosebuds in her wooden shoes: "Send them to him," she says. One night she passes out through the open door, proceeds to the edge of the lake, and slips in among the lilies from whence she came.

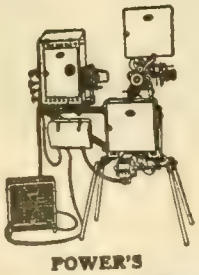
V-L-S-E, INC.

THE RINGTAILED RHINOCEROS (Lubin—Four Parts—Aug. 16).—John Carter—Carter is a good fellow. In fact, his good fellowship is Carter's one great fault, for the highballs and cocktails which go with it too frequently make him forget his more serious obligations and are cause for anxiety on the part of his charming fiancee, Marybelle. Marybelle's little brother, Billie, asks Carter what is making Marybelle so sad. Carter replies evasively, "It's a Ringtailed Rhinoceros." Billie vows to kill the rhino. When Carter fails to appear on time at a dinner, which was planned to announce his engagement to Marybelle, and finally arrives intoxicated, her parents in anger force her to break the engagement and forbid Carter the house. Marybelle's rejection of Carter hits him hard. When he returns to his rooms, he finds little Billie, who has come to seek his assistance in his hunt for the rhino. Taking Billie on his knee, Carter tells him they will kill the rhino—and they begin to plan how to do it. Billie falls asleep. So does Carter. And Carter dreams.

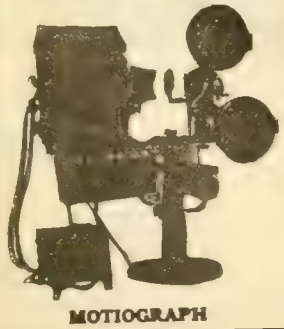
In his dream Carter has become what a harsh creditor predicted, a bum. Then he is shanghaied by pirates and made to scrub decks. Then the ringtailed rhinoceros appears to him and leads him to the captain's rum. The pirates chase him around the ship and finally make him walk the plank. Carter floats and floats and finally crawls out on an island. A guard appears and chases him. Dozens of soldiers appear by magic and all chase him until he falls at the feet of a little prince and begs to be saved. The prince saves him from the soldiers and takes him to see his sister, "The Weeping Princess." She must always weep until the ringtailed rhinoceros has been slain. Carter promises to kill the rhino, so, although the frowning king and queen trust him not, the prince gives him an eight-legged horse, "Resolution," and Carter starts on his hunt. He meets the rhino, but, instead of a killing, they have quite a party together in the king's wine cellar. This continues night after night for some time, Carter deceiving the royal family into believing he is after the rhino, until the Counsellor Bird, failing to make Carter ashamed of himself, "squeals" to the prince about it. They want to cut Carter's head off, but the little prince once more intercedes for him and at Carter's pleading, sets out with him to kill the rhino. The rhino and his "cronies" plead, threaten and cajole with Carter, but the prince's influence is stronger. Through the rhino's domain they plunge, firing at their tempters and not even stopping to "wet up" at the "River of Drinks," which is so inviting to Carter.

Seeing that Carter is at last in earnest, the rhino calls his crowd together and they attack the castle. Carter and the prince hasten back to the rescue. On the way Carter finds a bottle of wine. Just as he is about to put it to his lips, the prince commands: "The rhino is here—kill him!" and as the dreaded beast plunges into the throne room, Carter sends the bottle hurtling at its head. The Rhino falls dead. The princess stops crying, and throws herself gladly upon Carter's manly bosom. The king, queen and all the court hail Carter as a hero. And although this prophecy is made in a dream, it is fulfilled in real life, for Carter comes out of his dream a saner and sober man and tells Billie and Marybelle that he has killed the ringtailed rhinoceros.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.



POWER'S



MOTIOGRAPH

SUPPLYING THE EXHIBITOR

With the Best of Everything for the Modern Photoplay Theatre at Reasonable Prices With a Guarantee Behind Each Article You Purchase.

That's Our Method. So, Let's Co-Operate

Write, Wire or Phone Our Nearest Branch for Your Wants
Prompt Shipments Guaranteed

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

19 West 23rd Street New York City — Did You Send for Our Catalog? — 158 Pearl St. Buffalo, N. Y.

SIMPLEX

STANDARD

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

WHAT DOES the public want? after nine years' experience in the manufacturing, exchange and exhibiting branch, also as expert manager, operator (New York license) and booker. I find any photoplay whether Oriental or domestic that holds the attention and makes the time fly. Does every photoplay on your program hold the audiences' attention, or does your manager show anything that comes along? My system guarantees every picture to be perfect. Am open for any first-class position now or later. Wm. Worby, Hotel Belvidere, Belvidere St. & Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y.

PIANIST—Six years experience in playing for the pictures alone, and conducting orchestras. With knowledge of pipe organ. Union man, capable and reliable. Would like position in large picture house, where artistic reading of the pictures will be appreciated. Reasonable salary for good work. Best of references. Address Nat E. Solomon, Box 3294, Station F., Washington, D. C.

OPERATOR—I would like to locate in a town of 5,000 to 15,000 in Penn. or New Jersey. Operator with seven years' experience, sober, reliable. Handle Simplex, Power's or Edison. My present engagement will close Sept. 10. State all in first letter. Best of references if you want them. Address W. H. M., care Strand Theater, Ocean City, N. J.

AT LIBERTY—First-class operator. Eight years' experience. Strictly sober, reliable. Mass. license. Go anywhere. References. E. A. Hall, 50 Columbia St., Swampscott, Mass.

HIGH-GRADE MANAGER looking for position or put knowledge of business against money in moving picture theater. Not genius but have ability and experience. References to prove it. Want what I am worth. No objection to small town. L. B., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

RELIABLE camera operator desires position. First-class work. Willing, sober. J. W. F., care Fernandez, 112 7th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ASSISTANT CAMERAMAN—Capable, willing. Own professional movie outfit. Go anywhere. Cameraman, 150 West 16th St., N. Y. City.

FEATURE FILM representative, sober, honest, reliable business getter. Age, thirty-three. References. Any territory. E. Walter, 16 East 9th St., Cinn., Ohio.

NEW YORK licensed operator. Long experience. Guarantee to give results. Two years with last place. R. Kraemer, 1136 East 15th St., Brooklyn, N. Y. Tel. 2324 Midwood.

PIPE ORGANIST, experienced in every way, also with orchestra music, at liberty Sept. 1st. Organ concerts a specialty. State salary limit, size and make of organ. Care Box 333 Petersburg, Va.

ACTORS who realize publicity's importance have their press work done by Philip Mindil, 353 West 57th St., N. Y. City. Tel. Columbus 5391.

DIRECTORS are now recognized as most important factors in pictures. Philip Mindil, 353 West 57th St., N. Y. City, Tel. Columbus 5391, specializes on them and does publicity work for five of the best.

MOVING PICTURE FIRMS desiring high-class publicity and advertising manager, but unable to pay for his entire time can get the best in the business, part time, by paying cheap man's whole time salary to Philip Mindil, the pioneer of picture publicity, 353 West 57th St., N. Y. City. Tel Columbus 5391.

AT LIBERTY—Sept. 1st. Manager; competent to get business where it exists. Would prefer run down business where high grade entertainment and higher prices will be appreciated. No five-cent shows considered. Address S. L. J., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FILM EXCHANGE representative or branch manager, experienced, sober, reliable. Age, thirty-three, a business getter, not afraid of work. References. H. E. Walters, 16 East 9th St., Cinn., Ohio.

FIVE YEARS' EXPERIENCE—Cameraman wishes position, with his own camera and automobile. Palumbo, 55 Park Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY.—Cameraman, expert studio and topical photography. Has own outfit. First class references. M. S., 135 West 10th St., N. Y. City.

ART DIRECTOR—To place your picture above standard; to make them more than mere expositions of dramatic art. Fifteen years' experience as constructive art critic, qualifies me to be a valuable aid on detail, sets, locations and as a suggestor of artistic qualities such as have "put over" many otherwise mediocre photoplays. Have studied the motion picture business (technical and practical) since it began. What I don't know, am willing to learn. Art Director, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

AN EXPERIENCED laboratory expert wishes to make a change. Anyone being in need of one that understands every branch, toning, tinting, developing, etc., etc., address K. H. M., care M. P. World, Los Angeles, Cal.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Experienced moving picture machine operator. Intelligent, steady man, with good references. Theater in Annapolis, Maryland. Address S. V. M., 84 Gloucester St., Annapolis, Md.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

OFFERS INVITED—From all first-class concerns who will produce historical, religious, comedy, etc. films. Especially for South American trade. P. O. Box 26, San Francisco, Cal.

A FEW STATES OPEN for exclusive rights on the Automatic Slide-O-Graph. A motor-driven, advertising slide projecting machine. Requires no operator. Installed in show windows, theaters, etc. Each machine installed nets from $50 to $80 per month. Install from 15 to 40 machines in a State. Great attraction. All year round profits. State rights sold on easy terms. Write or wire today for particulars on your State. Paul J. Scheller, Evansville, Ind.

FOR SALE—Half interest in fully-equipped $3,000 picture theater. Paying good dividend. Seating 300, good town 5,500, no competition. Owner being young man desiring change in location, will sacrifice. Address H. Rittenhouse, Rector, Ark.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Nicely furnished large office, suitable for moving picture business. Inquire Rm. 601, 110 West 40th St., N. Y. City.

THEATERS WANTED.

CASH FOR YOUR MOVIE—I am a practical, successful moving picture broker. Seventeen years of continuous success. Selling upwards of one million dollars worth annually, sales, exchanges and leases. Lewis, the Moving Picture Broker, Established 1896. Offices 578-80 Ellicott Sq., Buffalo, N. Y.

I AM in the market to purchase moving picture house with or without real estate in town of about 25,000-50,000. Write me full details. Will pay spot cash $5,000 to $50,000. N. Pohl, 46 Floss Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR RENT—In Youngstown, Ohio, 1,500 seat house to be built in the best possible location with all the latest improvements. Would not this be an addition to your chain? Write or wire for further details. The Realty Trust Co., Youngstown, Ohio.

MOVING PICTURE BUYERS—We have the largest and most profitable list of movies in the country. If you contemplate buying a movie send for our list free. Lewis, Moving Picture Broker, 580 Ellicott Sq., Buffalo, N. Y.

FOR SALE—A-1 picture theaters, all parts U. S. Prices $1,500 up. Special free service to buyers. Correspondence invited. Picture Theater Clearing Ass'n, Box 430B, Litchfield, Ill.

$2,200 CASH takes a new modern equipped moving picture theater, if sold at once. Seats 782, four year lease, rent $3,000 a year. Stage, nine sets new scenery. The following goes with the sale: Two Powers' machines, spot light, six fans, motor generator set, two large switch boards, electric sign, steam boiler, etc., two pianos, scenery and full stage equipment, seats. Address Box 388, Pawtucket, R. I.

FOR SALE—The prettiest moving picture theater in America; seats 320; located in southern city; population 200,000. Will clear over $5,000 per year. Price for quick sale, $5,000. If you see it you'll buy it. Address quick if interested. Southern Showman, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater, fully equipped and running. Wisconsin city, 7,000 population. Address C. W. Rice, Marshfield, Wis.

CHANCE OF A LIFETIME—An open air motion picture theater that will make a fortune; in heart of Harlem, no opposition, 100 foot plot, cheapest rent in town. Doing good business; must sacrifice for any reasonable offer; convince yourself. Linden Gardens, 49 West 124th St. D. H. Scully & Co., 57 East 125th St., N. Y. City.

THEATER with stage, 900 seats, full equipment, centrally located in Newark, to lease or half partnership with owner of building. Only parties with money need reply. Immediate possession. Address N. M., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER—Seating 230, in live Massachusetts town of 6,500 inhabitants. Good opening for man with operator's license. $1,600 cash, everything new. Owner has other business. For further information address Theater, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—Attractive moving picture theater. A real money maker. 800 seats, eighteen miles from New York. 100,000 population to draw on. Apply J. S. R., 27 William St., N. Y. City. Rm. 1506. No agents.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

3,000—Used opera chairs some as good as new. I can save you money on new or used chairs, steel and cast patterns, standard asbestos booths at cut prices. J. P. Redington, Scranton, Pa.

FOR SALE—Three Edison Model B. M. P. Machines $75.00 each. Four No. 6 Power's M. P. Machines, $100.00 each. Two No. 6A Power's M. P. machines, $125.00 each. One No. 5 Power's M. P. Machine, $65.00. One Royal M. P. Machine, $50.00. Second hand machines but in first class running order, all worn parts supplied with new. First come first served. Tampa Photo and Art Supply Co., Tampa, Fla.

WRITE OR WIRE—The Lears Theater Supply Co., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo., the largest exclusive theater equipment concern in the West, for seats, all leading makes of moving picture machines, operating booths, curtains and all other theater accessories. Folding chairs, 40c each up. Opera chairs, 60c each up. Moving picture machines, $50 each up. Send them an exact list of your wants and see why they sell everyone.

FOR SALE—Two Power's 6A machines nearly new. Cheap for cash. Also carry large stock of carbons all makes. Webster Electric Co., 717 9th St., Washington, D. C.

6A MACHINES—$185. 110 volt compensarcs $42, 220v compensarcs $52. Never used. In original boxes. Alden, 812 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

1,000—Imitation leather opera chairs and many others, closed out factory patterns. Empire Exchange, Corning, N. Y.

FOR SALE—New or second hand opera chairs for moving picture theaters at a bargain. Crescent Film Exchange, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—New and second hand moving picture machines, all leading makes, at reduced prices. Crescent Film Exchange, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—Two Power's No. 6 machines complete equipment, only slightly used and all perfect, $125 each. One complete Power's 6A, with 110-60 motor, perfect condition, $165. Four 110-60 compensators G. E. and Bell-Howell's at $25 each and fully guaranteed. 9 x 12 Mirror Screen, perfect condition, $175 Stelzer Bros., 417 Broadway, Lincoln, Ill.

CALL your new show "The Grand." I have a big brand-new electric sign for you at a reasonable figure. C. M. Larcomb, 54 Washington Ave., Tiffin, Ohio.

FOR SALE—324 veneer opera chairs, one Power's 6 projecting machine. W. L. Johnson, Raton, N. Mex.

A WAGNER rotary converter, 220 volt, single phase, 35 ampere capacity, slightly used, guaranteed in A-1 condition, $175. General Electric Mercury Arc Rectifier, 30 ampere capacity, complete with tube, guaranteed A-1 condition, $150. Exhaust Fan, 24-inch, 220 volt D. C., with speed regulator and reverse, never used, $60. Used fans, G. E., 12-inch, 110 or 220 volt D. C., $5 each. 20,000 imported French carbons ⅝ x 6, $14 per thousand, $1.50 per hundred. Send postal M. O. for amount required today. J. H. Hallberg, 38 East 23d St., N. Y. City.

ATLAS SEATING CO., 501 Fifth Ave., N. Y. Greatest theater chair bargains ever offered on new and used opera and folding chairs. Southern exhibitors, save money by getting lowest freight rates to all points South by railroad or steamer. Write for bargain prices.

FOR SALE—Power's 5A moving picture machine and Johns-Manville asbestos booth, both new, perfect condition. Will sell separate or both for $200. Address M. L. J., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

850 HARDESTY Seating Co. seats for sale cheap. E. J. Horn, Canal Dover, Ohio.

FOR SALE—500 slightly used opera chairs, upholstered with back one inch thick. 12 Mead steam gas radiators. 36 inch Kimble Exhaust Fan, with speed regulator, 2 Standard No. 2 machines, 4 Power's No. 5 machines, Power's No. 6 machine. All in first-class condition. Sent subject to examination on receipt of deposit. Exhibitors' Exchange, Rm. 403 110 West 40th St., N. Y. City.

CARBONS FOR SALE—German imported "Plania-Sunlight" carbons cored ¾ x 12, $7 per 100; ⅝ x 12, $6 per 100; ½ x 6, $3 per 100; ½ x 6, $2.50 per 100; ½ x 4, $1.50 per 100. Reduction in 1,000 lots. Unlimited supply. Best on the market. Made especially for motion picture projection. Donald Campbell, 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

(Continued on page 1401.)

INDEX

TO CONTENTS

Advertising for Exhibitors.....1307
At Leading Picture Theaters.....1320

Battle Cry of Peace, The.....1291
"Barnstormers, The" (Kalem).....1322
Breese, Edmund, Going to Alaska.....1294
Brenon Herbert, Going to Jamaica.....1321
British Notes.....1321

Calendar of Daily Program Releases.1366, 1368
Censors Beaten in Court.....1290
Chicago Letter.....1298
Coming Events.....1288
Comments on the Films.....1316
Contest Censor Decision.....1337

Davidson (Ben) on Censors.....1342
Demand Dressing Rooms.....1346
Denies Injunction Against Fox.....1292

"East Lynne" (Biograph).....1324
Editor Becomes Vice-President.....1302
Enter "Social Mentor".....1303
Essanay to Increase Program Releases....1293

Facts and Comments.....1287
Fielding Builds Movable Power Plant.....1299
Film of Boston's Prison.....1336
Freuler, John R., Speaks.....1299

"Game of Three, The" (Sterling).....1324
Graded License Fees.....1341
Griffith Film in Spokane.....1344

Higher Prices in Topeka.....1348
"His Mysterious Profession" (American)..1323
"House of a Thousand Candles, The" (Selig).....1327
"Hypocrites" Went Well.....1339

Indiana Compensation Act.....1349

James, Arthur, Goes to Metro.....1319
"Jewel" (Universal).....1322

Keystone Film Company Vindicated.....1321
"Killing the Business".....1289

List of Current Film Release Dates.
1402, 1404, 1406
Los Angeles Letter.....1300

Manufacturers Advance Notes.....1328
"Man from Oregon, The" (N. Y. Motion Picture).....1326
"Master Hand, The" (World Film).....1326
Morosco Enlarges Plant.....1295
Motion Picture Exhibitor.....1297
Motion Picture Photography.....1315
Moving Picture Educator.....1305
"Mrs. Plum's Pudding" (Universal).....1323

"Nearly a Lady" (Bosworth).....1325
New Leader Gratified at Outlook.....1297
New Michigan Fire Rules.....1343
No Ad. Films Wanted.....1347
Notes of the Trade.....1334

Open Sundays—Waiting.....1338

Packed Aisles in St. Paul.....1340
Paramount's Mutual Policy.....1295
Photoplayers to Do Stunts.....1297
Photoplaywright, The.....1309
Picture Theaters Projected.....1335
Pike's Peak Engages Miss Bondhill.....1297
Plimpton, Horace G., Resigns.....1304
Prejudiced Censorship?.....1350
Projection Department.....1311
"Puppet Crown, The" (Lasky).....1325

"Regeneration" Goes Strong in St. Louis..1290
Reichenbach, Harry, Entertains.....1290
Reviews of Current Productions.....1322
Roadhouses Want Films.....1345
"Romance of Elaine" (Pathe).....1325

"Secret Orchard, The" (Lasky).....1327
Selig About to Release Comedy Serial.....1319
"Sold" (Famous Players).....1326
Spokes from the Hub.....1306
Spong, Hilda.....1293
Standard Holds First Weekly Meeting.....1320
Stevenson, George Universal, Back.....1303
Stories of the Films.....1360

Triangle Appoints a General Manager.....1303
Tucker, Lillian.....1292

Visual Education.....1305
V-L-S-E Urges Unusual Publicity.....1304

World Film Will Control Paragon Studio..1294

TO ADVERTISERS

ASBESTOS SUPPLIES.
Manville-Johns, H. W., Co.....1363

CARBONS AND CARBON ACCESSORIES.
Davis, Henry W.....1413
Kiewert, Chas. L.....1397
Reisinger, Hugo.....1409

CHAIR AND SEATING MFRS.
American Seating Co.....1413
Andrews, A. H., Co.....1413
Peabody School Furniture Co.....1413
Steel Furniture Co.....1413
Wisconsin Seating Co.....1413

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
Amusement Supply Co.....1401
Chandler, Byron, Inc.....1395
Detroit Engine Works.....1364
Electric Products Co.....1409
Erker Bros.....1376
Fort Wayne Electric Works.....1405
Fulton, E. E.....1413
General Electric Co.....1413
Hallberg, J. H.....1362
Hommel, Ludwig & Co.....1382
Mechanical Appliance Co.....1412
Picture Theater Equip. Co.....1398
Porter, B. F.....1382
Stern Mfg. Co.....1364
Speed Controller Co.....1335
Strelinger, Chas. A.....1411
Sturtevant, B. F., Co.....1394
Swaab, Lewis M.....1412
Typhoon Fan Co.....1364
Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.....1378

FILM EXCHANGES.
Bloom, Joe.....1411
Bradenburgh, G. W.....1412
Central Film Co.....1413
Greater New York Film Rental Co...1366, 1406
Peerless Film Exchange.....1411
Wisconsin-Illinois Features Release Co....1411

LENS MFRS.
Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.....1409

MFRS. OF MOVING PICTURES.
American Film Co., Inc.....1270
Biograph Co.....1367
Charter Features Corp.....1267
Dra-Ko Film Co., Inc.....1389
Edison, Thos. A., Inc.....1276
Equitable Motion Picture Corp.....1277
Essanay Film Mfg. Co.....1260-61, 1359
Famous Players Film Co.....1262-63
Frohman Amusement Co.....1363
Gaumont Co.....1365
Horsley, David.....1369
Itala Film Co. of America.....1255
Kalem Co.....1280-81, 1286
Knickerbocker Star Features.....1380-81
Lasky, Jesse L., Feature Play Co.....1264-65
Lubin Mfg. Co.....1282, 1356-57
Majestic Motion Picture Co.....1371
Metro Pictures Corp.....1272-73
MinA Films.....1407
Mutual Film Corp.....1372-75
Nielsen, F. O.....1274-75
North American Film Corp.....1271
Paramount Pictures Corp.....1266
Pathe Exchange, Inc.....1268-69
Picture Playhouse Film Co., Inc.....1413
Selig Polyscope Co.....1358, 1415
Standard Program.....1387
Sterling Camera & Film Co.....1403
Thanhouser Film Corp.....1274
Universal Film Mfg. Co.....1256-59
Vitagraph Co. of America.
1283-85, 1354-55, Insert
V-L-S-E Inc.....1353
World Film Corp.....1278-79

MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS.
Los Angeles Motion Picture Co.....1411
Universal Camera Co.....1409

MISCELLANEOUS.
Advance Motion Picture Co.....1413
Anti-Censorship Slides.....1408
Arkin, Simon.....1413
Artiste, care M. P. World.....1410
Automatic Ticket Selling & C. R. Co.....1376
Bioscope, The.....1408
Bound Volumes, M. P. World.....1397
Buck Cement Co.....1411
Caille Bros.....1384-85
C. H. K., care M. P. World.....1412
Circulation Coupon, M. P. World.....1412
Classified Advertisements.....1399
Corcoran, A. J.....1364
De Kinematograaf.....1408
Eastman Kodak Co.....1397
Educational Film Releases.....1335
Enterprise Film Co., Inc.....1408
Erbograph Co.....1411
Evans Film Mfg. Co.....1408
Gunby Bros.....1411
Holcomb & Hoke Mfg. Co.....1410
Industrial Moving Picture Co.....1360
Kassel, M.....1411
Kraus Mfg. Co.....1379
Madigan Powder Works.....1363
Melies Mfg. Co.....1411
Moore, Wm. N.....1363
Motion Picture Directory Co.....1408
Motion Picture Fire Prevention Devices Co..1408
Motion Picture Electricity.....1410
Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.....1414
New York Film Laboratories.....1409
National Ticket Co.....1402
Rigot, Max.....1408
Standard Motion Picture Co.....1364
Solidhed Tack Co.....1377
Universal Film Mfg. Co.....1361
Walsh, J. O.....1412

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
Harmo Electric Co.....1401
Seeburg, J. P., Piano Co.....1413
Sinn, Clarence E.....1413
Symphony Player Co.....1393
Wurlitzer, Rudolph Co.....1393

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
Menger & Ring.....1364
Goes Lithographing Co.....1413
Hungerford, U. T.....1377
Newman Mfg. Co.....1378
Theater Specialty Mfg. Co.....1364

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
Enterprise Optical Co.....1397
Power, Nicholas, Co.....1416
Precision Machine Co.....1391

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
Genter, J. H., Co., Inc.....1408
Radium Gold Fibre Screen, Inc.....1351
Simpson, Alfred L.....1410

STEREOPTICON SLIDES.
Utility Transparency Co.....1410

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
Decorators' Supply Co.....1410

A PERFECT POWERFUL CATHEDRAL PIPE ORGAN
PLAYED FROM THE PIANO KEY BOARD

"THE HARMO"

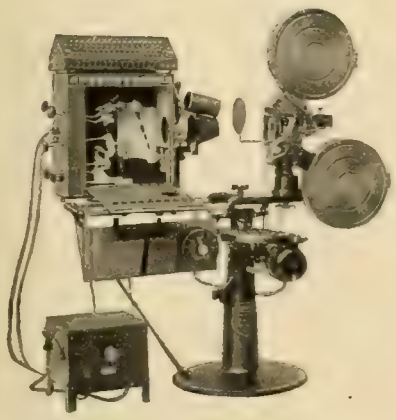
Three in one—
Organ alone—Piano alone—or both together

Fills the needs of the modern theatre. Has the refined orchestral effects, such as Drums, Cymbals, Chimes, etc. 5 models—to fit any size house with capacity of 300 to 5,000

PRICE—WELL. WE CAN ASTONISH YOU

The Harmo Electric Co., 1423 McCormick Building, Chicago, Ill.

YOU WOULD NOT HESITATE



If you could know exactly how much you could increase your BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS by installing a NEW UP TO THE MINUTE MACHINE to provide a "PAINTED ON THE WALL" class of pictures and especially if you knew about our "EASY TERMS PLANS," by which you can make a new machine pay its own way.

We carry a big stock of POWER'S 6-A, NEW 1916 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH AND SIMPLEX MACHINES and all supplies (except films and posters) for the Moving Picture Theatre.

We sell what the people want. Write us today for our catalog and proposition.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY

6th Floor Cambridge Bldg., N. W. Cor. 5th and Randolph
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Distributors of the Power's, Motiograph, Edison and Simplex Machines and Genuine Parts

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS---Continued from page 1399

CAMERAS WANTED.

WANTED—To buy Pathe motion picture cameras. Good prices paid for second-hand Pathes. Los Angeles Mot. Pict. Co., 215 E. Washington St., Los Angeles, Cal.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

NEW MODEL No. 4 Pittman Prof. camera now ready. Automatic dissolve, automatic take-up, both directions, 400 ft. magazine. The most up-to-date camera proposition ever placed upon the market. Tripods, Lenses, etc. Send for particulars. We also specialize in repairs and improvements in all makes of cameras. R. W. Pittman Co., 394 Canal St., New York City. Phone 5961 Franklin.

LATEST professional junior and senior cameras, flexible shafts, printers, perforators winders, measurers, trays, racks, tripods, tilts, cardanopods, companion projectors, dissolvers, lenses optielectromechanical work, filming, title,s America's greatest display, reasonable prices. Pioneer Manufacturer, Patentee. Eberhard Schneider, 219 Second Ave., N. Y. City.

SAVE MONEY Cameras $60 to $200. Tripods, $16 to $55. Printers, $25 to $100. Ray, 526 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City.

FILMS WANTED.

WE ARE in the market for religious films and Bible stories. Knickerbocker I. & E. Film Co., 220 West 42d St., N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE—Big line of features and single reels. All have posters and in good condition. Afco Film Service, Saginaw, Mich.

FOR SALE—New parcel, scenic, educational, industrial subjects at 1c per foot. Hand colored 2c per foot. Balkan War scenes, Boring for Oil, Bombay, India; Hills and Dales, Making Lace, Making Straw Hats, Castles of Italy, Panama Canal, Fighting a Fire, Automobile Races, Cartoons by Meyer, etc., etc. Donald Campbell, 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

QUANTITY OF FEATURES—Some good pullers at a great sacrifice. Lewis, 580 Ellicott Sq., Buffalo, N. Y.

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE—Following Keystones: "Mother's Boy," "Rural Demon," "Fatal Taxicab," "Bill Dodges Bills," "Hide and Seek," "Misplaced Foot," "Lovers' Post Office," "Speed King," "Little Billy's City Cousin." $20 each or $170 for all. 25 per cent., balance C. O. D. Pacific Comedy Film Service, 109 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

WILL SELL OR EXCHANGE ten reels of film for folding chairs. Film live wire stuff. In good condition. Clark Lord, Bemus Point, N. Y.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS—As fine a collection as was ever gathered, about 80,000 feet, including scientific, industrial, travel, scenic, sports, insect, animal and bird life, and hand colored subjects. All in excellent to fine condition. Originally gathered to establish an educational film service. Would prefer to sell the collection as a whole, at a round figure price, but will sell single subjects. Send for list, A. Stone, R. 701, 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

50 FEATURES In 2, 3 and 4 reels each, plenty of paper, 200 single reels, comedies, dramas, western, etc. In good shape, will sell all or part. Box 1004, Portland, Oregon.

FOR SALE—Two first-class negative comedies with print, 25c foot. Park Theater, 55 Park Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FIFTY three and four reel subjects for sale at a bargain. David J. Borun, 556 East Water St., Milwaukee, Wis.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Niagara Violiphone orchestra and eighteen rolls of music. All in A-1 condition. Cheap. J. E. Dorey, Jersey Shore, Pa.

FOR SALE One Seeburg combination pipe organ and orchestra style "M." Brand new. C. C. Haddox, Kenton, Ohio.

AUCTION—Bankrupt sale, three unit Wurlitzer Orchestrion, Sept. 8th, eleven A. M., at Rochester, N. Y. For specifications, address Albert H. Stearns, 901 Wilder Bldg., Rochester, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PHOTOPAQUE makes slides. Sold by Anti-Trust Film Co., Chicago, Ill.

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHTS—Send your biography and latest autographed photo for our "Who's Who in Scenarioland." Excelsior Publishing Co., W. W., 213 Columbia Trust Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

MAKE YOUR own slides with Photopaque, 50c and $1.25, complete outfit with either size. At all Chicago jobbers. Manufactured by D. C. Schupp & Co., Peoria, Ill.

WE BUY—And sell new and second hand moving picture machines, opera chairs and films. Crescent Film Exc., 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

List of Current Film Release Dates

(For Daily Calendar of Program Releases See Pages 1366, 1368.)

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Big "U," Laemmle, L-KO.
Monday—Broadway Universal Features, Imp, Nestor.
Tuesday—Gold Seal, Imp, Rex.
Wednesday—Animated Weekly, L-KO, Victor.
Thursday—Big "U," Laemmle, Powers.
Friday—Imp, Nestor, Victor.
Saturday—Big "U," Bison, Joker.

ANIMATED WEEKLY.

July 28—Number 177 (News).
Aug. 4—Number 178 (News).
Aug. 11—Number 179 (News.
Aug. 18—Number 180 (News).
Aug. 25—Number 181 (News).

BIG U.

July 29—No release this week.
July 31—Mein Friendt Schneider (Drama).
Aug. 5—Out of the Flames (Two parts—Modern Drama).
Aug. 10—Where Happiness Dwells (Drama).
Aug. 12—His Beloved Violin (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 19—Ethel's Burglar (Drama).
Aug. 26—The Mystery of the Tapestry Room (Three parts—Detective—Drama).
Aug. 29—The Valley of Regeneration (Two parts—Military—Drama).

BISON.

July 31—A Daughter of the Jungles (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 7—Gene of the Northland (Two parts—Northwest Drama).
Aug. 14—Chasing the Limited (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 21—The Gopher (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 28—The Social Lion (Two parts—Dr.).

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURES.

Aug. 2—The Scarlet Sin (Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—Judy Forgot (Five parts—Comedy).
Aug. 16—Just Jim (Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—Mrs. Plum's Pudding (Five parts—Comedy—Drama).

GOLD SEAL.

July 27—The Flight of a Night Bird (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 3—The Great Ruby Mystery (Two parts—Detective Drama).
Aug. 10—A Cigarette, That's All (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 17—A Fiery Introduction (Two parts—Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 24—Extravagance (Three parts—Society Drama).

IMP.

July 23—No release this week.
July 27—The New Jitney in Town (Comedy).
July 30—The Hunchback's Romance (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 3—Her Wonderful Day (Drama).
Aug. 6—Leah the Forsaken (Three parts—Dr). (Imp Re-issue).
Aug. 10—To Frisco, Via the Cartoon Route (By Hy Mayer—Comedy—Cartoon).
Aug. 13—Driven by Fate (Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 17—The Country Girl (Drama).
Aug. 20—The Substitute Widow (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 24—Billy's Love Making (Comedy).
Aug. 27—Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (Two parts—Mystery—Drama).

JOKER.

Aug. 7—Their Bewitched Elopement Comedy).
Aug. 14—A Dip in the Water (Comedy).
Aug. 18—Her Wedding Night (Comedy).
Aug. 21—Bobby Bumps Adventures (Animated Cartoon by Earl Hurd.
—Seeing the Funny Side of the World with Homer Croy (Educ.).
Aug. 26—A Case of Beans (Comedy).
Aug. 28—The Bravest of the Brave (Comedy).

LAEMMLE.

Aug. 1—Paternal Love (Drama).
Aug. 5—No release this week.
Aug. 8—The Source of Happiness (Drama).
Aug. 12—No Release This Week.
Aug. 15—In the Grasp of the Law (Drama).
Aug. 19—The Little Blonde in Black (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 22—Dr. Mason's Temptation (Drama).
Aug. 26—No release.
Aug. 29—The Lilt of Love (Drama).

L-KO.

July 25—No release this week.
July 28—Life and Moving Pictures (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 1—No release this week.
Aug. 4—In the Claw of the Law (Comedy).
Aug. 8—Shot in a Bar-room (Comedy).
Aug. 11—Hello Bill (Comedy).
Aug. 15—Love on an Empty Stomach (Comedy).
Aug. 18—No release. Replaced with No. 1 extra Joker.
Aug. 22—A Tale of Twenty Stories (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 25—Mr. Flirt in Wrong (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 29—No release.

NESTOR.

July 26—The Tale of His Pants (Comedy).
July 30—The Rise and Fall of Officer 13 (Comedy).
Aug. 2—It Happened While He Fished (Cmdy).
Aug. 6—Little Egypt Malone (Comedy).
Aug. 9—Dan Cupid Fixer (Comedy).
Aug. 13—Lost—Three Teeth (Comedy).
Aug. 16—Tony the Wop (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Kids and Corsets (Comedy).
Aug. 23—His Lucky Vacation (Comedy).
Aug. 27—His Egyptian Affinity (Comedy).

POWERS.

July 29—"The Jap Phenoms" in Famous Acrobatic Feat.
—Strange Mammals at Home (Ditmar's Educational).
Aug. 5—Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "Saved by a Scent" (Comedy).
Aug. 7—Around the Corner (Drama).
Aug. 12—The Elephant Circus (Vaudeville Act).
—Little People in Fur (Ditmars Educational).
Aug. 14—Haunting Winds (Drama).
Aug. 19—Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "The Dread Society of Sacred Sausages" (Comedy).
Aug. 21—No release. Replaced with extra Powers.
Aug. 21—A Double Deal in Pork (Comedy).
Aug. 26—Seeking an Inspiration (Comedy).
—The Best People on Earth (Topical Education).
Aug. 28—She Loved Them Both (Drama).

REX.

July 25—Bound on the Wheel (Three parts—Drama).
July 27—One on Mother (Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 1—Jealousy, What Art Thou (Two parts—Comedy—Drama).
Aug. 3—The Proof (Comedy).
Aug. 8—Betty's Bondage (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 15—Mountain Justice (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 17—Quits (Drama).
Aug. 22—A Sea Shore Romeo (Comedy).
Aug. 24—The Cad (Drama).

VICTOR.

July 28—The Double Standard (Drama).
July 30—No release this week.
Aug. 4—My Tomboy Girl (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 6—No release this week.
Aug. 11—Refuge (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 13—No Release This Week.
Aug. 18—Lord Barrington's Estate (Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 20—The Taming of Mary (Comedy).
Aug. 25—The Chimney's Secret (Drama).
Aug. 27—The Box of Bandits (Comedy).

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE.

July 25—The Broken Coin, Episode No. 6, "A Startling Discovery" (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 1—The Broken Coin (Episode No. 7, "Between Two Fires") (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 8—The Broken Coin (Episode No. 8, "The Prison in the Palace"—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 15—The Broken Coin (Episode No. 9, "Room 22,"—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 22—The Broken Coin (Episode No. 10, "Cornered"—Two parts—Drama).

Mutual Film Corporation

RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Komic, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Monday—American, Keystone, Reliance.
Tuesday—Beauty, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Wednesday—American, Broncho, Reliance.
Thursday—Domino, Keystone, Mutual Weekly.
Friday—American, Falstaff, Kay-Bee, Majestic or Thanhouser, Reliance.
Saturday—Keystone, Reliance, Royal

AMERICAN.

July 19—The Honor of the District Attorney (Two parts—Drama).
July 21—Wait and See (Drama).
July 26—The Newer Way (Two parts—Dr.).
July 28—The Deception (Drama).
July 30—After the Storm (Drama).
Aug. 2—Detective Blinn (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 4—The Mighty Hold (Drama).
Aug. 9—The Exile of "Bar-K" Ranch (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 11—Comrades Three (Drama).
Aug. 16—The Jilt (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—The Assayer of Lone Gap (Drama).
Aug. 23—Drawing the Line (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 27—Mixed Wires (Comedy-Drama).

BEAUTY.

Aug. 3—Cupid Takes a Taxi (Comedy).
Aug. 10—Jimmy on the Job (Comedy).
Aug. 17—The Honeymooners (Comedy).
Aug. 21—What's in a Name? (Comedy).
Aug. 24—His Mysterious Profession (Comedy).
Aug. 28—Uncle Heck, By Heck (Comedy).

BRONCHO.

July 28—The Phantom Extra (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 4—The Golden Trail (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 11—Shorty Inherits a Harem (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—The Girl from the East (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 25—Pinto Ben (Two parts—Drama).

CUB.

Aug. 19—The Little Hero (Comedy).
Aug. 26—Jerry's Busy Day (Comedy).

DOMINO.

July 29—When Love Leads (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 5—The Promoters (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—The $100.000 Bill (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 19—The Lighthousekeeper's Son (Two parts—Drama).

(Mutual Releases continued on page 1404.)

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand.....$1.25
Ten Thousand.....$2.50
Twenty-five Thousand.....$3.50
Fifty Thousand.....$5.00
One Hundred Thousand.....$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c. per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
Shamokin, Pa.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 1ST

The Sterling Camera and Film Co.'s Splendid Five Part Production

"The Game of Three"

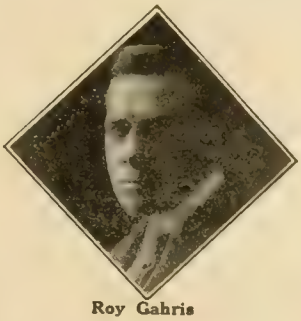
State Rights

State Rights

With two well-known stage stars and a notable cast of popular motion picture players, including BARNEY GILMORE, LILLIAN NIEDERAUR, E. F. ROSEMAN, VIOLET STUART, ROY GAHRIS, GEO. STONE, ROY APPLEGATE, GEO. HENRY, JOHN SHARKEY, MABEL WRIGHT, GRACE NORMAN, RICHARD LISLE AND ONE HUNDRED OTHERS.

BEAUTIFUL PHOTOGRAPHY THROUGHOUT. STREET SCENES ACTUALLY PHOTOGRAPHED AT MIDNIGHT. THRILLS AND SURPRISES GALORE. ATTRACTIVE LINE OF ADVERTISING MATERIAL NOW READY.

Lillian Niederaur



Roy Gahris

Violet Stuart

Barney Gilmore

Roy Applegate

E. F. Roseman

John Sharkey

Mabel Wright

At the release showing The National Board of Censors did not find one objectionable feature and the representatives of the trade papers present were highly pleased with the production.

"The Game of Three"

A DETECTIVE STORY FOUNDED UPON FACTS SURROUNDING A RECENT SENSATIONAL NEW YORK JEWEL MYSTERY.

State Rights

On a new and equitable plan. The manufacturer will help finance the states right man. It would be to your advantage to get particulars either by personal call or by mail.

"The Game of Three"

FIVE REELS, 300 SCENES OF INTERESTING ACTION THROUGH WHICH RUNS A POWERFUL STORY OF CUNNING CONSPIRACY SURMOUNTED BY ARTFUL DETECTIVE INTUITION.

THE STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO.

145 West 45th Street, New York

List of Current Film Release Dates

(For Daily Calendar of Program Releases See Pages 1366, 1368.)

(Mutual Releases continued from page 1402.)

FALSTAFF.

Aug. 16—A Marvelous Marathoner (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Help! Help! (Comedy)
Aug. 23—Glorianna's Getaway (Comedy).
Aug. 27—That Poor Damp Cow (Comedy).
Aug. 30—A Massive Movie Mermaid (Comedy).

KAY BEE.

Aug. 6—The Heart of Jabez Flint (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 13—Over Secret Wires (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 20—A Knight of the Trails (Two parts—Drama).

KEYSTONE.

Aug. 2—A Lovers Lost Control (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 9—A Rascal of Wolfish Ways (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 16—The Battle of Ambrose and Walrus (Two parts—Comedy).

KOMIC.

Aug. 15—The Fatal Finger Prints (Comedy).
Aug. 22—Faithful to the Finish (Comedy).

MAJESTIC.

Aug. 8—Big Jim's Heart (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 10—The Right to Live (Com.-Dr.)
Aug. 15—The Kinship of Courage (Two parts—Melodrama).
Aug. 17—Providence and the Twins (Drama).
Aug. 20—The Root of All Evil (Com.-Dr.).
Aug. 22—The Fatal Hour (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 24—The Little Cupids (Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 29—A Child of the Surf (Two parts—Dr.).

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

Aug. 5—Number 31, 1915 (News).
Aug. 12—Number 32, 1915 (News).
Aug. 19—Number 33, 1915 (News).
Aug. 26—Number 34, 1915 (News).

RELIANCE.

July 28—Billie's Rescue (Drama).
July 31—Fate Takes a Hand (Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 2—The Bride of the Sea (Drama).
Aug. 4—The Little Boy That Once Was He (Comedy).
Aug. 6—A Woman of Nerve (Drama).
Aug. 7—The Ceremonial Turquoise (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—The Little Orphans (Melodrama).
Aug. 11—The Noon Hour (Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 14—The Way of a Mother (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Big Brother (Drama).
Aug. 18—An Independent Woman (Drama).
Aug. 21—The Little Lumberjack (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—Farewell to Thee (Drama).
Aug. 25—Editions de Luxe (Drama).
Aug. 28—A Bold Impersonation (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 30—For His Pal (Drama).

RODEO.

Aug. 9—Aunt Matilda Outwitted (Comedy).

THANHOUSER.

Aug. 8—The Revenge of the Steeplejack (Dr.).
Aug. 10—A Message Through Flames (Two parts—Drama).
—Cupid in the Olden Time (Drama).
Aug. 13—Weighed in the Balance (Drama).
Aug. 15—The Grogmere Ruby (Drama).
Aug. 17—When Hungry Hamlet Fled (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 22—In a Japanese Garden (Drama).
Aug. 24—Snapshots (Two parts—Drama).

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES.

July 29—Milestones of Life (Thanhouser—Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 5—The Girl from His Town (American—Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—The Toast of Death (N. Y. M. P. Corp.—Four parts — Drama — Masterpicture No. 33).
Aug. 19—A Yankee from the West (Majestic—Four parts—Drama).

NORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION.

July 26—The Diamond from the Sky, No. 13, "The Man in the Mask" (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 2—The Diamond from the Sky (No. 14, "For Love and Money"—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—The Diamond from the Sky (No. 15, "Desperate Chances"—Two parts—Drama).

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

RELEASE DAYS.
Monday—Balboa, Globe, Pathe, Photocolor.
Wednesday—Pathecolor, Pathe News.
Saturday—Balboa, Pathe News, Phunphilms.

BALBOA.

July 17—The Mesh of the Net (Three parts—Drama).
July 26—Ima Simp on the Job (Comedy).

GLOBE.

July 26—Eggs and Some Tests (Educational) (Split Reel).
Aug. 2—The Kangaroo (Educational).
—In Pekalongan (Picturesque Java—Scenic—Split Reel).
Aug. 9—Native Venders, Calcutta, Inda (Split Reel—Industrial).

JUMBO.

July 19—Where the Trail Led (Two parts—Drama).

PATHE.

Aug. 2—Col. Heeza Liar at the Bat (Cartoon—Comedy).
—An Animated Study of Birds (Part 4—Educational—Split Reel).
Aug. 9—The Romance of Elaine No. 33 "The Life Chain (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Romance of Elaine No. 34, "The Flash" (Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—Col. Heeza Liar War-Dog (Cartoon—Comedy)
—An Intimate Study of Birds, No. 5 (Split reel).

PATHECOLOR.

July 26—The House Divided (Two parts—Dr.).
July 31—Pro Patria (Six parts—Drama).

PATHE NEWS.

Aug. 11—Number 64, 1915 (News)
Aug. 14—Number 65, 1915 (News).
Aug. 18—Number 66, 1915 (News.
Aug. 21—Number 67, 1915 (News).

PHOTOCOLOR.

July 19—The Mongoose (Educational).
Aug. 9—In Old "Ile de France" (Colored—Scenic—Split Reel).

PUNCH.

Aug. 2—Whiffles at the Front (Two parts—Comedy).
Aug. 9—Max and His Mother-in-Law (Two parts—Comedy).

PHUNPHILMS.

July 31—Spit-Ball Sadie (Comedy).
Aug. 9—Soaking the Clothes (Comedy).

STARLIGHT.

Aug. 14—Amateur Night (Comedy).
Aug. 21—The Sky Is the Limit (Comedy).

VICTORY.

Aug. 14—The Dawn of Freedom (Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Ingrate (Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 21—The Monopolist (Three parts—Dr.).

Miscellaneous Feature Releases.

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN FILM COM.

July—The New Evangeline (Drama).

AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT FILM CO., INC.

July—The Battle and Fall of Przemysl (Four parts—Topical).

CENTRAL FILM COMPANY.

August—The Eastland Disaster (Topical).

COSMOFOTOFILM CO.

July—Liberty Hall (London — Four parts — Drama).

DRA-KO FILM COMPANY, INC.

August—York State Folks (Four parts—Dr.).

FOX FILM CORPORATION.

July—The Devil's Daughter (Drama).

FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CO.

August—Just Out of College (Comedy).

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

July—The Heart of Lady Alaine (Four parts—Drama).
August—The Doctor's Secret (Drama).

K. & R. FILM CO., INC.

July—Silver Threads Among the Gold (Drama).

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION.

July 26—The Second in Command (Quality Dr.).
Aug. 2—Sealed Valley (Drama).
Aug. 9—The Vampire (Popular Plays & Players Drama).
Aug. 16—A Royal Family (Columbia Drama).

MIRROGRAPH CORPORATION.

July—All for a Girl (Five parts—Drama).

N. C. M. P. INC.

July—With the Fighting Forces of Europe (Topical).

PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORPORATION.

Aug. 2—Rags (Famous Players, Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 5—Sold (Famous Players—Dr.).
Aug. 9—Secret Orchard (Lasky—Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—Nearly a Lady (Morosco—Bosworth—Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—Marriage of Kitty (Lasky—Five parts Drama).
Aug. 19—The Helene of the North (Famous Players—Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—The Heart of Jennifer (Famous Players—Five parts—Drama).
Aug. 26—Majesty of the Law (Morosco-Bosworth—Five parts—Drama).

PARAMOUNT TRAVEL SERIES.

The Panama Canal of Today.
Tropical Birds and Animals.
Motoring, Cuba and Jamaica.
Capturing the Lordly Tarpon.
Banana and Pineapple Growing.
Water Sports at the Equator.
Capitol of S. A., At Washington.
The Snow Capped Andes Mountains.
Santiago's Famous Fire Department.

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM COMPANY.

July 15—The Pursuing Shadow (Five parts—Drama).

RANDOLPH FILM CO.

July—Where the Shriner Meets the Cowboy (Drama).

SING SING FILM CO.

July—Forty Years in Sing Sing (Three parts—Drama).

STERLING CAMERA & FILM COMPANY.

August—The Game of Three (Five parts—Dr.).

SUN PHOTOPLAY CO.

July—The Princess of Judia (Five parts—Drama).

THE PHOTOPLAY RELEASING CO.

July —Sarah Bernhardt at Home (Two parts—Topical).

WORLD COMEDY STAR FILM CORPS.

July 26—Pokes and Jabs in a Quiet Game (Wizard—Comedy).
Aug. 2—Pokes and Jabs in Mashers and Splashers (Wizard Comedy).
Aug. 9—Pokes and Jabs in "Juggling the Truth" (Wizard—Comedy).

WORLD FILM CORPORATION.

Aug. 2—Sunday (Lederer Drama).
Aug. 9—The Stolen Voice (Brady Drama).
Aug. 16—The Little Dutch Girl (Shubert Dr.).
Aug. 23—The Master Hand (Premo—Drama).
Aug. 30—The Renegade (Armstrong—Drama).

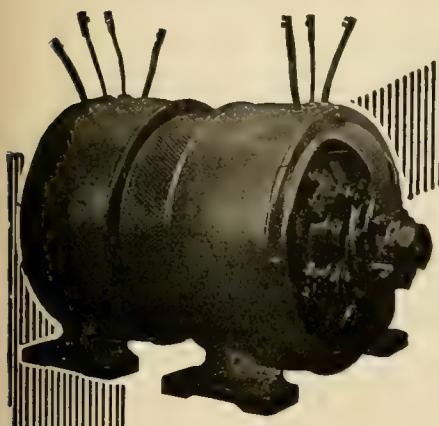
V-L-S-E, INC.

Aug. 9—Chalice of Courage (Vitagraph, Six parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Ring Tailed Rhinoceros (Lubin—Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—House of a Thousand Candles (Selig—Six parts—Drama).
Aug. 30—Tillie's Tomato Surprise (Lubin—Five parts—Drama).

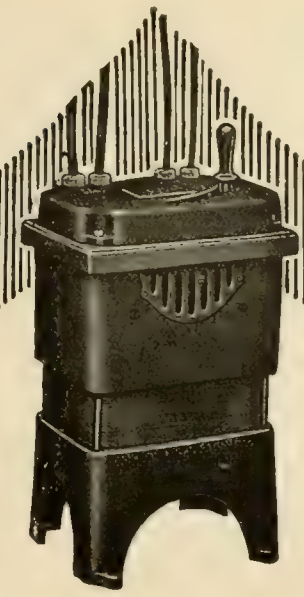
GEORGE KLEINE.

June—The Commuters (Five parts—Drama)
Sept. 1—The Woman Next Door (Drama).

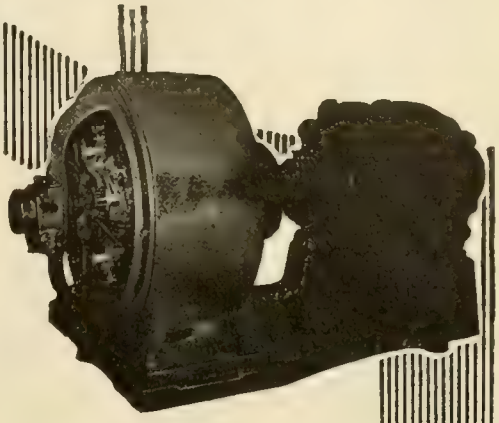
BETTER LIGHT LESS CURRENT



The DC Compensarc lowers the voltage of a direct current supply to that required at the lamp without needless waste.



The AC Compensarc cuts ⅔ from your lighting bill if you use alternating current.



The AC to DC Compensarc will transform alternating into direct current and reduce the voltage at the same time without needless waste.

No matter what current you have—Alternating or Direct—or what voltage or frequency, one of the will enable you to secure a light that will give those clear, bright pictures that everybody now demands.

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARCS

What's the use of paying extra money for special screens, projecting machines, and first run films and then spoil the whole result with poor light? With the Fort Wayne Compensarcs you can get any kind of light you want regardless of the kind or quality of your current supply.

The Compensarcs will give you

STEADY LIGHT. No flickering, no sputtering, even when changing intensities or from one machine to another.

WHITE LIGHT. No yellow streaks, no ghosts.

BRIGHT LIGHT. Three times the light with two-thirds the current.

They are safe, efficient, easy to operate, fool proof and reliable.

Compensarcs are so commonly found in motion picture theatres that many people now call all current saving and transforming devices by that name.

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1702 BROADWAY
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

But Remember

If it isn't a FORT WAYNE
*it isn't a "COMPENSARC"*

Send TODAY for this FREE descriptive booklet

List of Current Film Release Dates

(For Daily Calendar of Program Releases See Pages 1366, 1368.)

General Film Company

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Knickerbocker, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Aug. 10—The Law of Love (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—Stronger Than Love (Drama).
Aug. 13—The Last Drop of Water (Drama). (Biograph Re-issue No. 10.)
Aug. 14—The Little Slavey (Drama).
Aug. 16—Mrs. Randolph's New Secretary (Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 17—Ashes of Inspiration (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—East Lynne (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 19—His Last Wish (Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 20—Death's Marathon (Biograph—Reissue No. 11—Drama).
Aug. 21—The Ace of Diamonds (Drama).
Aug. 23—Twice Won (Drama).
Aug. 24—Mister Paganini (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 26—His Birthday Gift (Comedy—Drama).
Aug. 27—The Sheriff's Baby (Drama) (Biograph Re-issue No. 12).
Aug. 28—The Need of Money (Drama).

EDISON.

July 31—The Bedouin's Sacrifice (Drama).
Aug. 4—Not Much Force (Comedy).
Aug. 6—June Friday (Special—Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 7—Not Wanted (Child Story).
Aug. 11—Food for Kings and Riley (Comedy).
Aug. 13—The King of the Wire (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 14—A Sprig of Shamrock (Drama).
Aug. 18—Cartoons on Tour (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Shadows from the Past (Special—Four parts—Drama).
Aug. 21—On the Wrong Track (Dramatic-Educational).
Aug. 25—Clothes Make the Man (Comedy).
Aug. 27—The Slavey Student (Special—Three parts—Comedy-Drama).
Aug. 28—Matilda's Fling (Comedy).

ESSANAY.

Aug. 3—Business Rivals (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 4—Dreamy Dud in a Visit to His Uncle Dudley's Farm (Living Cartoon). —A Scenic Subject on the same reel.
Aug. 5—Street Fakers (Comedy).
Aug. 6—Broncho Billy's Protege (Western—Drama).
Aug. 7—Eyes That See Not (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—The Happy House (Drama).
Aug. 10—When My Lady Smiles (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 11—The Fables of "The Tip and the Treasure (Comedy).
Aug. 12—The Bank (Special—Two parts—Com.).
Aug. 12—The Bell Hop (Western—Comedy).
Aug. 13—Broncho Billy Steps In (Western—Drama).
Aug. 14—A Cave on Thunder Cloud (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Market Price of Love (Drama).
Aug. 17—Legrand's Revenge (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—"Dreamy Dud" Sees Charlie Chaplin (Cartoon—Comedy).
Aug. 19—Tale of a Tire (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Broncho Billy's Marriage (Western—Drama).
Aug. 21—The Woman Hater (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—Does the Woman Forget? (Drama).
Aug. 24—Hearts and Roses (Special—Three parts—Drama)
Aug. 25—The Fable of "The Roystering Blades" (Comedy).
Aug. 26—The Drug Clerk (Western—Comedy).
Aug. 27—Her Return (Western Drama).
Aug. 28—Rule Sixty-three (Special—Two parts—Drama).

KALEM.

Aug. 6—For High Stakes (Special—Two parts—Comedy—Drama).
Aug. 7—The Substitute Fireman (Episode No. 39 of "The Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
Aug. 9—The Runaway Wife (Special—Four parts—"Broadway Favorites"—Dr.).
Aug. 10—The Winning Wash (Ham & Bud Comedy).
Aug. 11—The Riddle of the Rings (Episode No. 4 of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel—Special—Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 13—The Country Girl (Drama) (Re-issue).
Aug. 14—The Limited's Peril (Episode No. 40 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
Aug. 16—The Legacy of Folly (Special—Three parts—"Broadway Favorites"—Dr.).
Aug. 17—Ham at the Beach (Ham and Bud—Comedy).
Aug. 18—The Substituted Jewel (Episode No. 5 of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel"—Special—Two parts—Dr.).
Aug. 20—The Game of Life (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 21—A Perilous Chance (Episode No. 41 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
Aug. 23—The Barnstormers ("Broadway Favorites"—Special—Four parts—Dr.).
Aug. 24—Ham and the Experiment ("Ham" & "Bud" Comedy).
Aug. 25—Mysteries of the Grand Hotel ("A Double Identity"—Sixth Episode—Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 27—A Battle of Wits (Alice Joyce Reissue—Drama).
Aug. 28—Train Order Number 45 (Episode No. 42 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).

LUBIN.

Aug. 6—A Day of Havoc (Drama).
Aug. 7—Billie's Debut (Comedy).
Aug. 9—The Great Lone Land (Drama).
Aug. 10—Horrible Hyde (Comedy). —Relentless Dalton (Comedy).
Aug. 11—Bold Emmett, Ireland's Martyr (Special—Three Parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—The Power of Prayer (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 13—The Deception (Drama).
Aug. 14—Her Romeo (Comedy).
Aug. 16—Polly of the Pots and Pans (Drama).
Aug. 17—The Dead Letter (Comedy). —Persistent Dalton (Comedy).
Aug. 18—The Second Shot (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 19—It Was to Be (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 20—When Souls are Tried (Drama).
Aug. 21—The Life Guard (Comedy).
Aug. 23—The Spark and the Flame (Drama).
Aug. 24—Dog-Gone Luck (Comedy). —The Victorious Jockey (Comedy).
Aug. 25—A Species of Mexican Man (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 26—Under the Fiddler's Elm (Drama).
Aug. 27—The Mirror (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 28—Billie Joins the Navy (Comedy).

MINA.

July 22—On the Job (Comedy).
July 29—He's In Again (Comedy).
Aug. 5—Waking Up Father (Comedy).
Aug. 12—Billy's Nurse (Comedy).
Aug. 19—A Case of Limburger (Comedy).

SELIG.

Aug. 7—The Black Leopard (Jungle Zoo—Dr.).
Aug. 9—The Face in the Mirror (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 63, 1915 (News).
Aug. 10—The Gold Dust and the Squaw (Western—Drama).
Aug. 12—When Love Is Mocked (Special—Three Parts—Drama).
Aug. 12—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 64, 1915 (News).
Aug. 14—The Orang-Outang (Jungle-Zoo—Wild Animal—Drama).
Aug. 16—In the King's Service (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 16—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 65, 1915 (News).
Aug. 17—The Prima Donna's Mother (Drama).
Aug. 19—The Clause in the Constitution (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 19—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 66, 1915 (News).
Aug. 21—A Lucky Deal (Drama).
Aug. 23—The Girl With the Red Feather (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 67, 1915 (News).
Aug. 24—The Doughnut Vender (Drama).
Aug. 26—The Strange Case of Talmai Lind (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 26—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 68, 1915 (News).
Aug. 28—The Master of the Bengals (Jungle-Zoo Wild Animal Drama).

VITAGRAPH.

Aug. 7—Pat Hogan, Deceased (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 9—What Did He Whisper? (Comedy).
Aug. 10—Life's Yesterdays (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 11—His Fairy Godmother (Comedy).
Aug. 12—His Bunkie (Melo-Drama).
Aug. 13—A Keyboard Strategy (Comedy).
Aug. 14—Heavy Villains (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Com.).
Aug. 16—Mr. Jarr and Circumstantial Evidence (No. 16 of the "Jarr Family" Series—Comedy).
Aug. 17—My Lost One (Broadway Star Features Special—Three parts—Dr.).
Aug. 18—She Took a Chance (Comedy).
Aug. 19—The Quest of the Widow (Comedy).
Aug. 20—Cutey's Awakening (Comedy). —Swedish Army and Navy (Educ.).
Aug. 21—The Dawn of Understanding (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 23—The Cub and the Daisy Chain (Comedy).
Aug. 24—From the Dregs (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Aug. 25—A City Rube (Comedy). —Perils of the Baltic (Educational).
Aug. 26—The Good in the Worst of Us (Dr.).
Aug. 27—The Wardrobe Woman (Drama).
Aug. 28—The Tigress (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Dr.).

General Film Company Features

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES.

July 17—The Confession of Madame Barastoff (Special—Three parts—Drama).
July 20—The Lorelei Madonna (Special—Three parts—Drama).
July 31—The Mystery of Mary (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 3—The Scar (Special—Three parts—Dr.).
Aug. 14—Heavy Villains (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 17—My Lost One (Broadway Star Features Special—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 28—The Tigress (Special—Three parts—Drama).

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES.

Aug. 4—Tides of Time (Special Feature—Three parts—Drama).
Aug. 18—Capital Punishment (Special Feature Three parts—Drama).

SELIG, LUBIN, BIOGRAPH, VITAGRAPH, ESSANAY, KALEM, EDISON—Supplied in regular service, one, two, three reels—from our exchange nearest you.

Greater New York Film Rental Co., 126-132 W. 46th Street, New York

SOMETHING
EVERY EXHIBITOR
SHOULD KNOW ABOUT

MINA
FILMS

MinA comedies are the only one reelers whose makers have not subordinated them to multiples.

They have become the standard by which all other single reelers are judged.

Released Thursdays
General Film Program
Aug. 19: "A Case of Limburger"

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THIS?

GARDEN, OPEN AIR THEATRE
Monument Sq., Southampton, N. Y., July 27, 1915.

Mr. P. J. Murphy, Special Mirroroid Representative.
Dear Sir: I wish to thank you for your many favors, and at the same time must say that the MIRROROID SCREEN that you mounted for me is not only ALL YOU CLAIMED FOR IT, BUT MORE.
With best wishes for your continued success, believe me,
Sincerely yours,
J. S. ALLEN.

WHY DON'T YOU JOIN THE RANKS OF 9000 SATISFIED USERS OF MIRROROID, THE PERFECT SCREEN?

3 Colors
Silver White
Silver Flesh
Pale Gold
2 Finishes
Rough or matte

Yours for Projection Contentment,
J. H. GENTER CO., Inc.
NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Patented
June 9, 1908
Feb. 16, 1915
Send for Large Free
Samples.

THE BIOSCOPE

IS THE ENGLISH TRADE JOURNAL
OF THE MOVING PICTURE INDUSTRY
Annual Subscription (post free) 14s. (Dollars, 3.50)
85 SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

A Dependable Mailing List Service

Saves you from 30 to 50% in postage, etc. Reaches all or selected list of theatres in any territory. Includes name of exhibitor as well as theatre in address. A list of publicity mediums desiring motion picture news. Unaffiliated exchanges looking for features, Supply houses that are properly characterized as such. Producers with address of studios, laboratories and offices. Information in advance of theatres being or to be built.

MOTION PICTURE DIRECTORY COMPANY
80 Fifth Avenue, New York Phone 3227 Chelsea
425 Ashland Block, Chicago Phone 2003 Randolph
Addressing Multigraphing Printing Typewriting

FRUDE FILM CIRCUIT CLOSER

For motor driven picture machines
SAVES MONEY AND WORRY
MOTION PICTURE FIRE PREVENTION DEVICES COMPANY
1601 Indiana Avenue, Chicago

In Answering Advertisements, Please Mention the Moving Picture World

The Great Eastland Disaster

PANORAMIC PICTURE, size 5½ x 22, showing four prominent views of this catastrophe. Per 100, $5.00; per 1000 pictures, $40.00.

Post Cards of Eastland Disaster

10 of the most prominent views in post cards. Per 1000 cards, assorted, $5.00
MAX RIGOT CO., Powers Bldg., Chicago

Netherlands | DUTCH EAST INDIES

DE KINEMATOGRAAF
Leading Organ of the Cinematograph Trade. With Correspondents all over the World.

AMSTERDAM	HOLLAND
Annual Subscription	fl. Dutch 7.50
Sample Copies	fl. Dutch 0.20
Advertisements, each line	fl. Dutch 0.20

DUTCH WEST INDIES | Belgium

Quality means EVANS means Perfection

We do PARTICULAR Work for PARTICULAR People
Developing and Printing ONLY

EVANS FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Telephone 6881 Audubon
416-418-420-422 West 216th Street, New York City

YOU VERY WELL KNOW that the Moving Picture Public, as well as the Eye Specialists, will eventually demand

COLOR WORK IN NATURAL TINTS

Why not enter the Field immediately and increase your Profits? Write us for Sample and Prices—They will convince you
ENTERPRISE FILM CO., Inc. Tel. 8888 Bryant Longacre Building, New York City

ANTI-CENSORSHIP SLIDES

Four Slides .....50c.
Six Slides .....75c.
Twelve Slides All Different $1.50

Moving Picture Exhibitors and Theatre Managers. The fight against Legalized Censorship of Moving Pictures is your fight. Show these slides on your screen for the next few months and help create a strong public sentiment against this unnecessary and un-American form of legislation. See page 1743 of our issue of March 20th for text matter. All slides neatly colored, carefully packed and postage paid.

"Keeping Everlastingly at It Brings Success"
Send your slide orders and remittances at once to
MOVING PICTURE WORLD 17 Madison Avenue, New York

Gundlach Projection Lenses

You can not get the BEST results without them, so what's the use worrying along with ordinary lenses when there is absolute certainty that these lenses will make your picture as sharp and brilliant as it is possible to make it. You can not afford to have a poorer picture than your competitor and nearly every theatre in the country is using Gundlach Projection Lenses now, so if you are not you are behind the game and badly handicapped.

There is no string attached to Gundlach Projection Lenses. They are sold subject to approval and you decide with your own eyes whether they improve the picture or not. They can be obtained promptly for any operating condition.

UNITED STATES WAR DEPARTMENT
SPECIFIES
GUNDLACH PROJECTION LENSES

New York, May 15, 1915.

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Gentlemen: Your letter of May twelfth, with reference to the advertising in connection with the Government's specifying Gundlach Lenses for the sixty-six machines, received.

There is no objection to advertising any of the facts in this matter, and in this connection we might state that both Gundlach Motion Picture and Gundlach Stero Lenses were specified, after exhaustive tests had been made.

The sixty-six machines were shipped to the Chaplains of the various army posts and were sent to China, the Philippine Islands, the Hawaiian Islands, Porto Rico, Canal Zone, and all over the United States.

Yours very truly,
THE PRECISION MACHINE CO., INC.
J. E. Graef, Act. Gen. Mgr.

JEG/MH

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.
808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

ELECTRA

PINK LABEL

CARBONS

are a guarantee of perfect projection

A Limited Stock of

5/8 x 12 Cored Double Pointed and 5/8 x 6 Cored Still on Hand

To be had of all first-class dealers

SOLE IMPORTER

HUGO REISINGER

11 Broadway New York

EXPERT PRINTING and DEVELOPING

Fireproof throughout. Your negatives are safe here. Lowest prices

Most convenient location in the city. 23d St. cars pass our doors.
Prompt deliveries

NEW YORK FILM LABORATORIES
521-523 West 23d St., N. Y.

If your Panoramic and Tilting Tripod are not as good as this one—YOU ARE WORKING AT A DISADVANTAGE. If your Tripod and head are not like this—It is not as good. SHALL WE PROVE IT?

UNIVERSAL TILTING AND PANORAMIC TRIPOD

Wide spread top legs give truss strength and rigidity. Segmental slide prevents twitching.
Panoramic table quickly changed to any position. Position locking devices. Snap handles cannot fall off. Deep cut worms and gears insure long wear.

THE UNIVERSAL CAMERA CO., 25 E. Washington St., Chicago, U. S. A.

Demonstrational Catalogue on request

Represented by ATLAS EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.
821 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

More Light on the Subject

Motion Picture Houses having alternating current can use to obtain direct current and thus throw more light and steadier light upon the screen and make perfect pictures.

Wotton Rexolux

To learn how this will increase patronage and profits, address

Electric Products Company
CLEVELAND, OHIO

MANAGERS and OPERATORS
You Positively Need

Motion Picture Electricity

A Compilation of "Hallberg's Talks"
By J. H. HALLBERG

Almost 300 pages of meaty facts and information which every motion picture man ought to have at his fingers' ends.

PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE AT $2.50 PER COPY, POSTAGE PAID, BY

Chalmers Publishing Co.

17 Madison Avenue, New York

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

SIMPSON SOLAR SCREEN

The Original Daylight Screen

SEAMLESS SEAMLESS

THE PERFECT PROJECTION SURFACE

Write us for particulars.

ALFRED L. SIMPSON
113 West 132nd Street, N. Y. City

Patented June, 1908

At Liberty

Successful Actress in heavy, emotional and character parts. Distinguished appearance. Previous engagements with leading film companies and first class theatres. Will consider opportunity with established firm only. Address "Artiste," c/o Moving Picture World, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., New York.

30¢ COST 70¢ PROFIT

Makes Money

For Picture Theatres Airdomes, Stores, Stands, etc.

The famous BUTTER-KIST Corn Popper runs itself while you take in the money. It needs no watching. Pops, separates and butters automatically. Capacity 75 bags per hour—$3.75 in sales.

An unbeatable salesman. The glittering motion draws crowds—increases theatre attendance. Coaxing fragrance of popping BUTTER-KIST makes people hungry to eat it. It teases the nickels and dimes out of their pockets.

See These Sales Records

Scores making $25 to $60 clear profit weekly. Peter Kominos writes: "I sold $1,440.65 in three months."

Motion picture shows selling up to $400 per month.

You clear 70c on every dollar—233 1/3 per cent on investment.

BUTTER-KIST Corn Popper

(Strictly Automatic)

Folks say they never tasted such popcorn as BUTTER-KIST. Big, fluffy, white flakes—crisp, crackling, melt-in-your-mouth morsels—piping hot, each piece evenly buttered.

Everybody loves it.

Machine is superbly built, with gleaming plate glass sides—mahogany, oak or ivory white cabinet. Metal parts highly polished and nickeled.

Managers! Write for "The Little Gold Mine" FREE!

Handsome new book—"The Little Gold Mine"—gives the wonderful new merchandising facts. Make a small payment down and soon pay balance from BUTTER-KIST sales. Fully illustrates machine, gives actual sales records and proof of profits! Sent free postpaid. Your copy is ready. Shall we send it?

Every day you save means $3 to $16 in sales—extra money. (81)

Holcomb & Hoke Mfg. Co.
1647 Van Buren Street
Indianapolis, Ind.

RELEASING
CHAPLIN FEATURES
JOE BLOOM
Pacific Coast Agent FEATURE FILMS
Main Office: 1214 Third Ave., Seattle, Wash.
For States of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, and Utah.

FOR SALE
3 and 4 Reel Features
Original Lobby
$25.00 and up
Wisconsin-Illinois Feature Release Co.
314 Mallers Bldg., Chicago

THE CATALOGUE OF BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
contains much that is valuable about electric lighting in general, and moving picture work in particular. Send for it.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

SCENARIOS WANTED
One-reel comedies and three-reel feature dramas.
Melies Mfg. Company,
326 Lexington Ave.,
New York City.

Bucks M. P. Film Cement
For the discriminating Exhibitor and Operator. For mending all kinds of films. Will not curl or injure the film. All orders shipped same day as received. Agents wanted.
Six Bottles, $1.00 One Quart Bottle, $2.50
BUCK CEMENT CO. Pittsfield, Mass.

BOOK
Uncle Sam at Work
Also
Brand new Chaplins
PEERLESS FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago, Ill., 36 West Randolph St.
Des Moines, Ia., Family Theatre Bldg.

Get acquainted with the
ERBOGRAPH WAY
of Developing and Printing
ERBOGRAPH COMPANY
203-11 West 146th St., New York City

Make Your Lobby the Art Gallery of the Town with my High Grade Paintings of the Film Stars
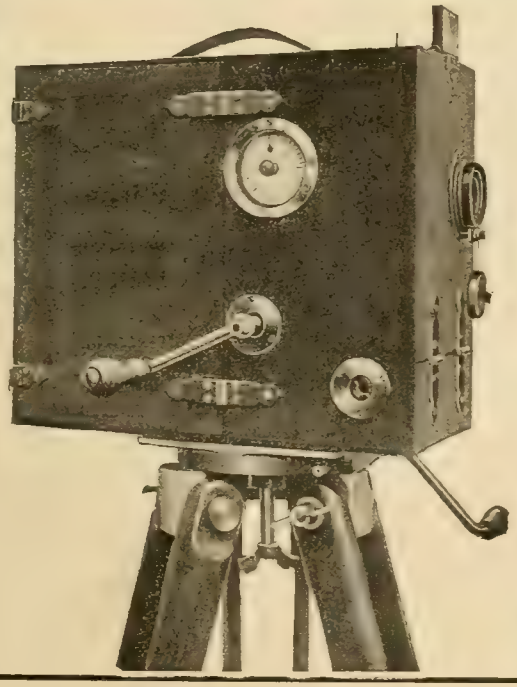
Write for Particulars
M. KASSEL, Artist
220 WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK

QUALITY FIRST!!
YOUR NEGATIVE DEVELOPED, PRINTED, TITLED and SHIPPED within 12 hours.
5c. per foot complete
Local work given preference over all other.
6c. TITLES per foot
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th Street, New York City

Ornamental Theatres
PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.
THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St., CHICAGO, ILL.



Motion Picture Camera
Thoroughly constructed to produce steady, reliable pictures. Adaptable to every purpose. A superior product at a moderate price.
Fully equipped including Tripod
$150.00
Los Angeles Motion Picture Company
Manufacturers
215 East Washington St.
Los Angeles, California.

WATSON VENTILATING FANS

DIRECT CURRENT POLYPHASE
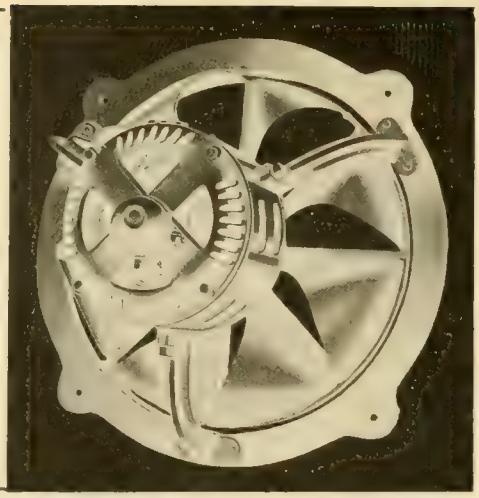
SINGLE PHASE
CONSTANT OR VARIABLE SPEED
ALL CURRENTS AND VOLTAGES
IMMEDIATE DELIVERY



Mechanical Appliance Company

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

ALSO MANUFACTURERS OF WATSON MOTORS AND GENERATORS

BRANCH OFFICES: Chicago, Ill., The Mechanical Appliance Co., 749 Webster Bldg., 327 So. La Salle St. St. Louis, Mo., 1213 Pine St., W. L. Cummiskey, Mgr. Minneapolis, Minn., 125 So. 10th St., R. L. Lunt, Mgr. Detroit, Mich., 117 Larned St. W., R. L. Gomon, Mgr. Philadelphia, Pa., 1128 Chestnut St., J. M. Brugler, Mgr. Cleveland, Ohio 519 Erie Bldg., E. E. Beam, Mgr.

G. W. BRADENBURGH

802 VINE STREET
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Name	Length	Make	Price	Advertising
St. George and the Dragon	3000 ft.	Milano	$75	1-3-8
Hari Kari	3000 ft.	Apex	75	1-3-6
House of Mystery	4000 ft.	Pathe	60	1-3-6
The Invaders (Indian)	3000 ft.	Kay Bee	75	1-3-6
In the Stretch	4000 ft.	Ramo	75	1-3-6
In the Eagle's Claws	3000 ft.	Ambrosio	60	1-3-6
Jack Sheppard	4000 ft.	Hepworth	75	1-3-6
Jess	4000 ft.	Kennedy	75	1-3-6
Life's Temptations	4000 ft.	Imperator	75	1-3-6
Man in the Cellar	3000 ft.	I S P	75	1-3-6
Mexico	4000 ft.	Mex.	75	1-3-6
Mystery of the Death Head	3000 ft.	Monarch	60	1-3-6
'Neath the Lion's Paw	4000 ft.	Gaumont	125	1-3-6
A Victim of War	4000 ft.	Benned	100	1-3-6
Baptism of Fire	3700 ft.	Itala	75	1-3-6
Fall of Constantinople	3000 ft.	(Col.) Gaumont	75	1-3-6
Outlawed	3000 ft.	Ammex	75	1-3-6
Evils of Divorce	4000 ft.	Schiller	100	1-3-6
Into the Depths	3000 ft.	Asta Nielsen	75	1-3-6
Taxicab 1098	3000 ft.	Pennant	45	1-3-6
Devil Within	3000 ft.	Ramo	60	1-3-6
Brother Against Brother	3000 ft.	Apex	75	1-3-6
Lay Down Your Arms	3000 ft.	Apex	75	1-3-6

FOR SALE

First Class Modern Theatre

in live town with drawing population of 70,000. Seating capacity 1400. This house is modern in every respect. Well situated, and has always been the first class legitimate house of the town. Moving pictures will make big money in this house. FOR SALE AT BIG BARGAIN. For full particulars address J. O. WALSH, U. S. Motion Picture Corporation, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

ACTOR

with over twelve years' European and American legitimate and picture experience desires permanent engagement with established company. Expert in make-up and character work. Address C. H. K., c/o Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Avenue, New York.

Motion Picture Machines

FROM

The Largest Supply House in the East

We are Distributors for

Minusa Gold Fibre Screens

The Acme of Screen Perfection.

Power, Simplex and Baird machines and all supplies

Catalogs for the asking

LEWIS M. SWAAB

1327 Vine Street, PHILADELPHIA

KNOWLEDGE BRINGS SUCCESS

Messrs. Exhibitor, Exchangeman, Operator, and Film Men Everywhere:—The moving picture business is one of the youngest but one of the leading industries of the world to-day. We may well be proud to be connected with it. Are you keeping up? Do you know all about it? It will yield larger returns for an equal amount of work to the men who know. Each weekly issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD contains more up-to-date information than you can get from all other sources. Subscribe now if not already on our mailing list. You will get your paper hours earlier than from the newsstand and it costs less.

ONE YEAR.....$3.00
SIX MONTHS $1.50
See title page for rates Canada and Foreign

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Avenue, New York.

.....

.....

.....

Cut out and mail today. Theatre.....

THE PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester, Ind.

Opera Chairs
Folding Chairs
Complete Line
Prompt Shipments
Write for Catalogue
With Direct Factory Prices

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON
HIGH Quality
LOW Price

Opera Chairs
immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.

Developing and Printing

References: Chicago Speedway Pictures, Sarah Bernhardt at Home, etc. Prompt guaranteed work. Expert camera men furnished. Best tinting and toning.
ADVANCE MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
People's Gas Building, Chicago

FOR the best music obtainable for motion pictures find out about the new
SEEBURG-MOTION-PICTURE-PLAYER
Manufactured by
J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.
Republic Bldg., 209 S. State St., CHICAGO

First Class Features
Being booked in
IOWA, INDIANA, ILLINOIS, WISCONSIN, MICHIGAN and MISSOURI
Apply
Central Film Company
110 South State St. CHICAGO

Are You Tired
of playing waltzes and popular songs for all your pictures? Try "bringing out" the dramatic scenes with dramatic music. The Orpheum Collection
contains the best music of this kind published. Issued in Three Series:
No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3
Piano (24 pages each), 58 cts. for each series; $1.15 for any two; $1.70 for all three. Violin, 40 cts. each; 75 cts. for any two; $1.05 for all three. Cornet, 35 cts. each; 65 cts. any two; 95 cts. all three. First and second series have parts for Cello, Flute, Clarinet, Trombone and Drums. Practical for piano alone or in combination with any above instruments. Discounts on orders for four or more parts. Send for free sample pages. Note new address.
CLARENCE E. SINN
1842 West 21st St. Chicago, Ill.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office
728 Mission Street

REAL QUALITY CHAIRS
FOR
QUALITY REEL SHOWS

Ask for FREE booklet V-2 upholstered Veneer Seating V-3
If you are interested in
Motion Picture Theatre Seating
send ground sketch and we will draft for you FREE seating plan, showing the most economical arrangement of seating for your theatre.

American Seating Company
Display Rooms and Installation Service
14 E. Jackson Blvd., CHICAGO 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK
Boston, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Forty Other Large Cities

In Answering Advertisements, Please Mention the Moving Picture World

See the New "1915" Models. After Jan. 1st

"UNLIKE THE ORDINARY CHAIRS"

ADDRESS:
THEATRE CHAIR SALES DEPT.
NEW LONDON,
U. S. A. WISC.

CASTEEL THEATRE CHAIRS

MADE ONLY BY
WISCONSIN SEATING FACTORIES

FACTORIES IN NEW LONDON
PT. WASHINGTON
SHEBOYGAN
U. S. A. GRAFTON

For POSTERS
Goes Lithographing Co.
Chicago

TYPE W FLAME ARC
Powerful LAMPS Economical
For brilliantly illuminating the outside of your theatre
General Electric Company
4987 General Office, Schenectady, N. Y

CARBONS CARBONS CARBONS
All standard grades carried in stock. Prompt shipments made.
Write for my prices
Henry W. Davis, Salisbury, N. C.
The South's Exclusive Carbon House

MONEYMAKING Exhibitors of MOVING PICTURES
RELY UPON FULCO FOR EVERYTHING
MACHINES—ACCESSORIES—SUPPLIES
Catalog No. 5—The "Fulco" Book—Covers the Line from A to Z
E. E. FULTON CO., 152 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO

SIMON ARKIN
CONSULTING ENGINEER
Theatre Construction, Projection, Illumination, Lenses and Optometry
346 EAST 173RD STREET
NEW YORK CITY

There Is No Program So Good That One of Our Features Cannot Improve
Pasquali, Terriss Feature Film and Interstate Feature Film
MASTERPIECES
Picture Playhouse Film Co.
71 W. 23rd St. New York City

Aug. 21

UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA
N. Y. LOCAL No. 1

Aug. 21

Midsummer Gathering of the Film Clan

A GALA CARNIVAL and FIELD DAY with 2000 PHOTOPLAYERS

At Work and Play at

Brighton Beach From 10 A.M. to 12 P.M. Saturday, Aug. 21

(In case of rain postponed until following Saturday)

A RIOT OF FUN FOR ONLY FIFTY CENTS

PHOTOPLAYERS' PASTIMES

MOST OF THE FAMOUS FILM ACTORS WILL BE THERE

Novel athletic and sporting events participated in by well-known stars of the screen for handsome prizes.

Horse Racing,
Ballroom Contests,
Photoplayers' Tug-of-War,
Automobile Race,
Comic Stunts,
Motorcycle Race,
Aquatic Sports,
Exhibition Dancing
And Other Events.

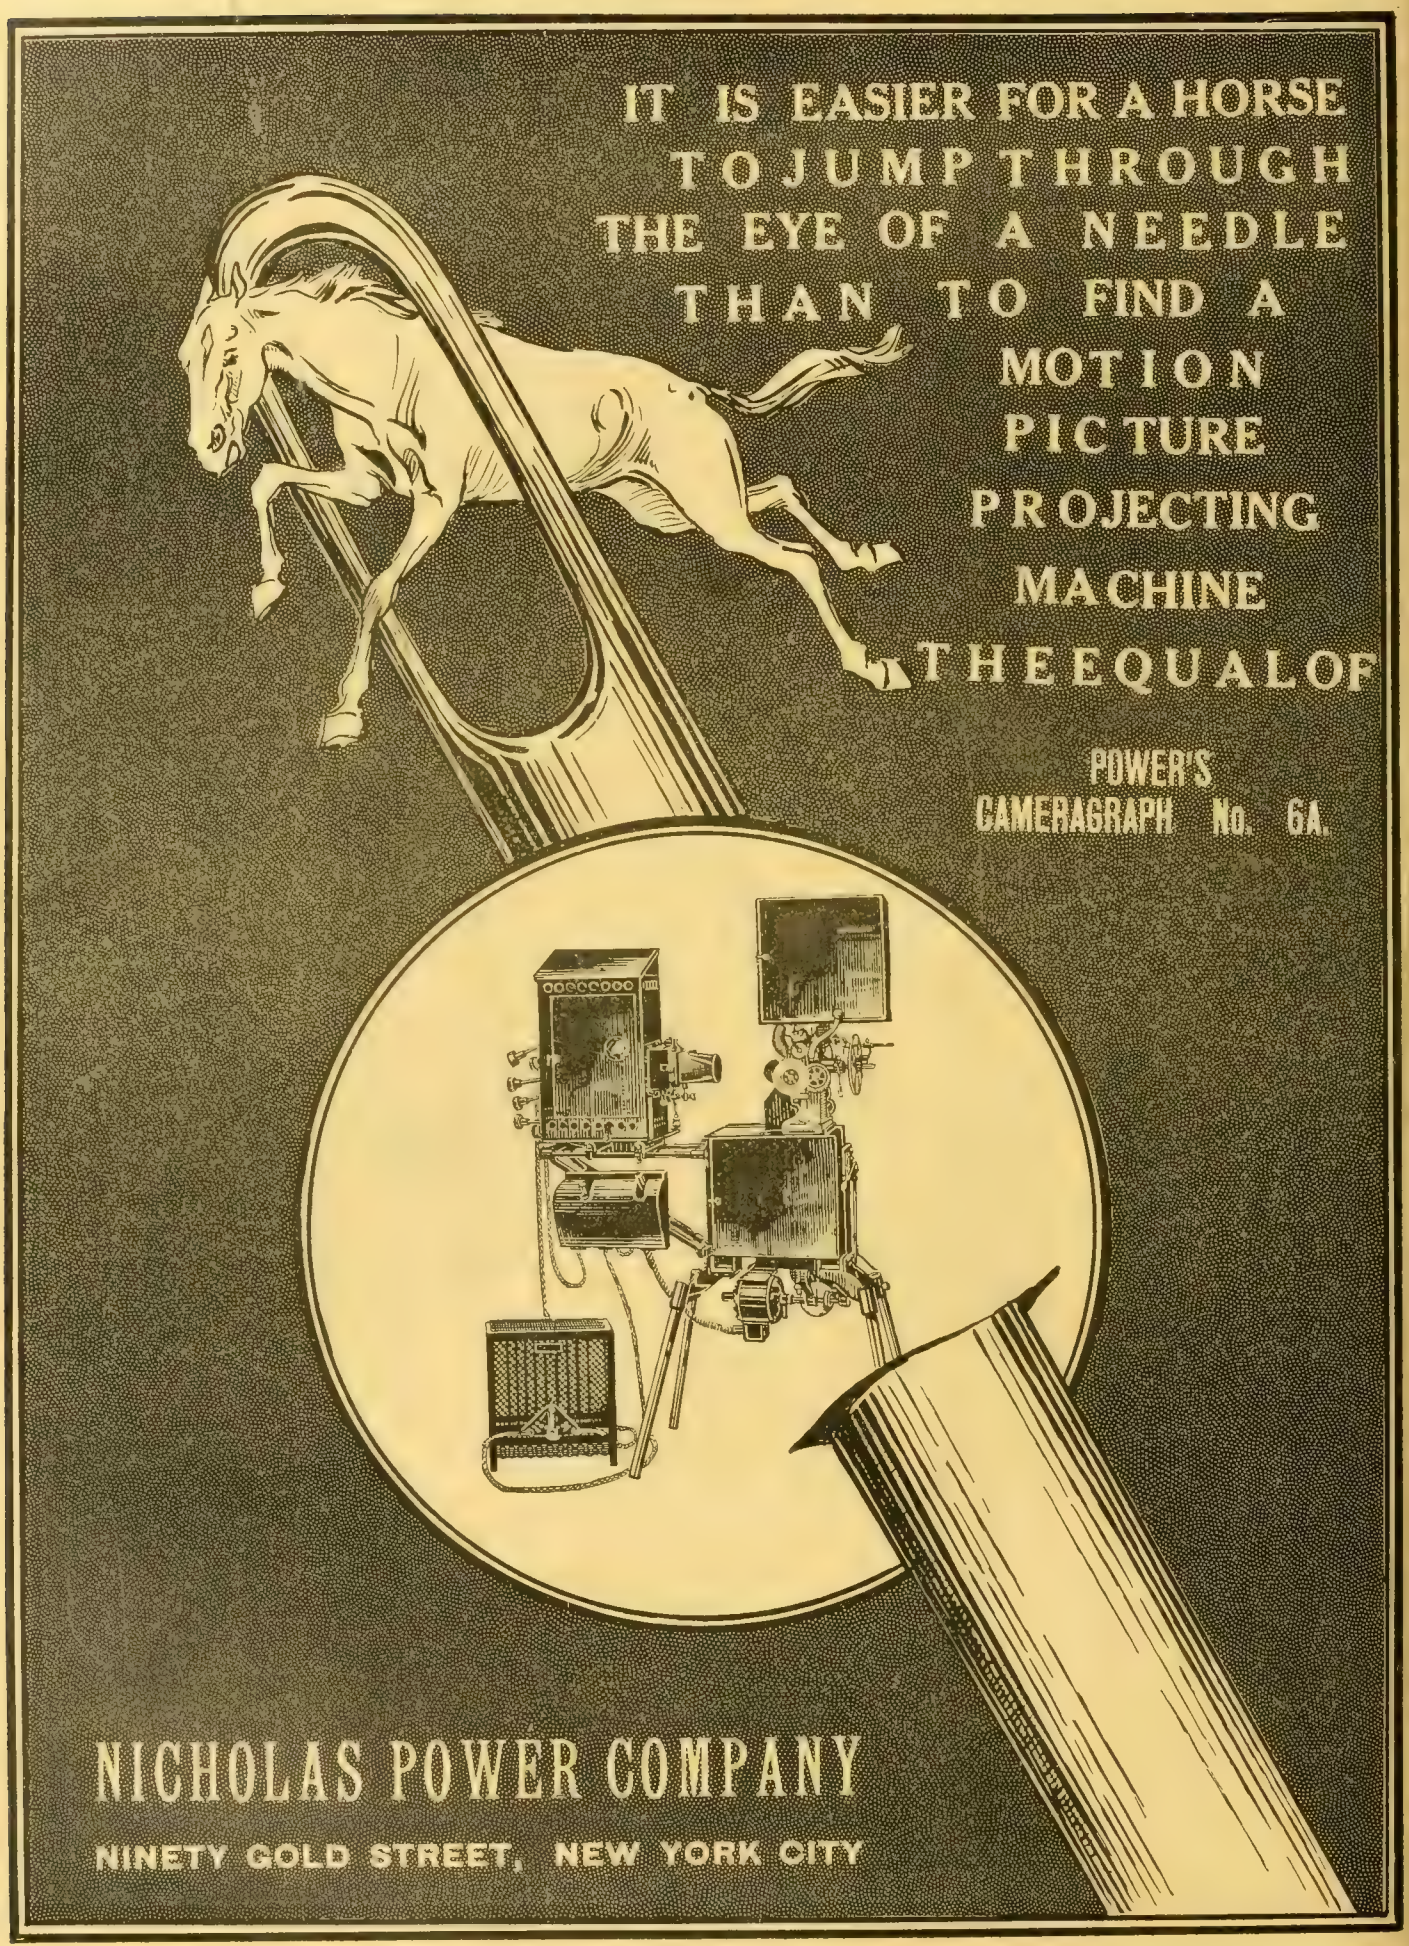
CHARLIE CHAPLIN CONTEST "THE GODDESS" CONTEST

JOE HUMPHREYS, MASTER OF CEREMONIES

Dip, Dinner and Dance—Combination Ticket admitting to all, $2.50

Address all entries, stating event, to the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, 110 West 40th Street, New York City.

SELIG SELECTS
"THE STRANGE CASE of TALMAI LIND"
Written by and Featuring KATHLYN WILLIAMS
A Selig Diamond Special in Three Intensely Exciting Reels
Written by and featuring
KATHLYN WILLIAMS
THE WORLD'S MOST POPULAR ACTRESS
A Selig Jungle Zoo drama in which Kathlyn again plays with wild beasts. Released in regular program on Thursday, August 26th.
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.
CHICAGO



IT IS EASIER FOR A HORSE
TO JUMP THROUGH
THE EYE OF A NEEDLE
THAN TO FIND A MOTION PICTURE
PROJECTING MACHINE
THE EQUAL OF
POWER'S
CAMERAGRAPH No. 6A.
NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
NINETY GOLD STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Vol. 25, No. 9 August 28, 1915 Price 10 Cents

H. E. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Foundling" (Famous Players).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

The Sign of CONSISTENCY

EDWIN THANHOUSER Presents

"SNAPSHOTS"

One of those "different" dramas that are so refreshing in their novelty and action. Grace deCarlton, Harris Gordon and Arthur Bauer send a whirling plot on to a thunder-clap finish.

Two Reels—Tuesday, August 24th

"THE VAGABONDS"

T. J. Trowbridge's pathetic poem of the wanderer and his dog. It's a symphony of a shattered soul that will cut into the hardest heart ever born. Morris Foster plays the tramp with a sympathy touchingly human.

One Reel—Sunday, August 29th

FALSTAFF COMEDIES

"THE MIRTH OF A NATION"

EDWIN THANHOUSER Presents

"GLORIANNA'S GETAWAY"

Peggy Burke and Boyd Marshall are both victims of a dark joker. The situations are comical, but the action is plausible.

One Reel—MONDAY, AUGUST 23rd

"THAT POOR DAMP COW"

Riley Chamberlin gets a surprise that takes him two shocks to recover from.

One Reel—FRIDAY, AUGUST 27th

THANHOUSER FILM CORP.

NEW ROCHELLE N.Y.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.—SOLE DISTRIBUTORS FOR UNITED STATES-MEXICO & CANADA

Paramount

EXHIBITORS

are facing the greatest era of prosperity that has ever been possible to them in their motion picture experience.

National Advertising

The most efficient attempt ever made to bring the public into theatres is now being made by Paramount with its national advertising campaign and its superb productions.

The Exhibitor's Local Advertising

The Paramount Exhibitor should connect his theatre with this national campaign, by his local advertising.

The value of the Paramount trade-mark is enhanced greatly by this advertising. You can benefit by it.

In this campaign Paramount has arranged to give the Exhibitor many valuable helps. For example:

Free Advertising Cuts

Paramount will supply Exhibitors without charge attractive advertising cuts to be used in their local papers.

Send in your request NOW.

Paramount Pictures Corporation
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FORTIETH STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

Paramount Pictures

Paramount Pictures

Paramount Pictures

BOUQUETS

OUR heading we believe that of judging the play critic. Every sin been passed upon the tiful story of "JEWEL" under the direction of by the Universal.

Robert Grau, for over 10 years Publicity Director for Mademoiselle Sarah Bernhardt, says: "In the photoplay 'JEWEL', Lois Weber has utilized the motion picture art as never before. Besides holding an audience from start to finish, the picture is of distinct service to mankind. I would give more for 'JEWEL' than for all the stage successes of other days combined."

John W. Semler, New York Manager, The Morning Telegraph Motion Picture Weekly, says: "'JEWEL' could not be better named. It is a picture that creates a something in the human mind that makes life seem better. It is beautiful beyond any expression of words and should be seen by every man, woman and child."

Louis T. Rogers, General Booking Agent for the 21 Fox Theatres, says: "Ella Hall, star in 'JEWEL,' is as fine a character portrayal as I have ever seen in any feature film. The direction is excellent—the photography very, very good. 'JEWEL' will make a decided hit in any house where it is shown. Every picture shown in the Fox houses receives extraordinary consideration. For that reason the beautiful picture of 'JEWEL' produced by the Smalleys, was booked in all the Fox Theatres."

"Splendid. More pictures like this one would uplift the mind of the public." . . .—Miss Sternfeld
—Mrs. Sternfeld
—Mrs. Basch
—Mrs. O'Dell
—Mrs. Caro.

"There is no praise too high, and I for one think it is splendid."
—Libby Mitchel, N. Y. City.

"Excellent. Splendidly directed. Acting great."—C. H. Pierce, Eastern Rep. of Bosworth (Inc.).

"Beautiful in every detail."
—Mrs. R. C. Common, N. Y.

"Exquisite setting and wonderful stage direction. Film splendid. Acting superb."
—Bertha Hoffman Rouch, N. Y.

"I think JEWEL splendid. Beautifully staged with fine moral and plenty of food for thought."
—Helen Fish, N. Y.

"Full of smiles and tears. Truly human and truly beautiful."
—Millie Milne, N. Y. City

"One of the best things I have ever seen in the Film World."
—Mrs. F. M. Spiegel, N. Y. City.

"The most helpful and exquisitely produced picture I have ever seen. Sincerely hope you will give us more like it."—Mary K. McLaury, New Rochelle, N. Y.

"It is the most beautiful picture I have ever seen. The spirit beautiful and the stage setting perfect."—Mrs. P. N. Erkins, Flushing, L. I.

"The sweetest picture I have ever seen."
—Lulu Spaulding Warren, N. Y. City

"Prettiest, sweetest and most true-to-life picture I have ever seen—bar none. . . ."
—J. Lindheimer, N. Y. City

"A true JEWEL, so beautiful that I could see it again fifty times and gulp each time."
—Mrs. R. H. Rothstein, New York

"I have seen hundreds of pictures and I consider this by far the finest I have ever seen. Let us have more of this kind."
—Mrs. McClintock, New York

From the world's greatest film critics for "JEWEL" reads—"BOUQUETS" from the world's greatest film critics for "JEWEL" because the individuals whose names and expressions are published here are as fully capable true merits of a pictured presentation as the most experienced professional photo- gle one of these expressions is entirely impartial, unbiased and unprejudiced, judgment having merits of the production as well as the truly beautiful thought it carries to the world. This beau- from the book "Jewel" by Clara Louise Burnham, and adapted for the screen by Lois Weber, Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber simply marks a stepping stone to even greater achievements

The Billboard Critic says: "Once more has the Weber sermon picture made its impression. 'JEWEL' is all that is beautiful in the novel by Clara Louise Burnham, with the added touches of film craft which make the names of Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley forces to conjure with; and the consensus of opion is that 'JEWEL' is without doubt the Smalleys' greatest achievement to date. It would be unfair to omit that Ella Hall's portrayal of Jewel had much to do with the accomplishment in this production. Here we have the true picture actress—one cannot recall a stage star who could excel this little girl's performance in a character so replete with subtlety."

George Blaisdell, Film Critic of the Moving Picture World, says: "The Universal has scored a decided hit. 'JEWEL' contains pathos in abundance, but is leavened throughout with smiles that will alternate with the tears. 'JEWEL' is a rare story and is founded on small things by which the depth of human appeal becomes great."

F. C. Proctor, Jr., of the Proctor theatres, says: "'JEWEL' is one of the finest dramas I have ever seen. There's a heart throb in every scene, with a smile chasing every tear."

"Wid" Gunning, of the New York Evening Mail, says: "'JEWEL' is one of the most beautifully developed psychological studies I have ever seen. It rings true and convinces. The theme is human and carries tremendous significance. As a production it is perfect. In contrasted thoughts it makes a wonderful companion piece for 'SCANDAL.'"

Andrew Seidenspinner, Business Agent, N. Y. Children's Aid Society says: "I consider the picture 'JEWEL' the finest produced to date. I trust that 'JEWEL' will have a long and successful run."

"The picture is a JEWEL." . . .
—Stella Eiseman, Far Rockaway, N. Y.

"This is a wonderful production, inspiring and beautiful."—Mrs. A. Seixas, Far Rockaway, N. Y.

"Beautiful. Helpful. A lesson to humanity. Grateful for the opportunity of witnessing so beautiful a picture."—Mrs. F. R. Wood, New Rochelle, N. Y.

"I think JEWEL is perfectly beautiful."—Clare Muller, New Rochelle, N. Y.

"I consider JEWEL the most beautiful picture I ever saw."
—Furelia F. J. Carr

"Excellent and artistic. Creating a healthful atmosphere."
—Mrs. M. Weber, Pelham, N. Y.

"A thing of beauty and joy forever."
—Mrs. W. Kline, N. Y. City

"Ella Hall is perfect in this beautiful story. It was great."—Mrs. Katherine Hanlin, Yonkers, N. Y.

"An instructive, healthful and wonderful picture, portraying a beautiful story."
—A. Wordendorff, N. Y. City

"A charming play, beautifully set."
—L. D. Weiser, N. Y. City

"The best I have ever seen." . . .
—Mary Helton, N. Y. City

"I can say nothing but what we want many more like it."
—Estell W. Simon, Cedarhurst, L. I.

"A clean cut and beautiful picture presented in an excellent and capable manner."
—Geo. K. Henken, N. Y. City

"The picture is most wonderful."
—Mrs. E. A. Manning, New Rochelle, N. Y.

"A perfect picture finished in every detail."—Mrs. J. Kaseler, New Rochelle, N. Y.

"Without exception, most beautiful of pictures and theme."—Mrs. Effie J. Martin, N. Y. City.

"One of the most beautiful pictures I have ever seen. Could not be improved in any detail. Enjoyed every single moment."—Mrs. W. I. Capen, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

"A splendid film."—Rose C. Grimes, Jersey City, N. J.

"Splendid."—Mrs. Schoening, N. Y. City.

"This is a masterpiece and should make a hit wherever shown."
—Mr. Bernhard Haas, N. Y. City

"Delightful. Beautifully staged and morally refreshing."
—Mrs. W. H. Powell, New York City

BROADWAY UNIVERSAL FEATURES

THIS exquisite pictured presentation is unquestionably one of the most superb that has ever been offered to Exhibitors. "JEWEL" stands as a living monument and tribute to the genius of such master minds as Clara Louise Burnham, the author of "JEWEL," Lois Weber, who wrote "Hypocrites" and the film version of "JEWEL" and Phillips Smalley, who with Lois Weber produced "JEWEL." "JEWEL" will establish the prestige of your theatre. Book it. Advertise it greater than anything your city has ever seen. You'll re-book it after its first presentation. Write or wire your Exchange.

UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

"The Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

1600 BROADWAY NEW YORK

Miss FLORENCE ROCKWELL

HER reputation is established as a Broadway Star and leading woman, in roles requiring skill and talent, from Juliet and Ophelia opposite Richard Mansfield and Robert Mantell, to the creation of tense and charming leads in some of Klaw and Erlanger's greatest productions.

But behind reputation is a personality; one shortly to be proved especially strong and winning in photo-drama. Miss Rockwell, who has never made public appearance upon the screen, has been engaged for a feature production yet to be announced.

THE FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORPORATION

WILLIAM L. SHERRILL, President

18 EAST 41ST STREET NEW YORK CITY

JUST RELEASED

George Ade's Comedy, "Just Out of College," with Eugene O'Brien

Some territory still open to State's Rights Buyers

SOMETHING
EVERY EXHIBITOR
SHOULD KNOW

It is our boast that KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES offer more for the money than any other productions on ANY PROGRAM.

Each production has a popular legitimate star: a well known producer and a high salaried author—all on the REGULAR PROGRAM at no extra charge to the Exhibitor.

RELEASED EVERY OTHER WEDNESDAY on the REGULAR PROGRAM of the
GENERAL FILM CO.

Knickerbocker Star Features
NEW YORK

"A BUNCH of KEYS"

A Comedy in 5 Acts

Charles Hoyt's greatest stage success

Featuring

June Keith, John Slavin and William Burress

Produced by Richard Foster Baker

"The Blindness of Virtue"

The Great Morality Drama

In 6 Acts

By COSMO HAMILTON

Featuring

Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn

Produced by Joseph Byron Totten

"The White Sister"

In 6 Acts. By F. MARION CRAWFORD

Presenting

VIOLA ALLEN

America's Foremost Actress, and

RICHARD C. TRAVERS

Produced by Fred. E. Wright

"The Slim Princess"

In 4 Acts

George Ade's

Wonderful Comedy-Drama in which

Ruth Stonehouse stars

Produced by E. H. Calvert

"GRAUSTARK"

In 6 Acts

A Thrilling Romance by

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

with

Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman

Produced by Fred. E. Wright

Trademark Reg.
U. S. Pat. 1907

ESSANAY

"FIRST TO STANDARDIZE PHOTOPLAYS"

1333 ARGYLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

ASK THE EXHIBITOR WHO USES ESSANAY

He will tell you there is a quality about the Indian Head brand of photoplays that brings results.
Essanay offers no get rich quick scheme. It devotes its energies to producing photoplays of high standard; plays that please the spectators and insure steady patronage. Ask the exhibitor who has tried them.

HENRY B. WALTHALL, EDNA MAYO and BRYANT WASHBURN are presented in "THE WOMAN HATER"

In 3 acts. By H. C. Chatfield-Taylor

PRODUCED BY CHARLES J. BRABIN
RELEASED AUGUST 21.

The Latest

Essanay-Chaplin Comedy

"The Bank"

is the funniest yet produced by the world-famous comedian, Charles Chaplin.

"The Quitter"

Drama, Monday, Aug. 30. The struggle of a poor but talented architect to win fame and love.

"The Return of Gentleman Joe"

2-act Drama. Tuesday, Aug. 31. The last of a series of Adventures of Dominica, the beautiful and talented thief. By Henry C. Rowland. Featuring Nell Craig and Ernest Maupain.

"Joe Boko"

In "SAVED BY GASOLINE." Animated cartoon. Wednesday, Sept. 1. Side-splitting comedy by Wallace A. Carlson.

Watch for

G. M. ANDERSON
and MARGUERITE CLAYTON

in their latest western dramas. They are thrilling spectators in thousands of theatres.

"Versus Sledgehammers"

Comedy. Thursday, Sept. 2. A breezy western photoplay of a duel with sledgehammers.

"Broncho Billy Begins Life Anew"

Drama. Friday, Sept. 3. A western drama featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton.

"The Whirlpool"

3-act Drama. Saturday, Sept. 4. A woman's honor is jeopardized and an innocent man is tried for murder because of a flirtation. Written by Edward T. Lowe, Jr. Featuring Nell Craig and Warda Howard. Produced by Fred. E. Wright.

Released through the General Film Co.

Trademark Reg.
U. S. Pat. 1907

ESSANAY

"FIRST TO STANDARDIZE PHOTOPLAYS"

1333 ARGYLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

PARAMOUNT

DANIEL FROHMAN
PRESENTS
THE WORLD'S FOREMOST CHARACTER-COMEDIAN,

SAM BERNARD

IN HIS FIRST SCREEN
APPEARANCE, AS

"POOR SCHMALTZ,"

A FOUR-REEL LAUGH,

RELEASED AUGUST 23RD.

SCHMALTZ PREPARES FOR HIS SOCIAL DEBUT

PRODUCED BY THE

FAMOUS PLAYERS

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President
DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director
EDWIN · S · PORTER, Treasurer and General Manager

Canadian Distributors—Famous Players

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

PROGRAM

THE INCOMPARABLE MIRTH-PRODUCER,

SAM BERNARD

IN

"POOR SCHMALTZ,"

ONE OF THE GREATEST LAUGH-TRIUMPHS
EVER FILMED!

"VON VIG ON DER HEAD ISS WORTH TWO IN DER HANDT!"

POOR SCHMALTZ "IN DUTCH,"

FILM COMPANY

Executive Offices
213-229 WEST 26TH ST.
NEW YORK

Film Service, Ltd., Calgary—Montreal—Toronto

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

AMERICAN FILM COMPANY, INC.
PRESENTS
Infatuation

A Mutual Master Picture

From Lloyd Osbourne's Wonderful Novel of Love and Romance

To be released September 2nd

A young girl who hungers for love—who finds society life a humdrum existence—loses her heart to a star of the "ten-twenty-thirty." A wondrous story written by one who wrote as co-author with Robert Louis Stevenson.

Four Amazing Parts

"Infatuation" is a four-part feature. Each of the parts teems with an uncontrollable love—with situations that surprise and are unconventional. It is a strong story enacted in a bold way. The film version of "Infatuation," the novel by Lloyd Osbourne, published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

A Cast of Stars

Margarita Fisher—the sprightly, black-haired star of the screen, plays the leading role—the role of the love hungry girl. In the all-star supporting cast are Lucille Ward, Joseph E. Singleton, Harry Pollard and a host of others—all favorites.

Superlative Scenic Effects

Exquisite effects have been obtained in this remarkable picture. There are scenes of social splendor—scenes of stage and dressing-room life—scenes that make you gasp—and wonder.

Good for a Run of Several Days

"Infatuation" is a play that all your patrons want to see. It is good for a run of several days—a big feature! Book it now! It will bring crowds—crowds—crowds.

Regular American Releases

A Divine Decree
Two-Part "Flying A" Drama
Featuring Winifred Greenwood—Edward Coxen
Directed by Henry Otto Date of Release Aug. 30th

Uncle Heck, by Heck!
American "Beauty" Comedy-Drama
Featuring
Beatrice Van—John Sheehan—John Stepping
Directed by John Steppling
Date of Release Aug. 28th

Green Apples
American "Beauty" Comedy-Drama
Featuring
Neva Gerber—Webster Campbell
Directed by Archer MacMackin
Date of Release Aug. 31st

The Spirit of Adventure
Single-Reel "Flying A" Drama
Featuring Vivian Rich—Jack Richardson—Walter Spencer
Directed by Reaves Eason
Date of Release Sept. 1st

American Films
Mean Crowded Houses

Each of these releases is distributed throughout the United States exclusively by Mutual Film Corporation

American Film Co., Inc.
S. S. Hutchinson, President CHICAGO, ILL.

CLIMAX THEATRE
THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY
Greatest of Photoplay Stories By Roy L. McCardell
IRVING CUMMINGS WILLIAM RUSSELL
LOTTIE PICKFORD EUGENIE FORDE
$10,000 FOR A SUGGESTION
TODAY

SEE WHAT THE CLIMAX THEATRE DID AT A 10:30 A.M. MATINEE WITH

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY

A Picturized Romantic Novel

By Roy L. McCardell Directed by William D. Taylor

You exhibitors who have waited to be shown, here is proof of the tremendous box-office drawing power of "The Diamond From the Sky," the original continued photoplay in chapters. This great crowd flocked to the Climax Theatre, Milwaukee, to see "The Diamond From the Sky," at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. A new two-act chapter released each week. Chapter 17 is now appearing. Book now and watch YOUR profits grow!

Remember the $10,000.00 prize!

For booking information write, wire or see at once the North American Film Corporation representative at your nearest Mutual exchange or write or wire us.

North American Film Corporation
JOHN R. FREULER, President
71 West 23rd Street, New York City
North American Representives at Every Mutual Exchange in America

Produced by
American Film Company, Inc.
S. S. Hutchinson, President

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

BOSWORTH INCORPORATED

PRESENTS

GEORGE FAWCETT

THE CELEBRATED AMERICAN ACTOR WHO TOOK LONDON BY STORM

IN

"THE MAJESTY OF THE LAW"

A MASTERFUL DRAMA OF LIFE, LOVE AND HONOR IN A VIRGINIA COUNTRY SEAT. A PORTRAYAL THAT WILL GRIP THE HEART-STRINGS.

RELEASED AUGUST 26 on the PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

BOSWORTH INCORPORATED

PUBLICITY OFFICE
220 WEST 42ND STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

CANADIAN DISTRIBUTORS FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE LTD.

STUDIOS
211 NORTH OCCIDENTAL BV'D
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

MONTREAL, TORONTO, CALGARY.

BOSWORTH INCORPORATED

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION

in Quality PICTURES

francis x. bushman can no more be replaced in the hearts of his millions of admirers than can bernhardt be replaced by a black face comedienne.

hand made heroes do not endure.

bushman's popularity and drawing power have been earned—not forced. his picture in your house means money.

for the first time in his long career, francis x. bushman is appearing in big plays produced seriously with support consistent with his standing as the foremost star of screendom.

next release

"the silent voice"

released shortly on METRO program

BRANCHES GIRDLING AMERICA

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION

1465 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION

b. a. rolfe
offers

the winsome viennese actress

emmy wehlen

in charles horan's heart interest story

"when a woman loves"

a five act filmization of a play, constructed to touch the hearts and provoke deep emotions.

comes this divine mistress of emotion and pantomime, to dazzle by her art and enchanting beauty.

released august 25
on the METRO program

BRANCHES GIRDLING AMERICA
METRO PICTURES CORPORATION
1465 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

Announcement of Change In Release

OF THE EDISON MASTERPIECE

Mrs. Fiske

IN

Vanity Fair

Owing to the extraordinary nature and elaborate pretentiousness of this mammoth Edison Feature and in strict adherence to our irrevocable policy of allowing an abundance of time for careful editing and laboratory work, "Vanity Fair" will be released October 6th instead of September 8th as previously announced. In its place

GEORGE KLEINE

Offers

Frank Sheridan

IN

The Money Master

For Release September 8th

That mighty drama of the gold lust and the Ghetto. Founded on Cleveland Moffett's international success, "THE BATTLE."

Mr. Sheridan is supported by

PAUL McALLISTER
FANIA MARINOFF
ANNE MEREDITH
CALVIN THOMAS
SAM REID

and others of recognized reputation

RELEASED THROUGH THE

Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service

Make your dates early through the following Kleine offices:

NEW YORK
226 W. 42nd St.

CHICAGO
166 N. State St.

ATLANTA
71 Walton St.

BOSTON
14 Piedmont St.

DALLAS
238 Saner Bldg.

DENVER
405 Railroad Bldg.

MINNEAPOLIS
708 First Ave., N.

PITTSBURGH
123 Fourth Ave.

PHILADELPHIA
1309 Vine St.

SEATTLE
204 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.

SAN FRANCISCO
234 Eddy Street

KANSAS CITY
209 Ozark Bldg.

LOS ANGELES
514 W. 8th St.

TORONTO
96 Bay Street

GEORGE KLEINE

General Offices: 11 EAST 14th ST., NEW YORK

Coming!

THE WOMAN NEXT DOOR. By Owen Davis — (Kleine)
Featuring Irene Fenwick. — Release September 1st

THE MONEY MASTER. By Cleveland Moffett — (Kleine)
Founded on "The Battle." Featuring Frank Sheridan, Paul McAllister, Fania Marinoff. — Release September 8th

HELLO BILL. By Wm. M. Goodhue — (Kleine)
Featuring Bickel and Watson — Release September 15th

VANITY FAIR. By W. M. Thackeray — (Edison)
Starring Mrs. Fiske — Release October 6th

THE CAT'S PAW. By William Hamilton Osborne — (Edison)
Release October 13th

THE POLITICIANS. By Aaron Hoffman — (Kleine)
Featuring Bickel and Watson — Released October 20th

THE GREEN CLOAK. By Owen Davis — (Kleine)
Featuring Irene Fenwick — Release November 3rd

A MESSAGE TO GARCIA. By Elbert Hubbard — (Edison)
Release November 10th

THROUGH THE FOLLOWING KLEINE OFFICES

NEW YORK
226 W. 42nd Street

CHICAGO
166 N. State St.

ATLANTA
71 Walton Street

BOSTON
14 Piedmont Street

DALLAS
238 Saner Building

DENVER
405 Railroad Bldg.

MINNEAPOLIS
708 First Ave., N.

PITTSBURGH
123 Fourth Avenue

PHILADELPHIA
1309 Vine Street

SEATTLE
204 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.

SAN FRANCISCO
234 Eddy Street

KANSAS CITY
209 Ozark Bldg.

LOS ANGELES
514 W. 8th Street

TORONTO
96 Bay Street

GEORGE KLEINE

General Offices: 11 East 14th St., New York City

NOW!!

THROUGH THE

Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service

BEAUTIFUL

IRENE FENWICK

IN OWEN DAVIS'

THE WOMAN NEXT DOOR

(Five Parts)

Scores the real triumph of her film career in a role delightfully suited to her particular and peculiar talents—

The winning mannerisms and charming personality of the dainty Lily Kardos of "The Song of Songs" finds its strongest parallel in the engaging Jenny Gay of "The Woman Next Door."

"The Woman Next Door" is a dramatic masterpiece—entertaining, interest-sustaining—following a story of pathos and passion to the splendidly poised climax of the fifth reel.

Make Your Dates Early---NOW! While It's New In Your Territory!

For Release September 1st

PARAMOUNT

LASKY

A VICTORY for the PHOTOPLAY INDUSTRY

BLANCHE SWEET in THE SECRET ORCHARD

CONDEMNED by the Pennsylvania CENSORS--

Blanche Sweet in the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's production, "The Secret Orchard," released through the Paramount Pictures Corporation was exhibited before the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors as provided by the State law and declared barred from exhibition in Pennsylvania. IT HAD BEEN APPROVED AND PASSED IN ITS ENTIRETY BY THE NATIONAL BOARD OF CENSORS. In its indictment, the Pennsylvania censors said:

"It jeopardizes public morals."
"Sin must not be the theme of a photoplay."
"The photoplay is not the place to record life as it really exists."
"We cannot see the distinction between high moral purpose and sensationalism."

W. Stephen Bush, in The Moving Picture World, says:

LASKY

JESSE L. LASKY

120 WEST 41 ST STREET

JESSE L. LASKY Pres. SAMUEL GOLDFISH

PROGRAM

LASKY

Pennsylvania's Board of Censors OVERRULED

BLANCHE SWEET in THE SECRET ORCHARD

---EULOGIZED by the Pennsylvania COURT

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company paved the way to photoplay liberty in Pennsylvania. An appeal was taken from the unjust censorship ruling—the first appeal in history of the censorship board. Hon. John M. Patterson, Judge of Common Pleas, saw "The Secret Orchard" exhibited in his darkened court-room. He REVERSED the Pennsylvania censors. He said:

"'The Secret Orchard' is beautiful."

"It teaches a great moral lesson."

"To bar its theme of sin punished, would keep some of the world's greatest literature from motion picture presentation."

"I am of the opinion that the censors cannot pass unjustly on the story of a photoplay —their power abides solely in the actual scenes presented."

"The story is in a class with 'Faust,' 'Les Miserables,' 'The Scarlet Letter' and some of literature's greatest masterpieces."

"This Play Adds New Laurels to the Record of the Lasky Company"

LASKY

FEATURE PLAY CO.

NEW YORK CITY

Treas. and Gen. Mgr CECIL B. DE MILLE Dir. Gen.

EQUITABLE

ANNOUNCES

THAT AMONG THE MULTITUDE OF STAR PLAYERS AND NOTED PERSONALITIES ARE

Clara Kimball Young
Thomas Wise
Kathryn Osterman
Juluis Steger
Blanche Walsh
Brandon Tynan
Henry Kolker
Lily Cahill
Milton Lackaye
Helen Ware
Florence Reed
Robert T. Haines
Cyril Scott
Charles J. Ross
Hilda Spong
William Courtleigh

IN

BIG PLAYS AND NOVELS UNDER THE DIRECTION OF NOTED PRODUCERS IN THE MOST THOROUGHLY EQUIPPED STUDIOS, SUPERVISED BY PERIOD AND TYPE EXPERTS MIDST THE ENVIRONMENT AND ATMOSPHERE CONDUCIVE TO PERFECT PRODUCTION

EQUITABLE MOTION PICTURES CORPORATION
RELEASING THROUGH
WORLD FILM CORPORATION
LEWIS J. SELZNICK - - - - - - - VICE PRESIDENT AND GENERAL MANAGER

EQUITABLE

Offers

As its first Release and the Standard by which its forthcoming Productions are to be measured

The Queenly Screen Personality

Clara Kimball Young

and The Distinguished Stage Star

Wilton Lackaye

in

The most vital and startling screen adaption in film annals

"TRILBY"

RELEASED SEPT. 20th WORLD FILM DISTRIBUTORS

EQUITABLE MOTION PICTURES CORPORATION

RELEASING THROUGH

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

LEWIS J. SELZNICK - - - - - - VICE PRESIDENT AND GENERAL MANAGER

WORLD FILM

LEWIS J. SELZNICK

GEORGE NASH

Presents

The Eminent Dramatic Star

GEORGE NASH

in a 5 part Photodrama based on Sutton Vane's sensational stage success

The COTTON KING

Action and Atmosphere
Business & Romance
Wall Street & The Cotton fields

Produced by
Wm. A. BRADY PICTURE PLAYS INC.

HOME OFFICE 130 West 46th Street. New York

CORPORATION

Vice Pres. & Gen. Mgr.

Presents

The Distinguished Artiste

JOSE COLLINS

JOSE COLLINS

In a Picturization of Douglas Murray's memorable dramatic triumph

The IMPOSTOR

Fate Shuffles her cards and deals Queer hands to twin brothers & a Gypsy Girl

Produced by
Wm. A. BRADY PICTURE PLAYS INC.

Phone BRYANT 4020 BRANCHES EVERYWHERE

THE BOSTON TRANSCRIPT famous the country over for its high editorial character, under date of July 17th, speaks of the

PATHÉ NEWS

as follows:

"Travelling passenger men (of the railroads) are like PATHÉ'S WEEKLY —they HEAR EVERYTHING, SEE EVERYTHING, TELL EVERYTHING."

No other film product enjoys the wide renown, respect and prestige of the PATHÉ NEWS. First in the field, it is easily the best. Live exhibitors everywhere show it TWICE A WEEK

The PATHÉ EXCHANGE inc.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES

25 WEST 45th ST. NEW YORK

ADVANCE BOOKINGS on NEAL of the NAVY

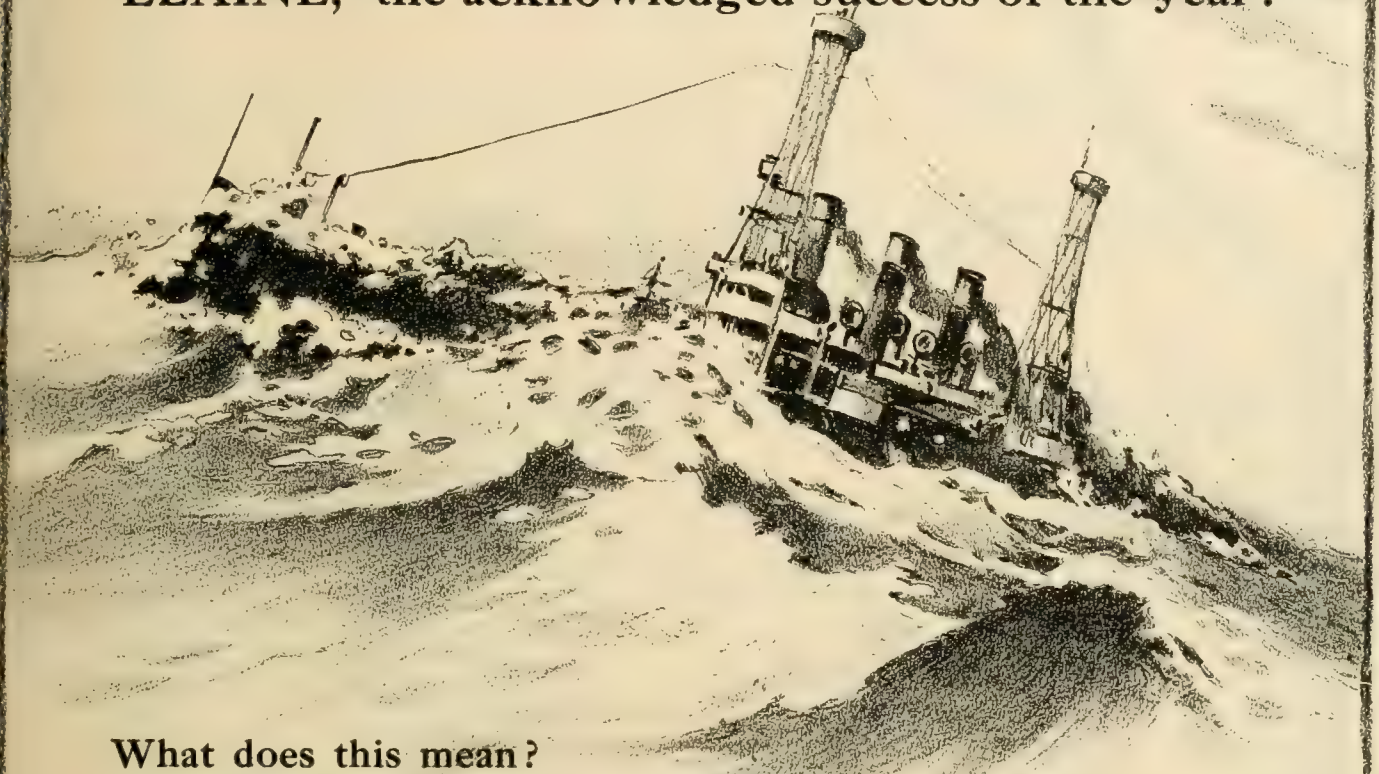
are even greater than were those on "ELAINE," the acknowledged success of the year!



What does this mean?

That the exhibitors know that a serial featuring LILLIAN LORRAINE and WILLIAM COURTLEIGH, JR., with story by WILLIAM HAMILTON OSBORNE, to run in the best newspapers everywhere, produced by BALBOA, with scenes of navy life approved by the Secretary of the Navy, and sponsored by must be good and must be a big business getter for them!

PATHÉ

Complete in 14 chapters of 2 reels each, and released Sept. 2d.

BOOK IT NOW!

The PATHÉ EXCHANGE inc.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES

25 WEST 45th ST. NEW YORK

The Lincoln Cycle is not a serial. Each release is a complete feature in itself. Each release grips you in such a way that you are kept on the anxious seat to see the next release containing the wonderful character, Abraham Lincoln, as only Benjamin Chapin can portray him.

Pursuant to our plans we are now ready to close Contracts

The CYCLE of LINCOLN PHOTODRAMAS

If you have not received the portfolio, which has been described by many leaders of the industry as the greatest document ever issued on motion pictures, write or wire us at once and we will be pleased to send it to you.

The Charter Features Corporation

Makers of Features IN SERIES

110 West Fortieth Street, New York

Thomas A Edison presents

Miriam Nesbitt, The Perpetual Favorite

in the

4-ACT FEATURE of Regeneration

"The Way Back"

Miriam Nesbitt, whose searching insight has given such convincing impersonations of underworld characters, is given ample scope in "The Way Back," in her journeying from a rich, respectable woman to comrade of a crook, and back again, carrying others to the higher life. Not a dishing up of "dirt" but a picturizing of the underworld's struggles and sorrows in a heart interest way. Mary Rider, the author, is vivid because her stories come from the lips of the people portrayed.

George Wright, versatile as clever, with Frank McGlynn, gives realism of a high order to this feature which has had the direction of the creator of remembered screen characters, Carlton King. Friday, September 3d.

Raymond McKee in the one act comedy, "The Simp and the Sophomore." Direction Will Louis. Wednesday, Sept. 1st. One of those gingery, snappy laugh-getting reels.

Bessie Learn and George Wright in the one-act unusually strong drama of a heroic but lost love. Direction E. C. Taylor. Saturday, Sept. 4th.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S REGULAR SERVICE

LUBIN

"A ROMANCE OF MEXICO"
Drama in One Act
with Jack Lawton & Vinnie Burns
Released August 30th

"AVENGING BILL," "The HAUNTED HAT," "MILE-A-MINUTE MONTY"
[The Latter A Cartoon Comedy] Released August 31st

"THE WILD CAT"
Comedy-Drama in Two Acts with Lucille Younge & George Routh
Released Sept. 1st

"THE PHANTOM HAPPINESS"
Drama in Three Acts with Ormi Hawley, Rosetta Brice & Earl Metcalfe Released Sept. 2nd

"IN SPITE OF HIM"
Drama in One Act
with Ethel Clayton and Thurston Hall Star of "The Only Girl" Co.
Released Sept. 3rd

"AN ARTFUL ARTIST"
Comedy in One Act
Featuring Billie Reeves
Released September 4th

RELEASES

VITAGRAPH

"The Cub and the Daisy Chain"

Comedy .....MONDAY, AUGUST 23

The cub reporter writes a touching little story about Grandma's birthday party, when he should have written her epitaph. His girl saves the day and Jimmy lands a job. MR. AND MRS. SIDNEY DREW are the principals.

"From the Dregs"

Two-Part Drama.....TUESDAY, AUGUST 24

Sent to prison for assault on superior officer, Private Roy turns out to be brother of officer's wife. The two men become friends and during a sharp fight, Roy saves the other's life. Presenting NED FINLEY, ELEANOR WOODRUFF and LOGAN PAUL.

"A City Rube"

Comedy .....WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25

Talk about a country boy being a Rube. You ought to see the green city lad in the country! ALFRED VOSBURGH, GEORGE STANLEY, and JACK MOWER are the cast.

"Pearls of the Baltic"

Educational .....WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25

"The Good in the Worst of Us"

Drama .....THURSDAY, AUGUST 26

In protecting his wife from a companion of former days, a young husband's life is saved by the police. The crook's dying words clear the wife's name and restore happiness. HARRY MOREY in the lead.

"The Wardrobe Woman"

Drama .....FRIDAY, AUGUST 27

The wardrobe lady's wisdom and fearlessness save a young girl from the clutches of a human vulture and set her feet on the straight and narrow path. An all-star cast.

"The Tigress"

Three-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature
SATURDAY, AUGUST 28

The confession of a woman known in the Underworld as "The Tigress" reveals hiding place of rich plunder and explains the mysterious disappearance of a wealthy man's son. JULIA SWAYNE GORDON, CATHERINE FRANEK, LEO DELANEY, ZENA KEEFE, BOBBY CONNELLY and GARRY McGARRY are the cast.

Six a Week, Including a Three-Part Broadway Star Feature

"JARR AND THE VISITING FIREMEN"
Comedy .....Monday, August 30

"HEARTS ABLAZE"
Three-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature
Tuesday, August 31

"THE QUARREL"
Comedy .....Wednesday, September 1

"THE FIRE ESCAPE"
Comedy-Drama .....Thursday, September 2

"THEIR NIGHT OUT"
Comedy .....Friday, September 3

"A SISTER'S SACRIFICE"
Two-Part Drama .....Saturday, September 4

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX-SHEET POSTERS

Regardless of what features you are using, regardless of how you run your theatre, the consistent excellent quality of VITAGRAPH REGULAR RELEASES will do more to hold the patronage that you have acquired and acquire new patronage than any spontaneous promotion of extra added features. You can place dependence on the Vitagraph Program. It is Consistently Good

The VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA
East 15th St. and Locust Ave.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

ANNA ORR

The Danseuse who took Broadway by Storm

In the Three-Act

BROADWAY FAVORITES

Feature Production

THE MASKED DANCER

Released in Regular Service, Monday, August 30th

So great was Miss Orr's success in "The Beauty Shop," at the Astor Theatre, that her dancing remained one of the features of the production for two years! This talented artiste also scored in "Springmaid," and in "Mary's Lamb." As Hera, the Persian dancing girl, in this powerful three-act modern drama, Miss Orr does the best work of her career.

Extraordinary 1, 3 and 6-Sheet, 4-Color Lithographs

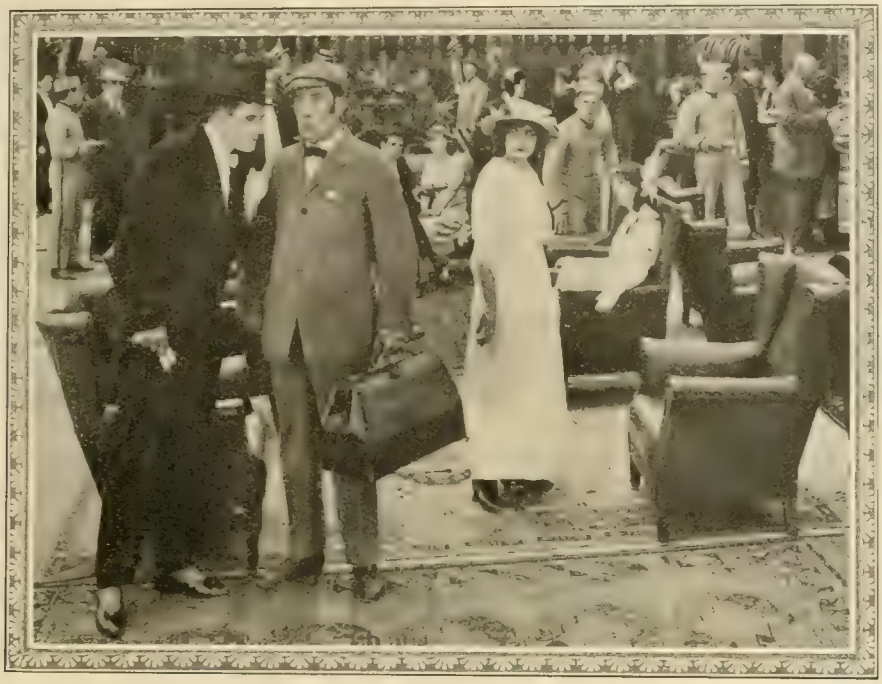
This Picture obtainable at all General Film Company Branch Offices and Greater New York Film Rental Company

KALEM COMPANY

235-39 West 23d Street, New York City, N. Y.

A certain star of the legitimate stage, famous for his work in detective dramas, registered at the Hotel St. Francis, San Francisco. That night, the actor reported the theft of his wife's rings and declared his determination to capture the thief by psychological deduction.

It never occurred to this man that some day his adventure would be made the basis of a photoplay! This is just what happened and the story, as told Kalem by the hotel officials, is embodied in



THE FALSE CLUE

Released in Regular Service, Wednesday, September 1st

One of the Twelve Weekly Two-Act

MYSTERIES of the GRAND HOTEL

You're missing the best in photoplay series if you are not showing the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel." Among the prominent hotels which have helped us produce this series are, the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago; McAlpin and Buckingham, of New York; Hotel Savoy, Kansas City; Hotel Jefferson, St. Louis; Hotel Mason, Jacksonville, etc. Get in touch with the nearest rental exchange and book this great series!

Special 1, 3 and 6-sheet 4-Color Lithographs

This Series obtainable at all General Film Company Branch Offices and Greater New York Film Rental Company

KALEM COMPANY

235-39 West Twenty-Third Street New York City

HAL FORDE

In the Stirring Four-Act "BROADWAY FAVORITES" Feature

THE VANDERHOFF AFFAIR

Mr. Forde's appearance in this remarkable drama is due directly to the success which this star of the legitimate stage scored in our feature, "The Maker of Dreams." We consider "The Vanderhoff Affair," a story of a scoundrel's plot to seize a fortune, one of the best ever released under the Kalem trademark! Marguerite Courtot appears opposite Mr. Forde in this production.

Released in Regular Service, Monday, September 6th. Special 1, 3 and 6-sheet, 4-color Lithographs.

NEARLY A BRIDE

Bud's scheme to win a bride was clever, but it failed to work. The reason makes this a mighty funny comedy.

Released Tuesday, September 7th. 1 and 3-sheet, 4-color Lithographs for this comedy.

THE LITTLE SINGER

An Alice Joyce Re-issue

Remember how your receipts jumped when you showed this Alice Joyce single-reel drama some years ago? Here's a chance to make it fill your house again.

Released Friday, September 10th. Attractive 1 and 3-sheet, 4-color Lithographs.

WHEN THIEVES FALL OUT

One of the Twelve Weekly Two-Act

Mysteries of the Grand Hotel

This story of a crook's amazingly clever plot to victimize the jewelers who are attending a convention, was furnished us by one of the largest hotels in the country.

Released Wednesday, September 8th. Striking 1, 3 and 6-sheet, 4-color Lithographs.

NERVES OF STEEL

An Episode of the

Hazards of Helen Railroad Series

Hanging from the boom hook of a derrick, Helen drops aboard the runaway engine as it flashes by beneath! Here's a story crammed with action!

Released Saturday, September 11th. Strong 1 and 3-sheet, 4-color Lithographs.

These pictures obtainable at all General Film Company branch offices and Greater New York Film Rental Company

KALEM COMPANY

235-239 West 23rd Street New York City, N. Y.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published Weekly by the

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY

17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
J. F. Chalmers.....Vice-President
E. J. Chalmers.....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.....General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

CHICAGO OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.
PACIFIC COAST OFFICE—Haas Building, Seventh St. and Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal. Telephone, Broadway 4649.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands .....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written, and require two weeks.

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTE—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 1564.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter

Saturday, August 28, 1915

Facts and Comments

WE are pleased with the reception by our readers of the new department on motion picture photography conducted by Carl Louis Gregory, who is an acknowledged practical authority on the subject. The department was instituted with an idea to aid in improving the photographic quality of the art. Its value is becoming more apparent with each issue. As the great practical questions on this paramount subject will be taken up in detail we expect to have inquiries from all who are interested in the subject. Mr. Gregory will endeavor to answer these questions in the light of his experience.

* * *

SOMEWHERE out West the city fathers will hereafter impose a special tax on all motion picture exhibitions which display advertisements between the acts. It strikes us that this is a legitimate source of public revenue. The license issued to the owner of a motion picture theater is given on the theory that he provides public amusement. There is no entertainment in advertising on the screen and if the exhibitor goes into a side line like advertising it seems fair that he should pay for the privilege. Advertising on the screen between reels is poor business anyway.

* * *

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD reaches many people who are interested in motion pictures as prospective investors in the industry. To these readers we wish to renew our advice to listen with caution rather than with enthusiasm to the seductive lay of the promoter. We happen to know that thousands upon thousands of dollars have been invested in moonshine enterprises to the harm of the unsophisticated. Inquiry and the exercise of a little common sense will convince the prospective investor that motion pictures are not necessarily a bonanza and that hard work and expert knowledge are far more important in attaining success than "luck."

* * *

A SEVERE rebuff was administered recently to a self-constituted board of censors in Houston, Texas. This board attempted to forbid the showing of a certain film. The exhibitor ignored the censorial ukase and was arrested. A jury of his peers tried and promptly acquitted. The judge declared upon receiving the verdict that a member of a censor board has no more authority than any ordinary citizen. "Just as any citizen may file a complaint with a county attorney, if he thinks an exhibition is showing an indecent picture, so also may the censors, but their say-so does not mean that the exhibitor will be convicted. It remains for the jury to say whether the picture complained of is really offensive or not." Sound law, which censors ought to ponder over.

* * *

IMMORALITY often lies in the eyes of the beholder. At the showing of a big feature recently one of the censors pointed to a scene exclaiming in a white heat of manly chastity that "he would never allow the interior of a house of prostitution to be shown on the screen." Our position on this phase of motion picture production is well-known; we have repeatedly refused to accept advertising because of the portrayal of such scenes. This particular censor, however, assumes too much. He forms a conclusion from an altogether insufficient basis of fact. The mere fact of men and women sitting around tables drinking and acting in a hilarious manner does not constitute prostitution. That is one trouble with the censors; they are too prone to conclude and to characterize instead of sticking to the actual facts.

* * *

A HIGH wave of censorship has recently passed through Houston, Texas, causing the editors of the leading dailies of the city to discuss censorship as a policy and a principle. One of the papers says: "Newspapers do not submit their matter to a board of censors before it is printed, yet they know where to 'draw the line' of decency. We believe the manufacturers of motion pictures are as decent and as clean minded as the manufacturers of newspapers. Censorship is the first step toward putting the muffler on free speech, America's most priceless heritage. It is opposed generally by the public because the American people are a free and independent set, believe in reading what they want to read and seeing what they want to see and they don't take kindly to those who would butt in and tell them what they 'must and mustn't do."

Reveal---Don't Teach

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

PECULIARITY of the picture theater, and one rarely noticed, is the effect it has of putting the mind in a mood almost purely receptive. We talk at the stage performance, even at grand opera, but we are permitted to forget ourselves and those who never forget themselves in making insistent demands upon our attention, we are permitted to enjoy a certain degree of isolation in the shadowy auditorium while viewing what passes in other little worlds than our own. Peculiar is that receptive mood, delightful when it causes us to forget the egotism of ignorance in others, the egotism of our own scant knowledge, and much else that has contributed to our general disappointment in our friends and ourselves. We can at least hope for the people of the screen.

Inasmuch as picture-show audiences are both hopeful and generous, the writer of screen stories need not concern himself with what he has been told will "please the public"—such an effort is liable to cause the dear public much pain. He may concern himself only with what his creative ability brings forth—the spectator does not pay his admission fee to arbitrate but to enjoy what springs fresh and sparkling from some other mind. He will enjoy more what is truly created than what is copied, though that might not be what he would demand. He may not know in advance what is good, but this does not interfere with his appreciation of it when it is held up to his enraptured gaze. The actor may imitate and simulate; the director may be constrained and impeded by the commercialism with which he is in close touch, but the true creative artist must be free to translate thought and feeling through movement in harmony with his inspiration.

One serious objection to offering standards to the born mind of tremendous creative impulse, the mind of impelling constructive tendency, the mind of genius, is that genius flowers most richly in the sunshine of encouragement and that it is highly sensitive to the rigors of craftsmanship. It is in genius to devise its own methods, to set up its own standards, to cast off all shackles of convention and extend the scope of human effort, hence, it seems unwise to establish such a barrier as that of "Don't Teach," but the barrier is little more than a line of demarcation between visualizations intended primarily to entertain and those intended for no other purpose than instruction. The builder of interesting stories may well group his recreations of human experience around some vital truth and weave that truth into a symmetrical design with a more powerful effect than could be reached without it, but the central idea should not be permitted to ascend the pulpit and shout, where the whole art is that of delicate revelation.

Weary are we of pulpit solemnity, of the school thesis, of the political shouter, of people who argue and argue, not because they have anything new or valuable to offer, but because they desire to assume the superior position and prove something that none of us cares particularly about. No one of us knows so much more than the others that we can constantly affirm with any surety of being accurate—the best we can do is to offer such information as we possess, along lines where we are best posted, by means which do not excite antagonism and which permit the recipient to accept or decline, according to his individual requirements and tastes, and even then we must set a high intellectual pace to keep ahead of the crowd. The man who would reveal something in his story must keep in close touch with his age and its revelations.

Important discovery is made by a capable author when he learns to his amazement that he is not a finality. It is disquieting, if not discouraging, for any of us to realize that we know as little about the Alpha of human existence as we do of its Omega. Densely ignorant of our origin and of our destiny, vainly speculating about our beginnings and endings, poor, tiny drifting atoms in a self-destructive current of humanity, what have we really to offer in the guise of knowledge that is more than a deduction from the little we have been able to pick up in one narrow experience. Remembering that error is a deduction from experience, how do we know that we are not offering error in the place of truth when we ascend the pulpit to declaim? Instead of attempting to promulgate a great truth, the author who sincerely desires to be of service to mankind may add his small contribution to general enlightenment by pointing a way out of error.

Look about us! On every hand we see people blindly following this political faith or that religious dogma for no other obvious reason than that they have been asked to do so. The one requirement in all cases is that unreasoning allegiance shall be given in order to acquire membership. Unreasoning faith opens no door—fixed opinion is an obstacle to progress—intellectual growth is only hindered by unreasoning faith in fixed beliefs—a large number of these blind faiths were entered through feeling and sentiment—perhaps the way out is by the same route. By gentle means those who depend upon dogma may be led to that highest faith we can have—that we are here to progress toward better conditions by embodying with our finest feelings and our noblest aspirations the knowledge accorded by scientific discovery that we may learn and improve one another.

The audience in receptive mood, a great deal may be done in the film story to suggest through clever characterization and appropriate incident our common weakness of clinging to old ideas and dogmas, our common hypocrisy of assuming a highly moral air in dealing with those we have reason to dislike, our affectation of loyalty to a code we have never read, our disinterested devotion to the line of work that pays us best, our toy-balloon patriotism that is but a puff of air—healthy people will come of their own accord to a wholesome way of thinking through the screen story, whereas they might put up a stubborn defense of established ideas against the greatest logician in the world. The art is not to teach them, especially by methods that have made teaching repulsive, but to reveal and amuse.

The impression made is one worked out through subtle means, for the tendency of dramatic art in all forms of expression is away from realism that is not pure caricature and toward such instrumentalities as symbolic interpretation and imaginative picture effects, such as those through which great painters of other days strove to express what was in their minds. We are all thinking, thinking, eternally thinking of those social forces which touch our vital interests, of what shall foster growth and conserve happiness for the many of what shall bring our institutions up to a higher plane, where they may minister to our own needs and to the greater enjoyment of all within the scope of our influence. The biggest story of today will embody the fervor of our social hopes and aims.

*Copyright, 1915, Louis Reeves Harrison.

A Great Patriotic Service

By W. Stephen Bush.

IT would be difficult to exaggerate the value of the service which the producers of the picture, "The Battle Cry of Peace," have rendered to the country. Time alone will furnish us with the true perspective of the greatness and the importance of this service.

The visualization of some great public need constitutes a form of propaganda which is clearly within the scope of the higher destiny of the motion picture. The Vitagraph Company has before this aided in the attainment of social reforms by calling in the power of the screen. The new law which provides for state help to widowed mothers of little children is in no small measure due to the convincing realism and the dramatic persuasiveness of "The Silent Plea."

"The Battle Cry of Peace" deals with a national question, the most vital problem which has confronted American statesmanship since the days of the Civil War. The present European conflict has revealed our unpreparedness against invasion and our lack of power to enforce the policy of the American government. "The Battle Cry of Peace" pictorially and by a series of splendid titles impresses us with the uselessness and the folly of a patriotism which is satisfied with shouting but fails to realize the necessity of keeping the country in a state of adequate defence. Both the spirit and the letter of the President's Proclamation of Neutrality are scrupulously observed. "Si vis pacem para bellum," "If you want peace prepare for war," is the keynote of the picture. It shows the infinite harm done by an advocacy of peace at any price. It brings home this pregnant truth to every citizen of the Republic: At present we are utterly without means of defence. We cannot protect our homes, our families, against the horrors of a foreign invasion. It is our solemn and immediate duty to prepare. The funds needed to provide adequate coast defences will be expended for the inland states fully as much as for the cities on the seaboard. A people's army on the Swiss model can be trained to resist and repel invasion. This does not mean the creation of a military caste. A great volunteer army is in full accordance with our traditions and with the genius of our free institutions. Free institutions will not defend themselves; they must be defended and protected by modern efficient military methods.

Let us profit by the examples of history. The Democracy of Athens, the prototype of all popular forms of government, went down to defeat and perdition before the professional soldiers of Philip of Macedonia. The Roman Empire, incomparably the greatest embodiment of human power and organization, fell to pieces largely because it had neglected its defences against the barbarians of the North. The Republic of Venice, the home of medieval wealth, perished because of its inexpertness in war.

We may look upon an invasion of these shores as chimerical. We may refuse to believe that a wealthy democracy without the power of self-defence is a constant temptation to a strong, ambitious and aggressive nation. "The Battle Cry of Peace" will surely arouse us from such lethargy and teach us the most timely of lessons.

It is entirely possible—the picture shows this most convincingly—to prepare the youth and manhood of the country for defensive war. Other things being equal the American soldier has more initiative, more intelligence than the European soldier. The Vitagraph picture lets in a flood of light which at this time in our history is badly needed. The picture makes us face the facts and fills us with a sense of grave responsibility. Dramatically it is one of the very best things this distinguished comissue will give the reader an insight into its merits as a pany has ever done, and the able review in last week's drama and as a spectacle.

Dogmatic Dogberrys

By W. Stephen Bush.

IN discussing the dangers of censorship with a prominent film man known for his love of clean and high-class pictures I had to listen to this dictum: "Censorship is bad, of course, but how is it going to hit us? We are making clean pictures, we strive conscientiously for the improvement of the art. These cheap and fly-by-night concerns, and the panderers might get hurt by censorship and I would be glad to see them put out of business."

What a terrible delusion. It is the everlasting function of the censor to find fault. He must make a pretense of earning his salary. He longs to go upon the housetops and proclaim his importance. Unless he makes a noise like a censor even the unsophisticated might begin to doubt his usefulness. It makes absolutely no difference what kind of pictures are offered to him; he must censor or lose his job and go to work.

Recently a very fine picture based on a well-known clean and wholesome novel was ordered suppressed by that paragon of censorship, J. Louis Breitinger of Philadelphia. It is said that another Catonian sage joined him in the condemnation. These regulators of the morals of Pennsylvania, sitting in the watch tower and gazing about for something to condemn, decided that this splendid story was unfit for screen adaptation. The audacious producer of the film boldly demanded a reason for this inquisitorial judgment. A low mocking laugh was the sole reply. The idea of Pennsylvania censors giving a reason for suppressing a film. Like Falstaff, they defied their questioners to get a reason from them. Thereupon the bad bold film people took them into court and the court asked for a reason. The film in question, the wise censors now said, told a story of seduction, which might sweep the susceptible Pennsylvania youth off its moral pedestal and make the banks of the Schuylkill reek with moral corruption. The censors in an uncontrollable burst of moral rage were ready to hang their harps on the willows of the lower Delaware and mingle their salty tears with the brackish flood running to the sea. The judge thereupon looked upon the picture and allowed its public exhibition with one slight change.

Has it come to this that the producer of repute and of unquestioned honesty must spend his money to protect his property against official idiocy? It is even so and even so it will remain until censorship is blotted out entirely, torn up by the roots like a noxious weed and given to the flames. Let us suppose that these censors were perfectly honest in their condemnation of this picture. Indeed, there is no reason to entertain any other theory when speculating as to their motives. Admitting then their honesty, what can the decent producer do to defend himself against their gigantic and impenetrable stupidity? The law forbids the use of a wooden mallet as a brightener of intelligence, but what other access is there to their reasoning faculties?

After this latest performance of the censors in Pennsylvania not even the best and cleanest film is safe from their silly dogmatism. The work of intelligent men and women, the development of the greatest of the modern arts, the property rights of reputable citizens are all put in jeopardy through the arbitrary and senseless rulings of men who draw salaries as "guardians of public morals." Away with censorship.

Plimpton Prophetic

Sees No Future for Noted Stage Stars and Predicts Coming of Exclusive Screen Author.

AFTER more than six years of activity at the head of the Edison motion picture producing forces, Horace G. Plimpton, as noted in the Moving Picture World last week, has resigned. The departure of Mr. Plimpton from the Bronx studio does not mean his separation from the industry with which he has been so closely and prominently allied and on which he has left his impress. He strongly denies that he has any intention of taking up work that does not have to do with motion pictures, but at present is reticent as to plans for the future.

It was through his long-time friendship with Frank L. Dyer, who in the spring of 1909 was vice-president of the Edison Manufacturing Company, that Mr. Plimpton became the head of the motion picture department of the big Edison concern. Mr. Plimpton had for many years been interested in amateur theatricals and for a long time president of the Montclair Dramatic Club. He had also held executive positions, where he had been trained in the handling of men and of money. He went to his position unhampered by tradition, unimpressed with the importance of a director and not unconcerned as to the welfare of humbler employes. Possibly it may partly have been due to this fact that he has been known at the studio as "the actor's friend"—that in controversial matters, for instance, he has been able to put his finger on the vital spot and render justice.

Mr. Plimpton's first work at the studio was to reorganize the establishment in accord with his ideas of discipline and business system. His next effort was to raise the standard of the product. He realized the importance of the story; the value of literary ability in a commercial sense no less than in its artistic. He had been in his position but a few months before he had secured stories from the pens of E. W. Townsend and Carolyn Wells and contracted for the services of Mlle. Pilar-Morin. Mr. Plimpton aimed to do something in pictures better than had been done. He sought to interest well-known authors. In this he was a pioneer. Not only did he obtain subjects from the two named, but he bought stories from Mark Twain, Richard Harding Davis, Rex Beach, Roy Norton and others.

In conversation with a World man on Tuesday, speaking of the earlier days, Mr. Plimpton voiced his appreciation of the work of the Biograph Company and told how he had followed the subjects released by it, of his recognition of the importance of the cut-back and the close-up, and how he had to fight prejudice and conservatism when he advocated the use of these innovations. Mr. Plimpton admitted that he never had been over-anxious to follow the lead of others; he has always been more concerned in "putting something over," to do things that have not been done before. A case in point was his initiation of the serial as applied to pictures, the well-remembered "What Happened to Mary," and its sequel, "Who Will Mary Marry?"

When Mr. Plimpton was asked about the serial that has had so many successors he said it came about in connection with The Ladies' World and from the first looked like a good thing to him. There was a Mary in the story and the Edison company had Mary Fuller, capable of doing anything required by the action. There were twelve subjects in the first series and six in the second. Both were successful from the start.

It has been Mr. Plimpton's policy to promote subordinates rather than to fill vacancies by bringing in directors or players of more or less prominence from the outside. Some of the heads of departments in the organization from which the producer has just retired came to the studio in minor capacities and have been pushed along as circumstances made possible. They were "brought up" in Edison methods; the policy of promotion encouraged loyalty.

When the interviewer suggested to Mr. Plimpton that it was his recollection the Edison company was the first to print the cast of players in a picture, the producer said it was true, and added that it had been so arranged that the name preceded the appearance of the actor. He added that this method seemed to him to have marked advantages over the grouping system in that the latter led to confusion. The Edison was also the first company to give credit on the screen to the writer.

"I do not believe the great vogue of the stage star on the screen is going to last," said Mr. Plimpton, in discussing a subject that just now is a prominent one. "I have never encouraged it in the Edison plant; in fact, I have been against it. I believe the players who are trained in picture work can better portray a given character than one who comes to it without that training. Of course, I would qualify this statement by excepting those who may be associated in the public mind with a certain role, as, for instance, Joseph Jefferson would have been in Rip Van Winkle. My position has been confirmed recently by things I have heard.

"I believe also the time is coming when adaptations have got to cease—when authors of repute are going to write straight for the screen, just as they now write for the stage."

Mr. Plimpton said he had been deeply gratified at the many expressions of regret he had received from his former associates. For the two days preceding his departure there had been a steady stream coming into his office. "It is a fact," he said, "that the Edison studio has an atmosphere all its own. It is homelike. There has been tolerated nothing that would offend those who are strict on questions of morality or sobriety."

Mr. Plimpton did not say it, but it may be said for him that in the subjects that have come from the Edison studio there has been no occasion for the employment of the censor's scissors, a record that is the more remarkable when the large number of its releases are taken into consideration.

Edna Goodrich in Lasky Photoplays

AFTER a year's devoted service as a nurse in the hospitals in England and Belgium, Edna Goodrich, the famous American actress, returned to New York last week for twofold reasons. Although she showed no evidence of the terrible strain under which she has been constantly for many months, particularly during the last weeks of her stay in England when her house near London was transformed into a hospital for convalescent soldiers, Miss Goodrich admitted a certain fatigue and the need of a rest here in scenes far from war's devastation. The other and more important reason for her return is that she is leaving almost immediately for Hollywood, Cal., to make her debut as an actress before the motion picture camera in the studios of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company at Hollywood, Cal.

Edna Goodrich.

Miss Goodrich's beauty has won world-wide fame for her. Like so many talented American actresses, she made her start in musical comedy, her first appearance being at the Casino theater, New York, in 1900, in "Florodora." After a brilliant career in musical comedy, she became leading woman for Nat C. Goodwin, and played with him at various times between 1905 and 1909. Subsequently, she was one of the leading dramatic stars in vaudeville.

Her photodrama debut will be an important event in cinematography. The Lasky Feature Play Company has a surprise photoplay in store for her.

GENERAL WOOD IN A KLEINE PICTURE.

One of the unconscious actors in George Kleine's feature comedy, "Hello Bill," starring Bickel and Watson, for release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service September 15th, is no less a person than Brigadier General Leonard Wood, former Chief of Staff. Without knowing it the General got himself handsomely photographed during the making of some scenes on Governor's Island recently.

PATHE TO PUT ON "AT BAY."

Pathe announces the purchase of the picture rights to George Scarborough's play, "At Bay," which had a long run both on Broadway and on the road. "At Bay" is a society melodrama, showing the persecution of a charming girl at the hands of a blackmailer, and is full of good situations. The name of the producer and the cast will be announced later.

George Kleine's Eastern Managers and Executive Staff, Who Met for Their Annual Conference at the Kleine Studios, 11 East Fourteenth Street, New York City, on Sunday, August 8.

Reading from left to right, first row (sitting): R. D. Marson, Mgr., Boston Office; Merle E. Smith, General Branch Manager; Ben. F. Simpson, Mgr. Atlanta Office; George Kleine; Douglas H. Bergh, Traveling Representative; H. A. Bugie, Mgr. Philadelphia Office. Top row, left to right: William E. Raynor, Mgr., New York Office; M. F. Gibbons, Mgr. Pittsburgh Office; Louis Myll, Manager of Productions; John J. Dacey, Traveling out of New York Office; Frank Phelps, General Auditor; Foster Moore, Traveling out of New York Office; J. C. Miller, Editor; O. F. Doud, Publicity Manager; W. D. Cooper, Mgr. Toronto Office.

Kleine Staff Meeting

Members of Executive Force and Exchange Managers Gather in New York.

THE second annual conference of Eastern branch managers and executives was held in the George Kleine studios, New York City, Sunday, August 8th. Managers were present from Atlanta, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Toronto and Boston, as well as the executive heads of studio, scenario, auditing and publicity departments.

The day proved a busy one for all concerned. A great deal of business was transacted and a good deal of fun was sandwiched in between, the latter including a hastily improvised moving picture scenario featuring George Kleine, ably supported by Wm. E. Raynor and W. D. Cooper, managers respectively of the New York and Toronto offices. There were twelve other supports, incidentally, of varying degrees of excellence, all determined to avail themselves of their only opportunity to see their ghostly doubles, under the able direction of Louis Myll.

Mr. Kleine called the meeting to order about 11 A. M. and from that time until the adjournment to the studio about 4 P. M. questions of policy were decided and plans for a busy fall and winter were made. Local conditions in the various territories were discussed with benefit to the different managers and departments affected. Altogether the afternoon proved highly profitable and advantageous.

About five hundred feet of film was made in accordance with the afore-mentioned scenario. As this document was of a purely private and confidential nature, nothing more can be said of it in these columns.

Later in the day the meeting was adjourned to the Brevoort Hotel where a typical George Kleine feast was prepared. The dinner broke up about midnight, when fifteen tired but enthusiastic film men found their ways to trolleys, subways and out-of-town flyers.

Those present were George Kleine, Merle E. Smith, general branch manager; Douglas H. Bergh, travelling representative; Wm. E. Raynor, manager of New York office; H. A. Bugie, manager of Philadelphia office; M. F. Gibbons, manager of Pittsburgh office; W. D. Cooper, manager of Toronto office; R. D. Marson, manager of Boston office; Ben F. Simpson, manager of Atlanta office; John J. Dacey, and Foster Moore, travelling out of New York office; Louis Myll, manager of productions; Frank Phelps, general auditor; J. C. Miller, editor, and O. F. Doud, publicity manager.

CENTAUR OFFICES IN NEW YORK.

The offices of the general manager and the publicity department of the Centaur Film Company have been moved from Bayonne, N. J., to 46 West Twenty-fourth street, New York City.

The change in location was made to handle more expeditiously the vast amount of business incident to the increase in the productions of David Horsley, who is at the head of the Centaur Film Company and the Bostock Jungle & Film Company, the entire output of which goes through the Mutual Film Corporation.

Horsley Engages Frank Montgomery

FRANK MONTGOMERY has been engaged by David Horsley to direct the two-reel animal pictures, featuring the Bostock collection of performing animals, which Mr. Horsley will release through the Mutual. Mr. Montgomery, who is now in Los Angeles, will await the arrival of Francis Worcester Doughty, the author, whom Mr. Horsley has engaged to prepare the scripts for these releases, to confer on points of production before beginning work. Mr. Doughty left New York last week for the West.

Frank Montgomery.

The animal subjects will be filmed in the hexagonal arena in Mr. Horsley's new plant in Los Angeles, built especially to facilitate staging such productions. This arena is arranged in six sections of fan-like shape, each with a background to give the locale of the scene to pictures. The background is not made up of artificial "props" but is gained by the use of full growing trees, shrubbery and vines, as it is in the jungle of the country in which the scenes are laid.

The players in the animal pictures will work face to face with the brute performers without the precaution afforded by bars, wires, nets, etc., either of which precaution has generally been used in animal pictures made heretofore. The only avenue of escape the players have is a moat surrounding an island at the hub of the arena. The camera is stationed on the island, from which point the director oversees the production.

With this unequalled studio equipment and with the famous Bostock animals and trainers, including Captain Jack Bonavita, at his command, to say nothing of scenarios as supplied by such a writer as Mr. Doughty, Mr. Montgomery has every facility to make animal pictures of the type and quality Mr. Horsley has set for a standard.

Mr. Montgomery has long been recognized as a director of unusual capabilities. Years ago he was with the old 101 Bison Company, then producing Western pictures, as a player. Later he was with Kalem as director. Following this he was with the Universal and then directed a company of his own known as the Liberty Feature Film Company.

The first animal picture will be released about the middle of September.

Kalem to Make "Stingaree"

Will Produce Twelve Stories from the Pen of the Famous Author of "Raffles."

THE Kalem Company has closed negotiations with E. W. Hornung, who is best known perhaps for his stories "Raffles," the gentleman burglar of fiction, for a series of twelve stories. These will have to do with the adventures of "Stingaree," the leading character in the Hornung novel of that name. The subjects will be released each week in two reels. It will be the aim of the company to make these a series rather than a serial—in other words, to design each so that they shall be independent of others, although, of course, Stingaree will dominate all of them.

The production will be under the supervision of James Horne of the Glendale studio, who will use in his augmented casts such well-known players as Paul Hurst, William H. West, Frank Jonasson, Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby. True Boardman will be Stingaree, the character which furnished Hornung an opportunity for giving full sway to his genius. Stingaree, it will be recalled by the many who have read the novel, leaves his home in England to protect the honor of another. He goes to the wilds of Australia, and although possessing much of the world's means, determines society shall repay him for his exile. He enters on a series of adventures which give him his singular title; the name is that of a pest the strong point of which is its ability to sting its victim on the breakaway.

It is interesting to note that the production of "Stingaree" marks Kalem's entrance into the field of fiction. The officers of the company were so impressed with the picture-making possibilities of Hornung's great story that the old rule of sticking to screen stories or stage successes has been sidetracked.

Stingaree is not unlike his companion character Raffles in that he is a man of polish. He will, however, be seen on the screen also as a bandit, a champion of honor, a self-appointed officer of the law, an expert horseman and a deadly marksman. Particular attention will be given by Mr. Horne to securing an Australian atmosphere, as to typography and vegetation, for instance, to mention two of the factors. One of the important items in an Australian landscape is the eucalyptus; of that Southern California has abundance.

Speaking this week about Kalem's departure, William Wright said the company had learned from a careful canvass that the great demand among exhibitors is for two-reel subjects. Ranging down from that the preferences are for two and three reels, then one, two and three, and then one, two, three and four. "The reason we have put so much money into two-reel subjects is because the enormous sale noted in our films of that length shows that the exhibitors want them," said Mr. Wright. He added that the company had been negotiating with Mr. Hornung for three months.

ESSANAY BURNS A PICTURE TOWN.

Essanay burned down an entire photoplay village for a scene in the six-act feature, "The Man Trail," adapted from the recently published novel by Henry Oyen. It was a lumber camp town at "The Pines," a few miles from Waukegan, Ill. The village, consisting of a score of houses and several large bunk houses for lumber jacks, was built especially for scenes in the play. Several carloads of lumber were shipped from Chicago for the purpose. The final scene is the firing of the village. The blaze leaped from shack to shack, all of which were constructed of wood, and the entire town soon was reduced to ashes. The flames could be seen for miles around and the farmers and residents of nearby towns were badly frightened by the conflagration. This drama will be released through the V-L-S-E Inc., in September.

BAMBERGER TO EDIT BIG FOUR FAMILY.

The Big Four Family, the private house organ of the V-L-S-E, which made its original appearance and has since been published under the editorship of Charles J. Giegerich, publicity director, will, after the issue of August 21, be edited by Leon J. Bamberger, manager of the sales promotion department. Mr. Giegerich has been compelled to devote his entire attention to the preparation of special advertising and news stories for the Big Four features.

MACMAHON RETURNS TO NEW YORK.

Henry MacMahon, general representative for the new Triangle Film Corporation, and who has been visiting the Keystone studios as a guest of Mack Sennett, has returned to New York, where he will launch a campaign of advertising featuring Raymond Hitchcock, Mabel Normand, Chester Conklin, Fred Mace, Mack Swain, Roscoe Arbuckle, Eddie Foy, Syd Chaplin, Ford Sterling and others.

"Queer Stories" for Biograph

Acquires for Picturization World Rights to Strange Tales Which Made the Fame of "Truth."

THAT a single-reel picture can be a feature has been demonstrated many times by Biograph Company, and through a big deal which has just been consummated the AB brand will be more widely known than ever for its single reel features. The deal comprises the acquisition of world rights in what is probably the largest aggregation of stories ever purchased for moving picture purposes. More than one thousand stories, each a masterpiece, have been acquired by Biograph from Truth, the celebrated London publication, whose "Queer Stories" have been famous for almost half a century.

The unique policy of Truth, on which its worldwide reputation has been established, includes the publication, each week, of the strangest story obtainable. The foremost writers of Europe and America are constantly on the lookout for plots of the quality acceptable to Truth. In the forty years since the institution of the magazine many hundred of such stories have been published, and from this mass of material the Biograph editors have selected more than a thousand "queer stories" for final consideration as single-reel subjects.

The first of the stories scheduled for release is entitled "The Wheel of the Gods." It deals with the strange revenge taken by a doctor who discovered his wife's flirtation with another man. Apart from the strikingly original plot, the story contains a wealth of suggestion which has been fully realized in the production of the picture. It is this quality which has been determined upon as the characteristic of the forthcoming Biograph single reel features.

The pictures made from "Truth's Queer Stories" will all be single reel subjects, and will be released in the regular service. The release date of "The Wheel of the Gods" is September 4.

John Reinhard

JOHN REINHARD, who has had a long and successful career on the legitimate stage, is making a strong heavy lead in the three-reel productions of Knickerbocker Star Features. Mr. Reinhard won many compliments in his work in a recent Knickerbocker Star Feature production in his support of Alice Brady.

John Reinhard.

In the latest release of Knickerbocker Star Features, "Capital Punishment," Mr. Reinhard has a very strong part, in which he is distinguishing himself as a heavy in a difficult role.

In his work on the legitimate stage Mr. Reinhard has occupied some important engagements, being under the management of Lew Fields, Schubert, Ziegfeld, Cohen and Harris and others. Some of his important parts have been in "Wizard of Oz," "It Happened in Nordland," "About Town," "Girl Behind the Counter," "Algeria," a Victor Herbert production managed by McKee and Zimmerman, "Miss Innocence," in which production he supported Anna Held in the juvenile lead, and "The Follies," the original "Madam Sherry" production, in which he made famous the song "Every Little Moment." For two years Mr. Reinhard played in the Orpheum Vaudeville circuit.

In moving pictures, Mr. Reinhard has had considerable experience and is a well-known screen figure, whose reputation for strong, artistic and well balanced work is growing. In the productions of Knickerbocker Star Features Mr. Reinhard will continue in his strong role of heavy.

M. H. HOFFMAN ON INSPECTION TRIP.

M. H. Hoffman, general manager of Universal exchanges, left New York on Tuesday night, August 17, on a trip which will take him as far west as Denver, and as far south as New Orleans. Those exchange managers which lie west of the Rocky Mountains will be notified to meet Mr. Hoffman in Denver, and exchange managers in the South to which he cannot pay a personal call will meet him either in Atlanta, El Paso or New Orleans. Mr. Hoffman is not expected back in New York before September 1st.

On the Home Stretch

Blaisdell Sees Kansas City Under Escort of Assistant Fireman Gilday—Looks Over St. Louis, Lunches with Colonel Selig in Chicago and Pays a Visit to Buffalo—Finish of a Five Months' Trip.

JOE GILDAY and his boss, Henry B. Lappe, are men of patience. No doubt of that. They waited in the Kansas City station until 9.30 o'clock one morning for the arrival of a train that was due ninety minutes earlier—and in the hearty handshakes they batted out made one World man feel he was among friends. There were no idle minutes from that time until midnight. In the afternoon and evening Mr. Lappe's car and its skilled and interesting driver were at the services of the visitors. Gilday seems almost as proud of the splendid boulevards in Kansas City as he does of the Willis Wood theater, of which he is manager, and he showed forty-five miles of them that afternoon.

* * *

At the Willis Wood we met Mr. Tighe, the treasurer of the Lappe-Tighe Amusement Company, owners of this fine house. Mr. Tighe pointed out the elevator which was installed for the purpose of conveying patrons to the gallery. The expense was $4,000. Already it has returned $10,000 in business that otherwise the house would not have got. With the elevator the gallery may be filled at 10 cents a seat; without it not many would buy the lofty chairs. The World has described this beautiful theater, but it has not told of the unusual atmosphere—with its great reception rooms and furnishings and hangings it is more like an opera house.

* * *

Mr. Gilday, aided and abetted by Messrs. Lappe and Tighe, declared a holiday to show the World man about. In the office of the Metro Pictures Service we met M. E. Williams, the manager. The Metro has been opened five months and Mr. Williams said it was doing a good business. He said he had landed two successive productions in the Willis Wood—Bushman and Faversham. Out of door houses had been put out of business by the bad weather—in June there had been but seven clear days.

* * *

C. S. Edwards, Jr., of Pathe, who has been in his present quarters fourteen months, reported business good. We also met P. A. Sheridan, road man for Pathe, and likewise R. G. Liggett, proprietor of the Gene Gauntier theater. Mr. Liggett is the brother of the well-known screen player for whom his house is named.

* * *

Charles W. Harden, manager of the Fox exchange, knows something about censorship—his knowledge is of the concrete sort, not superficial. He says the exchangemen in Kansas City are up against no theory—it's a condition. He told of how one film had been sent to Kansas to be censored and in the bulletin printed by the censors was declared to be passed. Five weeks later the action was rescinded. In the meantime the subject had been booked throughout the state and had also been steadily shown. Mr. Harden said it was costing his company an average of $20 on every feature to get it before the Kansas censors—in sending out the film and making provision to have it run. He said the exchangemen of the city were going to spend money on a propaganda and educate the voters of Kansas on the censorship question. In the meantime it had been found necessary to levy a charge on the exhibitors of 10 cents on each reel sent out to defray the expenses of censorship, direct and indirect.

* * *

We had a chat with Assistant Manager Potter, of the Universal Exchange—we just missed Manager Cropper; with J. A. Higdon of the Bancroft theater and Joe Silverman of the Prospect theater.

* * *

It was good to run into John Hardin, manager for George Kleine. Mr. Hardin was for years in New York at the Edison studio and knows all the film men of the metropolis, and in Chicago, too. He had been in Kansas City four months; at the time of the visit he was very much interested in the new Kleine-Edison deal. We also met C. A. ("Kid") Nichols, the road representative. Mr. Nichols was one time the star twirler of the Bostons. According to Hardin the former ballplayer has not lost the knack of "putting them over"; only these days if the batsman-exhibitor makes a big hit with one of his smooth ones everybody is happy; nobody abuses the umpire.

* * *

Frank L. Newman, president and manager of the Royal theater, of 600 seats, said that he was spending $10,000 in putting in a balcony and mezzanine floor to get an additional 175 chairs. He was using a forty-foot girder weighing four and a half tons. He uses Paramount service and will charge 10 cents for his balcony seats. Twenty cents is the admission downstairs.

* * *

In the evening we called on Mrs. Paul, proprietor of the Alamo; the house of 750 seats was practically filled. At the Gilham theater we met Messrs. Dean & ("Dusty") Rhodes, the nickname a legacy of days on the diamond when its owner was known to thousands of "fans." The Gilham was filled, to the last of its 1,100 seats. The same situation prevailed at the Broadmour, Joseph T. Murray, owner and manager, and the Warwick, Proprietor Rose. The latter house is the largest community theater in Kansas City. We also called on Mr. Allen, at the Tenth Street theater—or was it the Twelfth Street?—anyway, with Henry Lappe Mr. Allen is co-proprietor of both of these houses as well as one other.

* * *

During the evening we collided with E. R. Pearson, manager of the Big Four exchange, and his assistant, F. F. Nine. Mr. Pearson reported a strong business.

* * *

Kansas City has the reputation in the east of being a warm place in the summer. Perhaps it is. Nevertheless its citizens certainly do get out in the evening to look over the pictures.

* * *

It was after the close of business when we arrived in St. Louis on a Saturday and there was no chance to get a look-in on the exchangemen. In the evening we found Proprietor Schwartz, of the St. Charles and the Broadway, each of 500 seats and charging 10 cents admission, almost diagonally opposite each other. Each changes program three times a week; singularly enough, in spite of the proximity of the one house to the other, both use General Film service. Mr. Schwartz said it was his observation that if a picturegoer can stand the weather he will prefer an inclosed theater to an airdome.

* * *

Dropped in on Edward Stevison at the Grand Central on Market street—and we did that same thing again the following evening, too, while waiting train time. Mr. Stevison and his good wife are real hosts and make strangers feel like natives. Mr. Stevison said his house, as a downtown theater, found a regular program the only thing. He uses one and two reel subects for the backbone of his show, with three and four reel subjects several times a week. He figures on a five-reel show for 10 cents as a rule. On the Sunday evening Biograph's "Under Two Flags" was the feature. The subject recalled a Sunday at Chatsworth Park, thirty-odd miles out of Los Angeles, where as the guest of Travers Vale we followed the battles that constituted a part of that picture. The same spot, by the way, was the location for the great wall of "Judith of Bethulia" and also the striking backgrounds for "Man's Genesis," two photoplays that have lived.

* * *

On a tip from and under the routing of Mr. Stevison we found William Sievers on Sunday afternoon at the new Grand Central. Mr. Sievers had on his hands at the time one morality squad of the police department and also one E. V. P. Schneiderhahn. The proprietor had been compelled to go into court the day before to enjoin the police from interfering with "The Island of Regeneration," pending an intelligent determination of the case on Monday. Present were representatives from all the newspapers to judge for themselves as to the subject. The residents of the neighborhood were there, too, in a jam. The answer is that Mr. Sievers won out as certainly he should have won out.

Mr. Sievers showed his visitors over his big 2,000-seat house, which has been open since March 31, 1913. Admission is 10, 20 and 25 cents. "Program?" said the proprietor, with a smile. "We pick features from the open market—and run them a minimum of seven days." In going over this great house the outstanding factor seemed to be the ventilation, a subject to which Mr. Sievers has given much attention and study. "Many a ventilation system has failed to do its prescribed work," he said, "because there has been neglect to draw out of a house just as much air as you shoot in." The new Grand Central has an equipment for pulling out of the theater 90,000 cubic feet of air every minute and a like equipment for pulling that amount in.

* * *

At the Princess, recently transformed to pictures under the management of Charles B. Belknap and Sol S'Renco, we met Mr. Belknap. The house has 1,500 seats and changes program daily. The same owners also control the Crystal Featuredome.

That Monday in Chicago was a short and busy day. Of course, the first move was to look up Messrs. McQuade and Hinz of the World staff. There were a visit under the chaperonage of Brother McQuade to the fine office of Col. Selig and a luncheon at which the Colonel entertained the World men, Fred Aiken and Gilson Willets. Just in passing it should be said the Selig offices have a mighty good projection room as a factor in the big quarters. In the afternoon there was a call at the Essanay studio and a moment's chat with Henry Walthall, caught just by accident. Mr. Walthall missed the big film colony of Los Angeles and his many old friends, but also he was enjoying the comparative quiet of Chicago. There was a long and pleasant visit with Victor Eubank, who showed the visitors around. The Essanay has a lot of room to spread out as occasion may require. How familiar looked the streets in the neighborhood of the studio! It was hard to realize they were really being seen for the first time. Such is the influence of the motion picture!

In the early evening there was a dinner with Brother McQuade. Since traveling around the country a bit so many men have said: "When you see Mac in Chicago be sure to remember me to him—yes, and give him my best." You don't really get acquainted with McQuade until you meet him on his own ground—and Monday is his busy day at that! Just like all the rest: Here's to him!

* * *

We had not been long in Buffalo before Roland Blaisdell steered us over toward Shea's Hippodrome, promising to reveal a "regular" theater. It is. Fortunately we met A. J. Amm, assistant to Manager Henry M. Marcus, who showed us around the million-dollar house with its 2,750 seats. The admission is 10 cents in the afternoon and 10, 15 and 25 at night. The projection room has two Simplex machines and these give employment to four operators, two of whom work from 12 to 6 and two from 6 to 11. The house has its own generator and automatic carbon control. Supplementing the twenty-piece orchestra is an organ described as the biggest in the state. From the wide lobby the longest escalator ever built conveys patrons to the balcony. There are two box offices. The electrical control is duplicated on the stage and at the front of the building, the back of the theater. The house was built on honor, of steel and concrete. There are thirty-two exits, of which the doors are locked from the outside but which readily yield to pressure applied from within.

* * *

At the Empire Kriterion Film Exchange we met George H. Verbeck, old-time theater man, general manager; Roland Blaisdell, secretary-treasurer; Harold J. Verbeck, booker, and George Diefenbach, outside man. In the temporary absence of Manager Ben Savage, Al Benedict was in charge of the General Film office. When Mr. Benedict was asked if it were true, as reported, that the General Film Company was getting more than its share of the local business he smiled—and didn't stop.

* * *

Ben Cohen, manager of the World Film, was in good humor. He had just placed a Clara Kimball Young subject in the Hippodrome for a week's run. Manager G. C. Parsons, of the Mutual, reported a material increase in weekly receipts. "The biggest trouble with the business today," said Mr. Parsons, "is that the public is being overfed. Where formerly parties might take in two theaters in a night now they get tired sometimes before they have seen one show. I believe the business will finally come back to the short subject and I'll be very glad to see it. Make up a program of six reels and stars and good subjects and more business could be done than with the big feature program. Short subjects, big players and good stories will bring big money to exchanges and exhibitors. Big subjects will always live in the bigger houses at high prices, but for the smaller house the short subect is the best."

* * *

James K. Morgan has been in the Pathe office two months. While the Pathe has an exchange in Syracuse it is designed to work ten counties from Buffalo, eventually breaking away entirely from the Syracuse office. "Who Pays" had done a strong business. "Neal of the Navy," opening September 2, had brought so many applications Manager Morgan said he was worried. Fred Zimmerman, of the Buffalo Feature Film Corporation, had just returned from a three weeks' trip through the state. Harry Marsey and Charles R. Rogers, of the Essemar Film Company, Inc., said they thought their company had the best independent line of features outside of New York City. They have Life Photo subjects. They added that the greatest trouble was in securing big pictures that were not already pre-empted by the programs. The two men denied that so far as their company was concerned state's rights had suffered any decline. They maintain a buyer in New York.

* * *

Certainly this has been "some" assignment.

BLAISDELL.

Miss Farrar's Protege

GERALDINE FARRAR, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who has been at the studios of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co., at Hollywood, Cal., all summer appearing in "Carmen" and other productions before the camera, will leave a rare remembrance when she starts back east again. This memento of her first visit to the Lasky studios will be a living one—none other in fact that little Miss Marjorie Daw, a fourteen-year-old girl who looks forward to the prospect of a life engagement with the Lasky Company.

Geraldine Farrar and Her Protege, Marjorie Daw.

Miss Farrar says her little protege has within her that spark of dramatic genius which tends toward the making of a great actress, and has recommended Miss Daw so strongly and urged her case so persistently that at the very first opportunity Miss Daw was given one of the leading roles in a Lasky production and her work more than pleased the prima donna and the executives of the company.

The little miss is Marguerite House, but better known at the motion picture studios by her adopted name, Marjorie Daw. Miss Farrar noticed Marjorie on the stage of the studio in Hollywood, and was attracted by her beauty and simple, unaffected girlishness. Later the diva saw the child in a scene before the camera, with the result that Marjorie Daw was given an important part in "Out of Darkness," which will be released September 9.

Jacqueline Morhange

LITTLE Jacqueline Morhange is only five years old, but for nearly half of her life she has been a motion picture actress. Jacqueline began her career at the Vitagraph studio, and stayed there until recently, when her father, M. H. Morhange, returned wounded from the French battlefields and resumed his position as assistant and interpreter to Emile Chautard, the versatile French director of the World Film Corporation.

Jacqueline Morhange.

Little Jacqueline has already done some fine work for the World Film Corporation, appearing in "The Impostor" which Mr. Capellani is putting on with Miss Jose Collins, the noted singer, as the star; also she is to be seen to advantage in Oscar Eagle's production of "The Cotton King," starring George Nash. At present she is playing in "The Ivory Snuff Box," the second Holbrook Blinn-World Film feature, and little Jacqueline is making great strides as an actress under the able direction of Maurice Tourneur.

World Film Directors Confer

Officials of Corporation and Directors Discuss Profit-Sharing Plan At Dinner.

THE operation of the World Film Corporation on a profit-sharing system, an idea fathered by Lewis J. Selznick, the company's vice-president and general manager, was the chief topic of discussion at a dinner at the Hotel Astor Wednesday night, August 18, attended by members of the board of directors of the corporation, representatives of the World's allied interests and the film directors who produce the features that are released under the World banner. Realization that the adoption of such a comprehensive profit-sharing policy by a concern of the importance of World Film represents a radical departure from established methods and a movement pregnant with developments of peculiar import, means that the progress of the plan will be watched with interest by the film world generally. Among those who were present at the dinner were Lewis J. Selznick, Lee Shubert, William A. Brady, Milton C. Work, chairman of the executive committee; J. E. Brulatour, J. E. Rhinock, B. N. Busch, B. L. Heidingsfeld, Samuel Mayer, Jacob Wilk, Henry Bayard, Barry O'Neil, Emile Chautard, Albert Capellani, Maurice Tourneur, E. P. Heath, Frank Crane, Oscar Eagle, Joseph Smiley, M. E. Hoffman and H. C. Drum.

The World's plan is substantially as follows: The directors instead of being employed on a salary basis, will be given contracts, each entitling the holder to a privilege of a drawing account and creating him a partner in the picture made under his direction to the extent of 20 per cent. of the profits. With such a reward in sight for a director the prospect of achieving a noticeable economy in film production becomes promising, and the incentive is furnished for each director to exert his utmost skill in the filming of every detail no matter how apparently unimportant.

Only two of the World Film directors were not among those present at the dinner. They are James Young and J. H. Thornby, whose absence from the city prevented their attendance. Mr. Young is at Bat Cave, N. C., directing the filming of "The Heart of the Blue Ridge," while Mr. Thornby is in charge of "The Code of the Mountains" company, now working at Lake Placid, N. Y.

Anna Orr

SOME of the foremost stars of the legitimate stage first displayed their talents in amateur performances. The career of Miss Anna Orr, the latest star of the stage to appear in one of Kalem's Broadway Favorites productions, furnishes a case in point. About seven years ago, Miss Orr was earnestly informed by her admiring friends out in Piqua, Ohio, that she was sure of making her mark upon the stage. Taking these friends at their word, the girl set about to obtain an engagement as a real, sure-enough actress.

Anna Orr.

Fortune smiled upon her and she was engaged to present her dances in "The Girl at the Helm," which appeared at the La Salle Theater, Chicago. As Miss Orr laughingly declared the other day, her career since that event has been almost monotonously successful.

It is her originality and grace which have made Miss Orr so popular. Her efforts pleased New Yorkers so highly that she remained with "The Beauty Shop," opposite Raymond Hitchcock, for two years at the Astor Theater. Two other plays in which Miss Orr scored were "Mary's Lamb," opposite Richard Carle, and with Mizzi Hajos in "Springmaid."

In "The Masked Dancer" Miss Orr enacts the role of Hera, the Persian maid who forsakes her home in the Orient for the purpose of wreaking vengeance upon the young American whom she thinks is guilty of her father's murder. The beautiful dances presented in the course of the story are entirely original with this star. Like previous Broadway Favorites features, "The Masked Dancer" will be issued in regular Service. The date of release is Monday, August 30th.

World Film Dinner, Given to Its Producing Directors, at Hotel Astor, Wednesday, August 11, 1915.

From Left to Right—Lewis J. Selznick, Milton C. Work, Lee Shubert, B. L. Herdingsfeld, Percy Heath, Frank Crane, Oscar Eagle, Joseph Smiley, M. E. Hoffman, H. C. Drum, J. E. Brulatour, J. L. Rhinock, Sam Mayer, Jacob Wilk, Barry O'Neill, Henry Bayard, Emile Chautard, Albert Capellani, Maurice Tourneur, B. N. Busch.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

PRESIDENT HERRINGTON HEARD FROM.

In a Letter to The Moving Picture World He Speaks Hopefully of the Future.

To the Editor of the Moving Picture World:

My office conjested with letters of congratulations, the signs are good for a united organization of exhibitors, as on my return from the National Convention I was met by many of the live wire exhibitors of the various States, and was assured of their hearty co-operation and support in bringing about the amalgamation of the many State Leagues and Associations, including the Northwestern Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors with Headquarters at Minneapolis, Minn., and with the promise of such men as comprise the membership of this organization, including Thomas Furness of Duluth, Harry H. Green, president; William A. Steffes, Secretary, and Otto Raths.

My meeting with the boys from Wisconsin was nothing but one big success, as at both places it seemed like the days of old. It was the lining up of the Old Guard, and the Milwaukee boys promised their support to the old league. On my arrival home I received a letter from my old friend Rembusch of mirror screen fame telling me where Indiana stood and assuring me they would come over to the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League in the near future.

I also wish to state last but not least our old friend and champion W. J. Sweeney of Chicago, with that loyal bunch from Illinois, and others too numerous to mention, would become boosters for the league. I feel as president of the league the boys will not let me fail, and I appeal to all the exhibitors to get in touch with the league headquarters. Do not forget that the president is your officer and servant, and will obey your every command when it is to the best interests of the exhibitors. I ask the exhibitors to organize, as it is only through organization that you will be in a position to defend yourself and your business against the many that are today attacking you and it.

FRED J. HERRINGTON,
President, M. P. E. L. of A.

Apollo Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

KANSAS CITY EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.

Holds Meeting to Consider Proposed Advance in Operators' Wages.

THE Exhibitors' Protective League of Kansas City, Mo., as the organization of moving picture exhibitors has become known here, met at the Hotel Baltimore last week. This is one of the best meetings that the league has had since its organization. The purpose of the meeting, aside from being a regular one, was to hear the report of the committee in regard to the increase in wages that would be asked by the operators' union in a short while. The report was rather indefinite, and contained only the information that the union had made it plain it would sometime demand an increase in wage. However, the operators decided that they would take no active steps in handling the situation just at present. D. F. Dugan, of the Eastern theater, president of the league, was in the chair, and W. McQuade, of the Bonaventure theater, secretary of the league, was also present.

Since the organization of the league it has been discovered that the membership consists of the owners and managers of the theaters in the outlying districts where the revenues are smaller and wages of operators a considerable item. The managers and owners of the larger houses downtown, as well as a few more important ones in the suburbs, state that they are not connected with the league.

These exhibitors state that they have been accustomed to paying their operators always at least as much as the union scale, and often more, according to the length of service with the theater and the ability of the operator. They declare that the increase demanded by the operators' union will not affect them in the least, nor is it designed to do so; they believe that in their cases the new scale proposed by the union will not bring the wage up to the scale they are already paying to ninety per cent. of the operators, and they can easily pay the increase in the case of the other ten per cent. and still make money.

The Exhibitors' Protective League of Kansas City has no particular grievance nor problems to tackle, it is said. The operators' union of Kansas City declares that it cares not just what stand the exhibitors will take in the matter. They have sent out notices that they intend to demand an increase in wages. The league will hold another meeting next week for the purpose of taking some definite action on the subject.

There is said to have been a falling off in the trade at many of the minor houses, especially those whose owners became nervous during the decline and tried to save money on the program. The houses that have continued to please the public with the program and give the public its money's worth in films have not even felt a decline in the business, and they declare that this is the reason for the organization of the league.

BUSHMAN TO ATTEND CARNIVAL.

Many Photoplayers and Producers to Take Part in Exhibitors' Field Day Sports at Brighton Beach, New York.

IT IS claimed that more than 2,000 photoplayers will participate in the Field Day Sports event at Brighton Beach, New York, on Saturday, August 21, which were promoted by the New York Exhibitors. Evidence of the widespread interest in the occasion is shown by a telegram from Francis X. Bushman, Quality Pictures star, to the effect that he would be present and participate in the festivities.

Many of the big producing companies have made elaborate preparations for the parade and will have ornate floats in line, for the grand parade seems to have developed into a contest as to which company can make the most gorgeous display.

Over forty events are listed on a program pregnant with the funniest of possibilities and it is a gamble whether the photoplayers themselves or the public will have the best time. The program for the day is as follows:

Aquatic sports, including swimming races for men and women, tub races, fancy diving, fetching and high diving, will commence at 10 o'clock and last until 1 o'clock p. m.

A band concert will be held at the race track beginning at 1.30 o'clock p. m., which will be followed by the parade. After the parade comes the flag raising.

An extended program of athletic field events comes next.

At 6.30 o'clock a shore dinner is scheduled, to be followed by dancing contests and general dancing by all who wish to participate.

PATHE'S "THE GALLOPER," A FINE PICTURE.

Pathe officials had their first look at Donald Mackenzie's production of "The Galloper," by Richard Harding Davis, this week, and the prevailing opinion expressed was that it is the best comedy-drama they have seen. Clifton Crawford, as the war correspondent, does some magnificent work and dominates every scene in which he appears with the pure comedy which is expressed in his every action. He is ably supported by Melville Stewart, Fania Marinoff, Jessie Ralph and Rhys Alexander.

Mr. Mackenzie's able direction was apparent from the start to finish, and he has every reason to be proud of his second production for Pathe's Gold Rooster plays.

EDWIN AUGUST WITH SHUBERTS.

Edwin August is now directing a series of photoplay subjects in which the Shuberts are interested and which will be released on the world Film program. He is working at Whitestone at present on the subject entitled "Evidence," mentioned elsewhere in this issue.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

Meeting of George Kleine's Branch Managers.

A MEETING of the George Kleine branch managers in the Middle West and Far West was held in the Chicago offices of George Kleine, on Sunday, August 15.

Mr. Kleine, accompanied by Douglas H. Bergh, his traveling personal representative, came on from New York for the occasion, and returned to that city on the 20th Century Monday.

The chief object of the meeting was to discuss the policy of releasing the Kleine features and the Kleine-Edison service through the branch offices in the Middle and Far West. The meeting lasted from 10 o'clock Sunday morning until 5 o'clock in the evening, and during that time business was discussed from all angles and the branch managers present recited their experiences.

The branch managers reported that a large volume of business had resulted from the announcement of the Kleine-Edison service. Exhibitors have expressed great satisfaction over the advent of this new service, and have pronounced it a forward step in the advancement of the quality and dependability of programs. The Chicago office reported that $30,000 worth of contracts had been booked for the new service, during the week beginning August 9.

The policy for the approaching season was defined by Mr. Kleine, and the opinions of branch managers were requested on certain points and carefully considered. At 5 o'clock p. m. all present were invited to the Chicago Athletic Club, where Mr. Kleine entertained them at dinner. At 9.30 p. m. the meeting adjourned.

The following were present: B. T. Hardcastle, W. I. Sturman, S. T. Snowhook and Wm. H. Jenner, of Chicago; E. J. Moskowitz, Dallas; John Hardin, Kansas City; Charles M. Thall, Minneapolis; Merle E. Smith, New York City; W. E. Biederstadt, Denver; J. D. Jamison, Seattle; C. A. Hofman, photo department, Chicago, and Frank L. Hough, manager of the Kleine Optical Co., Chicago.

* * *

R. C. Seery Joins Triangle Film Corporation.

On the stroke of the clock, at noon, Saturday, August 14, R. C. Seery resigned the position of special representative of the Mutual to become manager of the distributing office of the Triangle Film Corporation in Chicago.

Mr. Seery has been connected with the Mutual Film Corporation, in one capacity or another, ever since it started operations in 1912. In that year, and for two years previous, he and C. J. Hite, of Thanhouser fame, owned the Majestic Film Service Company, which they sold to the Mutual. Mr. Seery was retained as manager of the corporation's three exchanges in Chicago until the fall of 1913, when he was appointed special representative of the Mutual offices in Seattle, Portland, Butte, Salt Lake City and Denver, with headquarters in the first-mentioned city. His value to the company was such that he was summoned to New York in the spring of 1914, and appointed special representative for Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Sioux Falls and Des Moines. That position he filled until the present time, with an executive ability marked by an ever-growing business, as was evidenced by the addition of St. Louis and Kansas City to his territory.

As early as 1908, Mr. Seery became interested in moving pictures. He was then living in Allegan, Mich., the town of his birth, and in which he graduated, in the college there, with the civil engineering class of 1903. He purchased the Electric theater in his native burgh, in 1908, and grew to be proud of his position as owner and manager of that diminutive amusement place that seated his patrons on 90 dilapidated kitchen chairs. But he grew prosperous beyond his expectations, and Allegan became too small for his enlarging dreams of expansion. He came to Chicago and purchased a theater of 200 seats at 69th and Halsted streets.

In the fall of 1909, he concluded that the distributing department of the industry had greater attractiveness than the exhibiting, and so became solicitor for the Calumet Film Exchange, owned by George Kleine. Soon afterwards he became manager.

During his career with the Mutual, Mr. Seery was a stockholder of the Thanhouser Syndicate Film Corporation and the Syndicate Film Corporation. He was also a substantial investor in the stock of "The Million Dollar Mystery," on which he, and some of his friends whom he had induced to invest largely, realized big profits.

Mr. Seery, henceforth, will have charge of the bookings of the product of the Triangle Film Corporation in the state of Illinois, southern Wisconsin, eastern Iowa, northern Indiana and western Michigan. He will shortly open for that corporation offices in Minneapolis, Kansas City and St. Louis.

His offices in Chicago will occupy suite 1300-02, in the Mallers Building, and he can be reached by telephoning Central 8102.

* * *

Lady Grace E. MacKenzie in Trouble.

Lady Grace E. MacKenzie, well known in film circles in New York and elsewhere, was brought before Superior Judge Walker in this city early last week, and ordered to appear before him Monday, August 16, and show cause why she should not be held in contempt of court for failing to deliver films demanded by Ralph Graham, receiver of the Lady MacKenzie Film Co.

Lady MacKenzie was president of the company until July 27, when a Delaware court appointed receivers for the company, which is a Delaware corporation, capitalized for $500,000. About two weeks ago Circuit Court Judge McGoorty appointed Mr. Graham ancillary receiver for Illinois.

Mr. Graham asserted that Lady MacKenzie and E. M. Shelley, second vice-president of the company, hold in their possession two moving picture films; one of a lion hunt in East Africa, the other of an African rhinoceros hunt.

Lady MacKenzie and Mr. Shelley testified before Master-in-Chancery Roswell B. Mason, two weeks ago, that they didn't have the films and they didn't know who had them.

Receiver Graham, who is an officer of the banking firm of Graham & Sons, filed a petition in the Circuit Court charging Lady MacKenzie and Mr. Shelley with "wilfully and contumaciously concealing" the films "without any color of right whatsoever."

"Lady" MacKenzie's title has been questioned by the Marquise de Fontenoy, an acknowledged authority on such matters, who affirms that Burke's "Peerage" includes no such title.

It is said that "Lady" MacKenzie has persistently refused to catalog her pedigree, insisting that she has a right to the title and admitting that her mother was the daughter of a Spanish grandee.

Tuesday morning, August 17, at the time of writing, the court officials were searching for Lady MacKenzie, owing to her non-appearance to answer on the contempt charge. E. M. Shelley reported that she could not be found, and attorneys for the receiver made out a contempt order.

* * *

Praise for "The Rosary."

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, received the following letter from Eugene H. Roth, manager of the Portola theater, San Francisco, Cal., the other day:

"We had the pleasure of exhibiting 'The Rosary' last week to packed houses, and I know it would be gratifying to you if you had heard the many favorable comments we received daily on this splendid production. 'The Rosary' has an evenness of character, and is soft, beautiful and real in every foot of the seven thousand feet. The pathos and light comedy were well handled, and it proved a winner. I can say, with no intent to flatter, that 'The Rosary' was one of the most pleasing pictures we have shown in our theater for some time.

"Incidentally, I wish to compliment you on the publicity you had on this picture. I refer particularly to the transparent mounted stands representing cathedral windows. These made it possible to give classy advance publicity, which, we believe, we used very effectively. The up-to-date exhibitor can more fully appreciate the efforts of your publicity department than anyone else, and if the producers fully realize the value of this particular branch, I am prone to believe more effort will be made in this direction.

"We look forward with a great deal of pleasure to the other productions mentioned by you, including 'The Garden of Allah,' 'The Crisis,' and 'The Ne'er-do-Well.' We sincerely trust it will be our good fortune to offer these fine plays to our patrons."

* * *

Chicago Film Brevities.

About 150 theatrical managers of dramatic and vaudeville theaters attended the Mid-West convention in Chicago last week. While in the city they were the guests of the Strollers' Club. The Selig Polyscope Co. entertained the visitors at the Chicago studio, Friday, August 13, and this outing was heartily appreciated by the managers. A Selig cameraman took moving pictures of the party for the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial and the participants enjoyed their first attempt at picture acting with great zest. Most of them were greatly impressed at the difference in the methods used in staging a photoplay and the spoken drama, as many of them have had considerable experience in the latter work. The managers attended the show at the Majestic, Thursday, August 12, and after the performance partook of a banquet at the Strollers' Club. Friday evening a banquet was held at the Morrison Hotel.

* * *

H. A. Spanuth, general manager of the Central Film Co., this city, will leave for New York Saturday, August 21, and will stop over about 10 days there. During his visit he will look over the feature market and will also make arrangements for placing the latest Tribune war pictures, taken in Germany and Russia, at some of the leading theaters.

* * *

The Indiana Curtain Advertising Co., of this city, is introducing a new method by which exhibitors can announce their weekly programs to their patrons, by the use of films instead of slides. A complete weekly program is furnished on about 70 feet of film, allowing about 10 feet for each daily announcement. Pictures of the stars in the features that are to be shown, together with the name of the feature and a short description, is included in the announcement film. J. G. Shafrank, the president of the company, states that this innovation has met with great success in Chicago. Alfred Hamburger is a hearty supporter of the new plan.

* * *

A. M. Gollos, president of the Photoplay Releasing Co., has made arrangements for the presentation of "Sarah Bernhardt at Home" in Orchestra Hall for the week beginning Monday, August 23. Mr. Gollos is now making arrangements for the opening of a New York office for the booking of this film. O. L. Lasater, it is understood, will be appointed as manager of that office, the location of which is not known at the time of writing.

* * *

It is with deep regret that the Chicago office of the World announces the death of Carl L. Redick, manager of the J. P. Seeburg Piano Co., of this city, for a number of years. He died Friday, August 13, and the funeral obsequies took place on Monday, August 16.

* * *

Alfred Hamburger has added the Evanston theater, 1560 Sherman avenue, Evanston, to his long string of picture theaters. The Evanston is the largest and most modern theater in the town for which it is named, having a seating capacity of 1,500.

* * *

Watterson R. Rothacker, Mrs. Rothacker and baby returned to the city Tuesday, August 10, after a prolonged tour of the Pacific Coast and the Far West.

* * *

For over a year Milwaukee detectives have been hunting Roy Chapman, who was wanted in connection with the robbery of a clothing store in that city. One day last week, while viewing a picture on the screen showing the test of the steamer Christopher Columbus, which plies between that city and other lake ports, they recognized Chapman among the members of the crew. When the boat landed in Milwaukee, Chapman was arrested.

* * *

President E. C. Divine, of the Strand Theater Co., turned over $664.50 to the Mayor's fund last week for the Eastland sufferers. Mr. Divine requested that this money, which resulted from a children's benefit at Orchestra Hall, should be applied exclusively to the relief of orphaned children. Mayor Thompson promised that Mr. Divine's wish would be granted. Including the $100,000 given to the Eastland fund by the Western Electric Co., the grand total subscribed amounts to over $460,000.

* * *

A press dispatch from London gives the information that, by the authority of the British war office, arrangements have been completed for taking a complete moving picture record of the events of the war in the British lines, both at the front and along the lines of communication. One complete set of these pictures will be retained by the war office for historical records and instructions, and will be placed in the British museum for safe keeping. Leading film producers and exhibitors have formed a co-operative scheme, so that no single firm shall have a monopoly of the pictures. It is announced that the Board of Education will arrange for the presentation of the films in the public schools.

Marion Green, a talented American basso, began an engagement at Orchestra Hall, Monday afternoon, August 16. This is in line with the policy of the Strand Theater Co., which offers superior programs in connection with their picture presentations.

* * *

"The Melting Pot" continues to draw crowded houses at the Fine Arts theater.

* * *

Decorators and a large force of other workers began to prepare the Colonial theater for its reception of "The Birth of a Nation," early Monday morning, August 16. The big photoplay will be given its first presentation in the Colonial Sunday afternoon, August 22.

* * *

A new theater, which will be known as the Avers, located at the southwest corner of 12th street and Avers avenue, this city, is now under construction. It has been leased to the Foreman Amusement Co. for a term of 10 years. The Avers will have a seating capacity of 1,200, and will offer combination programs of moving pictures and vaudeville.

* * *

The latest Tribune-German war pictures, taken by Edwin F. Weigle, and comprising five reels, will be given their first presentation at the Studebaker on Saturday, August 21, where they will be shown for a week. The latest Tribune-Russian war pictures, taken by Cameraman Thompson, of the Tribune's staff, will form the Studebaker's program for the following week. R. R. McCormick, the Tribune's famous war correspondent, who returned to Chicago recently from the war zone, will lecture on the Russian pictures. This series also comprises five reels. H. A. Spanuth, general manager of the Central Flm Co., will handle these films throughout the United States. It is understood that both sets will be disposed of on the state rights plan.

* * *

John J. Hughes, president of the Optigraph Co., with offices at 564 W. Randolph street, this city, informs this office that the Optigraph has won the gold medal at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. This portable motion picture projector has now been on the market for 11 years, Mr. Hughes states, and that there are thousands of them in use today. He holds that the 1916 model Optigraph is so far in advance of any of the other models that, in his opinion, there is practically no comparison. The Optigraph has been approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters for use in the home, church, school, hall and office. The Optigraph Co., this city, is the sole manufacturer of this projecting machine.

* * *

Fred J. Balshofer, director general of the Quality Pictures Corporation (Metro program), has sent this office a card announcing the inaugural presentation of "The Silent Voice" at the Studebaker theater, Thursday morning, August 19. Francis X. Bushman is featured in these films and he will appear in person at the presentation.

* * *

Miss June Keith, Essanay's latest addition to its list of stars, was motoring in her touring car to Waukegan, where her company was putting on a thriller, on Friday night, August 13. On her way out, three men sprang out of the brush and ordered the chauffeur to stop. Miss Keith, believing that she was the subject of a holdup, ordered the chauffeur to speed ahead. Immediately a shower of bullets followed the car. One struck a mudguard and another imbedded itself in the frame of the windshield, while others came dangerously close to her head. Miss Keith had been accustomed to holdups in pictures, but this was the real thing and she ordered the chauffeur to stop. The three men then ran up and told Scott he was under arrest for speeding. One of them was a negro. Miss Keith in private life is Miss June Smith, daughter of a millionaire banker, Douglas Smith, who resides in Winnetka. Mr. Smith was extremely indignant over the matter, and will have the guilty persons punished for the cowardly act.

KLEINE'S BOSTON OFFICE MOVES.

Steadily increasing business with the expectation of still further increases as a result of the Kleine-Edison merger, caused the removal of George Kleine's Boston office from 597 Washington street to a handsome new three-story building at 14 Piedmont street. The removal will allow the Boston Office greater facilities in all departments. An unusually beautiful projecting room where exhibitors may lounge in comfort is one of the features of the new quarters which will commend itself strongly to that class of New England exhibitors who spend much time in stuffy little projecting rooms reviewing features before booking.

LOS ANGELES LETTER

THESE warm summer days are busy ones at the Long Beach studios of the Balboa, where five well-known directors are putting on big pictures. The largest production under the Horkheimer banner is the Pathe-released "Neal of the Navy" serial which is being made by Harry Harvey, who so successfully completed the "Who Pays?" series lately. Miss Lorraine plays the title role in this sea picture. Henry King, who was featured with Ruth Roland in the serial, is directing and playing the lead in a big secret five-reeler. Bert Bracken is busy on a picture featuring Jackie Saunders, and Sherwood Macdonald is making the film fly with Ruth Roland in another picture, the name of which is being kept secret. The fifth director is Frank Cooley who is using Paul Gilmore as the featured star; name of picture unknown.

The Balboa studio is growing rapidly. The front of the buildings have been completed and the length of the block resembles a great manufacturing plant. The new inside stage is finished, and the sheds now occupy the best part of a city block. As soon as three new Bell & Howell cameras arrive, as many new companies will be put to work on pictures for the Pathe releases of the Balboa. E. D. Horkheimer, who has been in New York for some time, is now on the way west and will probably be here in a few days.

* * *

Miller's theater, 842 South Main street, owned by F. A. Miller, was entered, on the morning of Sunday, August 8, by cracksmen who opened the safe and escaped with $300 in checks and $606 in cash. Fingerprints on the inner door of the safe may lead to the identification of the robbers.

* * *

Motion picture films showing the methods of education in the schools in Los Angeles, and which were awarded a Grand Prize at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, are to be sent over a circuit of the Middle West and Eastern States for exhibition purposes. There are seven reels of these pictures which will be shown to thousands of children and educators in fifty of the largest cities of the country.

* * *

This week twenty young girls, winners of popularity contests in North and South Carolina and Virginia, who arrived from the eastern coast this week, spent an entire day at Universal City as guests of the Big U. The party of Dixie belles, chaperoned by George B. and Mrs. Crater, of Greensboro, N. C., was welcomed at Universal City by Henry McRae, M. J. Jonas and H. P. Caulfield, and spent the morning in inspecting the plant. At one o'clock they had luncheon, after which they watched several of the companies engaged in the making of pictures. During the afternoon the southern girls had their first experience as motion picture actresses, participating in several scenes in a feature production. Other visitors this week were John P. Hopkins, formerly Mayor of Chicago; Roger Sullivan, Joseph Collery, John P. Corbett and other prominent residents of the Windy City.

* * *

Helen Ware arrived this week at Universal City. Miss Ware will be featured in Frances Hodgson Burnett's novel, "That Lass O' Lowries," under the direction of Robert Leonard.

* * *

Ethel Weber, who has been employed for the past two years as head of the Continuity Department at Universal City, has been made assistant to her sister, Lois Weber, at present engaged in the production of "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

* * *

Joseph de Grasse and his company of Rex players are still camped in the Bear Lake Mountains, seven thousand feet above the sea. They have completed a three-reel story, "The King's Keeper," and are at present at work on a production of a story by Nell Shipman. J. O. Madison, Arthur Shirley and Lon Chaney play principals.

* * *

John Copely, formerly technical director at the Universal studios, and later head of the technical department with the Fiction Players Company, has returned to Universal City to assume the duties of technical director for Otis Turner.

* * *

Charles Giblyn has rejoined his first love, the Nymp, and will take a company at Inceville in a few days. His work will be under the supervision of Mr. Ince. Mr. Giblyn will handle the company which will support Miss Billie Burke when she arrives.

* * *

Francis X. Bushman, of Metro features, and his company of star players, under the direction of William J. Bowman, have gone up the country to Big Bear Valley to screen some beautiful mountain settings for the completion of "Pennington's Choice," the next release of Quality pictures. Manager Fred J. Balshofer has scored a scoop in getting "Big" Jim Jeffries to pose for the camera in some of the scenes where the man, Bushman, is put under training. The company will be gone a week or ten days.

* * *

Since securing a contract to supply many releases for Pathe, the Horkheimers, makers of Balboa films, have enlarged their plant so that eight companies can comfortably work on the large stage which has an area of 8,000 square feet.

* * *

All the hard luck that has visited the Keystone studios for the past two or three months has seemed to center itself on Syd. Chaplin and his company. Syd. was shot in the eye with a piece of fireworks a short time ago. His director, Charles Avery, is in the hospital where he will remain for several weeks as the result of an accident. Last week the company went to San Diego and, while there, Chaplin, Charles Parrott, Vesley Ruggles and Glen Cavander were all stricken with ptomaine poisoning and seriously ill for several days.

* * *

Eddie Foy, Mother Foy and the seven little Foylets are all included in the first picture produced by Mack Sennett, starring Eddie Foy in Keystone comedies.

* * *

Jay Hunt, known to many legitimate players, and better known of late as one of the ablest and best of feature directors for Thomas H. Ince, has left the canyon plant and joined David Horsley at his animal studio where he is to produce animaless features. Mr. Hunt has been with Ince for the past three years. Just before he left, Mr. Ince yelled at him from the office, "You can come back through that gate any old time you like and hang your hat right here. And you can stay here just as long as you like—until your whiskers get so long that we'll have to cut 'em off to keep you from walking on them."

* * *

Mrs. Peggy Powell, who has been with the Lasky Company for some time, has retired from the film business, much to the regret of a large host of friends and players. She employed all the people who played small parts and did extra work in Lasky pictures.

* * *

Milo W. Kible, a young clubman of this city, has taken unto himself a bride, a charming girl, Miss Audrey R. Mahaffey, who was the cashier in the Superba theater. The romance started some weeks ago when the young man went to see a show and the girl sweetly smiled, said thank you and nodded pleasantly as he passed on inside. Thereafter he was a frequent visitor and became a regular picture fan. This week they were wedded, and everyone wishes them success.

* * *

Will M. Ritchey, scenario editor of the Balboa, is busy on a big feature production, the name of which is secret. He is writing on this exclusively and is not working on any small stories at present. He edits all the scripts used by Balboa and is working like a Trojan. He finished the scripts for the "Who Pays" series and deserves credit for his work on this big continued film story.

* * *

Anne Schaefer, of the Vitagraph, entertained Sam Spedon, head of the publicity department, who is spending a month in the west, at a merry box party in the Pavilion de Danse at a local beach resort. The whole Vitagraph company and many society people attended the delightful affair.

* * *

Bessie Barriscale and Frank Mills are working this week at Inceville in a feature production, "The Golden Claw," which promises to be a great picture. It is under the direction of Reginald Barker.

* * *

The National Film Corporation contributed to the entertainment of Los Angeles grocers and their families at a recent annual picnic at the beach. Nelson Nichols, one of the mechanical staff of the studio, took a bride at the picnic. She was Miss Mary Holmes, the step-daughter of Ben Lee, stage carpenter at the National studio.

J. H. Hazelton, who claims to be the only man who actually saw the shot which Booth fired assassinating President Lincoln in the Ford Theater in Washington the night of April 14, 1865, and who was then a program boy in the theater, is playing a leading part with Norma Talmadge and Bruce Mitchell in "Captivating Mary Carstairs."

* * *

As a result of exhibiting "The Nigger" at his Fairyland theater, T. L. Thompson had to close his doors one night this week when detectives and a city prosecutor swooped down on the place, taking the films. The local board of censors had condemned the film, and the above incident was the climax of the affair.

* * *

Work is progressing on the new laboratories of the Quality Pictures company and by October 1st the whole plant with its great indoor stage will be running full blast. The total stage area is 5,000 square feet, with several smaller spaces for little sets.

* * *

To see the monkey Bud Duncan on the screen one would not take him for a literary genius, but he is, and a good one, too. Bud writes many of the outlandish comedies that he and big "Ham" do. His latest typewriter effort is a vaudeville sketch, "The Dance of the Soul," which combines pictures with three spoken parts. Dancing is a feature of the skit.

* * *

Benjamin F. Moffatt, president and head of the Major Film Company, of this city, has invested in a $15,000 residence in the foothills near San Gabriel.

* * *

After two years of strenuous stenographing in the Komic series, Fay Tincher has gone on a vacation to the wilds of Noo York. Fay is sorry to leave California and will be glad to return, even if she has to go back to work; but then she likes work.

* * *

Walter Stradling, star cameraman of Lasky's, is doing some exceptional work in the current production featuring Blanche Sweet. The opium dens and hop joints have been carefully reproduced by the Lasky builders and the sets are quite real and look very natural to those who have seen the dens.

* * *

Hobart Bosworth is being featured this week at the Universal studios in a five reel film version of August Thomas' "Colorado," which is to be made one of the biggest pictures of the month at this place. The big script was turned out on the typewriter of Harvey Gates.

* * *

Pathe Lehrman promises a surprise for next week's announcement. He has alrady divulged it to us but we have been sworn to secrecy. The picture contains some very clever ideas and will undoubtedly be one of the best pictures of the L-KO for the year. The comedy is so natural and clean that it just makes one laugh. Harry Edwards is putting on a new picture with Billy Ritchie in which some clever night photography features the picture. The work is by A. Vallet, one of the veteran Statics.

* * *

Thomas H. Ince has announced that he has engaged Lee Bartholomew, formerly chief cameraman at Universal, to superintend the development of negative films at Inceville. The value of the scenario department has been enhanced by the acquisition of Henry Christeen Warnack, a most clever critic of dramatic productions, and William Stoermer, who will immediately begin duties as scripters at the Inceville studios. These two well known writers will pass upon plays.

* * *

Frank E. Woods, manager of productions for the Mutual, took a flyer vacation to San Diego in his motor car this week, staying away from the busy studio life only two days, and they were Saturday and Sunday.

* * *

No, we do not take subscriptions to the World. We don't have to take 'em, the players and fans GIVE them to us. They even chase after us. Frank Lloyd, now directing for Morosco wrote a letter, and requested us to call and get one. Others do the same unless they see us first.

* * *

The Pavlowa players under the direction of the Smalleys, have returned from the Windy City. They said it ought to be called the Rainy City, for it certainly did spoil their chances to expose a lot of film there. They are working at the Gower street studios of the Big U with a full cast and extras. Miss Lois Wilson (to whom we owe an apology) who was here with the American Beauties, while watching the company work in Chicago, was recruited immediately and is here in a good part in this picture. She hails from Alabama and wanted to win a place in films. The picture is "The Dumb Girl of Portici," and will be in many reels. Edna Maison, one of the stars in the cast, says she will never leave this sunny state again, and Douglas Gerrard has sworn allegiance to California for good.

* * *

Marguerite Snow who was to have been featured with Francis X. Bushman in "Pennington's Choice," the picture in the making for Quality Brand, has been in the hospital undergoing an operation. However, she is on the road to recovery and will probably be able to work in the next picture. In her stead is Miss Helen Walcott, formerly with Morosco.

* * *

The week past has been a regular "Jonah" for the Kalem Company. To begin with, Helen Holmes was laid up in the hospital several days threatened with pneumonia. Then Dave Morris strained his wrist jumping into a fire net. Other sufferers are Thomas Lingam and True Bordman, who got all bruised up as the result of a realistic fight in the eleventh episode of the "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel" series.

* * *

James Horne will dynamite a house specially built for the eleventh episode of the "Grand Hotel" series at the Glendale studios of the Kalem Company. He expects to complete the twelfth and last episode of the series next week. Mr. Horne is now preparing for the production of "Stingaree," a film adaptation from the novel by E. W. Hornung, the famous author of "Raffles." Marin Sais and True Bordman will play the leads.

* * *

Rube Miller and other members of the Kalem Hollywood company will leave Friday this week for Mount Lowe to make scenes for a "Ham" comedy, written by Lloyd V. Hamilton and A. E. Duncan.

* * *

Thomas Persons, Manager of the Selig Western studios, has resigned and General Manager J. A. Berst is expected from Chicago to take charge of things for a while.

* * *

Colin Campbell and his company of Selig players returned this week from Catalina Island with a bunch of negatives for coming Diamond Special Features.

* * *

Sam H. Spedon made a friendly call this week at the World office. Mr. Spedon advises us that he celebrated his sixth anniversary with the Vitagraph company Friday, August 13th. Fridays and thirteens are evidently Friend Spedon's lucky days as he joined the company on August 13th, 1909.

* * *

Leon D. Netter and E. M. Asher of the All Star Feature Distributors returned to San Francisco, Tuesday this week. E. H. Emmick, manager of the local office, has returned from his vacation looking hale and hearty.

* * *

B. L. Pervinus, proprietor of the Empress Theater, Phoenix, Ariz., was in the city this week.

FIRST-CLASS HOUSES FOR TRIANGLE.

Negotiations have been completed for adopting the Knickerbocker theater to pictures. Through Klaw & Erlanger the Triangle Film Corporation will have control of the time of this theater for one year beginning in September. This will be the New York house in which the plays and comedies of the Griffith-Ince-Sennett combination will be brought out weekly. The film plays will be produced at the regular theater scale of prices graded from $2 downward. The definite date for the first week has not been settled, but the new occupants take over the Knickerbocker the first week in September and will make extensive changes there before inaugurating the new policy. This is the first of the prominent theaters to be secured for the Triangle combination. The new company has also secured the Studebaker theater in Chicago and is expected to have houses in Boston and Philadelphia.

CUB RELEASE DAY CHANGED.

A shift has been made in the release day of the Cub comedies on the Mutual program. Up to and including the release of September 9 the Cub one-reelers have and will be released on Thursdays, but beginning the week of September 13 these Horsley productions will be released on Fridays. The first release by this arrangement will then be made Friday, September 17, and continued on Fridays t hereafter.

Among the Picture Theaters

News and Views of Photoplay Houses Everywhere

THE IMPERIAL THEATER, MONTREAL, CANADA.

This Handsome Picture House Is Under the Capable Direction of H. W. Conover—Has Big Hope—Jones Unit Orchestrion—Throw, 130 Feet.

THE Imperial theater, Montreal, recently celebrated the second anniversary of its opening. The opening day two years ago will live long in the memories of not only the moving picture trade, but especially the amusement seeking populace of the Canadian metropolis. Moving pictures in Montreal, prior to the advent of this house, had been looked upon merely in a tolerant manner. Houses devoted to the new art were so constructed as to merely meet the more pressing demands. No attempt was made at elaborate architecture, a clean and spacious hall, a sloping floor, chairs, a piano, and projection apparatus were considered sufficient accessories for the operation of a moving picture theater. The Imperial, therefore, took Montrealers by storm. They only took time to recover from the pleasant shock and then attacked the theater en masse. Ten thousand paid admissions on the first day. We shall give a brief description of this beautiful house, although the demands for brevity will not permit us to do justice to the building and its management.

Imperial Theater, Montreal, Ont., Canada.

The Imperial is one of the houses operated by Messrs. Keith and Albee, and belongs to a circuit whose general manager is H. L. Watkins. H. W. Conover is the resident manager. The Imperial cost about $500,000; this figure includes the price of the land. Its location is ideal. It is on Bleury street, only about twenty-five paces above St. Catherine street. This corner is the busiest in Montreal. The building is thoroughly fireproof, and is ventilated and heated in the most approved fashion. The front of the building is terra-cotta. At each side are exit doors. A large and brilliant sign blazes forth the name of the house and above the marquee are two other signs which announce the feature attraction. Where found needed there are exquisite trimmings and ornaments in the same material as the rest of the wall. The disposition of paper and poster publicity is tasty and attracts the passerby. The outer appearance of the house at night is charming. Close to the roof is a row of invisible electric bulbs, and at intervals along the upper walls are artistic candelabra. The floor of the lobby is of tile, the wainscoting of marble and the walls are done in imitation ivory. The lights and chandeliers are in bronze. The woodwork is fumed oak. The boxoffice is to the right and is equipped with an automatic ticket selling device. The foyer has the same decorative scheme. From this doors lead into the auditorium and broad marble staircases mount to the upper floors.

On the ground floor are men's and women's rest rooms. The latter apartment is in charge of a matron and her assistants, and is tastily done in green and gold. The first floor houses the executive and Mr. Conover's offices. From the mezzanine corridor entrance is gained to the loge boxes. The top corridor admits the patron to the balcony. Each floor has retiring rooms. The floors of these upper corridors are of a composition of cement which deadens the sound of footfalls. Along the walls are hung portraits of photoplayers, and one-sheet posters are distributed at regular and judicious intervals. Down in the basement is the boiler-room, which generates heat for the entire building. At the extreme end, and under the stage, is the motor which supplies power to the organ. In the basement will also be found the apparatus which cools and heats the air in the auditorium, according to the season. It is an immense room, into which, by means of a huge fan and a shaft leading to the roof, is drawn air. In summer this air is cooled and in winter it is passed over hot pipes which heat it. It is then forced into the auditorium through small ducts, which find outlet under the opera chairs. There is an ice water tank which supplies cold drinking water to all parts of the building and a vacuum cleaning system is also installed in the basement. The stage is probably one of the largest in Canada, being forty feet deep and ninety-five feet wide, and is capable of accommodating a large spectacle. Mr. Conover has frequent changes in his stage settings. While visiting him recently he showed a representative of the Moving Picture World the model of a new setting. It is a woodland scene, at the back of which the screen is placed. During the intermission the screen is withdrawn and a genuine waterfall is bared to view, with volumes of water hurled over the brink and on to the rocks below. It should prove a pretty spectacle. The screen used is a radium gold-fibre one.

A Section of the Interior of the Imperial Theater, Montreal.

The auditorium is beautiful beyond description. There is accommodation for twenty-five hundred persons. The ceiling is high vaulted and ornamented in colors of ivory and gilt. In the center is a huge bronze chandelier. The color scheme throughout is old rose and ivory. There are large panels of the former hue on the upper walls. The walls beneath the balcony are wholly tinted in this color. The proscenium arch has a beautiful subject in pastels, and over the two large boxes, one on each side of the stage, are larger than life-size figures. On both sides of the boxes are large marble columns. The chandeliers underneath the balcony are set in a sort of grillwork which permits the foul air to be sucked toward the roof. The upper strata above the balcony is passed into the outer air by means of a revolving fan set in the center of the roof. The balcony is supported by the cantilever process and seats about as many people as the orchestra. The loge boxes form a half-circle at the front of the balcony. Exits are on both sides and lead into wide concrete passages. The upper passages are connected with the orchestra exits by means of spacious steel staircases, and the lower passages lead fore and aft, as it were, to the street and yard.

Music is rendered by a $20,000 Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra. It is extremely popular and does much to accentuate scenes of a photoplay. The projection room will charm the eye of all interested in this department. Two Simplex machines are used. The room itself is outside the building, and danger of fire spreading to the auditorium is thus avoided. The throw in the Imperial is 130 feet. The prices of admission are ten cents at matinees, and ten, fifteen and twenty-five cent prices are charged at night. A two-hour show is given continuously from noon till eleven o'clock at night, consisting of six or seven reels of pictures and two or three musical acts. This policy is popular. Mr. Conover, the manager, has been in Montreal picture circles for the last eight years. He formerly directed the old Nickel theater, Montreal, and it was due to the success of this small house that the larger venture was possible. Mr. Conover must be congratulated for his splendid theater and for the admirable manner in which he administrates it.

THE PRESTON THEATER, LOUISVILLE, KY.

Theater's Airdome Attachment Proves to Be Valuable Adjunct—Big Wurlitzer Orchestrions in Both Places.

MANY motion picture exhibitors have begun their careers as operators of airdomes, later branching out into the bigger field with theater buildings, but almost invariably when they go inside they tell the outside goodbye. One exception to this rule is to be noted in Louisville, Ky. Here the Preston Amusement Company, the outgrowth of what first was an "open air," built a new theater and then constructed a new airdome beside the theater. Should the weather become inclement when the airdome is being used, the show and patrons retire to the closed theater where the entertainment is resumed.

Sylvester H. Grove, president and general manager of the company, had much the same ideas as other newcomers when he entered the game about four years and a half ago. Originally a Louisville man, he had spent twelve years on the road with theatrical companies. When he first interested himself in motion pictures he planned an airdome to operate not more than a few months during the warm weather. He formed a partnership with Adam Eigelbach and the two men put up $2,100 with which to construct an airdome. This structure was erected on leased ground at Preston and Camp streets and was provided with 600 seats which were merely marked off on pine benches. The venture was a go and the books at the end of the season showed that a satisfactory profit had been cleared. The more they thought about giving up for the winter the less the two men liked it. As a result of a good deal of figuring and discussion of their plans with several other men, they at length organized a company to build a theater on the site which had been occupied by the airdome during the summer. The new company was incorporated as the Preston Amusement Company, taking its name from the street, with a capital stock of $5,100, the incorporators including Sylvester Grove, Adam Eigelbach, Theodore Droppleman, Edward Tobe and Edward Peltier, the latter soon disposing of his stockholdings to the other incorporators. Mr. Grove was elected president and general manager; Mr. Eigelbach, vice-president; Mr. Tobe, secretary, and Mr. Droppleman, treasurer.

Sylvester H. Grove.

On December 30, 1912, the new theater was completed and opened. It is a brick structure, one story in height and seats 544 in regular theater chairs. The aisles are of concrete with wood flooring under the seating space. The floor slopes toward the screen with a gentle incline. The box office is situated between the main entrances. Two exits are provided at the front, in case of emergency, one exit at each side of the building and one at the alley, in the rear. The plot of ground which had been leased for the first airdome was purchased for $35 a foot. The land on the other side was tied up in an unsettled estate and could not be purchased at that time, but fifty feet was later obtained for $27.50 a foot, giving the company a total frontage of 100 feet. The theater covers a space fifty feet wide and extends back to the rear of the 150 foot lot, with a set-off of fifteen feet in front, due to building restrictions. A stage was built at the rear of the house, 24 feet wide, 17½ feet high in the opening, and 21 feet deep. Vaudeville was tried out in connection with pictures for about eight weeks, but receipts were found to be $40 to $50 a week less than during the weeks when no vaudeville was shown, so it was discontinued.

The new theater cost the company about $14,000. During the first six months bad weather was encountered and an average loss of $60 to $70 a week was met with. Some of the members of the corporation became disgruntled, but decided to stick and at the end of the year the profits totaled something over $3,000. About this time Henry Peltier, who was playing a drum in the theater, sold his $600 interest to the other stockholders for $975 and withdrew. He has since opened a theater on Shelby street, four blocks away. With improvements made since that time the company now has an investment of about $22,000, which is clear of indebtedness. The theater ran along for a year and a half and through its first summer. It was discovered that the house was hot in the summer. Early in the spring of 1914 another company took over the old Lion Garden, a few blocks further in Preston street, and spent several thousand dollars in converting it into a high class airdome. Manager Groves decided that he must keep his patrons cool in order to hold the summer business. A meeting of the officers was arranged, the case put before them, and it was decided to purchase the fifty feet of ground to the north of the theater and construct an airdome. The work was started on June 1, after the Woodland had opened for business. In two weeks the show was in operation in the new airdome. It cost about $1,500 less than the ground upon which it is built. It has a seating capacity of 886, making it considerably larger than the main theater. The advantage of the combined winter and summer theater was not long in becoming generally appreciated, not only by the management, but by the patrons living inside a radius of several blocks. Mr. Groves expressed the opinion that the suburban theater can generally acquire land either by lease or outright purchase at a figure which makes the outlay for an airdome very small in consideration of the effect it has on building up business. Showing the theater's patrons that you are striving to make them comfortable has an excellent effect and shortly means steady crowds the year round. Mr. Groves said there was no real reason why the suburban house should not have an airdome attachment, and he certainly would not be without it himself.

Preston Airdome and Theater, Louisville, Ky.

Until a few months ago the company used a two piece orchestra, composed of a drum and a piano. The union musicians around town demanded a raise of from $12 to $18 per week, and rather than get into a "rukus" with union labor, which would have cut down his business, he decided to do away with the orchestra, and at once installed electrically operated pianos in both the theater and airdome. The $1,750 Wurlitzer instrument in the airdome plays thirty pieces or forty two-piece short combinations. The big instrument installed at the airdome was so large that a special house was built at the side of the screen. This house is arranged with large double doors which are folded back when the piano is in operation, and closed to keep it from the weather when shows are not on. It is therefore not necessary to move it at all and it is absolutely stationary. This season the old airdome benches were removed and the new divan seats manufactured by the American Seating Company, were installed. The seats are arranged in rows of twelve on each side or twenty-four seats across the theater, The two side aisles are three feet six inches, while the main aisle in the center is a full five feet. The airdome now seats 888 persons.

The management of the Preston has made Friday night its big feature night, and Saturday night its souvenir night. On Friday night a five or six reel feature is shown. When these feature shows are given in the main house children are compelled to pay full admission prices of ten cents, due to the fact that every seat is needed to seat the large crowds which attend. When the airdome is used children are admitted at the regular price of five cents, which prevails during the rest of the week. Arrangements have been made whereby patrons of the theater who prefer more expensive souvnirs may save up tickets until they get six or a dozen or more and are given expensive presents such as water sets, silver sets, etc. In order that no woman might secure two tickets, one through the man who happened to be paying for them, the souvenir tickets are not issued at the box office but are given to each woman at the door by the ticket taker. They are printed and have the company's seal embossed. On Tuesday nights one dollar's worth of trading stamps is placed in envelopes and given with every ticket purchased at the box office. The dollar's worth of trading stamps represents an investment of two and one-half cents, but fills the house when otherwise only a meagre attendance would be in evidence.

Mr. Groves was one of the first members of the Louisville Photoplay Association, having come in directly after the organization of the body. He attends all of the meetings and has been thinking of joining the State Association for some time. One of the big improvements which will be made in the main theater this year will be installation of a heating plant. At present the big room is heated by large stoves placed at both ends of the theater. At the time the theater was built the building restrictions were such that the company could not get a permit for installing a boiler in the basement of the building and could not afford to cut the size of the main room and build a boiler room in a separate building at the rear. These restrictions have been changed and heating equipment will be installed in the basement before cold weather.

REX THEATER, VALE, ORE.

We publish herewith a photograph of the Rex Theater, Vale, Ore. It is a 300 seat house, and was built at a cost of $8,000. A Power 6A machine is used, and the program is composed of Universal pictures. The program is changed every day. J. B. Quesinberry, the owner, can be seen standing in front of the theater. He has been a subscriber to the Moving Picture World for several years, and awaits each number with interest.

SULLIVAN PURCHASES THEATER.

The World-in-Motion Theatre at Whitehall, N. Y., has been purchased by Herman E. Sullivan, the owner of the building, who will continue the business. For seven years the theatre has shown the best pictures and has become a popular place of amusement.

STRAND THEATER, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Blomburg Amusement Company Opens Big Picture House.

THE Strand Theater, in Asheville, N. C., which takes its place in the ranks of the handsome amusement houses of the South, had its initial opening in the early part of August. The Strand is of substantial construction, conveniently arranged, and is attractively decorated. It is located at the corner of Lexington and Patton Avenues. Elaborate preparations have been made by the Blomburg Amusement Company, which operates this theater, in making it a place of beauty, and nothing has been overlooked in making it decidedly a place of comfort for picture fans. The lobby, which faces on both streets, is finished in tile with myriads of electric lights about the ceiling.

The interior of the house is illuminated by the so-called direct-indirect system of lighting, the electric bulbs enclosed in ornamental globes. It is finished in a color scheme which includes old ivory, French gray, cream and old rose. The chairs are of the opera type, upholstered in leather, and arranged so as to provide every comfort for the patrons. There are three aisles between the seats. The exits on the west side leading into Lexington avenue are for use in case of an emergency. The electrical annunciator will be of convenience to patrons, for at all hours patrons upon entering the theater building will be able to see just what portions of a picture are being shown.

The operating room is constructed of concrete, steel and asbestos, making it as near fireproof construction as it is possible for human beings to devise. Two modern projecting machines have been installed. In front of all openings are shutters working automatically and which drop in case of an accident, entirely separating the operating booth from the remainder of the theater.

John Pratt

JOHN PRATT, the new Lubin director, who has filmed such plays as "Shore Acres," "The Garden of Lies," "The Fighting Chance" and others, has begun work on the great war play in which Rosetta Brice, Richard Buhler, Francis Joyner and Charles Brandt play the leading roles. Mr. Pratt, who was born in Massachusetts, in the days gone by, was one of the best known baritones on the American light opera stage. He appeared with Eddie Foy in 'Hamlet on Broadway," with Blanche Ring, with Lina Abarbanell in "The Balkan Princess," "The Girl Behind the Counter," and other Broadway successes. Three years ago he decided that there was more scope for his ability in the motion picture world.

John Pratt.

In the new Lubin war play, which is as yet unnamed, Mr. Pratt promises many surprices for the photoplay-goer, both in photography and in acting. The play itself, written by Louis Reeves Harrison, while a war play, depicts only the effect of war—burning villages, scenes in hospitals, and the like. During the entire five acts only one shot is fired. It is expected that this very unusual and stirringly powerful play will be released for the public before the end of September and that it will create a sensation from the prophetic nature of its theme.

The play is an unusual one in every respect from the absolutely unique opening scene to the denouement, and the members of the direction staff have been watching preparations with unusual interest, for it has come as a break in the dreary run of war dramas that are weakly inefficient because they derive the small appeal they may possess from the mass of actors employed; the purely visual appeal of bulk. Mr. Harrison has not taken his "punch" from the war. To the contrary, his is the first story to date that puts a punch in war. The story as such rises superior to the cheap appeal of mass action. It reaches the eye effectively, but it keeps on going until it reaches the brain and makes its greater appeal through the intelligence.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

House Organs.

TIDINGS of great joy! Old readers will recall that once we used to quote liberally from the Academian, published in Selma, Ala., by the Academy of Music. Some will recall the regret with which we announced its demise. Now R. B. Wilby, the man behind the typewriter, says:

> Yesterday I received from the Strand Amusement Company an offer to manage three houses in Montgomery, and that "manage" means what manage is supposed to mean. This was the direct result of the publication of "The Academian" and the praise given it by you. I am more grateful than I would care to try to tell you.

That is cause for joy, but part of the joy is dashed by the second section of the letter, which reads:

> Particular emphasis was placed by the officers of this company on the publication of a weekly. I've got to get out a better one than they can find somewhere else, or I have to come home again. So I'll be under even greater obligation to you if you can give me a list of some of the best ones, that I may ask for copies.

That is where the rub comes. When the Academian flourished we had a regular paragraph devoted to the "exchanges" of which there were more than a dozen. Exchanges meant publications of a higher aim than a weekly program with some reading matter. Now Mr. Wilby asks for the names of present day house organs and we are forced to write him that there are none. The request crystallizes the thought we have had for some time:

What has become of all the house organs?

A few of them we can trace. Jack Nash's Isis News went down when the big strike came in Trinidad, Colorado. Four or five of the others were dropped because the big boss had only one eye and that was glued to the debit side of the ledger. One or two were dropped because it was too much work for the manager, but others are still unaccounted for.

Why has this most useful means of publicity been permitted to drop? Surely there must be some intelligent managements in this country, willing to look on both sides of the page and see the returns as well as the expense. As the matter stands the best edited organ that comes to our desk is Real Reels, and that is the organ of an exchange and not a house.

But Still.

We do not believe that Mr. Wilby would derive great help even from the best of the old ones. He wrote with singular sincerity and conviction. He made his fight for good features at higher prices. He won it.

There is the point. He won with a house organ and he won in a few weeks. Then the man higher up grabbed the axe.

There is positvely and absolutely no form of publicity that is better or more immediate in its results than the well written and properly distributed house organ. There is not a single other form of advertising that can approach it. There is no more valuable a form of approach to the patron and the prospect than a publication so well written that it will be read with interest, and—in so far as we know—there is not in existence today a single house organ that reaches the proper standard.

There never has been a time when the manager was under greater necessity for getting all the business-making publicity he could. There never has been a time when managements stood in greater need of opinion-forming mediums, and yet we cannot direct Mr. Wilby to a single publication of the sort he seeks. As we have said, comparison would do him little good, for he was always at the head of the class, but there is nothing for him. There are some programs that have an editorial page. There are others that from time to time speak with force and conviction, but these efforts are mostly sporadic and lack the cumulative effect of continuous publication and continuous hammering on the point at issue.

Needed.

Today the Exhibitor needs something more than a medium that tells what he shall have next week. It is most vital that he should be able to convey information as to his program to as wide a clientele as possible. That always has been necessary and the foundation of the program and house organ alike, but the Exhibitor stands in growing need of something more. He must have his own organ, his personal mouthpiece. Take the matter of censorship alone. If he has it, he needs to fight it. If he is as yet free from censorship he should not rest in false security. This immediate minute is the time to prepare to fight the busybodies.

This is written in Philadelphia. Last night we saw a two-reel subject that ran but 1,250 feet. The rest, it was said, had been deleted by the State Censorship. There is left an incoherent and incomplete story. The patron is cheated and the Exhibitor is cheated. One is not given the entertainment he has the right to expect. The other loses the patronage of the first, for censorship is killing the patronage of theaters wherever it exists. The man who wants his coffee with cream and sugar will not patronize the restaurant that serves him the cream and sugar but withholds the coffee on the grounds that it contains caffeine and is not good for his nerves. In precisely the same manner the average theatergoer will not continue to patronize the pictures if he is offered an incomplete and incoherent jumble of scenes, more or less related but not carrying a complete story. He does not want to see Jim Smith on trial for the murder of John Brown when he knows nothing of John Brown's death or his manner of taking off because the censors were afraid it might injure the morals of the kiddies.

With a house organ the Exhibitor could explain that it was not the fault of the manufacturers or the house but the fault of the censorship created or at least permitted to exist by the disgruntled spectator and his fellow citizens.

Half a dozen well edited house organs each in the cities and a good small issue in each town would kill a foolish censorship within six months. But the stuff would have to be well written, direct and written as argument instead of abuse.

Such other questions as advance in prices, the adoption of the reserved seat policy, advance sales and the other improvements that are bound to come slowly could all be hurried along with an organ that is read, and this entirely without detriment to the good the publication can do the immediate business of the house in advertising current displays.

Let's Do.

More than one local censorship has fallen flat through the use of a house organ. Let us have more of them.

The local photoplay page in the Sunday edition is all right in its way. It has a place in the scheme of things, but it is far more important to have your own issue in which you can talk to your patrons direct. This self-same R. B. Willby tried the scheme of publishing the Academian as a department in the Sunday paper and he found that it did not pay because he had to make his stuff too general. He could not write what he wanted to, but what the newspaper management wanted him to. Your own sheet is your voice. Even your published advertisements in the public prints, carrying the same matter to a comma will not have the same effect. In your own publication you get your man over into a quiet corner, tell him something that interests him and then tell him of your own affairs. In comparison even your advertisement is like making an announcement at a mass meeting while a speaker is on the stage and trusting that the people you want to reach will hear what you say.

This is not intended as an advertisement, but Picture Theater Advertising, which will be off the press in a few weeks, will help you to run such an organ.

Still Talking Censorship.

And still talking Censorship: it was recently suggested by a reader that leader be used to indicate censorship cuts. The matter was editorially commented upon by Mr. Bush, but it should be kept before the Exhibitor. Nothing can more surely show an audience the absurdities of the censorship than to show them just where the cuts were made. It will interrupt the run of a story, but no more than will a senseless cut. A little educational work along these lines will help vastly.

Nifty.

Jay Emanuel of the Ridge Avenue theater, Philadelphia, gets out a single sheet program that runs very nicely for the space it fills. He does not try to do too much, but he does a lot. At the top is a panel head and at the bottom an underline in calendar form. In between there is merely the running story something after this style:

> WEDNESDAY: THE BOSS in 5 parts, with Holbrook Blinn and Alice Brady. An interesting play of the rise of a bartender to political boss, his fight to dominate a rich family because he loved their daughter and the final winning of the woman who married him to save the family. Others.
> THURSDAY: THE ROMANCE OF ELAINE in 2 acts, featuring Pearl White, Creighton Hale, Lionel Barrymore and the Mysterious Mr. X. See what happens to Elaine. Will she marry; will she be rich; will she be a society woman or a domestic wife or ? Watch the succeeding chapters to be shown here every Thursday. Also Chas Chaplin in WORK in 2 reels of fun. And others.

For a small program this works about as well as anything that can be done. In the original an eight point is used but with such high ascenders that it really counts as a six point in the number of words to the line.

Certainly.

Here is a letter from our Portland, Oregon, correspondent. It is self-explanatory. It runs:

> I am enclosing herewith copies of heralds issued by the Page theater, Medford, Oregon. They were handed to me by Mr. Merrick of the General Film Company's Portland office, who advises that the herald is a lot better gotten up than any he has seen in the Willamette Valley.
>
> Just how effective this herald is in Medford is illustrated by the following: The Page theater is the only picture house in Medford that gets 15 cents admission; in fact there are few picture houses in Oregon that get this price. The U. S. census gives Medford a population of 9,000, but, of course, the Commercial Club gives it more. At any event the Page theater seats 1,200 people. One night recently when a Billie Reeves comedy was billed the house was sold out at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. During the evening the heralds were distributed and after the audience had departed Mr. Merrick and Mr. Page stood on the outside of the theater and counted only two papers that had been thrown away on the sidewalk, which is somewhat different from the usual litter in front of a theater after an audience has departed.
>
> Knowing the interest of the "World" in successful advertising, Mr. Merrick has requested me to pass these samples to you for comment in the "World," and while the style is not new, there must be something alive about it to make it successful.

Certainly there "must be something alive about it to make it successful." And that "something" is merely that the management does not fill four pages with second hand synopses of coming films and expect the man with fifteen cents in his pocket to read the sheet with intense interest. Mr. Page is willing to pay for what he gets. He has some local items and personals of general interest. He does not confine himself to the pictures alone. He pays for reading with reading matter. The purely house program is good, but the house program with some local stuff as well is ten times better and it is because of the local matter that two men with keen eyesight saw only two of the sheets that did not go home with the recipient. It's a simple little proposition. It is what we have been preaching these many years. There never has been a house organ yet that was properly run that was stopped because it did not make money. This program has run only two issues and enthusiasm is young. If the editor can keep on being enthusiastic then the program will keep on making money for him, but it is the grind: not the lack of profit that makes the program dry up, unless its the man above who kicks at the expense.

These programs are four pages on good (but not too expensive) paper set in eight point leaded and carries about 30 per cent. local reading matter. We will appreciate it if we are placed on the exchange list. We want to watch it grow.

Why Not?

A correspondent asks that manufacturers be requested to give the cast at the end of the reel, where it may be read after the audience has become interested in the work of a certain player.

This is merely saying again what we said a couple of years ago in the Photoplay department, but it suggests that the house prepare a slide giving the cast, to be flashed both before and after the subject. It will interest many and further the interest in the player that is largely responsible for holding the spectator's interest.

Effective.

Here is a cut of a display used by the Portola theater, San Francisco. The important part to the exhibitors is that the display is made with material supplied for the purpose by the V-L-S-E, which, in many other ways, has shown a disposition to help the exhibitor to display these subjects to the best advantage. This display is for Selig's "The Rosary." Naturally in a photograph the light must come from the front. In the advertising itself the light shining through the cardboard cut-out windows give a richness of display that the photograph, excellent as it is, cannot show. Anything at all out of the usual run is good for lobby work. Good stuff like this will add immensely to the drawing power of a subject. Selig posters and lobby display photos are utilized to good advantage.

Yes, But—

J. P. Scully, of the Grand, Glenmora, La., writes:

> Between your "ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS" and Richardson's Department and the various helps you both give in the World I feel that I am now about in the stage where I can feel pride in my efforts to amuse the "pepul."
>
> Am herewith enclosing a couple of this week's programs for your criticism--they are in my opinion a little different from the general run that the majority of small town houses get out.

It is a nice looking program, but no better than a lot of other "small town" houses get out. As a matter of fact we think that Mr. Scully pays too much attention to the niceness. The paper is a good (too good) quality coated stock. It is a paper to be proud of. It takes the cuts nicely. Almost every day carries a portrait cut and they all come up well, but if we had to pay for the job we would want the durned thing to work hard for us. We would prefer utility to mere beauty.

The front page carries a two point rule border. In the center is a portrait of King Baggot in the familiar U. Above is a 24 point "program" and an 18 point "La-Grande theater." Below is a six point "week commencing" and a twelve point date. All four lines are in light face Gothic. Gothic is far too severe for a title for a program. An ornamental display face should be used and the theater should be more important than its program. For that matter the "Le-Grande" should be more than "theater." It is a mighty poor type job.

Inside things are a little better, but with the space at command some of the lines could have been made six points higher with good effect. The display is weak and in two instances the body type is permitted to overshadow the display lines, which are crowded to the top and bottom. The days are not dates, as they should be.

But, worst of all, there is a whole back page going to waste. Not a line about the house or coming attractions or pictures or anything else. Just plain white paper on a page that had to go through the press with the front page, anyhow. Mr. Scully wastes 40 per cent. of his space. It looks nice, but it is loafing on the job—loafing shockingly. That back page is large enough to carry a double column of house chat, gossip or general reading matter about the pictures or half that and half underline. An Exhibitor like Ezra Rhodes would make that much space last him three weeks and work every minute of the time. Handsome is as handsome does.

Getting Personal.

A. G. Wunderle, of the Wyckoff, Brooklyn, sends in some more programs. They are better than the last, but they still are far too full of type. You must be the darndest sort of dyed-in-the-wool fan to be willing to read it all. That's because he tries to say too much in display type. For a full week and some extras in full pages, he should go in more for a running program, picking one headliner for each day and putting the rest in eight point.

He is using a paragraph of "personality" stuff. It is just a little forced yet, but he seems to be getting the trick, but he should talk to the printer about getting type that says as much and looks lots less.

Cut Copy Again.

The manager of a New England exchange sends in a photograph of a display fixed up for an Exhibitor. Then he pasted a corner of his letter to the face of the photograph. This will explain why the photograph was not used.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is enclosed.

About the Market.

SELLING manuscript is a lot harder than writing it. You can write what you please, but you can sell only what pleases the editor, and naturally it is difficult to tell precisely what will please the editors. More than half of the letters of inquiry that come to this department have to do with the question of selling, and it is not possible, as a rule, to give satisfactory answers.

The best general advice is to tell the inquirer to read the stories of the releases and form a judgment from those, but this is not an infallible system. Most companies have two or three hundred film subjects in the vaults at all times and they may put out something that represents the ideas of a year ago. It is not a bad release, it may even be good, but it has been held back for some reason and it is now put out, not because it represents the wants of the company at the moment, but because it has been made and so must be pushed to release. Naturally these films do not help the reader in his study of wants. They may even mislead him.

At the same time this is the most certain method of getting a line on the general idea of a company's wants. It is a more accurate source of information than any other, and it is about the only one that will work out at all well in the long run. If the releases are read with understanding, they form a reasonably accurate guide. But they must be read understandingly. Suppose, for instance, that we see in the Vitagraph releases a story that very evidently was written to fit Billy Quirk. Mr. Quirk is no longer with the Vitagraph. It is improbable that they have another comedian working in precisely the Quirk style. The comedy should be dropped from consideration. Evidently this is a dead want and not a live demand. Another company shows sub-tropical stuff that was evidently made in Bermuda or Florida. Naturally they are not buying similar stuff in June and July. The subject must be discounted unless it serves as a reminder that the company works a certain location in the north in summer and might be able to use that stuff.

There is another angle. A comedian, or a pair of them, work a certain line of stuff. The sameness of the stories suggests that a staff writer is supplying the want. It will be useless to try to get in there. In the same way it is not probable that a company will care to make continuous use of an unusual property, such as a submarine or an airship, a wrecked steamer or a burning oil field. But the use of such things suggests that the company does like novelties and something else may be suggested to them and favorably considered.

Some monthly magazines purport to give a buying list. Some exist mainly upon this feature. Not one of these is or can be wholly correct and some of them are less than fifty per cent. correct. They may have obtained the information direct from the company editors and yet be wrong by the time they can get the information into print. It was for this reason that this department long since abandoned the idea of running a market list.

In the same way even the detached and apparently authentic item may be wrong. An editor may announce that he will pay the highest prices for scripts and forget to add that his idea of highest price is fifteen dollars a reel.

There is only one way to get at the market and that is to send stuff to a company with a silent prayer and if it comes back, then send it somewhere else. And you cannot take someone else's word for it, for one may be told that a company is not buying because his stuff does not suit and he may tell another whose stuff might be purchased if sent in.

One of the best known of the editors, recently turned free lance, sends this message to the writers in general: "If you have good multiple reels, wait a while until they get over the book craze." He has been in touch with most of the feature markets and everywhere he finds the same foolish idea that if a story is printed in a book or as a play it must be, for that reason, better than an original story written especially for photoplay presentation. Some of the makers have already begun to have suspicions that part of their failure is due to a bad choice of books, but they are keeping along with the procession fearful that if they offer original stuff against book adaptations, they will be regarded as cheap. They will trail along until one of the really big companies has the nerve to change over to stories suited for photographic representation and then these men who now turn up their noses at the work of really competent writers will be falling over their own feet and other people's in their hurry to get hold of original matter. The supply of really good stuff between covers is pretty well exhausted. Let us also await "The Day." Meantime some writers can get work as adapters at a price ranging from $10 to $25 a reel—which is another reason why some book stories are almost offensively bad.

Test out the market with the regular programs and keep in touch. Read every line of every issue of this paper. Learn of the change in location of companies, keep in touch with the changing of the stars. Know about your business. That is what a trade paper is for.

If you'll do that you'll not ask where you can land a story about Jonah and a paper whale, about Uncle Tom or the Early Christian martyrs. You'll be able to write the stuff the market wants, and if you do that you can sell some of it even now.

Technique and Idea.

It is all very well to say that it is the idea and not the technique that sells, but it is the idea plus real technique that sells best. We saw a story the other day (it was one of Louis Reeves Harrison's, by the way) that sold as much for its technique as the idea. The idea was big; too big to be conveyed in faulty technique, but the script was so beautifully done that it will be put on with less difficulty than a one reel in which the idea is good but the development deficient. Someone, either yourself or the director, must realize the idea in action. He most assuredly will pass over the story that he must study for days in favor of the one that requires merely to be made and the director paid the highest compliment to Mr. Harrison when he said that he could use the script for a joining slip, meaning that he could make it absolutely without change and get a picture. Sell on idea if you must, but try always to get the action as exact as possible and in time you'll be recognized as a time saver whose scripts do not entail a delay of two or three days while the director and his assistant straighten the mess of action out. Stories are mainly purchased for the idea, but the preference is given the story that is well told in precise technique.

In Combination.

Lately a picture authority stated that all authors should be dreamers and idealists. And we added that they should also be practical men. It is a peculiar combination, but a necessary one. The really successful writer is an idealist with common sense. He must be a dreamer; a visionary, else his stories are no better than a low average output. He must have his idealism tempered by common sense else he will not meet his market. He must be able to dream in terms of mobs and armies and write the idea in terms of ten or a dozen men, else his script is too huge for production. More than this, he must be able to hold his thoughts to the camera side of pictures. It is very true that the camera can be made to follow the thinker, but sometimes only at a cost that makes production prohibitive. The true author is enthused by his idea, but all the time his sub-consciousness is acting as a governor and holding him down to things that can be done.

The author should be, like the actor, temperamental, but not too temperamental. The artist should be wedded to the artisan in his mental composition if the best results are to be attained. The man who can give a superb performance of a role such as Othello because he throws himself completely into the part, may, at times, completely eclipse the lesser light who merely acts the part, but the artiste who acts on temperament alone may give a performance subordinate to the actor if his dinner disagrees with him or his corns ache, while the actor, the man who acts and who gets his results through carefully planned emphasis and gesture, will give an equal performance at all times because he considers acting and not his feeling of the moment.

Be a genius, if you will, but strive to have something of the workman in your make-up, as well, or you will find that you cannot get on paper the idea you want to convey to others. You will stutter in words instead of in letters. Your thoughts will be too big for the paper on which you write.

The Start.

Again comes one of those letters that says in effect:

> With the directors writing their own scripts. With the studios employing staff writers. With famous authors selling their book rights. With all these factors, what chance does an unknown beginner have to sell a story, even if it is good?

This sort of a grunt is piffle. The motion picture business is not a Charity Organization Society nor yet a church fair. It is a commercial enterprise. It does not engage in the purchase of gold bricks, but it will buy the real metal in the open market if the offering will stand assay.

The business was not organized to purchase the scripts of the unknown beginner. It will purchase good scripts, and when you can write good scripts, then you can sell, but not before, and it is the editor who has to pronounce them good; not yourself and your friends.

This seems to be something that few novices understand. Knowing what gems of literature they are writing, they cannot understand why they cannot sell and the explanation that hurts their feelings the least is that they have no chance. The editors and the inside writers are in league against them. They are the subjects of unjust discrimination. It never occurs to them to think that their stories may be poor and not available. They are the victims of a hellish plot.

If they keep on working, they outgrow this stage and reach the second, wherein they know the stuff is poor and wonder if they ever will find success. This changes to the third phase, when they find that some stories are better than others and, by offering only their best, they sell the pick of their product. Success in selling is the fourth and last stage. It may be reached in two ways. The first of these is the simplest and generally the most advisable. It is to write what the author knows the market wants. It may not be what the public wants—according to his own idea of what the people desire. It may not be what he wants to write. But it will be what editors are most likely to buy. The other plan is to keep on writing until the product is so good that through sheer weight of merit the matter must be sold.

There are a few—a very few—men who can write precisely what they please with the assurance that there will be found a market. The majority of the writers of the best sellers write what the editors think the public wants—and the editors usually are right.

To be a hack writer; one who writes to order, is more profitable than pleasant. It means regular money and perhaps good money, but there is always the feeling that under other circumstances better work could be done and greater credit gained. The ideal state of authorship is to hold on to the other job and so to be able to write what you please.

But whatever the course followed, imprint it on your mind that you must pass the novice class; you must go beyond the second and third stages before you can hope to reach the fourth. Ninety per cent. of those who start fail to pass the novice stage because they are too busy worrying about lack of sales to do their stint of practice work. They want to get the money first, and so they never get any.

Cutting and Closeups.

One well-known director suggests that it is hurtful to the author who lacks ripe experience to talk too much about close-ups and cut-backs. In most instances, he argues, this is carried to excess and should be stopped. We are not wholly in agreement with him in that we believe that an author is better qualified than the director to get his own ideas over, but there is food for thought in the suggestions offered. He says:

> You make trouble for the directors—at least you do for me—when you teach about cutting back and close-ups. Take a script I had very lately as an example. There was "Room A." That was the entire set. Then there was "Room B. Left hand corner by the piano." There were also other letters down to F. and returns all the way back to A. Many of these sets of scenes were one continuous scene interrupted by close-ups as suggested by the author. I had to take each series of scenes, write them as one scene and then make the scene from that, coming in for close-ups as the action seemed to suggest. At the same time I wrote the cut-backs as one scene and played them, cutting them up in the script. The author sought to show what he wanted the director to do, but he did not know what the director was going to do or could do and so he made labor instead of saving it.

Much of this is very true. Many directors like a moderate amount of cutting back to be suggested, but others prefer straight scenes which they cut up themselves. They get, for example, a script that in part runs in parallel action. They laboriously cut it apart and cut it in the wrong place. They are not sufficiently expert in production to know just when to cut or how. It would be better to write two long scenes and leave the rest to the producer. On the other hand, the author who combines skill as a writer with a really intimate knowledge of production should be better qualified to indicate the cuts since he best knows the story. Then the director who prefers to make the series of scenes as a whole has only to run the flashes together and make it as one scene, cutting apart where he joins.

In other words, unless you know the studio thoroughly, do not cut back too extensively. The writer who has never been inside of a studio not once, but many times, cannot possibly write a hundred scenes to the reel and get a producible script. Generally even the trained writers seldom go above sixty scenes. They leave the rest to the cutting.

Two Reals.

Arthur Real writes from Philadelphia to suggest that other things than war have their own horrors. He says:

> Talk about War Babies: I think there is more to be said about Film Babies. "After her baby was born, Flossie returned to her husband," or did one of the hundred other things that makes such things stories.

It used to be that whenever the beginner wanted to get intensely tragic he picked a character out and shot him. Now that the Censorships are more severe we get more babies than ever because there must be some mainspring.

Another thing Mr. Real objects to is that a story that had an Indian character called Indian Ike was returned with the suggestion that an Indian name be used. He objects because the name he used was the name of an actual Indian. Precisely. We know of Indians with less convincing names than that, but until the entire photoplay clientele of the world is educated to Indians named John Washington and Peter Poppenhoeffer we are going to keep on writing about Rain-in-the-Face and Man-Afraid-of-His-Mother-in-Law. For a mere fifty or even a hundred dollars, we cannot undertake to educate the civilized world to the intricacies of Indian nomenclature, and so we'll write what audiences will accept without question.

This is a thing that so many stumble over. If you know for an actual and positive fact that a man fell out of an aeroplane and fell into a smoke stack that so exactly fitted his girth that it acted as an air cushion and saved his life, put it in a comedy, but do not try to use it for a drama. It's a fact, but it sounds like a lie and will not be believed.

Another Annual Report.

Several of the Inquest Circles have reviewed their season's work, but it remained for S. A. Van Petten, of Chicago, to report his personal progress. It makes interesting reading, for Mr. Van Petten has merely studied along good lines and tells how he worked. He writes:

> How about a first annual report from a "long distance student?" (See your department in the World, issue of August 8, 1914, at page 880, under the heading, "A Study System.")
>
> To begin with, let me say that as far as my extremely limited time has permitted, I have followed the study course outlined, and I intend in the future to pursue the same methods, devoting, if anything, more time to plotting.
>
> And right here, before I forget it, I want to bear witness to a truth mentioned by you many times—and incidentally drop a smile at my own "luck." The first photoplay I ever wrote, absolutely the first one, I submitted to one of the eastern companies, and on receiving it back I threw it in a drawer where it lay for several months, during which time I w-o-r-k-e-d, principally plotting. And then one day I ran across this script, sent it out without a change—and it sold, first shot. Now, suppose I had been unfortunate enough to have sold it the first time. Would I have spent all those months plotting? I'm human. The answer is easy. Honestly, Mr. Sargent, I believe that a sale within the first few months, and within a year with many, is absolutely a calamity.
>
> And even today, with my "year" up, I know (as well as I know, that real photoplaywriting is a profession, requiring every bit as much study and experience as law or medicine, and if anything, requiring more natural aptitude)—I know that the finest thing that can happen to me is to have every one of half a dozen comedies now being held for consideration, come back "with regrets."
>
> But anyway, I am going to show that I have a little common sense. During my coming four weeks' vacation I am going to devote all my time to plotting, etc., writing no full scripts for submission.
>
> With my course of study you can readily understand that I have not had time to write very many full scripts, and of those I have written, while a number of them have sold, I have never written one that I was at all satisfied with—that came anywhere near what I consider a perfect photoplay. Not that I didn't work hard on them—I average usually about three weeks to a reel, sometimes longer. In fact, once I put in 40 hours by actual count in writing a 300-word synopsis. The comedy was rather complicated, and unless the closest attention were given the thread would easily be lost. My problem, therefore, was to write a synopsis so simple and easy to understand that a weary editor could follow it with one eye shut. Did I succeed? Well, it sold.
>
> As I say, I'm never satisfied, and I suppose I'd work on one story for six months, hoping to make it perfect, if it wasn't for your repeated warnings. Every time I resolve that the next one I write will be the perfect one. And I suppose this will always be true—always striving for the well nigh unattainable.
>
> As to my treatment by the companies, I have been well pleased with it. From a number of editors I have received most valuable suggestions and criticisms, for which I am very grateful. Checks have been forthcoming with pleasing promptness upon acceptance. I have had no ideas stolen. My scripts have been carefully handled. As to the general complaint about holding scripts for long periods (and I've had my share of it) I believe in playing the game, and I'm perfectly willing to let any responsible company hold my stuff as long as they wish, whether six months or six days.
>
> I enjoy photoplay-writing immensely—"enjoy" isn't a strong enough term—I love it. Otherwise I wouldn't be at it, for until lately it has been a considerable financial loss to me through having to "steal" time for it from my court reporting.
>
